Last week when I was in the car (a catch-all word I use for virtually all forms of passenger vehicle for which special certifications or endorsements are not required in order to be licensed to drive), I was scanning the radio stations, a generally futile act of desperation, which I usually try to avoid doing. But on this occasion I landed on a station I didn't know existed, and heard a Christmas song. The song was "O Holy Night." I have heard this song performed by many individuals. In my opinion, most people tend to overdo it, unnecessarily inserting themselves by their effort almost as an obstacle to the song's magnificence. It is as unnecessary as if one tried to throw with force a kite high into the air, when all that is needed to make it fly is to set it free. I think many vocalists tend to have the opinion that the more vibrato that can be applied, the better, until the actual words being sung are almost indistinguishable, like the woman (or man, I suppose - I have seen some male news anchors so made up that they look like corpses on air - when their eyelids look like they've got quarter-inch extensions on them because so much excess make-up is applied - who thinks that is a good look? And what self-respecting man would allow himself to be made up like that?) who applies so much make up that you really don't know what she looks like underneath the mask. But even when a vocalist overdoes a song, if the song is good, its impact still comes through, often in spite of its performer.

I began thinking about the words of "O Holy Night", and the Christian claim that God became not only human, but an infant - it is perhaps as ridiculous a claim as I am aware of in any faith tradition, mainly because it seems impossible to reconcile the concept of the grandeur of God who can be thought of as bigger than the universe, with the smallness and helplessness of a baby. One could get lost for days, or lifetimes, trying to square those concepts intellectually.

But hearing the song provided a segue into the tradition and nostalgia of Christmastime. I thought of my childhood. Not all of it is remembered, and, like all mankind, not all of what is remembered is good, although even the negative memories have had the beneficial effect of the dullening, or in some cases the complete removal of the painful aspects. But most of what I remembered was good - how good it was to be a healthy child amongst loving family in the season of magic. Looking back, Christmas gifts didn't matter much - many of those have been forgotten, and few of those childhood gifts are still in my possession (though I wouldn't be surprised if they were still intact - I am amazed at the durability of some toys, even though they are made of only plastic and a few screws - it could make one wonder why we are not building airplanes using those materials and methods). Instead, what I remember with fondness is the warmth of family who, even if they bickered from time to time (as is often the case with family, and the bickering is magnified with each level of extension from the basic nuclear family), actually loved each other deeper than any disagreement encountered. Some, far too many, of these individuals are gone, and I miss them. New ones have arrived, and I love them. But the inner child in me took pleasure in thinking of those things that are past.

I have suggested in a number of these pieces that children are the most advanced exemplars of our species. Jesus seems to have suggested this by admonishing his adult followers to become like little children. There is a very good song by Steve Earle titled, "Nothing but a Child", which suggests that because of Christmas we all have the chance to be children again. Is that not what that sense of nostalgia, experienced by everyone at some point or another, longs for? I used to think such a feeling was mismanaged emotions. I am now thinking that it is not some foolish longing, or a failure to move on from the past. It might be, instead, the inner voice, intuition, conscience, homing beacon, whatever - calling each of us back to our true selves, our pure selves, our simple selves, our child selves. I have heard it said at Christmas that Jesus is reborn as a child again in our hearts, each year. Perhaps we also are invited to allow our inner child to be reborn. If I get that urge this year, I will try to give it rein. Merry Christmas.

We have had two snows and several spring like days this week.

- cwe -

I was putting the paper together last Tuesday and looked outside to see the heavy snowfall shown here on page one. The result was maybe around 1.5", which was pretty much gone with the warm days that followed.

- cwe -

I returned home alone again Sunday, as Barbara felt she need to stay in the city. She was not feeling great, but much better.

- cwe -

Looks like Christmas will only be Jennifer, Seth, Barbara and I. Ronal Wayne and family will be in Sherman, Cathi and Dorcie will be in Huntsville and Liz and John will most likely have their family in OKC.

- cwe -

And, the Meriwether family will be scattered.

- cwe -

Certainly hope it gets back to normal soon; we have not been able to get together for about a year. And I am ready for a roadtrip.

- cwe -

The paper is to be printed Monday and mailed Tuesday. It is to be on the internet Wednesday morning.

- cwe -

Once again, Leroy, Rhonda and Stormie prepared the paper for mailing for me. I am so indebted to them.

- cwe -

As soon as the paper is in the mail, I am to return to OKC for Christmas.

- cwe -

Next week's paper schedule will be back to normal with a Monday at 5 p.m. deadline for news in the paper, printing Tuesday afternoon, etc. Hopefully.

- cwe -

I was happy to receive an email from Ben Sword this weekend. He is a former employee, whom I had not heard from for many years. He is Dr. Ben Sword or Ben Sword, Ph.D.

