Stormie Meriwether, Eleventh Grade Student

Dear Friends, Thank you to whoever cut the tree down that was hanging on the wire behind the ambulance barn. I always thought it was going to fall and hurt someone. I am glad to see that down.

We won! The Mustangs looked awesome! It was very different not playing in the band. I miss that. We just sat

What I am about to write about I may have written before. I simply don't know for sure. But that is the nature of the subject. I am talking about that bizarre mental state where you have something in your mind but you can't recall or be certain whether it has been delivered to its intended recipient, or been transferred to its appropriate receptacle. It could be something that came to mind, along with the inspiration to tell it to a certain individual or group of people, but is accompanied by an uncertainty as to whether it was ever done. I believe this is a phenomenon common to all humanity that is both simple and complex.
On one hand, it appears to be a simple case of disorganization. It seems as though it could be prevented, and any outstanding problems of that sort remedied, by better keeping track of what had been done. Insofar as there is action involved in delivering comments or conversation, I suppose it could go on a "to do" list, to be checked off (or scratched out, if that is your preference) when the message is delivered. But putting it on a list presents another challenge - namely, that of keeping up with the list for at least as long as it takes to accomplish the objective(s) on the list. And should one written by Marianne Smith

"I was having a pity party because I was no longer able to work on the ranch, and I've always been told that I need to write because I'm a good writer," thus Zippy's Not So Big Adventure was written.
Sandra Beard Immel was born in 1965 to Samuel and Barbara Beard in Amarillo, Texas, the youngest of three girls. Her family moved to Pasadena, Texas, where she was raised. While never completing high school, she did obtain her GED from Angelena College in Lufkin, Texas. Sandy later went on to graduate in 1993 from Kingwood College with a diploma in cosmetology. In 1999, she moved back to her family's hometown of Wheeler, Texas.
Sandy remarried in 2007 to Clifford Immel. While never having children of her own, she will tell you that God has blessed her with being an auntie to many through the years. Sandy has always had a passion for writing but never pursued it till an injury left her unable to work on the ranch she has been employed with for seventeen years. So, with encouragement from her family, friends, and pastors, she took a leap of faith and begun to write.
Her wire-haired Terrier Shih Tzu mix puppy, Tippy, was the inspiration for the book. "I would sit and watch Tippy looking out the front window or looking out the back fence wondering what was going through his mind, wondering Customers seeking one-on-one support with the CFAP application process can call 877-508-8364 to speak directly with a USDA employee ready to offer general assistance. This is a recommended first step before a producer engages the team at the FSA county office at their local USDA Service Center.

Producers have several options for applying to the CFAP program by the Sept. 11 deadline:

- Using an online portal, accessible at farmers.gov/cfap. This allows producers with secure USDA login credentials, known as eAuthentication, to certify eligible commodities online, digitally sign applications, and submit directly to the local USDA Service Center.
- Completing the application form using our CFAP Application Generator and Payment Calculator found at farmers.gov/cfap. This Excel workbook allows customers to input information specific to their operation to determine estimated payments and populate the application form,

These are some trying times we are living in right now for sure! The fires, the hurricanes, riots, killings, Covid and on and on. Our environment is very safe and we try our best to make it attractive and family oriented so that all would enjoy themselves. So don't sit at home wondering what to do when you have a place right here in Wheeler to come and enjoy yourselves!

We have gotten in quite a few Bad Kitty Books, Fly Guy, I Funny Books, Junie B Jones and many more. Adults, we haven't forgotten you either with a huge assortment of fiction you'll enjoy reading for sure!

which can be printed, then signed, and submitted to their local USDA Service Center.

• Downloading the AD-3114 application form from farmers.gov/cfap and manually completing the form to submit to the local USDA Service Center by mail, electronically, or by hand delivery to an office drop box. In some limited cases, the office may be open for in-person business by appointment. Visit farmers.gov/coronavirus/service-center-status to check the status of your local office.

USDA Service Centers can also work with producers to complete and securely transmit digitally signed applications through two commercially available tools: Box and OneSpan. Producers who are interested in digitally signing their applications should notify their local service centers when calling to discuss the CFAP application process. You can learn more about these solutions at farmers.gov/mydocs.

All other eligibility forms, such as those related to adjusted gross income and payment information, can be downloaded from farmers.gov/cfap/apply. For existing FSA customers, these documents are likely already on file.

All USDA Service Centers are open for business, including some that are open to visitors to conduct business in person by appointment only. All Service Center visitors wishing to conduct business with FSA, Natural Resources Conservation Service or any other Service Center agency should call ahead and schedule an appointment. Service Centers that are open for appointments will pre-screen visitors based on health concerns or recent travel, and visitors must adhere to social distancing guidelines. Visitors are also required to wear a face covering during their appointment. Our program delivery staff will be in the office, and they will be working with our producers in the office, by phone and using on-line tools. F.R. Johnson was an ordained minister of the United Pentecostal Church International for over 50 years and pastored many churches in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Georgia. He was a former member of the Texico District Board, editor of the Texico Trumpet, and served in multiple positions in ministry in the UPC organization. He grew up a sharecropper's son in West Texas. His secular careers included sacking groceries at a Piggly Wiggly where he first hit his head on a car trunk while loading groceries and was smitten by a girl named Olene. He was a member of an El Paso pipefitter's union and was a licensed refrigeration mechanic. He wrote many articles as "Cactus Pete" in the Texico Trumpet and authored the book Johnny Reb and the Preacher.

TxDOT Urges Driver To Stay Sober

On Labor Day Weekend

TxDOT reminds drivers of consequences of drinking and driving.

