ing Texans to take extra safety precautions as temperatures and heat indices continue to reach 100 degrees and above in many parts of the state.

"We have already experienced extreme heat in most parts of the state this summer, and DPS wants to remind all Texans that the dangers from sustained high temperatures should not be taken lightly," said DPS Director Steven McCraw. "Heat-related injuries and deaths are often preventable if we take the necessary steps to protect ourselves and others."

Extreme temperatures place children at greater risk of injury or death if left unattended in a vehicle. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, temperatures inside a car can rise more than 20 degrees in only 10 minutes. Even with an outside temperature of 60 degrees, the temperature inside a car can reach 110 degrees.

Heatstroke is one of the leading causes of non-crash-related fatalities among children, and every year, children die from heat-related injuries after being left in a vehicle or by entering a vehicle unnoticed. Leaving windows partially rolled down does not help. A child should never be left unattended in a vehicle.

Additionally, extreme heat events or heat waves are one of the leading causes of weather-related deaths in the United States, according to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention. Periods of severe heat and high humidity tax the body's ability to cool itself and can lead to heat exhaustion and heat stroke, which can be fatal.

DPS offers the following tips for staying safe and managing the heat:

Drink plenty of water throughout the day even if you do not feel thirsty; you may not realize you're dehydrated until it's too late. Also avoid alcohol and beverages high in caffeine or sugar during periods of prolonged outdoor exposure.

Pay attention to your body. Heat-related illnesses such as heat exhaustion and heat stroke can develop quickly. Know the warning signs and seek medical attention if necessary.

Check on others, especially the elderly, sick, very young and those without air conditioning.

Don't forget pet safety. Animals are also susceptible to heat-related injury or death — don't put your pets in these dangerous conditions.

Monitor local weather updates and stay aware of any upcoming changes in weather. Limit exposure to the sun and stay indoors as much as possible. If possible, avoid strenuous outdoor activity during the hottest part of the day.

Light-colored, loose-fitting clothing and a hat are recommended while spending time outdoors.

Wear sunscreen. Sunburns can affect your body's ability to cool down. Protect yourself during periods of sun exposure by putting on sunscreen SPF 15 or higher 30 minutes prior to going outside.

Be extra careful when cooking outdoors, building campfires or driving off-road to avoid igniting dry vegetation. Also, stay aware of burn bans in your area and always abide by restrictions on outside burning.

The National Weather Service website provides additional information and tips for staying safe during periods of extreme heat.

Robertson and his wife Vicky and the grandson of the late Delbert and Patsy Robertson, all of Clarendon. When his birth mother, Edie, passed away, Chuck was only two, thus he grew up, living with his grandparents at the family's funeral home. "I've grown up with funeral service always in my life," Robertson said.

His first job at the funeral home was helping his grandfather dig graves (a job that continued until six years ago). "I learned at an early age to play quietly during funeral services, and if I needed something when my grandparents or dad was on the phone, to whisper," he recalled.

In his presidential acceptance speech, he remembered his grandparents and his father, thanking them for instilling the values and the compassion needed to counsel families after the loss of a loved one. He also thanked his mother Vicky and his wife Amanda for their support of his personal and professional goals as well as his journey to the TFDA presidency. "Shortly after we were married, my wife and I were talking about our individual goals as well as our goals as a couple and a family," Robertson remembered. "Among my goals was the opportunity to, someday, lead TFDA. In achieving this goal, my wife has been my cheerleader, my rock and my best friend and advisor."

Originally a mass communications major in college, the new TFDA president and his cousin Cameron decided to change their majors to funeral service and enrolled in the mortuary science associate degree program at Amarillo College. "My grandfather wanted me to be a funeral director all along," he said, "but my dad told me to follow my dreams. Since making my decision that day in 2003, I've never looked back, never regretted my decision and, to this day, feel privileged to serve the families of the Panhandle during this very difficult — probably the worst — time in their lives."

Robertson and his cousin earned their professional licenses in August 2005.

