Keeping in touch

Families of deployed members have several ways to communicate

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
assistant editor

Reese and local-area businesses have joined efforts to help bridge the communication gap between wing families and those members deployed for Operation Desert Shield.

At present, lines of communication available to military and family members include telefax service, videotapes and commercial and military telephone lines, some of which are provided for free.

Since Sept. 21, the American Telephone & Telegraph Company has been offering a "Desert Fax" service to family and friends of members deployed for Desert Shield. This service allows people to send a one-way fax for free to the military members. Single photos, drawings or letters in blue or black ink can be sent.

Reese members wanting to fax something to a deployed member can stop by the AT&T Phone Center in the South Plains Mall from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 1-6 p.m. Sunday. They can also call 795-1648 during those hours and the center staff will take the message over the phone and fax it out.

To send a fax, the following information on the deployed member must be provided: full name, rank, social security number, unit and APO of individual in the Persian Gulf.

Videotaped messages can also be sent to troops in the Gulf. The Reese Family Support Center and Montgomery Ward stores are offering family members a chance to privately tape a message for their deployed loved one," according to Phil Thierry, Reese FSC director. Members can use the FSC from 7:30 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. Monday through Friday and must bring their own tape.

Montgomery Ward, located at 50th and Boston Streets, is offering one-free videotape to deployed members' families possessing a valid military identification and proof that their family member is overseas. Taping can be done in privacy at the store during normal operating hours. So far, Montgomery Ward stores have donated more than $2 million worth of camcorders, video cassette recorders, televisions and tapes for members deployed to the Gulf so they can view their families' messages.

Commercial and military telephone lines are also available to the members and their families. The U.S. Central Command established a policy allowing deployed members morale calls to the United States using Defense Switched Network lines. Reese members can make two five-minute calls per month. Members should try to keep to the five-minute limit, but under special circumstances the time limit can be waived, according to

...will speak here

First CMSAF to speak at enlisted banquet

The 1990 Reese Enlisted Awards Banquet is Nov. 17 at the Officers' Open Mess, guest speaker for the event will be retired CMSAF Paul W. Airey.

Tickets for the evening event can be purchased from unit first sergeants. Staff sergeants and below cost $3 for individuals or $5 for couples; while all technical sergeants and above tickets cost $12 per person. Costs for the lower ranked individuals have been deferred by the Air Force Sergeants Association and Noncommissioned Officer Academy Graduates Association.

This year's banquet theme is "Don't forget where you came from," and reflects the feelings of the banquet's sponsors — the AFSA, NCOAGA and the Reese First Sergeants Council — and Chief Airey.

On April 3, 1967, Chief Airey was appointed as the first chief master sergeant of the Air Force. In this appointment, the chief became the first enlisted member to serve as personal advisor on enlisted issues, such as the welfare and progress of all enlisted members, to the Air Force Chief of Staff and Secretary of the Air Force.

Following his enlistment in November 1942, Chief Airey was assigned duties as a radio operator in World War II, and shortly afterwards completed aerial gunnery training.

In March 1944, he received orders to North Africa, then went on to the 485th Bomb Group as part of the 15th Air Force in Italy in May. There he served as an operator-aerial gunner on a B-24 Liberator Bomber, until he was shot down while on a mission over Vienna, Austria in July. Soon after safely landing in his parachute, he was taken as a prisoner of war and incarcerated in Stalagluft 4, near the Baltic Sea. A few months later, Chief Airey and his fellow prisoners were force-marched over hundreds of miles to Stalag 257, near Berlin.

One year after his assignment to Italy, Chief Airey was released from prison. Weighing two-thirds his normal weight, he was immediately returned to the United States and placed on a three-month recuperation leave.

From 1945 to 1951, he was assigned as

From my perspective

by Lt. Col. Joe Buchwald
Reese Combined Federal Campaign project officer

With two weeks to go in the year's Combined Federal Campaign, the wing has excelled in its support of the annual drive.

As of Thursday morning, we had already donated $89,074 — 89 percent of our goal! A special word of congratulations should go to the following offices which have exceeded their goals: 64th Flying Training Wing Hospital and Resources Management.

