Reese Honor Guard names top members

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
assistant editor

Nine wing members were cited for their achievements with the Reese Honor Guard during the guard's annual banquet Oct. 5 in the Officers' Open Mess.

During the ceremony, spouses of honor guard members were also acknowledged for their support over the year.

During the ceremony, four annual awards were presented. They were Member of the Year, the Motivation Award, the Most Improved Member and the Military Excellence Award.

Taking top honors as the member of the year was Sgt. Coylene Brinkerhoff. Over the year, Sergeant Brinkerhoff was involved in 166 of the more than 170 details performed on base and in areas within a 150-mile radius. These details include funerals, retreats, graduations, change-of-command ceremonies and parades. "Sergeant Brinkerhoff's commitment to excellence has earned her this year's top recognition. She set a tremendous pace for the Honor Guard this year," said 1st Lt. Curt Locke, Honor Guard commander.

SrA. John Wilson was presented the Motivation Award. This award is presented to the individual who consistently provides that "extra" spark that helps to keep everyone else motivated. The determination of this award is based on members' votes. "This year's voting was extremely close, but Airman Wilson's devotion to the team was enough to win out," said Lieutenant Locke. Airman Wilson also participated in about 90 details throughout the year.

Self-improvement efforts over the year paid off for A1C Wendy Willard, as she captured the Most Improved Member Award. Airman Willard displayed significant upgrade in all areas of performance and her ability to adapt smoothly to honor guard standards of personal appearance, drill and ceremonies, and attitude. She was also an active member in more than 50 of this year's details.

The Military Excellence Award, presented for best display overall of Air Force Regulation 35-10, went to Sgt. Henry Gonzales. The award was based on weekly in-ranks inspections, and the member's ability to maintain and display military customs above and beyond honor guard standards during both practice and performances.

In addition to the four annual awards, five other awards were presented to honor guard members:

□ SSgt. Douglas Thomas, SrA. Michelle Royster-Novak and A1C Leon Nab received Extra-Mile Awards. To receive this award, members must perform 100 details, show leadership potential and be a 'top-notch' performer.

Sergeant Thomas captured this award in a previous year, but received it again for his accomplishment of more than 300 details.

□ Recognized for their performances as the noncommissioned officer in charge of honor guard, Sergeants Thomas and Brinkerhoff were each presented with the Former NCOIC Appreciation Awards. Sergeant Thomas was NCOIC from July to December 1989, and Sergeant Brinkerhoff assumed duties from February to August.

Changes to tenure benefit some NCOs

Nearly 5,000 technical and master sergeants servicewide, faced with retiring earlier than planned without a final promotion consideration, may be given one last shot for advancement.

The modification follows the announcement in May that the high year of tenure for Air Force enlisted people was being rolled back as part of the restructuring and downsizing of the military services under the Pentagon-ordered Defense Management Review.

"When the announcement was made on changes in high year of tenure, the timing was such that it didn't permit some eligible techs and masters affected by the change the opportunity to test for promotion knowing that it would be the last such opportunity," said Lt. Col. Wayne LeBoeuf, chief of separations at the Air Force Military Personnel Center.

As a result, the secretary of the Air Force has approved a one-time, voluntary, self-initiated waiver for those technical sergeants and master sergeants who wish to compete in the upcoming 1991 master sergeant and senior master sergeant promotion cycles.

The waiver is not automatic and includes only those individuals who were otherwise eligible for promotion. "Individuals must ask for a waiver, and approval authority rests with the local wing commander or equivalent," Colonel LeBoeuf said.

Individuals affected by the high-year-of-tenure changes will receive notification of their eligibility under the latest change, according to Capt. Roscoe Kahumoku, chief of the Reese Military Personnel Office. Each must then submit a letter requesting a waiver to the HYT rules.

The notification process has already been completed at Reese.

Individuals who already have applied for retirement will be allowed to pull their papers in order to test for promotion, but only if they fall within the eligible population, Captain Kahumoku said.

Initial estimates were that as many as 150 technical sergeants and another 20 to 30 master sergeants could be promoted as a result of this action, which would give them not only a new stripe but also a new date to retire.

