Reese pilot one of first women in fighters

T-38 instructor earns place in history books

First Lt. Ellen McKinnon's road to an historic aviation first began in the summer of 1987 during ROTC field training.

"I was mainly interested in being in the military," the 25-year-old said, explaining that she had not intended to get into jets. "But I did really well in field training, and they offered me the (UPT) slot."

That event set the Midland, Texas, native on a path that has now made her one of the first seven women pilots selected for fighter positions. Defense Secretary Les Aspin announced the policy change April 28 allowing women into combat aircraft. When Lieutenant McKinnon, a Reese UPT graduate, found out about the lifting of the combat exclusion, it caught her off guard.

"I was very surprised, and a little uncertain about what my decision would be," she said, explaining that she wanted to talk it over with her husband, Mark, a junior medical student at Texas Tech University. Having had time to let the news sink in and discuss it with her husband, the future is bright for the McKinnons.

"We're both very excited, and I'm honored to have been chosen," she said. "We're looking forward to this 'journey.'"

The recently married couple are not the only ones who are excited. Her father, Jay Hardy, is a retired Navy helicopter pilot. From his office in Midland, he talked about how happy he and his wife are about their daughter's historic op-

Lieutenant McKinnon removes her shoulder harness after finishing a T-38 sortie.

"We're both really proud and thrilled for her," he said, admitting that her mother did feel a bit hesitant at first about her daughter being a fighter pilot. Regardless, Mr. Hardy said his daughter has the "innate ability" it takes for her new duties in the A-10.

"This is quite an accomplishment. She's a real hard worker, and I know she has what it takes to do well," he said.

The lieutenant's brother, Jay Hardy Jr., said he was "ecstatic" about the news.

"I'm happy she'll have this opportunity to fly fighters; I know she'll do well," said Hardy, who served at Reese as a T-37 instructor in the late 1980s and now works as a contract simulator instructor on base.

Family members aren't the only ones who are excited about Lieutenant McKinnon's good fortune and the lifting of the combat exclusion.

"I'm very pleased to be part of an organization that treats all members equally and based on their qualifications and talents, not on gender," said Maj. Kimberly Olson, 64th Operations Group. "Women have worked hard to make this possible, and in today's shrinking military, it's imperative that we put the most qualified people available into the positions they're needed." She added that the role women played in Operation Desert Storm helped dispel many preconceived notions people have about women in combat.

"I think it's great," said 2nd Lt. Jeanette Voigt, a graduate of Reese UPT Class 92-15 and currently a KC-135 pilot at Ellsworth AFB, S.D. "It will give women even more of a chance to serve their country."

From my perspective

by Col. Bob Negley
64th FTW vice commander

Now that the Quality Air Force Assessment team has gone and we've had a chance to catch our breaths (and answer the inspector general's findings), I'd like to say a few words of thanks.

We did well during our QAFA/operational readiness inspection, and our success can be shared by every member of the wing. The 64th FTW team did a superb job of preparing for and delivering during the QAFA and we should all be justly proud.

There are a few folks I'd like to single out for thanks as well. These folks had a very close and direct impact on some of the many facets of getting the base ready for the IG. If you happen to see these folks during your daily activities, pat 'em on the back, shake their hand, tell them "Goodonya" — and mean it!

Special thanks to:

- Lt. Col. Phil Romanowicz, OPG, for operations group preparation and coordination.
- Lt. Kevin Mock, SPTG, for support group preparation and coordination.
- 2nd Lt. Bruce Upton, LS, for transportation coordination.
- MSgt. Kirby Noland, MSSQ, for IG workcenter coordination.
- MSgt. Donald Carroll, MSSQ, for baggage detail coordination.
- SSgt. Phil Turcotte, CS, for communication requirements and setup.
- Sgt. Bob Battles, CS, for computer requirements and setup.