While Reese's generosity thus far is certainly cause for celebration, that doesn't mean our work is done yet. The agencies supported by CFC count on our generosity during each year's drive, and the more we help out now, the better these organizations will be able to continue helping others.

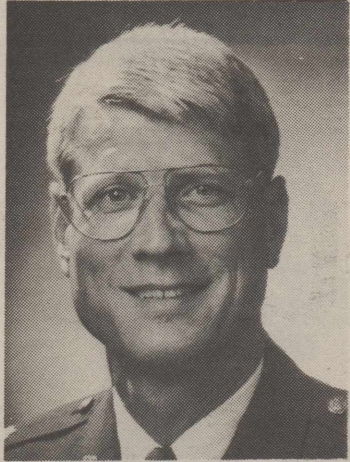

The work done by CFC agencies is as diverse as the people who receive their help. From medical research to social work to counseling services, these organizations aid thousands of people throughout the world. When you stop to consider the plight that some would face without such efforts, the importance of our help is evident.

Of course, you don't have to look far to find agencies that benefit. For example, the Reese Youth Center is one of the many organizations that you can earmark your contribution for.

Military members, their families and civilian employees have a vast array of choices where their contributions can be sent. With all the agencies involved in CFC, there's bound to be several that you're familiar with and want to help. If you haven't taken time yet to look through the list of agencies, you should — you might be surprised at the variety of opportunities available to those who want to lend a hand.

Don't forget — you can make a contribution through payroll deduction. A small amount each month can add up to big help.

As we go through the final two weeks of the drive, let's all continue to show our generous spirit. I would urge those who have not been contacted by their keyworkers to get in touch with them. Find out how you can play a part in helping some extremely worthy causes.

'Red Ribbon Campaign' focuses on drug abuse

by MSgt. Frank Lechuga
Reese Social Actions Office

As part of the national effort in the war against drugs, the Reese community is taking part in the "Red Ribbon Campaign" Sunday through Oct. 28.

The campaign's focus is on stopping drug abuse before it starts and showing our support for a drug-free America. Being drug-free means being free from accidents, addiction, legal troubles and embarrassment.

Teenagers are at especially tremendous risk in becoming addicted before they even know it. Recent findings about the dangers of alcohol and other drugs have highlighted the influence friends can have on teens' decisions to stay drug-free.

Drug-free students can serve as role models for younger, more impressionable students. Students can also learn that to be free of drugs is to be a winner.

Staying drug-free will pay off. It will mean a future of good grades, a good job and admission to college or a training program in the field of their choice.

So we ask you to show your support by wearing your red ribbon during the campaign.

Red ribbons, pamphlets and National Drug/Alcohol Abuse Hotline cards are available for all Reese people through their orderly rooms.

Authorization to wear the ribbons has been granted by Col. Ray Bean, 64th Air Base Group commander. Men should wear the ribbon centered and below the nametag, while women should wear it underneath the nametag, also centered.

While on the flightline, personnel should avoid wearing the ribbon because of potential foreign object damage to aircraft.

Please support this campaign by wearing this red ribbon. It signifies to your community that you care.

Trick-or-treat

Children, parents should be on guard

(Editor's note: Trick-or-treating in Reese Village will be allowed from 6-8:30 p.m. Oct. 31. The 64th Security Police Squadron will be doing candy checks until 10 p.m. that evening in Bldg. 500. In addition, SPS will have their building decorated for the holiday.)

Halloween is a time of make-believe and adventure for children, and parents often put a lot of time and creativity into planning the perfect costume. But 64th Security Police Squadron officials hope they'll also take some time to plan for safety.

Here are some tips from the experts:

☐ Costumes should be made of flame-retardant materials and be short enough so little "goblins" won't trip on them. If the costume involves a prop like a sword or magic wand, make sure it is not sharp or heavy enough to hurt anyone. Toy guns should not look too real. Plastic or cardboard props are safer than metal or wood.

☐ Children should avoid oversize shoes that they can trip over. Make-up is better than a mask for vision and breathing. If a mask is worn, it should have openings for the eyes and room to breathe. It's a good idea to have a dress rehearsal to make sure kids can move and see well in their costumes.