Like his father and grandfather, Chuck Robertson has been a member of the Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department since 2003, where he currently serves the rank of Captain/EMT and Secretary/Treasurer. He also is an Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) and is a member and certified firefighter through the State Firemen's and Fire Marshals' Association and as an EMT, is with the Associated Ambulance Authority/Clarendon EMS (since October 2004) and with the Shamrock Emergency Medical Service since 2015. His wife Amanda also has been an EMT with North Wheeler County since 2005.

Robertson enters the office of TFDA President with humility but also with a sense of pride. "My grandfather, with my grandmother by his side, served our community as a funeral director for more than 60 years. My father, also a funeral director, was a commissioner on the Texas Funeral Service Commission, appointed by Gov. Rick Perry.

He is the current president of the Citizens Cemetery Association in Clarendon, served as the President of the Panhandle Funeral Directors Association from 2010-2012 and served on the board of directors for Panhandle Funeral Directors Association from 2008-2013, and came back on the board in 2015-2016. He also served on the Texas Funeral Directors Association Board of Directors from 2009-2012. Chuck is currently President for Texas Funeral Directors Association for 2018-2019 year. In 2016-2017 he served as Secretary/Treasurer, 2017-2018 he served as President Elect of TFDA. He is also a lifetime member of the Academy of Professional Funeral Service

Practice where he achieved his Certified Funeral Service Practitioner (CFSP) certification in September 2008.

Robertson also is a member of the Clarendon Lions Club & Memphis Lions Club and has served as Past President for Clarendon. He is also a member of the Shamrock Rotary Club where he served as Past President and is a Paul Harris Fellow. Chuck is currently serving his 2nd term on the Clarendon CISD Board of Trustees. Prior to being elected to the school board, he served on the CISD District Improvement Committee for 4 years. Chuck was awarded by the Clarendon / Donley County Chamber of Commerce for the 2009 Man of the Year.

"As the third generation of funeral directors in my family, I am responsible for carrying on this legacy of sacred trust as I serve the families of the Texas Panhandle," the new president shared, "so I look forward to additionally contributing to our state association of professionals, building its reputation in Texas as an outstanding and highly-valued group of servant leaders who not only serve their communities in times of personal loss but also are first responders in times of man-made disasters, such as the explosion that destroyed half of the city of West, Texas, as well as natural disasters, like the recent storms and flooding brought ashore by Hurricane Harvey."

Robertson and his wife, Amanda, live in Clarendon with his son, Jaxon, and their dog Duke.

Electric Outage Causes, Solutions

Outages can originate from different parts of the Xcel Energy system. Restoration times vary based on where the fault has occurred. Some common types of outages, and the way in which they are worked, include:

- Transmission Line - The high voltage network is made up of transmission lines that move power from generating plants to large concentrations of customers, such as towns or industrial areas. A transmission outage can affect thousands of customers, who can be restored quickly when the fault is cleared or when power is rerouted around the fault.

- Substation - The transmission network feeds into substations where voltage is stepped down to a distribution voltage and sent over the lines that run along major roads and up and down alleys. An equipment malfunction in a substation can also affect a large number of customers, but power can often be rerouted around the disabled substation and power restored to affected customers even before the substation repairs are made.

- Distribution Feeders and Taps - Distribution lines are broken into feeder lines and tap lines. A feeder line supplies power onto multiple tap lines. Feeder outages can also affect a thousand or more customers, while tap line outages can affect anywhere from 40 to 400 customers. When outages occur on the feeder and tap lines, linemen are first dispatched to patrol the lines to check for faults or damage. If the line is clear, a breaker can be closed back to start the flow of power again. If damage is found, the damaged area can be isolated through switches and power can be rerouted into the area from another direction to restore the bulk of the affected customers.

- Transformer and Service Level - Outages that occur at the transformer or service line level affect smaller numbers of customers. Overhead transformers are bucket-shaped devices mounted on a pole and typically serve 10 to 12 customers. Service line outages are generally caused

How To Get Rid Of Moles

... from the Internet

By Stephannie Hibbard
Many people do not realize they have a mole problem until someone walking in their yard steps in one of the mole's holes and twists an ankle. These burrowing rodents spend most of their lives underground and may have dug hundreds of feet of underground tunnels for each visible hole in your yard. A simple treatment that does not harm the moles will convince these meddlesome diggers that your yard is not the place for them.
Pour 4 ounces of castor oil and 1 tbsp. of dishwashing liquid into the bottle of your garden sprayer. Add water to fill the sprayer to the top and shake very well.