I would be remiss if I didn't also single out the folks who actually worked for "them" during the QAFA. A tip of the hat to:

- SSgt. Shannon Faison, FTW, NCO in charge, IG workcenter.
- Paula DeForrest, OPG, IG secretary.

And to the typists:

- Melinda Reed, LS (lead typist); Karen Roy, OSS; Suzy Thorpe, OSS; Aggie Brown, 35th FTS; Barbara Bullard, 52nd FTS; Flo Kohanek, MEDS; Elaine Stefkovich, LS; Jan Crafton, MEDS; SrA. Michelle Novak, SPS; SrA. Laura Holt, FTW; SrA. Angela Williams, CES; SrA. Miguel Baca, MSSQ; SrA. Emmett Glover, MSSQ; Robbin Stenger, MEDS; and Carol Hudson, MWRS.

Additionally, thanks to everyone who did without secretaries and typing support in order to provide for the IG's typing needs. Your tolerance and patience ensured first class support of the IG, which contributed to the wing's success.

Quality Air Force

by Capt. Blaine Painter
64th Operations Support Squadron

While Air Force and civilian world operations are sometimes dissimilar, their similarities in duties and responsibilities are often identical, some amazingly so.

Take for example the management of the flight publications bookstore. Just like any bookstore in the mall, it issued (sold) thousands of pieces monthly, had a steady clientele and a good location. Without these publications, this seemingly insignificant operation could have a detrimental effect on flying, (i.e. stoppage of flying). Unfortunately, the bookstore had no dedicated manager, employees or customer-oriented operating hours, being open for business only one hour per day.

It was very obvious that things had to change, and fast, as ATC had already begun a massive publications revision and the new T-1A Jayhawk training system was coming on line. The customers (Reese flyers) aired their concerns and initiated corrective actions.

The first step was to gather the right expertise: pilots knowledgeable of the requirements. From across the base, they gathered, worked through the facts, problems and needs, and recommended a number of improvements that were later implemented and evaluated for effectiveness:

- With the exception of headquarters-released materials, there needed to be only one releasing official for everything.

- Upon receipt of new publications, copies would be sent to the one releasing authority for initial review.

□ Upon clearance that the materials were ready for release, only the units on the publications distribution list were issued publications. Base distribution would be the normal method of distribution.

- Better coordination procedures were established for issuance coordination of "quick release" and other publications.

□ Individuals authorized to receive the materials was limited, thus reducing confusion and duplication of work.

- The bookstore operational hours were greatly expanded and additional manpower provided.

□ Physical layout of the store was changed, making it easier to issue and inventory the books.

- Finally, a detailed re-order list and suspense date was developed to prevent running out of materials at inopportune times.

The team's recommendations were a success, as evidenced by the rating in the April inspection. But the real success was a marked increase in customer satisfaction. While this may seem to be the end of the story, it continues with almost daily self-assessment of service, inventory of materials, and on-going customer feedback.

Arbor Day marked on base

Arbor Day was commemorated April 30 with a tree-planting ceremony attended by Col. Bob Negley, 64th FTW vice commander, MSgt. Donald Carroll, president of the base chapter of the Air Force Sergeants Association, and Col. Bob Brooks, 64th Support Group commander. A tree was planted in the field adjacent to the wing commander's house to symbolize the planting of 75 trees on the base.

policy is that the military services are to open up more specialties and assignments to women," Aspin said.

The result will be a larger pool of talent for the armed forces to pull from when performing missions in the post-Cold War world — tasks that require assigning the best qualified individual for each military job, the secretary said.

