Leaders send Christmas wishes

by Gen. John M. Shalikashvili
Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff

Season's greetings to you and your loved ones. At this time of the year it is appropriate to thank those responsible for guaranteeing America's security. It is because of the Armed Forces that Americans are able to spend this and every holiday season free from worry over threats from potential adversaries.

This year as in years past, we saw numerous occasions where our brave men and women — civilian and military, active and reserve — made personal sacrifices in the name of freedom. From operations in Somalia, in the skies over Bosnia, off the shores of Haiti, along the DMZ in Korea, and in virtually every region in between, you stand ready and willing to serve. For that, our nation is truly grateful.

During this holiday season, let us acknowledge and thank those people in our lives who are most important to us — our families. Throughout the year they often bear the heavy burden of celebrating special occasions without us. So take the time to recognize their selfless contributions, dedication, and sacrifice. Make the most of this season of faith and family.

The approach of the New Year is also a time of reflection. It gives us an opportunity to examine our successes and failures. Look beyond the holiday festivities with a spirit of renewed optimism, and seek the fulfillment of your every dream. Mrs. Shalikashvili and I wish you a blessed holiday season, one filled with joy, happiness and tranquility. On behalf of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, have a safe, healthy and prosperous 1994.

by Gen. Henry Viccellio Jr.
AETC Commander

Year-end holidays seem to make a difference in people. Everyone seems friendlier, quicker to smile, and a little more inclined to live up to the respected maxim of "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

This time of year also provides a time for reflection, particularly regarding the many blessings we each have as American servicemen and servicewomen. Just like many of you, I can vividly recall holidays where our people were involved in armed conflict in far-off lands — as recently as three years ago in the Persian Gulf. Until just a few years ago, moreover, we faced an ever-present Cold War cloud looming overhead.

While we still have many people deployed today, rather than in war, they're primarily involved in humanitarian relief and peacekeeping missions ... and we should all recognize this "role change" as a blessing in itself.

As we make our resolutions regarding 1994, let's all be sure to consider our past and the progress we've made through the years. Let's also remember those from our ranks who are currently deployed, and focus on the blessings we enjoy today.

From our family to yours, may your holidays be joyous, safe, and peaceful.

by Maj. Gen. Everett H. Pratt Jr.
19th Air Force Commander

Joyce and I send our warmest wishes to all the men and women of 19th Air Force for a safe and happy holiday season.

You've all done outstanding work this year as we took on the training of crew members for the world's most respected air and space force — thank you! During this time of year, we encourage you to spend time with family and friends.

We anticipate a great 1994 as we continue to build on what has been a super beginning for the 19th Air Force.

by Col. Roger Brady
64th FTW Commander

This season of the year is special to virtually everyone. Whatever your faith or heritage, it is a season of thanksgiving and hope, a time of reflection and one of positive expectation.

The 64th FTW has much to be thankful for. I am most thankful for each of you and your dedicated effort to each other and to our mission. As we approach an exciting new year, I urge you to appreciate the successes of the past, learn from the mistakes and rededicate yourself to making 1994 the best year ever — personally, professionally and for Team Reese.

Litha and I want to thank you for your support and wish you the very best of the holidays and a wonderful New Year!

From YOUR perspective

(Editor's note: The following note is from wing commander Col. Roger Brady, addressing his concerns for future Carelines.)

Dear Roundup Readers:

A Careline column provides one of the many opportunities for a commander to find out what people are thinking, what's bothering them, what they like, etc. If you've wondered why we do something, or just want to make a comment, don't hesitate to call.

If you leave your name and telephone number, we'll get back to you and answer your concern by telephone. Calls of interest to the Reese community will be published, without the caller's name, in the Roundup the following week. I look forward to hearing from you. Calls can be made to the Careline 24 hours a day at 3273.

Jogging concern

I have a complaint about people jogging and riding bikes around Perimeter Road. In my shop we all drive the sweeper and we have to drive out there to dump it periodically. It's hard to see the joggers once it gets dusk, even if they're wearing reflective clothing.

I was wondering why they're allowed to jog, walk and ride their bikes around there when you have a perfectly good track on base.

You have a very valid concern about folks jogging or bike riding around the perimeter during the hours of darkness. It can be dangerous due to the lack of lighting and the narrow road.

While jogging and bike riding at night are not specifically prohibited, neither are they encouraged. I ask everyone to refrain from using Perimeter Road for jogging or bike riding between dusk and dawn. During these times it would be best to use the base track or the jogging routes established by the fitness center.