Coat your lawn with the mixture. Be sure to give it a thorough coating. For large lawns, a sectional approach may be necessary to adequately coat the lawn. Simply mix another bottle and go back to spraying.
Fill in the visible mole holes with dirt, soaking the dirt fill with the mixture.
Repeat Steps 1 to 3 after about a week, filling in any new holes. Most of your moles should be gone, but a second soaking will ensure that any remaining moles move out and don't return.

An Article On Harry Truman

(Editor's Note: This article was on the internet. I do not know who wrote it or how much of it is true, but is interesting.)

Harry Truman was a different kind of President. He probably made as many, or more important decisions regarding our nation's history as any of the other 32 Presidents preceding him. However, a measure of his greatness may rest on what he did after he left the White House. The only asset he had when he died was the house he lived in, which was in Independence, Missouri. His wife had inherited the house from her mother and father and other than their years in the White House, they lived their entire lives there. When he retired from office in 1952 his income was a U.S. Army pension reported to have been $13,507.72 a year. Congress, noting that he was paying for his stamps and personally licking them, granted him an 'allowance' and, later, a retroactive pension of $25,000 per year. After President Eisenhower was inaugurated, Harry and Bess drove home to Missouri by themselves. There was no Secret Service following them. When offered corporate positions at large salaries, he declined, stating, "You don't want me. You want the office of the President, and that doesn't belong to me. It belongs to the American people and it's not for sale." Even later, on May 6, 1971, when Congress was preparing to award him the Medal of Honor on his 87th birthday, he refused to accept it, writing, "I don't consider that I have done anything which should be the reason for any award, Congressional or otherwise." As president he paid for all of his own travel expenses and food. Modern politicians have found a new level of success in cashing in on the Presidency, resulting in untold wealth. Today, too many in Congress also have found a way to become quite wealthy while enjoying the fruits of their offices. Political offices are now for sale. Good old Harry Truman was correct when he observed, "My choices in life were either to be a piano player in a whore house or a politician. And to tell the truth, there's hardly any difference!

Insults

These insults are from an era "before" the language got boiled down to just repeating the same 4-letter words.

"I didn't attend the funeral, but I sent a nice letter saying I approved of it."
-Mark Twain

"He has no enemies, but is intensely disliked by his friends."
-Oscar Wilde

"I am enclosing two tickets to the first night of my new play; bring a friend, if you have one."
-George Bernard Shaw to Winston Churchill

"Cannot possibly attend first night, will attend second... if there is one."
-Winston Churchill, in response

"I feel so miserable without you; it's almost like having you here."
-Stephen Bishop

"Some cause happiness wherever they go; others, whenever they go."
-Oscar Wilde

"He has Van Gogh's ear for music."
-Billy Wilder

"I've had a perfectly wonderful evening. But I'm afraid this wasn't it."
-Groucho Marx

Ill Fitting Boots

A kindergarten teacher was helping one of her students put his boots on. He had asked for help and she could see why. With her pulling and him pushing, the boots still didn't want to go on.

When the second boot was on, she was nearly out of breath.

She almost whimpered when the little boy said, "Teacher, they're on the wrong feet."

She looked and sure enough, they were. It wasn't any easier pulling the boots off than it was putting them on. She managed to keep her cool as they worked together to get the boots back on — this time on the right feet.

He then announced, "These aren't my boots."

She bit her tongue rather than scream, "Why didn't you say so earlier?" like she wanted to. Once again she struggled to help him pull the ill-fitting boots off.

He then said, "They're my brother's boots. My Mom made me wear them."

She didn't know if she should laugh or cry. She mustered up the grace to wrestle the boots on his feet again. She said, Now, where are your gloves?"

He said, "I stuffed them in the toes of my boots..."