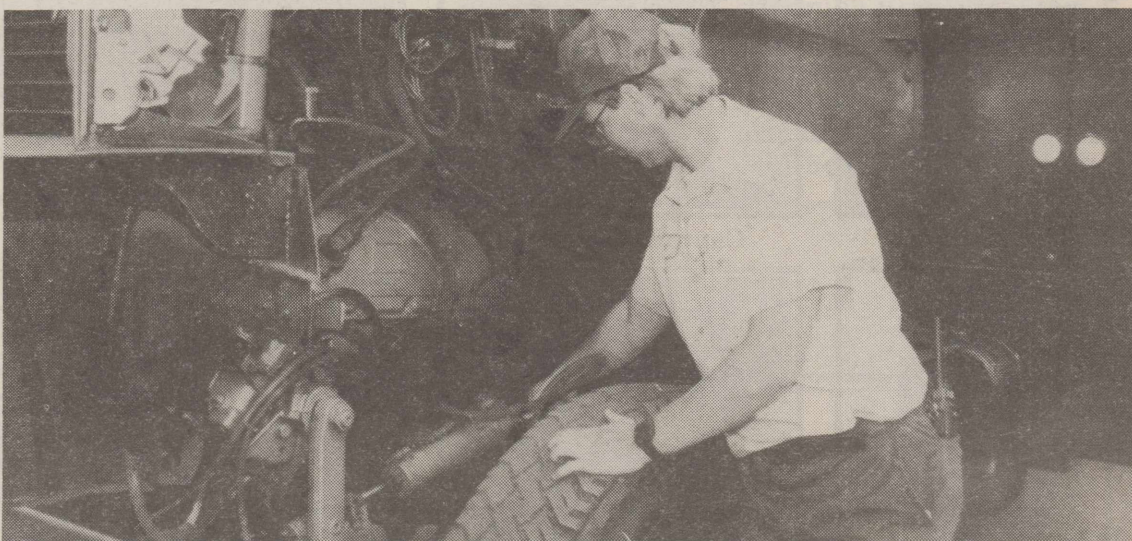

Fully supporting the secretary's decision, Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Merrill A. McPeak said the Air Force will implement it immediately and has already tapped seven women pilots for fighter/bomber lead-in training

"I want to ensure the Air Force maintains its reputation as a place where talent and ability are recognized and valued above all other considerations," he said. (Adapted from Air Force and ATC News Services)

Graduation: a team effort

Story by Capt. Paul Gloyd
Photos by
2nd Lt. Jonathan Davis
64th Operations Group

Graduation is the apex of the student's year of UPT. It's a year of hard work, fun, hard work, excitement, hard work, memories and more hard work.

We know that if it weren't for the excellent instructor pilot corps, Reese wouldn't graduate pilots for the world's most respected Air Force, but there are many behind the scenes people who graduate the pilots. The student affairs flight of the 64th Operations Support Squadron, manned by Capt. Paul Gloyd and Susan Thorpe, is the driving force behind all graduations. Planning begins eight weeks prior to each graduation. At a graduation frequency of six weeks, the student affairs flight prepares for two graduations at any given time.

Attention to detail is the key. Much like a Quality Air Force Assessment, the weeks prior to a graduation has moments of chaos, but just when it counts, everything falls into place. The "inspectors" are the eyes of the Reese and Lubbock communities, family and friends, and visiting dignitaries. Reese has the privilege of welcoming civilians — from the mayor of Lubbock to foreign diplomats — and generals — from the commander of foreign militaries to the commander of the 15th Air Force.

Student affairs is the grand orchestrator, coordinating the talents of many others. Working hand-in-hand with the wing protocol office, they ensure all "i's" are dotted and all "t's" are crossed. No graduation would succeed without the superior performance of the 64th OSS and wing audiovisual department.

The graduates themselves are a major ingredient as they add their own flair to each dinner-dance. Two students from each class serve as MCs for the evening festivities. The script, however, is written by the student affairs flight.

But the student affairs flight can't do it alone. They require hard work from the excellent men and women of Reese. Without them, no student would ever receive the coveted silver wings. In an effort to praise these people, time has been set aside during each graduation to recognize one organization. One outstanding member from each organization aids the wing commander with the awarding of wings and diplomas to the class.