☐ Put reflective tape on children's costumes to make sure drivers can see them if the costumes aren't bright enough. With a little creativity, the tape can add to the costume's appeal.

☐ Give the children a flashlight or glow-tube so they can see and be seen. (Glow-tubes come in fun and "scary" shapes.)

☐ If your young children go trick-or-treating, go with them or send a responsible teenager along. Older children not accompanied by adults should travel in groups. Go over basic traffic safety rules with them, such as crossing only at intersections after looking both ways. Tell your children to stay on the sidewalk, and if there is none, to stay as close as possible to the curb, facing traffic.

☐ Tell children to stay in your neighborhood, agreeing on a specific boundary and a time for them to be home. Enforce these limits.

☐ Remind children to keep themselves and their treat bags away from candlelit jack-o-lanterns. Tell them not to go to unlit houses.

☐ Have them stay away from dogs. The American Academy of Family Physicians warns that a costume can frighten even a family pet into a possible attack.

☐ Tell children not to eat treats until they have been inspected. Throw away any unwrapped candy and wash and cut up fruit into little pieces. Report any tamperings immediately to the military or local police so others can be warned. The SPS Law Enforcement Desk can be reached at 3332; for emergencies, call 911.

☐ If you're at home, remember to turn home lights on and keep your sidewalk and steps clear. Don't put candlelit jack-o-lanterns where costumes or curtains can catch fire. To be extra safe, substitute a small flashlight for the candle.

☐ For an adult costume party, Halloween is a night when it's especially important not to drink and drive. Drive more slowly than usual and watch for children everywhere!

It's something that none of us can live without. So what are you doing to save...

TRANS member earns command award

"Deployed NCO captures annual honor"

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
assistant editor

A wing member was recently cited by Air Training Command as the transportation noncommissioned officer of the year.

TSgt. Phillip Little, traffic management superintendent, was chosen to represent the wing at the command competition based on his versatile knowledge and mastering of all functions within traffic management, according to 2nd Lt. David Patton, officer in charge of the Reese Traffic Management Office.

"Sergeant Little's extensive job knowledge and hands-on style of management allowed him to achieve an exceptionally high level of efficiency within the surface freight, and packing and crating sections," said Lieutenant Patton. Because of these factors, Sergeant Little was selected as the transportation representative during the design stages of the new freight, and packing and crating facility.

Under the sergeant, who is currently deployed in support of Operation Desert Shield, more than 17,300 pieces of government freight and 2,805 household shipments have been moved by the freight and personal property sections. His supervision of monthly Accelerated Co-Pilot Enhancement Program cargo ensured all the items involved got where they were going.

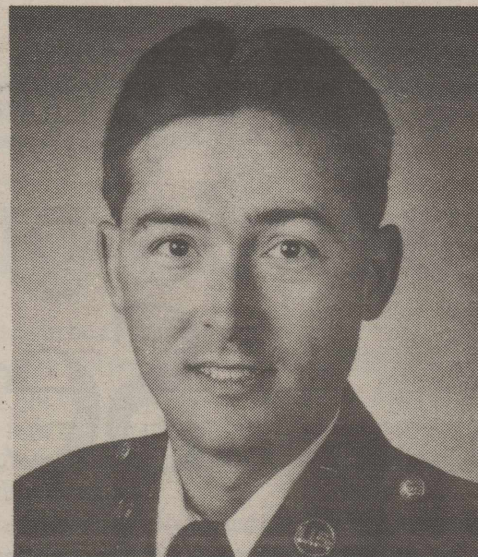

"Sergeant Little used the Scheduled Airline Ticket Office to move nearly 1,600 people; the way he did this saved the Air Force about $515,000," added the lieutenant. "Sergeant Little believes in leadership by example. Consequently, he has inspired his co-workers to take pride in their work, uplifted the entire division's morale, and instilled a positive 'can-do' attitude in everyone," said Lieutenant Patton.

Sergeant Little was named honor graduate at the Traffic Management Supervisor's School at Sheppard AFB, Texas.