I would remind all the folks who cycle at night that their bikes should be equipped with a front headlight and a rear reflector for safety. Reflective clothing for joggers also makes good sense.

Waiting in line

I was in the commissary the other day and there were about seven people in line and there was a lady in front of me in the express lane and she had about $70 worth of groceries to be checked. I was just wondering if there was anything that could be done about monitoring that, since it took about 20 minutes for her to process through the line and I was in a hurry.

Why have an express lane if it's not going to be used properly?

The express lane is primarily for customers with 15 items or less. However, if the express lane cashier is idle and there are not express customers waiting to be served, express lane cashiers have been instructed to check out customers with more than 15 items in order to expedite service. As a result, you may have entered the express lane after the cashier was assisting a customer who had been waiting in another line.

We monitor the express lane very closely and try to ensure that our express customers receive express service. As a reminder, military members, shopping in uniform, between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. have priority in the express lane. I apologize for any inconvenience you may have experienced.

General Viccellio looks at QAF

by Gen. Henry Viccellio Jr.
AETC Commander

As you've searched the references dealing with this or that Air Force issue, you may have noticed the evolving change from Air Force Regulations to Air Force Policy Directives and Instructions.

What you've probably heard most about this change has dealt primarily with the tangible "whats" of the transition — the number of pages we've reduced: over 28,000, equaling 60 percent of what we started with; the number of regulations we've eliminated, 590; and maybe even our eventual transition into the CD-ROM data bases for AFPDs and AFIs. This will allow us to stop printing paper references entirely, reduce our mobility "footprint," and be far more user-friendly than ever imagined with regulations.

While it's such changes that capture the headlines, I'd like to share with you a bit beyond the "whats" of these changes and delve into the "whys."

Although the result of this process is a host of new AFPDs and AFIs, the catalyst is a force you've become familiar with — our Quality Air Force initiatives. We haven't reduced the number of regs or the pages simply to save paper. Through QAF principles, we've reduced or actually eliminated the need for the regs or portions of their contents.

We've moved to reverse the "top down" thrust of regulations, where the headquarters defined the products and the processes to reach those products — from aircraft maintenance, to security police procedures, to mobility processing. Instead, we've entered an environment where the headquarters defines the desired product — such as mission capable aircraft, base security, or people ready to deploy; and the field determines the processes to produce the products. This is a major mind-set change because, now, it's up to the producers to determine the procedures governing their actions.

As this mind-set change unfolds, headquarters resumes its rightful role as a "policy maker," publishing succinct, stand-alone policy documents with performance measures. Conversely, the field assumes its original purpose as "executor" — but now as an executor empowered to determine how to best perform its mission — not being told how to do it.

This new approach encourages the drive to continually seek the best practices to do the job. Aided by "cross-tell" programs such as computer data bases, newsletters, awards and the IG, good ideas will be shared among similar functions. So, even though organizations are free to determine the best "how," cross-tell systems keep them from doing it in a vacuum.

As we proceed along this transition in both how we do things and how we think about them, keep in mind that your inputs to the process — not just this one dealing with AFPDs and AFIs, but many more — are valued more than ever in making our Quality Air Force carry us into the future.

What's In A Name? Maybe A Catalog!

(NAPS)—More than a mere monogram, the way to set your own style this season is with a personalized piece of clothing that carries your name. Thanks to modern technology and a clever idea, one shirt company can offer t-shirts, sweat shirts, polo shirts, totes, aprons and more emblazoned with any surname from all over the world. Surname apparel is especially popular for family reunions, though all sorts of groups like to get in on the fun. The company does something even more exclusive for some 1,800 surnames by producing customized catalogs. The target name appears on the cover and on some of the clothing displayed. The All-Purpose Plastic Lens

(NAPS)—A plastic that has soared through outer space also benefits millions of people looking for better vision here on earth, experts agree.

A space-age plastic brings eyewear users down-to-earth benefits.

Some of the newer plastic spectacle lens materials produce thinner, more attractive eyewear, others provide lenses that are lighter in weight. Wearers can also have their lenses treated to filter out harmful UV light or order special scratch-resistant coating.

Now, there is one lens that combines all these features—and at a cost not much more than ordinary lenses. Developed originally for the aerospace industry, polycarbonate has been used for Space Shuttle windows and the face plates in astronauts' helmets. Today, polycarbonate is used to make the lightest, most comfortable spectacle lenses available. These lenses also have a built-in ultraviolet inhibitor to protect your eyes from potentially harmful sun rays. They're scratch-resistant, too.