Of course, no great moment ever goes by without a great celebration. The formal dinner-dance is a relaxing end to a tense and busy day. The officers' open mess staff caters to the guests as the audiovisual department entertains. Several video and slide presentations are shown throughout the evening. Spouses are honored for truly being the "wind beneath the wings" of the graduates. The instructors and maintenance personnel are honored for their dedication and professionalism. In addition to the morning ceremony, the class honors one other individual from Reese for being the "outstanding mission maker."

The highlight of the evening is a slide presentation dedicated to the inspiration of each pilot. Friends and family look back on the day's events with a sound-on-slide show generated by the AV team. Wing photographers lurk everywhere taking candid pictures. They use their magic to "quick turn" rolls of film into a masterpiece exhibition.

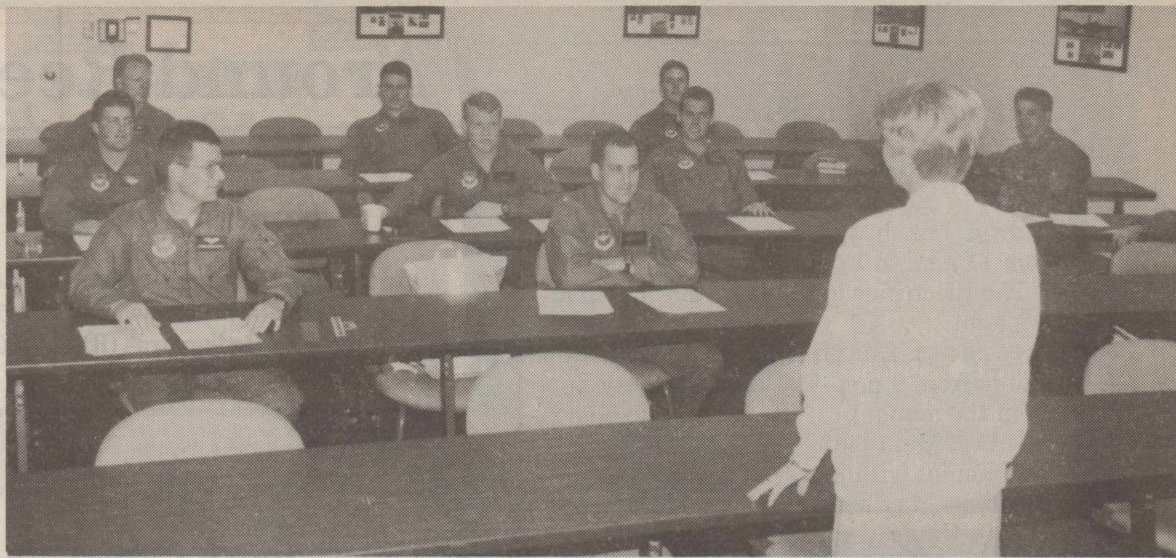

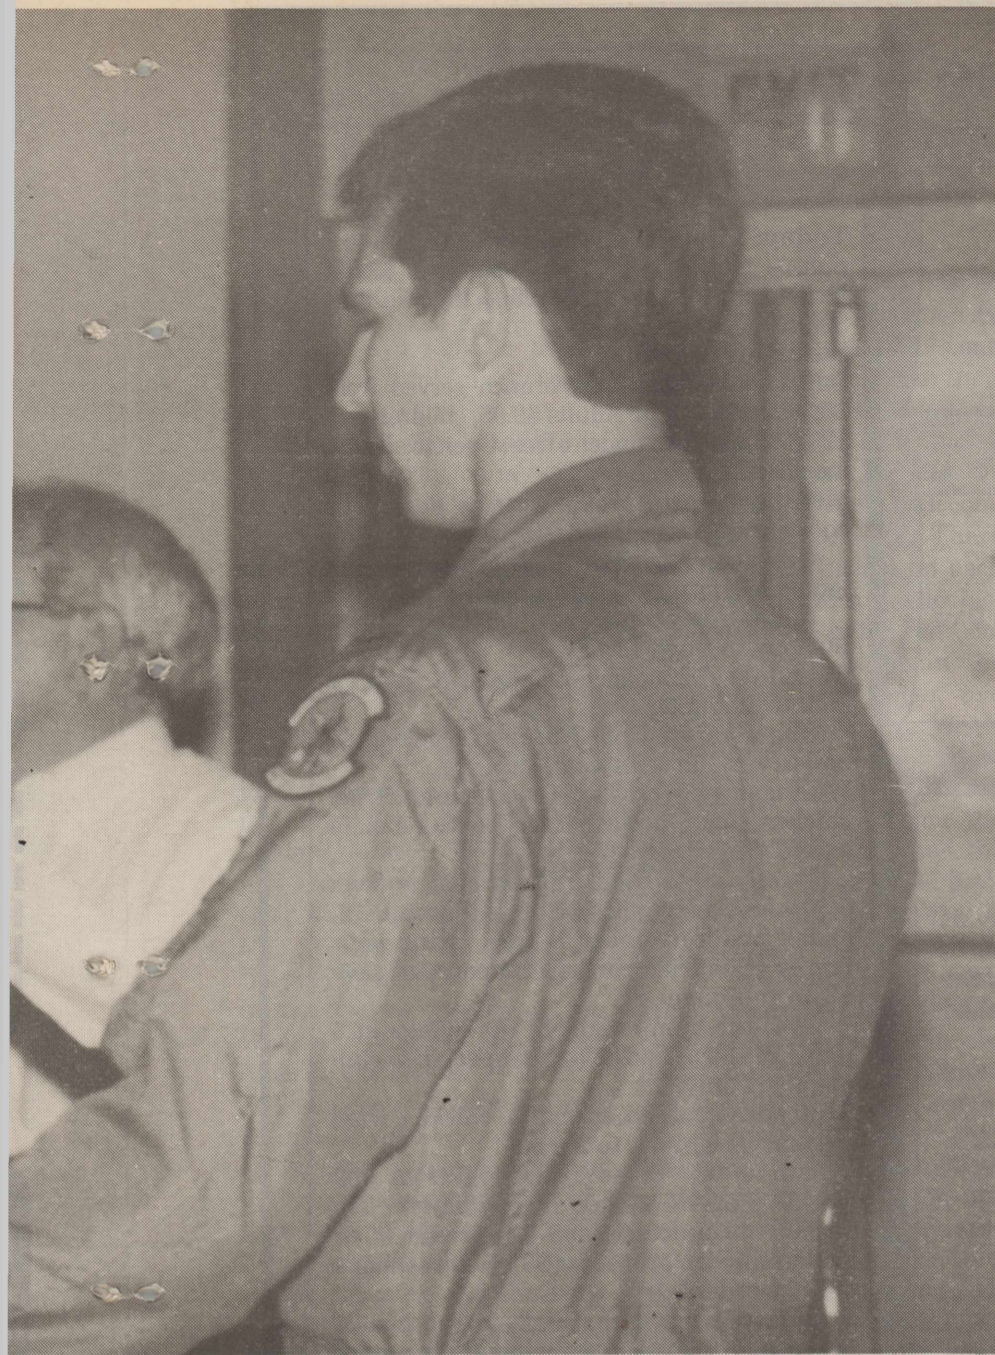

After the last toast is regaled, the dance floor is cleared of dinner tables and the stage is opened to the DJ. Guests are invited to dance until the cows come home — or the next graduation — whichever comes first.