The first retirements under the new high year of tenure rules will take effect Feb. 1. If waived for testing, retirement dates will be pushed back to Aug. 1, 1991 for technical sergeants and May 1, 1991 for master sergeants. The Air Force already had announced a reduction in accessions and an across-the-board early release program to trim numbers in the lower and middle grades.

From my perspective

by Col. Bill Henny
64th FTW commander

A few days ago, I was honored to represent the wing as I received a proclamation from Lubbock Mayor B.C. "Peck" McMinn.

The proclamation, presented during a luncheon in the Officers' Open Mess, cited the work done by the people at the Retiree Activities Office for the service they provide "to both the military community and Reese AFB." The proclamation comes as we celebrate Retiree Appreciation Days today and Saturday.

People like those in the retiree office fit in a category of very special folks that can be found at the heart of any successful organization. Some may call them "unsung heroes" — in many cases, they certainly are.

Like everyone else in the wing, they make an important contribution to what we do — train the best pilots in the world. They are volunteers, and they are an integral part of the quality-of-life programs in our community. There should be no doubt in anyone's mind that volunteers are mission makers like the rest of us.

Look around this wing and you'll see volunteers like those in the Family Services Center or the Wing Hospital who sacrifice their personal time to help make a difference. Thousands of dollars in wages are saved each year thanks to volunteers.

Donating time to a wing agency is noteworthy because of the motivation involved. Volunteers don't expect payment for a job well done — they serve the community because they genuinely care about the people and the mission. They truly go "that extra mile."

Whatever the cause — youth programs, administrative assistance or scholarship fund raising like that done by the wives clubs on base — the list of volunteers' contributions to the community is endless.

In addition, they are key players in helping newly assigned families get settled, and they lend a hand to families in times of need. The latter is especially important in situations where families are subjected to temporary separations, such as is the case with families affected by Operation Desert Shield.

Our volunteer force spans virtually all age groups and educational levels. Whether they are active-duty members, dependents or retirees, each and every one of them has one thing in common — they want to help make things better for you and your family.

Air Force members and their families, as well as our civilian and contract employees, appreciate the efforts of our volunteer mission makers. For those of you who want to do something that will make the community better and make you feel good, consider becoming a volunteer. Everyone benefits because volunteer efforts have a truly positive impact upon the lives of those who work and play here.

Ability to respond in Mideast is result of continued vigilance

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney credits the success of Operation Desert Shield to decisions made in years past about U.S. military build ups.

"The reason we've got high quality forces in the desert today to deal with the current contingency is because of decisions that were made by my predecessor several times removed," Secretary Cheney said.

His assessment, delivered in a speech at a conference of business economists recently in Washington, focused on the ongoing crisis in the Middle East, and the thousands of American military men and women in that region today.

There have been times in the past when it's been alleged that the United States deployed military forces without a "clear-cut objective in mind" in terms of what it was expected, he said.

"We are there specifically to deter any further aggression by Saddam Hussein against our friends in the region. Should deterrence fail, we are there to defend them against that aggression."

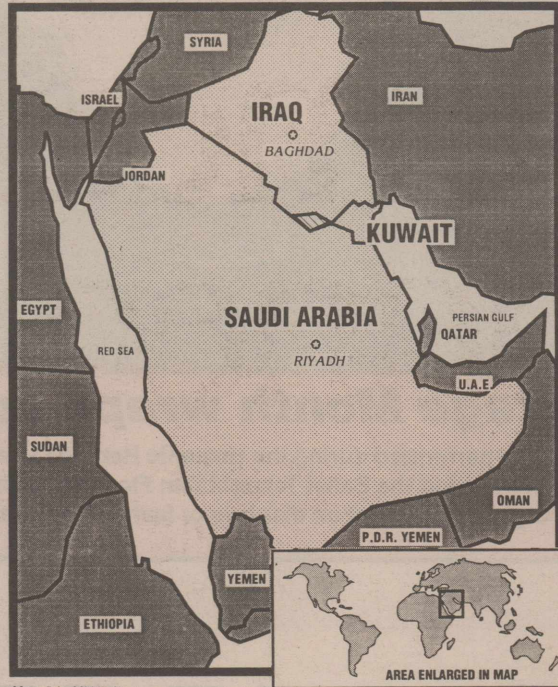

Secretary Cheney said Americans are also in the Persian Gulf region to see to it that the sanctions voted by the United Nations on Iraq are enforced.