Added to all these features is superior protection. Polycarbonate lenses are the most impact resistant lenses that can be made, making them excellent for children and anyone with an active lifestyle. Just ask your eyecare professional.

CES members deploy

Several members of the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron deployed for Saudi Arabia Monday for a 91-day deployment in support of U.S. forces in that region.

The CES members, all of them volunteers for this TDY, departed Reese following a reception in the CES complex, attended by family, wing members, friends and members of the local media. Although the deployment meant being away from home for Christmas, all of the deploying members had upbeat attitudes about the trip.

"A lot of people in our squadron have (already) gone; basically I feel like it's my turn,"

About the cover

said SSgt. Ronald Tebbetts. "I look at it as us enabling someone to come home for Christmas whose been over there for three months."

Since the holidays are almost here, some members decided to celebrate Christmas early, such as SSgt. Anthony Cohn and his family. With his departure, the rest of the Cohns left the area to spend the rest of the season with other family members.

The team that left Monday was scheduled to join another CES member en route to Saudi Arabia. In addition, another CES member recently departed for that region, and one other is scheduled to deploy in March. The members who deployed Monday have specialties ranging from heating and air conditioning to structural to water utilities.

The 'nightmare' of DUI

During the Christmas season last year, three 21-year-old men lost control of their car on an isolated rural road. The car swerved off the road, careened off small trees, plowed 100 yards down a ditch and finally slammed into a guard rail. Two of the passengers were trapped in the car and screaming in pain because pieces of metal had pierced their legs. It was over two hours before authorities were notified by the third passenger who had crawled down the road to seek help. An almost empty keg of beer was found in the car.

Elsewhere, a couple and their 8-year-old daughter were taking a drive. Their car was struck by another car whose driver had a blood-alcohol level double the legal limit. The daughter survived, but her father died instantly and her mother was pronounced dead four hours later.

For these people, the time to celebrate the season of giving was taken away. By telling these tales of tragedy, some may say that we are playing the part of "The Grinch Who Stole Christmas." On the contrary, we want you to be aware of the hazards of overdoing the spirits of the season, so you can enjoy the holidays without the adversity of misfortune.

According to Mothers Against Drunk Driving,

17,699 persons died in 1992 in alcohol-related traffic accidents, 45 percent of total traffic fatalities for the year. On Christmas Day, 50 percent of fatal traffic accidents involved alcohol, and on New Year's Day it was 75 percent. These statistics show that unlike any other time of the year, people tend to see the holiday season as a time to overindulge.

How can you avoid becoming a nameless statistic? First, as a responsible driver, learn to recognize a drunk driver by watching for erratic driving, no headlights at night, swerving in and out of lanes, and the like. Learn to avoid drunk drivers by staying back, don't try to pass, be ready to take evasive action, pull to the right if necessary and if possible take down a license number for the police.

Second, as a responsible adult, volunteer to be a designated driver or at least ensure someone at your gathering is designated. If you plan to drink and a designated driver is not available, call a taxi.

Third, as a responsible host, provide food with alcoholic drinks and be sure to make non-alcoholic drinks available.

Taking these thoughts to heart can go a long way in avoiding a Christmas nightmare. We at social actions hope all your holiday dreams come true.

Advertising, Nutrition and Kids . . . A report from the Better Business Bureau

Today's marketplace offers more choices than previous generations could have imagined. Supermarkets are filled with countless assortments of food products available to satisfy every tastebud and nutritional need.

Consumers know what they want and that is variety! Sometimes parents and children can become overwhelmed by the multitude of choices and the advertisements highlighting these products.

The Children's Advertising Review Unit, the industry-supported self-regulatory system of the children's advertising industry and the International Food Information Council Foundation, an independent public foundation that develops educational and scientific programs in food safety and nutrition have joined forces and prepared a handy informational pamphlet called "Advertising, Nutrition and Kids" to help parents and children evaluate food advertising and make informed decisions.

Base chaplain recognized for rapid water rescue

When most people think of the chaplain service, they think of individuals dedicated to helping others. That's certainly the case with Chaplain (Maj.) Donald Hagler, whose willingness to help others was keenly noticed by an Alabama youth.

Chaplain Hagler was presented with an "angel" award by the Reese Family Support Center for rescuing a small child, about 5, from a potential drowning in the Blue Springs Park, Ala.