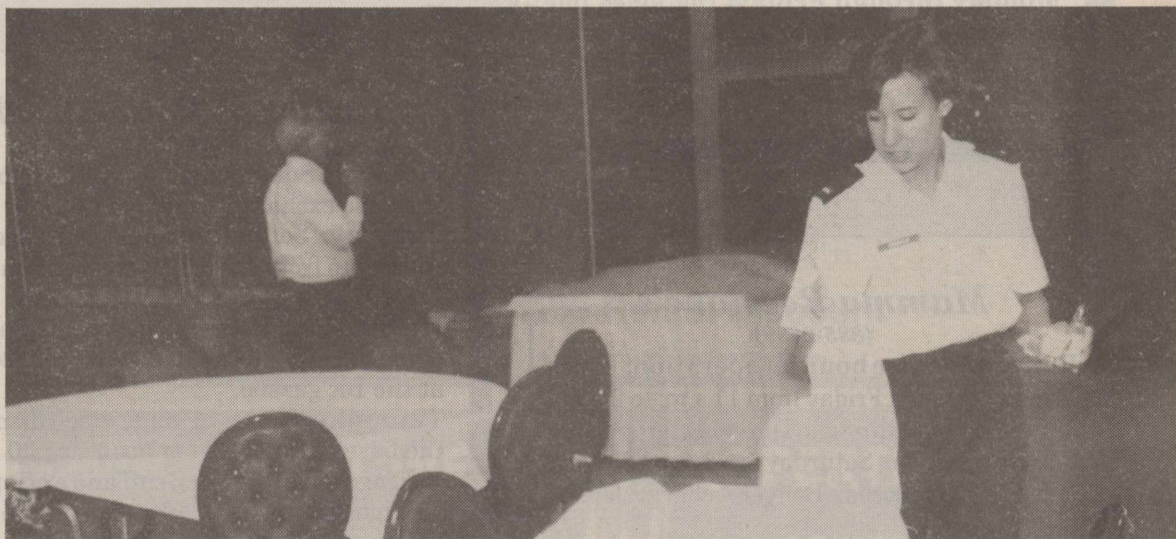

Ms. Thorpe checks on awards and diplomas.

Ms. Thorpe gives a newcomer's briefing for Reese UPT Class 94-07. Not only are graduations a moment of accomplishment for the newest Air Force aviators, but it is also a learning experience for a special group. Each new class has the opportunity to attend a graduation ceremony.

Second Lt. Susan Kirkham of protocol ensures seating arrangements in the OOM are correct.

Mr. Johnson makes sure the AV equipment is ready to go.

Memorial honors military WOMEN

by TSgt. Sarah Hood
Air Force News Service

Maybe I'm a little prejudiced, but I think my mother's beautiful.

Hey, when people see her 5-by-7 inch portrait on my desk, they ask if she's some movie star from the '40s. "Nah," I say, "it's just my mom mugging for the camera when she was a Navy Wave during World War II."

My mother's pride in that uniform lights up her smiling face. It's a face I hope many will see when they look up Elizabeth "Betty" Beebe in the visitor center of the Women in Military Service for America Memorial.

The memorial, to be built at Arlington's gateway entrance, across the Potomac River from the Lincoln Memorial, was authorized by Congress in 1986. Its purpose is to honor women - past, present and future - who served in the military. Among its many features is a visitors' center with a computerized data base where the public may access the photos, military history and individual stories of women who served.

Crafty individual that I am, I asked my mom for some anecdotes from her two-year Navy stint. "Don't worry about what I need them for," I said, "I'll tell you later."

What I needed the information for was the application for the women's memorial. Privately raised funds must cover the cost of the memorial, an estimated $14 million, and the foundation is asking for a minimum $25 donation to register someone.

I wanted to give my mother something lasting and special for her 75th birthday last year, and this was the perfect gift.

Well, she came through with a couple stories. One of them was about her trip, with 88 other recruits, including her sister, from Los Angeles to the Navy boot camp at Hunter College in the Bronx, New York. It took six days to get to New Jersey, where they were loaded on a ferry to the Big Apple.

Once in the Bronx, the Waves were grouped into platoons of 50 and assigned to five-story apartment buildings a good mile's march from their classrooms, mess hall and parade ground.

While there, it was 10 women to each one-bedroom, one-bath apartment. There were five apartments on each floor equipped with two double-deck bunk-beds in the bedroom and three in the living room, one desk, one chair and no rugs. Naturally, my mom was on the fifth floor and the elevator had been disconnected!