The crisis in the Middle East is a reminder of the enormous importance of U. S. military capability, Secretary Cheney said. A DOD report to Congress says events triggered by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait have provided the first opportunity to observe a large-scale deployment of forces.

The document, titled "Total Force Policy," examines active-reserve force mix, and military force structure. The report said Operation Desert Shield is now testing many assumptions and is offering lessons that will provide new insights about the "Total Force Policy." Total Force is described as active forces, reserve forces, host nation support, DOD civilians, and defense contractors.

Deployment of U.S. forces to the Persian Gulf region has gone exceptionally well, and the level of multi-national cooperation has been unprecedented, the report said. It highlighted the use of Reserve volunteers, especially by the Air Force to provide airlift and tanker support, as being critical to the success of early stages of Operation Desert Shield.

The report also states that the Air National Guard made significant contributions to the tactical airlift capacity available for continental United States operations in support of Operation Desert Shield. (Air Force News Service)

From YOUR perspective

Each of you who works on the Reese team and your families are important. I know that the quality of life here at Reese is as important to you as it is to me. I'd like to get comments 'from your perspective'. In so doing, the valuable cross-flow of ideas and information will continue to make this wing the pacesetter of Air Training Command.

Although you can call the Careline directly by calling 3273 as always, I suggest using your immediate chain of command for solutions or answers. If you want a response to your Careline call, be sure to leave your name and telephone number. However, you may remain anonymous if you wish. All calls will be held in the strictest confidence if so desired.

Too fast in Reese Village

I'm concerned about the excessive speeding in Reese

Village. The problem has been addressed before, but nothing has been done about it.

I've called the 64th Security Police Squadron, and they said they would crack down on this matter.

Everyone is responsible for observing traffic regulations. Now that school's back in session, it's even more important than usual.

Security police have increased radar patrols in the housing area, and some people have received heavy fines. Village residents can help me and our security police by noting the license numbers of speeders and reporting them by calling 3333 or stopping by Bldg. 500 to fill out a traffic complaint form. I salute you for your concern and promise that we will put a stop to speeding in and around Reese AFB.

Command IG looks at special-interest items

by Brig. Gen. Chalmers Carr Jr.
ATC inspector general

Unit effectiveness inspections present Air Training Command units with an opportunity to demonstrate their ability to conduct their primary mission. Operational readiness inspections do the same for the wartime mission. Special interest items, when properly emphasized, enhance the overall mission of the command.

Six new special interest items have recently been added. The IG team began using these new SIIs Aug. 1. The items may be new to our list, but they shouldn't be new to anyone who wears the blue uniform.

Dress and personal appearance, Air Force standards, customs and courtesies, weight and fitness, base appearance and facilities, anti-smoking programs and anti-terrorism make up the new SIIs.

SIIs should not surprise or cause any alarm. Each of us periodically needs to go back to the basics and fine tune a little. We need to review dress and personal appearance, weight and fitness, base appearance and the other Air Force standards we were taught in basic training, officer training and ROTC.

The days of "Light 'em if you've got 'em" are gone. The Air Force anti-smoking program ties in with Air Force concern for your health and fitness — an integral part of readiness.

Anti-terrorism speaks for itself. We need to be aware of possible terrorist threats and do what we can to educate everyone, so we can defend and protect our freedoms and way of life.

I look forward to watching and reviewing these special inspection items as we continue to evaluate how ATC people conduct our primary mission.

Knowing 'hot spots' can help prevent fires

by CMSgt. John Mattern
Reese fire chief

(Editor's note: National Fire Prevention Week runs through Sunday)

Each year in the United States, one week is set aside to reflect upon and renew our determination to eliminate one of our nation's largest avoidable problem areas.

The villain kills and disables thousands of men, women and children each year. Like all thieves, it strikes without warning and leaves devastation and sorrow in its wake.

Its appetite is enormous and we all pay the bill. You grudgingly hand over billions of dollars to this thief each year.

What is the phantom that drains our budgets and scars our families? The answer is fire!