New Year's Celebration

by Rix Quinn

When did people begin to host New Year parties?

Ancient Egyptians celebrated New Year when the Nile River overflowed, usually in June. Then someone suggested, "If we change New Year to January, we won't drown coming home from the party."

Early Romans named their celebration for Janus, a deity with two faces. One face looked backward, the other forward.

Today, we also reflect on the past, and plan for the future. But we no longer have two faces, because the one in back is too hard to shave.

Another New Year's custom was chimney cleaning. This meant participants planned to "clean up" their faults, and strive to do better the next year.

Sadly, a few zealous cleaners toppled down the chute into the fireplace below. This was called "coming down with the flue."

The Druids celebrated the New Year on March 1. Unfortunately, that was two months late for bowl games.

But remember, these were ancient civilizations, and they did not yet worship football.

Storm (from Page 1) cause of Covid 19. Others have lost friends and family during the year. Even though we are sad for our losses, we will always celebrate the Joy of Christmas!

It was a beautiful morning when we helped place the Christmas Wreaths on the graves of all the veterans at the Wheeler Cemetery. My mom and dad and I did it together. We stood at the grave, read the name and placed the wreath. We honored veterans from WWII, and Korea. Many people gathered to help. The Boy Scouts presented the flags and we did the pledge. Then Pam Hill talked about honoring all the veterans and told us how to place the wreaths. I am very proud of Wheeler for honoring every veteran in our cemetery.

We spent the weekend in the city. Wally and Suzie loved couch time. They love to go with us.

Please take care of yourself if you have Covid! If you don't have it, please wear your mask and do your best not to get it or spread it! That's it!

Do people today really have shorter attention spans? Well, it appears that because multiple messages bombard us daily, we mentally "delete" those we don't currently need. (This explains why some folks forget what they had for breakfast, or why I call so many of my friends "Pal.")

Latest reports – compiled by scientists who pay attention – set the average adult attention span at only eight minutes. It's reportedly even shorter if you're a dog, and shorter still if you're a roaming animal, like a dog with amnesia.

Parkview Hospital acquires state of the art instrumentation (Becton Dickinson BD-MAX) to perform Real-Time PCR (RT-PCR) testing for Covid-19. RT-PCR testing is the "Gold Standard" for Covid-19 testing.

This is not a rapid test but a "TRUE" real-time PCR test with same day results. You will be contacted the same day you are tested with the results.

Slow and Accurate versus Rapid Testing: What's the Difference?
RT-PCR (Slow and Accurate)

Majority of the tests being conducted today are based on the RT-PCR test method, considered as the 'gold standard' in testing. Specific and sensitive, the test accurately detects the presence of genetic material from the virus.

The RT-PCR test begins with a licensed healthcare worker or lab scientist extracting a specimen from a patient (with or without symptoms) through a nasal swab. Samples are then transported in ice and delivered to testing labs for processing where the RNA virus is converted to DNA using reverse transcriptase enzymes. The presence of viral DNA can then be detected and interpreted by data either as positive or negative.

RT-PCR tests require specialized handling and preparation prior to testing so the expected turnaround time for results is 4-16 hours.

Rapid test kits: (Fast but not Fool-proof)

Meanwhile, rapid test kits can produce near-instant results at the cost of accuracy. Instead of detecting the genetic materials from the virus, rapid tests rely on identifying the immune response of an individual.

A licensed healthcare worker will perform a nasal swab from a patient and the rapid test kits interpret the results in as little as 15 minutes. The test reads for two kinds of antibodies: the immunoglobulin M (IgM) or the early immune response, and the immunoglobulin G (IgG) or the delayed immune response. Because it relies on antibody detection rather than the presence of the virus, it is best used on symptomatic patients during the 5th to 21st day of showing symptoms.

Although speedy, the accuracy of rapid tests relies on the sensitivity of the kit itself. Thus, there's a higher chance for errors — false positives and false negatives may be common. Another cause for concern is that antibodies only develop several weeks after the infection, so antibody-based tests like this might miss asymptomatic cases or those in the earliest stages of the disease. A confirmatory RT-PCR test is recommended for those individuals that have a positive result with a rapid test.