Other significant awards the sergeant has received include the Base Exercise Evaluation Team Member of the Quarter for October through December 1989, and the Resource Management NCO of the year for 1989.

Early retirement boards convene Dec. 3, AFMPC says

The Air Force Selective Early Retirement boards will convene at the Air Force Military Personnel Center Dec. 3.

"The Air Force has done everything possible this year to avoid Selective Early Retirement boards, including reducing accessions and encouraging voluntary separations and retirements," said Col. Duane L. Conques, chief of the retirements and separations division at the Military Personnel Center.

All four military services, however, have found SERBs still necessary to lower the number of field grade officers who can legally be on active duty as total end strength decreases, Colonel Conques said.

Officers considered by the 1988 boards are exempt and will not meet the 1990 SERBs.

"The Air Force SERBs will ensure the Air Force continues to take a balanced approach to force reduction while protecting the future of officers who are not yet retirement-eligible," Colonel Conques said.

"The Air Force does everything possible to maintain the dignity and privacy of those selected," Colonel Conques said.

The numbers being considered by the December boards were not available at press time. However, no more than 30 percent of those considered by a board may be selected for early retirement.

Separate boards will be held to consider line colonels, line lieutenant colonels, chaplain colonels, chaplain lieutenant colonels, judge advocate general lieutenant colonels

Considered for early retirement will be colonels with four or more years' time-in-grade by Dec. 3, and lieutenant colonels who have been considered at least twice in the primary zone for colonel but not selected, according to TSgt. George Atkins, noncommissioned officer in charge of reenlistments and separations here.

After results are approved by the secretary of the Air Force, selectees will be notified by the commanders—outside of normal personnel channels.

"They will have the option of applying for retirement if they wish, so the retirement will appear normal and voluntary. They must retire, however, no later than the first day of the seventh month after secretarial approval of the results," Sergeant Atkins said.

Those who are being considered by the December boards may write a letter to the board to provide information that may not be a matter of record. More information can be obtained by contacting the Reese Reenlistments, Separations and retirements Office at 3420. (Air Force News Service)

Suggestion program benefits from changes

Recent moves implemented throughout command

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
assistant editor

Changes designed to improve benefits received through the Air Training Command Suggestion Program took effect this month.

In fiscal year 1990, Reese suggesters saved the Air Force more than $45,000 in tangible savings and earned almost $6,000 in awards; ATC overall produced more than $4.4 million in money saving suggestions, resulting in personal earnings of nearly $181,000. So far in fiscal 1991, two suggestions have been submitted by Reese members, according to local suggestion officials.

Three significant changes were made to the program. They are:

□ The evaluation time limit has now been cut from 30 to 10 calendar days at base and command levels.

The decrease in time between the submission and evaluation of ideas is designed to give people a more positive impression of the program. Evaluating suggestions faster should provide people whose ideas are adopted with awards and recognition much sooner."

□ Disapproval authority is limited to colonels or their civilian equivalent. If the disapproval authority has questions about the evaluation, it may be returned for further action.

□ The third change requires base and command program managers to become central control points for all submitted suggestions. Additionally, the procedure requires command-level managers to track suggestion and evaluation data through a microcomputer system and adds quality control and consistency to the entire suggestion process.

As a result of the recent changes, training sessions are being prepared for monitors and evaluators to ensure they are familiar with the changes.

The level to which suggestions will go to is based on each level's evaluator. If the suggestion is for a local program that will not benefit other bases, approval or disapproval will stop at base level.

If the suggestion could be implemented at other ATC bases, but would not really apply to the Air Force overall, it's approval will top at command level.

Members who have a suggestion pending when they change stations, separate or retire from the military should notify the Reese Suggestion Office of a forwarding address. This also applies to civilians who move or retire. For more information, call the suggestion office at 3148.

At 10 a.m. Sept. 5, SrA. Julie Gifford joined other wing members awaiting possible deployment for Desert Shield in a meeting at the Simler Theater. "Bring your bags," she was told — as usual.

Figuring it was just another meeting where people would get the latest updates from overseas and random bag inspections would be done, she went about her job as usual.