Fire strikes some type of structure in the United States every 57 seconds. Just look at the daily newspaper and see how many fire-related stories are presented each day. That phantom is making headlines.

What can be done to eliminate or control this situation? The answer to this question is very simple — identification and correction of fire hazards, continuing education and supervision to prevent fire hazards from developing.

The vast majority of fire causes can be summed up in a short formula — people plus carelessness equals fire. Eliminating the carelessness from the formula would drastically reduce this ever-growing trend. Some of the more common and simple fire prevention practices are often overlooked or disregarded.

Several common "hot spots" around homes and work areas are:

☐ Hot spot No. 1 — Smoking. If you smoke, always use large, heavy ashtrays and don't let them become over-full. Before emptying ashtrays into the trash, put water in them to make sure the butts and ashes are extinguished. Teach your children that matches and lighters are tools for adults to use — not toys.

☐ Hot spot No. 2 — Heating Equipment. Ensure it has at least a 36-inch clearance from combustibles, clothing and furniture.

Portable heaters can pose a special fire hazard. Kerosene heaters are especially dangerous since they contain flammable liquids and produce carbon monoxide. If you have a fireplace, use a non-combustible screen to keep sparks from flying.

☐ Hot spot No. 3 — Careless Cooking. In the kitchen, be aware that stove burners and ovens can start fires and inflict severe burns. Never leave your cooking unattended. Keep your stove and oven clean.

Turn pot handles inward. Have a portable fire extinguisher for immediate access. For grease fires, put on the lid first, and turn off the heat.

If the fire continues, call the fire department (911) and get everyone out. Attempt to extinguish the fire, if feasible.

☐ Hot spot No. 4 — Escape Plans. Plan and practice your fire escape plan. The majority of fatal fires strike while people are asleep, so every home needs functional smoke detectors to wake people up before smoke overcomes them.

Eliminating these major causes of fire from your home or work area will reduce the potential of a fire from striking.

National Fire Prevention Week occurs just once each year, but in the remaining 51 weeks, national attention is focused elsewhere. We must remember that fire will still be lurking about and waiting to strike!

Fire Prevention Week parade held

Fire departments and other organizations from Reese and the surrounding area turned out for Saturday's Fire Prevention Week parade. The event started at the Reese Chapel and made its way through Reese Village.

PETS

Vaccines are a key to raising healthy animals

Americans love animals, and with the large numbers of cats and dogs in households today comes a growing need to keep these pets healthy.

According to Capt. (Dr.) Kimberly Orr, chief of the Reese veterinary branch, there are certain vaccines that are necessary to keep cats and dogs in good health.

"All cats residing in the state of Texas that are over 3 months of age are required by law to have a rabies vaccination," she said.

Many wild animals in Texas carry this deadly disease. The vaccination helps prevent the spread of rabies from wild animals to pets.

Two other vaccinations are suggested for the protection of cats.

"The feline distemper, viral rhinotracheitis and calicivirus vaccine is a combination shot," Captain Orr said.

"Feline distemper resembles parvovirus in dogs," she continued. "Cats sick with this disease are lethargic, run a fever, vomit and have severe diarrhea."

"Viral rhinotracheitis and calicivirus are respiratory tract diseases that can produce an inflammation in the lining of the eyes as well as pneumonia."

The second important shot for cats is the feline leukemia vaccination.

"This disease wipes out the cat's immune system and increases susceptibility to other diseases," Captain Orr added. "Cats with this disease often 'waste away' and have severe anemia in the final stages of the disease."

The captain said a blood test is available to detect the disease if feline leukemia is suspected.

"Cats should receive two doses of these two vaccines as kittens, then have booster shots yearly in conjunction with their rabies vaccination," she said.

Cats are not the only pets susceptible to disease. A disease that kills thousands of puppies yearly is canine parvovirus.

"This disease is characterized by severe, bloody diarrhea and vomiting," Captain Orr explained. "The warning symptoms include loss of appetite and depression."

"Puppies may run a fever of 105° F. (normal is 101 - 102.5° F.) with this disease. If treatment is started early enough, some animals can recover."

Treatment for parvovirus involves intravenous fluids, antibiotics and several days of hospitalization — all of which must be done by an off-base veterinarian. Very young dogs (under 3 months of age) who contract this disease can have permanent heart damage if they survive.