When she was issued her uniform items, including the jaunty hat she sports in the photo on my desk, they handed her a pair of size 8 shoes. "You'll grow into them," they told her. She did, and has worn a size 8 ever since.

I want those memories to last beyond her lifetime. I'd like her grandchildren to be able to visit the memorial and read of her experiences and those of other family members and women who served.

The memorial's design incorporates an existing half-ring-shaped building called the hemicycle, a registered historic landmark built in 1932. Inclined glass panels will be inscribed with quotations from women who served their country throughout our nation's history.

The panels will serve as skylights for the memorial's visitors center below. The panels are positioned so the shadows from the inscribed quotes appear on the visitor center wall.

A thin sheet of water will flow over the panels, adding a shimmering effect. The water will collect at the base of the panels and cascade to a central reflecting pool in the Court of Honor.

For all this to happen, however, funds need to be raised. But time is growing short - the proposed ground breaking is in November. For more information on how you can make donations or fill out an application, please call 1-800-472-5883.

Brian or RoyceQuality performer

One of the smiling faces you can see in the human resources office is that of this week's quality performer, Chris Lytal. She assists job seekers with their applications, in-processes newly hired people, out-processes those leaving, and enters that data into the computer.

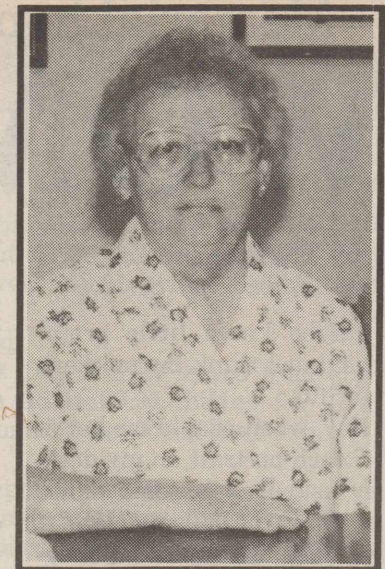

During an average year, she in-processes approximately 140 employees (mostly part time) and out-processes another 100.

Mrs. Lytal has worked at Reese since September 1979. She worked in the civilian personnel office until October 1990 when she retired. She accepted a NAF position in the Human Resources Office in February 1991.

Mrs. Lytal is a native of Deport, Texas. She and her husband, Charles, live in Shallowater. They have four children and 11 grandchildren.

In her free time, she enjoys reading and playing with her grandchildren.

Ms. Lytal

NotesTown meeting planned

A Reese town meeting will be held at 7 p.m. May 19 in the enlisted open mess. Everyone on base is welcome. Representatives from support group units and the hospital will be on hand to answer questions.

Computer users meet

People who use UNISYS 2200 computer systems should attend the users group meeting at 9 a.m. Monday in Building 36, Room 120. Representatives will be on hand to talk about Reese being regionalized with Kelly AFB, Texas, in January. Commanders and supervisors are welcome.

OWC plans event

The officers' wives club will meet Thursday in the officers' open mess. Social hour will be at 6:30 p.m.; dinner follows at 7 p.m. Items on the evening's agenda will include honoring of OWC scholarship recipients and spring-summer fashions. Reservations are due before 9 p.m. Monday. Call Elia Tucker at 885-2888 or Patty Clark at 885-2339.

Steak sale planned

The Top Three Association will hold a steak sale May 14. Steaks will be delivered between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. along with potato salad, baked beans and soda for $5. Tickets will be sold until Monday. Call CMSgt. Dex Clay at 3445 or MSgt. Robert Anderson at 6442.

Housing eyes A/C issue

Housing maintenance officials are expecting an increase in air conditioner calls because of the warmer weather. Although air conditioning problems can not be classified as emergencies, calls will be responded to on a more urgent basis as the nighttime lows reach 65 to 70 degrees. Housing officials ask that residents open windows and use fans whenever possible in the meantime. Calls will be responded to as quickly as possible.