Two hours after the meeting started, Airman Gifford was airborne on the first leg of the trip to Southwest Asia. "I figured if I was selected to go I wouldn't have a lot of time, and as it was I had to make time to call my mom," she said.

Airman Gifford and other selectees flew commercially to their designated port, then boarded a C-5 enroute to Saudi Arabia. "While we were airborne, many of us went from nervous to calm to not knowing what to expect. All anyone had to go by was what we heard on the news or during briefings," explained the airman.

The plane arrived in Southwest Asia during the evening. Unable to get transportation to their final destinations until morning, the passengers spent the night in a hangar. The next day Airman Gifford caught an aircraft mission flight to her final destination — an American contractor's compound in Saudi Arabia.

The compound was made up of work facilities and numerous small houses. Airman Gifford resided in one house with seven other women.

The daily temperatures ranged from 100-105 degrees and dropped to 80 degrees at night, remaining humid throughout. "Other than the endless sand, it wasn't half as bad as I expected it to be," noted Airman Gifford. "I later found out I was in the best location there."

"Compared to most of the places I visited, I was stationed at a resort. Where I was wasn't really the 'desert.' But, the further I got from the compound (during trips abroad), the worse conditions got."

Temporarily assigned to the transportation squadron from another base, the packing specialist worked on setting up a freight shop, through which all incoming supplies and equipment would be received. She also downloaded arriving aircraft, and processed the shipping paperwork. "Where I worked and lived was similar to a 'miniature' stateside base," she explained. "All around were American military and civilians (working for the contractor), and local Arabs, who worked most of the construction jobs."

"The hardest part about being over there for most people, especially those in the desert, was not knowing for sure when they'd go home," added the airman.

While off duty, explained Airman Gifford, there wasn't really much to do. People at the compound could take busses into town, watch television to catch the latest coming from Air Force News out of Italy, or take part in physical activities. Karate and scuba lessons were available and intramural sports were getting under way. She chose to spend her time jogging the boundaries of the compound with a co-worker. One night, however, her jogging took her a lot farther than planned.

On that night, she tripped over a piece of debris and felt a sharp pain rush through her foot. Hopping back home, she thought it was only twisted and she'd be fine in the morning. When she awoke and saw her foot swollen to about three-times its normal size, she realized it was more than a sprain.

Shortly after the hospital (operating out of Tyndall AFB, Fla.) confirmed it to be a break, her orders were cut — she was on her way home.

"I wanted to stay, but policy stated that persons who were injured and who would be disabled for 15 or more days were not allowed to remain," she said.

On Sept. 30, Airman Gifford returned home. "I really didn't want to leave. The people were nice, the workload was basically the same as at home, and conditions were much like a typical temporary-duty assignment. I was comfortable there.

"If they offer me the chance — I'm going back," she concluded.

Annual performance set for Nov. 2

Tops in Blue, the Air Force's renowned touring entertainment group, will perform at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 2 in the Lubbock Civic Center on Eighth Street.

Free tickets for the performance are available for Reese people at the Mathis Recreation Center from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays. Base people can pick up tickets for their family members.

For people on base who want transportation to the center, a 44-passenger bus will leave at 6:30 that evening from the Enlisted Open Mess. If enough people turn out for the bus, it will return to base to pick up a second group of passengers.

The Tops in Blue is comprised of members throughout the Air Force. The selection process is done through a series of talent contests held at base and major command level. The group began touring in 1953, giving 230 performances in only 235 days. In doing so, they reached an audience of more than 300,000 military members and their families.

Tops in Blue made its television debut in 1954, performing on Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town" program. The group went on to appear on the Ed Sullivan Show for several years after that.

One of the premiere performances for Tops in Blue was during the halftime show for Super Bowl XIX at the Stanford University Stadium, Calif., in 1985. They were seen by nearly 110 million viewers.

For more information on the Nov. 2 performance in Lubbock, call Keith White at the recreation center, 3787.

Kirk Willburger, 54th Flying Training Squadron quarterback, gets off a pass as Duane Lusche of the 64th Mission Support Squadron charges in during intramural action.