"Because of the large amount of parvovirus in the area at the present time, all puppies over 6 weeks of age need to be vaccinated immediately for their protection," the captain added. "All dogs should receive at least two doses of parvovirus vaccine after 10 weeks of age."

Captain Orr explained that these doses are usually given in combination with distemper, coronavirus, hepatitis, leptospirosis and parainfluenza virus vaccinations.

"Coronavirus produces signs similar to parvovirus, but less severe," she said. "A large number of affected animals survive this disease."

The captain added that any dog less than a year old that hasn't had a parvovirus booster shot in six months should get one.

For more information on vaccinations for pets, contact the Reese Veterinary Service at 3535.

Finding a spot

Wing drivers should know, obey base parking rules

by AIC Rebecca Champion
Reese crime prevention manager

When parking areas have lined parking spaces, drivers must park their vehicles inside those spaces. Straddling painted lines is prohibited.

As a general rule, parking on base property is only permitted in marked parking spaces. Parking is prohibited:

- On or across a sidewalk, partially or completely blocking a sidewalk.
- In front of or within five feet of a private driveway.
- In or within 20 feet of an intersection.
- Within 15 feet of a fire hydrant (on either side).
- On a seeded, grass or unpaved area not specifically designated as a parking area.
- In or within 20 feet of the driveway entrance to any fire station or emergency vehicle parking area.
- Next to a parked vehicle (double parking).
- At any place where official signs prohibit stopping.
- In designated motorcycle or reserved parking spaces, unless so authorized.
- Facing or against the traffic flow.
- When children under 10 are left unattended in the parked vehicle.

Trailers and boats, regardless of size or type, must be parked off base or in the base storage facility located near the flightline adjacent to guest housing. Parking at any other location is prohibited without prior approval of the group commander. One exception — a trailer or boat may be parked under family housing carport, but must be parked in a neat and orderly manner, and must not interfere with other carport usage. Base housing occupants need to park their vehicles in their carports, to relieve the congestion on the streets.

Anyone with questions pertaining to the parking regulation can call me at 3615. People who would like to request reserved parking should contact James King at 3916.

Command news

CDC testers get two chances

People who fail their mandatory Career Development Course examination two times will not be allowed to re-enroll in that course.

A positive supervisor-trainee relationship throughout the course can prevent first and second examination failures, officials at the Air Force Military Personnel Center said. The supervisor should get constant feedback on trainees' progress, including monitoring their study habits.

Commanders will review situations involving a second CDC failure and recommend an appropriate course of action.

A commander can decide to waive the CDC requirement, withdraw the individual from training, recommend him or her for retraining or even separate the person from the Air Force.

More information is available at the Reese Consolidated Training Office, 3643. (Air Force News Service)

Language skill can earn pay

People who speak a foreign language might qualify for the Foreign Language Proficiency Pay Program. Members who do qualify can earn extra pay each month.

For details on the program and on eligible languages, call George Winkle, Reese Promotions and Testing Office, at 3145.

Deployment claims handled

As the recent events in Liberia and the Mideast have forced some military people, civilian employees and their families to leave personal property behind, officials at the Reese Legal Office said that such losses are claimable under the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees' Claim Act.

Legal officials said that a proper claimant under the act is generally the owner; family members with a power of attorney can make the claim. A two-year time limit exists for making claims.

Anyone needing to put in a Kuwait-, Iraq- or Liberia-related claim should contact the legal claims section at 3505 as soon as possible.

Measurements vital for move

When requesting a one-time-only move of a mobile home, Reese Traffic Management Office officials said it is crucial the accurate measurements be provided.

The width of the home must be the measurement at the widest point — this includes overhangs, eaves and other accessories.

In addition, TMO officials warned that denial of a highway permit to move the home can cause undue expense to the member. For more information on either topic, call TMO at 3836/3944.

TDY travel changes

People traveling on temporary duty orders are now required to pay for lodging costs in contract quarters.

Prior to Oct. 1, host-TDY bases covered contract-quarters charges, but travelers must now make payments directly to the lodging establishments. Travelers will be reimbursed for lodging costs, subject to specified rates for each geographic area.