While there may be less traffic on the roads this Labor Day weekend, TxDOT is urging those who choose to go out and celebrate to plan ahead for a sober ride before any drinking begins.

"We encourage people to enjoy the long weekend, but to do so responsibly," said TxDOT Executive Director James Bass. "If you plan to drink alcohol and go out, make the plan for a sober ride. It's an easy decision that can prevent senseless tragedies and save lives."

During last year's Labor Day holiday weekend* in Texas, there were 382 crashes involving drivers under the influence of alcohol. Those crashes killed 12 people and seriously injured another 55.

The "Plan While You Can" campaign aims to save lives and reduce preventable crashes by reminding drivers to make a plan for a sober ride if they are drinking alcohol. Leading up to the Labor Day holiday, the campaign shares this message through TV and radio public service announcements, social media, digital ads and billboards.

Driving under the influence of alcohol risks death or serious injuries. It can also be costly. Drivers can face up to $17,000 in fines and fees, jail time and loss of their driver's license. Instead of getting behind the wheel if you've been drinking, here are some other options:

in the pickup the whole time. After the game we watched the Home Coming. Congratulations to Hesston and Katya for being the King and Queen. Online school is still fun, but very hard. My teachers are the best! I love doing the work on the computer. In my computer class I am learning to use Adobe to do graphics. I learned how to create a cover for my Sketchbook.

We finally got some rain! The creek is still dry I have to check the water for my cows. The ponds are too dry to go fishing. They still have a little water. The beaver has started cutting trees. My dad said it is the first time in twenty years that he only had to cut the grass in the yard two times. Dustin Hunt is my friend and my cowboy. I like for the cowboys to work our cattle just like in the old days. They worked our calves in July. Now Dustin is very sick and needs a new liver. Please keep him in your prayers. We love Dustin and his family. We all need him to get well. That's it!

BATHROOMS
 • A man has six items in his bathroom: toothbrush and toothpaste, shaving cream, razor, a bar of soap, and a towel.
 • The average number of items in the typical woman's bathroom is 337. A man would not be able to identify more than 20 of these items.

ARGUMENTS
 • A woman has the last word in any argument.
 • Anything a man says after that is the beginning of a new argument.

 make a list and manage to keep up with it, another stumbling block must be reckoned with – there must be in place the habit of accessing, or reviewing the list in order for its prompts to be meaningful. If the list can't be kept up with, or referred to with sufficient frequency, it will fail to solve the problem introduced at the beginning of this piece.

But I also said the problem was complex and I believe it is. The problem is complex because who can explain why the supercomputer that is the human brain can introduce something into one's consciousness, and then be unable to perform the seemingly simpler task of accurately determining whether or not it had been done? And who hasn't had the experience where they believed they had told someone else something, or had had some conversation with another, only to find out that they hadn't, and it was all in their imagination? In that case, the brain performs the magic trick of introducing a thought or task, e.g., "I need to tell Joe that the restaurant he anticipated is now open," and then makes the portion of the brain that deals with memory believe that that conversation has occurred (or that it hadn't occurred, when in fact it had). What a bizarre misrepresentation – an entire conversation is simulated, or fabricated, by the brain and presented to one's consciousness as artificially having happened (or not), and thereby leading the person astray. And when the individual having these thoughts searches its memory for an answer, it must rely on the same organ that presented inaccurate information in the first place. It seems to be the cognitive equivalent of a dog chasing its tail.

Unfortunately, the effect of this kind of cognitive dissonance is detrimental both to the person experiencing it, and his or her audience. Who isn't annoyed, or at least bored, by someone telling the same stories over and over again, when they have already told them to you? To defend against this, whenever I have the sensation that I may have already said to an individual whatever I am about to say, I try to proclaim (provided my brain serves me with that inspiration), as a sort of preamble, "I may have told you this before...". But that is only effective if I get the sensation that perhaps I did already say whatever it was, before.

The reason this is pertinent to me now is because I had one of those thoughts today and it prompted me to contemplate this phenomenon. It has happened a vast number of times, although thankfully not concerning anything of critical importance. Perhaps that is the brain's filter at work, which tends to keep things of high importance in one's awareness, bringing them up time and again, while letting things that are judged (through no conscious thought of the individual, i.e. non-liminal) to be irrelevant or relatively inconsequential drift into the subconscious, likely to emerge at some time in the future, though the reasons and timing associated with their manifestation tend to be undetermined.

I feel as though I have ventured quite a bit from what I intended to write, and also that I am standing on the precipice of error (if I have not fallen headlong already) with my usage of psychojargon such as subconscious and non-liminal, terms I know almost nothing about. But the great amusement here is that I can't recall what I intended to write about, or what specific message I wanted to communicate. It is baffling irony.

And there is the possibility that I have written portions of this or its contents before. Fortunately, the penance for the offense of repeating a message previously stated is the same as it is for delivering a poor message. And if I am guilty of either, I simply beg your pardon. If I am guilty of both, I beg your pardon twice. Then again, I may have already done that, and it slipped my mind.

 Thanks, Kara for all the pictures.

— cwe —
 Congratulations, Sandra "Auntie" Beard on your new book. And "Thank You" Marianne Smith for bringing it to our attention.

— cwe —
 So far, this week has gone much better than last week in getting the paper to press.

— cwe —
 We had to get Windstream to make an emergency trip to get us hooked up to telephone and internet last Tuesday morning; we had neither. Could not send the paper or print the labels for the paper.

— cwe —

It was a loose wire at the back of the office which is what started our problems for the past two weeks.

— cwe —
 Sunday when we returned home, we again had no phone. That was fixed Monday at 6:30 P.M. I didn't understand the cause of that.