COMM, 7-1, ruling IM gridiron action

As the 1990 Reese Flag Football season winds down, one team keeps a tight reign over the league lead.

The 1958th Communications Squadron led the leagues' way through the entire season. As of Wednesday morning, with nine games left to play until the season ends and the playoffs begin, COMM remains tops at 7-1.

Currently settled in second place is the 54th Flying Training Squadron at 6-1; followed by Resources Management's 6-3 record.

Placing Reese teams in their current standings were these recent games:

□ The first game of Oct. 10 resulted in 54th FTS's defeat of RM, 15-6.

COMM over the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron.

□ The Oct. 11 game added another win to the 54th FTS's record when they beat out MSS, 12-0.

Games scheduled for Tuesday were cancelled due the on-going base exercise.

Due to past games having to be cancelled, the following revised schedule has been made:

□ Saturday — 54th FTS vs. 33rd FTS, 9 a.m.; MSS vs. 33rd FTS, 10 a.m.

□ Monday — 33rd FTS vs. CES, 5 p.m.; COMM vs. 41st FTS, 6 p.m.

a radio school instructor at Scott Field, Ill. From there, he moved to Naha AB, Japan, and became the NCO in charge of wing communications. In this position he devised a corrosion control assembly line for aircraft radio and radar equipment. He then trained personnel in the proper use and maintenance of this equipment, and placed his idea in full operation on a production line basis. Through his effort, tremendous monetary savings were realized in prolonging the life of communications equipment, which earned him the Legion of Merit Award.

After spending two years in Japan, Chief Airey returned to the states as a first sergeant at Scott AFB. In January 1959, he moved to Keesler AFB, Miss., and became the first sergeant of the 3407th School Squadron, where he spent less than a year before returning overseas to the 611th Aircraft Control Warning Site in Japan.

He spent 10 months at the remote site, then received an assignment to the 478th Fighter Group at Grand Forks, N.D. There he served as NCOIC of the Airmen Section, directorate of personnel, and later as the personnel sergeant major. Remaining at Grand Forks until 1964, he served as a first sergeant.

The last first sergeant position of his 25-year career assigned him to the 4756th Civil Engineering Squadron at Tyndall AFB, Fla. From here he was appointed the position as chief master sergeant of the Air Force, where he served for a little over two years before retiring.

Following his retirement in July 1969, Chief Airey spent ten years as the regional director of the AFSA.

Mr. Thierry. "There is no limit on emergency calls," he added.

Mr. Thierry pointed out that the two 'morale' calls per month don't just apply to members in the Gulf. "They are for families of military members who are deployed, on a temporary-duty assignment or stationed without family members anywhere overseas."

International commercial calls can also be placed to Saudi Arabia. According to ATC communications computer systems officials, a three-minute call to Saudi costs about $5; while a call coming from Saudi to the United States will cost about $10.

People can continue communication with their family and friends through the mail. Letters and packages sent to deployed members cannot contain any pornography, alcohol or weaponry. Postage will be charged from here to New York, and the military will pick up the cost from there. For more information on shipping weights and sizes, contact a local post office or call the Reese Post Office at 3351.

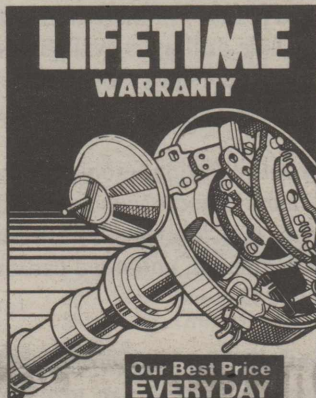

Other local businesses are continuing the effort to support deployed members by sponsoring various community programs. Combined efforts between KIKI-FM, Coca-Cola and 7-11 stores enable people to buy a 12-pack of the soft drink for $2.50 (below cost) from any 7-11 store and have it sent overseas with an attached note, through the "send a Coke and a note" program. These soft drinks will be shipped out the end of this month.

Another community effort is the "no cost financial counseling" provided to deployed members' families by the Local Chapter of Texas Certified Public Accountants. For a list of services, call the Family Support Center at 3305.