FSA Quickly Implemented Crucial Programs Amid Challenging Year

USDA's Farm Service Agency (FSA) helped farmers, livestock producers and foresters weather a tough 2020, marked with a pandemic and natural disasters. During the COVID-19 pandemic, FSA continued to deliver farm programs to producers through phone and online tools, using social distancing guidelines. The agency also provided extra flexibilities to its programs, adjusting reporting dates and loan processing timelines, and continued to expand technology and streamline services to enhance efficiency and effectiveness. "Through this tough year, FSA continued to deliver crucial safety net, disaster assistance, farm loan and conservation programs to Texas farmers and livestock producers," said Gary L. Six, FSA's State Executive Director in Texas. "We partner with agricultural producers to grow and expand their operations as well as weather the unpredictable, such as the COVID-19 pandemic and natural disasters. We've also spent the past year working to opimize program delivery and find better and modern ways to serve our customers in Texas." Key highlights from 2020 include: Support amid COVID-19 Pandemic: FSA worked with economists and commodity specialist across USDA to quickly build and deliver two rounds of the Coronavirus Food Assistance Program (CFAP), which provides financial assistance to help producers absorb some of the increased marketing costs associated with the CO-VID-19 pandemic. The deadline to apply for almost all commodities was last week, and so far, the two rounds of funding have provided nearly $23 billion in relief, including $1.3 billion in Texas. Additionally, FSA has added flexibilities to its farm credit options, including loan servicing and enabling a disaster set-aside option to defer a loan payment.

Disaster Assistance: Natural disasters, including wildfires in the West, hurricanes along the Gulf Coast, the derecho in the Midwest and widespread severe drought, took a toll on U.S. agriculture in 2020. Through FSA's suite of disaster assistance programs, producers received more than $212 million to help offset disaster-related losses in 2020. Additionally, FSA added drought and excess moisture as eligible causes of loss for the Wildfire and Hurricane Indemnity Program - Plus program, which provided much-needed assistance to help producers impacted by 2018 and 2019 natural disasters. In total, the program provided $1.24 billion in relief.

Farm Credit: FSA helps farmers and ranchers get the financing they need to start, expand or maintain a family farm. This past year, FSA obligated more than $7.5 billion in direct and guaranteed farm ownership and operating loans, the highest in agency history. This includes more than $3.4 billion for beginning farmers, also an agency record. The 2018 Farm Bill raised the amount producers can borrow, and FSA has seen sharp demand for loans in the past year, especially direct and guaranteed farm ownership loans. Meanwhile, FSA provided low-interest financing to producers to build or upgrade storage facilities and to purchase portable structures, equipment and storage and handling trucks through the Farm Storage Facility Loan (FSFL) program. FSA obligated a record $340 million in fiscal year 2020. Finally, FSA provided producers with more than $600 million in interim financing in fiscal year 2020 through marketing assistance loans, which help producers meet cash flow needs without having to sell their commodities when market prices are low.

Safety Net Programs: FSA held 2020 enrollment for the Agricultural Risk Coverage (ARC) and Price Loss Coverage (PLC) programs, where producers signed more than 1.7 million contracts. Election and enrollment for 2021 ARC and PLC is underway, and those enrolled for the 2019 crop year received more than $5 billion in payments earlier this fall. Last week, FSA wrapped up the 2021 signup for the Dairy Margin Coverage program, where more than 17,000 dairy operations enrolled in the risk management program. This included 280 operations in Texas. Operations that enrolled for coverage in 2019 and 2020 have received more than $500 million.

Conservation: FSA held its 54th general signup for the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP), the first since 2016, and enrolled 3.4 million acres nationwide into the program, including 657,292 in Texas. Additionally, FSA rolled out two new CRP pilots, the Soil Health and Income Protection Program and CLEAR30, and is preparing for next year with the CRP general signup beginning Jan. 4, 2021 and the CRP Grasslands signup beginning March 15, 2021.

Critical Program Delivery: FSA worked closely with the FPAC Business Center OCE, OGC, and AMS to build and implement programs during the pandemic, including CFAP 1, CFAP 2, and the Seafood Trade Relief Program (STRP). CFAP 2 was developed and deployed within six weeks. Through STRP, FSA helped U.S. fishermen who have been impacted by unfair retaliatory tariffs from foreign governments. Signup is ongoing for STRP through Jan. 15, and so far, FSA has approved 6,300 applications for more than $154 million in relief payments. Additionally, because many applicants applying for CFAP and STRP had not worked with FSA previously, the agency stood up a call center to help producers ask questions about FSA programs and get a jump start on program applications. The call center has received over 25,000 calls, including over 800 in Spanish, since its inception in May.

FSA is a part of the Farm Production and Conservation (FPAC) mission area at USDA. Other 2020 highlights can be found here.

All USDA Service Centers are open for business, including those that restrict in-person visits or require appointments. All Service Center visitors wishing to conduct business with FSA, Natural Resources Conservation Service or any other Service Center agency should call ahead and schedule an appointment. Service Centers that are open for appointments will pre-screen visitors based on health concerns or recent travel, and visitors must adhere to social distancing guidelines. Visitors are also required to wear a face covering during their appointment. Our program delivery staff will continue to work with our producers by phone, email and using online tools.