Charges may be paid with Diners Club, other major credit cards accepted at the hotels, or cash. Travelers may receive advances up to 80 percent of the estimated expenses if not authorized Diners Club credit cards.

Requirements for making lodging reservations will not change. Before leaving on TDY, travelers should contact billeting offices at their destination to make lodging reservations.

For more information, call the Reese Accounting and Finance Office at 6323. (Air Force News Service)

Employees won't lose leave

People supporting Operation Desert Shield should not expect to lose excess leave, thanks to a special leave policy.

Operation Desert Shield supporters who had more than 60 days of leave at the end of the fiscal year may request special leave accrual or a correction of their military records, Air Force Military Personnel Center officials said.

This policy will allow for special leave accrual for deployed people as well as for nondeployed members who were't able to take leave because of duties in support of the operation.

Special leave accrual authority will be delegated to the major command, separate operating agency and direct reporting unit level. (Air Force News Service)

ATC headquarters feels cuts

A total of 397 slots will be cut from the Air Training Command headquarters staff over the next three years as part of a servicewide management structure reduction for units above wing level. ATC officials said the cuts amount to a 30-percent cut in management positions. (ATC News Service)

RM, 54th FTS capture Commanders Trophy

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
assistant editor

Top honors in this year's race for the Commander's Trophy went to 64th Flying Training Wing Resources Management and the 54th Flying Training Squadron.

RM took division I of the competition with 1,021 points. The 54th FTS was division II's best with 986 points (divisions are based on unit size).

The trophy is awarded each year to units who are the most successful in intramural and varsity competitions. Points are awarded for both team and individual sports participation, such as teams playing in intramural league games and unit members taking part in special sporting events held at base and command level.

During the year, RM took the crown in intramural softball when they beat out the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron in the league championship. RM also took first-place in the intramural bowling with a final of 206 points. Meanwhile, various individual competitors took top honors for RM in the base racquetball tournament, and racked up enough points to place RM in second overall at the annual base track and field meet.

"I always knew RM was a 'team' of top-notch people," said Col. Ford Barrett, deputy commander for Resources Management. "When RM's top four presented me with the commander's trophy, it only supported that knowledge."

The 54th FTS's victory in the intramural volleyball championships over the defending champs, the 64th Mission Support Squadron, gave the team the title. Individual 54th FTS competitors combined to take the title in the annual base swim meet.

Team efforts also gave the 54th FTS second-place in intramural golf, and third place in intramural basketball.

"This trophy really belongs to both the 54th FTS and 52nd FTS. Because of the five-squadron reorganization, the 54th FTS divided all of its resources in half, including the athletes responsible for this honor," said Lt. Col. Gary Bundy, 54th FTS commander.

(Sgt. Kimberly Nelson) J.R. MacDonald, 54th Flying Training Squadron, butterflies his way to victory in the 1990 Reese Swim Meet.

(Sgt. Kimberly Nelson)

In the 1991 flag football season, RM currently ranks first in the National League and the 54th FTS holds third place in the American League, as the two begin the battle for the 1991 commander's trophy.

Reese offers free instruction for new golfers

(Sgt. Kimberly Nelson)

John Wolfe is one of the instructors who will be giving golf lessons. The other three instructors are Joe Buchwald, Danny Thomas and Neil Venters.

The first in a series of free beginner golf lessons offered by the High Plains Golf Course took place Tuesday.

Through these lessons, beginner golfers can learn while playing an actual round of golf. Sessions will begin at 4:30 p.m. Tuesdays and run for the next two weeks, with a golf tournament the last week of October. The tournament will be open only to members who received at least one lesson.

Although the lessons are free, participants will be charged one-half the normal green fees. Green fee prices for those taking the lessons are: $2 for airman basics through sergeants; $2.75 for staff sergeants through captains; and $3.25 for majors and up.

"Often, too many new-to-the-sport golfers are intimidated by other golfers because of their lack of understanding of the game and golf course rules," said Bob Brooks, Reese Golf Council chairman. "By offering these beginners a chance to learn while actually playing, they can get a feel of the course while having fun learning the fundamentals."

In addition to beginners, the free lessons are also available to any golfer who does not have an established handicap.

For more information or to sign up, call Dick Davis at 3819.