The incident took place July 28, prior to the chaplain's arrival at Reese. According to Mrs. K.D. Mullins, a witness to the rescue, the child was pushed into the "ice cold, fast flowing" springs by an older child. Chaplain Hagler and another man immediately jumped in after him, averting what could have been a tragedy.

Looking back on the incident, Chaplain Hagler modestly downplayed it.

"It really wasn't so grand," he said. "We did nothing that anyone else wouldn't have done in that situation."

Take a bite out of crime

by Special Agent Sarah Garcia
AFOSI Det. 412

Have you witnessed a crime, but failed to report it for fear of reprisal from a supervisor or commander?

Doing the right thing is seldom easy, but thanks to provisions included in the False Claims Act, one need not jeopardize a career to "take a stand." Whistle blower protection applies to any employee who is discharged, demoted, suspended, threatened, harassed or, in any other manner, discriminated against in the terms and conditions of employment, for the initiation of testimony for or assistance in the investigation of a criminal act. Protection for whistle-blowing employees may include reinstatement with the same seniority status the employee would have had without the discrimination, two times the amount of back pay, interest on the back pay and compensation for any special damages sustained as a result of the discrimination, including litigation costs and reasonable attorney's fees.

Everyone is protected from reprisals and all military members have an obligation to report any criminal activity for investigation, which will be done by the OSI.

The Air Force Office of Special Investigations investigates allegations of criminal activity in three primary areas: general crime, fraud, and espionage. General crime represents the largest single area of AFOSI's investigative efforts and includes such acts as child abuse, rape, sexual assault, aggravated assault, theft and the sale, use and possession of narcotics.

Fraud is a fancy term for "theft by paperwork" and encompasses a variety of crimes which are typified by the use of one or more of the following elements, which are crimes in and of themselves:

- False statement, either oral or written.
- False claims.
- Use of the telephone or U.S. mail in the furtherance of the first two.

Examples of fraudulent activity include failure to accurately record departure dates and times on travel vouchers, padding the weight of household goods moved in do-it-yourself moves and the inflating of claims related to the value of goods damaged during permanent-change-of-station moves.

For civilian contractors performing government contracts, examples of fraud include billing the government for services never provided, use of lesser-grade materials than called for in the contract, use of foreign-made construction materials, double billing and bribery.

A specialized area within AFOSI's fraud mission is the investigation of environmental crimes. Environmental crimes involve the intentional improper storage, use and disposal of hazardous materials. Items identified in environmental regulations as meeting the definition of hazardous include such every-day items as used motor oil, radiator coolant, cleaning solvents and paint.

The final area of AFOSI's responsibility is the investigation of allegations of espionage. Espionage is the intentional release of classified material to persons, entities or countries not having a need-to-know. It is important to recognize that the person, entity or country need not be an adversary (ideologically or otherwise) of the United States, but only that they have no need-to-know.

As you can see, the AFOSI is involved in a variety of crime-stopping activities. Anyone who knows of criminal activity may alert an AFOSI special agent of what's going on.

If you have information regarding a crime, contact AFOSI Detachment 412 at 3414 or via our "NARC" Hotline at 6272.

Notes

Chapel plans services

The Catholic parish on base will hold a children's Christmas Eve Mass at 5 p.m., followed by a "birthday party" for Jesus with cake, goodies and a pinata in the base chapel. A midnight Mass with special music will begin at 11:30 p.m. There will be no Christmas Day Mass; however, the normal 5 p.m. service for the Sunday obligation will be held.

A Protestant Christmas Eve candlelight service will be held at 7 p.m.

The Catholic parish will hold a "Mary, Mother of God" Mass vigil at 6 p.m. New Year's Eve.

Club plans party

The Reese Enlisted Club will hold a New Year's Eve party from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. Tickets are on sale at the cashier's cage for $10.50 per person. The cost includes dinner (steak), party favors, champagne at midnight and breakfast.

'Hearts apart' party set

Family support is extending an open invitation to spouses needing assistance or "just someone to talk to" while the active-duty or reserve spouse is deployed, TDY or on a remote tour. They offer a wide range of personnel assistance.

For more on the "Hearts Apart" Program, call Gloria Coward at 3306.

'Bird boom' notice

Wing safety is pursuing further steps to control aircraft bird strike potential. People who live on base and hear the propane gas cannons and/or the firing of shotguns in the morning should not be alarmed. Wing safety is only attempting to scare the birds off the airfield.