AFSA plans sale

The Air Force Sergeants Association will hold a rummage sale from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. May 15 in the Reese Federal Credit Union parking lot. Anyone on base can participate. For more information, call Jean Nelson at 796-0417. AFSA will take donations of garage sale items.

Relocation assistance

The family support center has a relocation assistance program available to help military families preparing to move or just settling in. For more information or to set an appointment, call George Ferguson at 6034.

Volunteers needed

Volunteers are needed at the Reese Social Actions and Legal Offices to help with administration. Hours are flexible, but mornings are preferred. The work will consist of light typing, filing and answering phones. Call Cheryl Ortiz at 3305 for details.

Check fire extinguishers

Fire prevention officials said that building managers on base should check on their fire extinguishers and bring any halon extinguishers to them. Building managers can also call 3686 for pick-up. The halon models are being replaced with dry chemical extinguishers, which are on order.

Scouts, leaders sought

Boys between the ages of 11 and 18 who would like to camp monthly and take part in other activities should call Reese Scoutmaster Matt Alvarez at 885-2426. Also, adults who would like to work with the base troop should also call Alvarez.

54th FTS takes title

Championship game pits flyers vs. flyers

When the 54th Flying Training Squadron showed up for the final night of the intramural volleyball playoffs April 29, they must have felt ready to take on the world.

Considering how they handled their opponents, it might have taken the world to slow them down. Unfortunately for the other playoff teams, they would be no stopping the T-38 squadron that evening, as they all but steamrolled their way to this year's title.

After quickly dispatching two preliminary opponents, they went into the title match against fellow flyers from the 35th FTS "A" team. The first game was a competitive affair, but the 54th came away with the 15-9 victory.

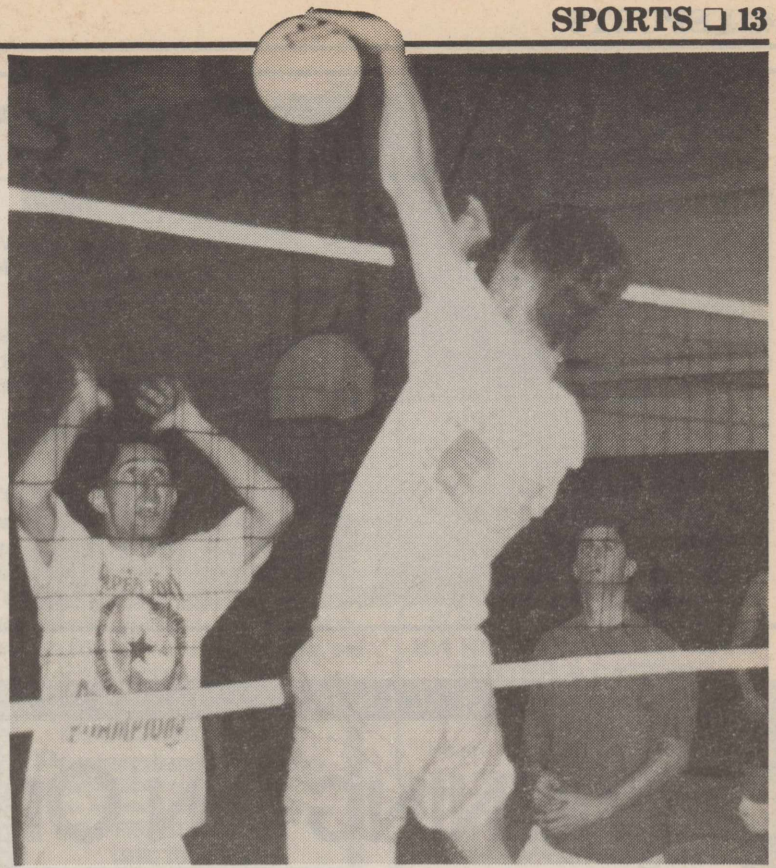

Now poised on the brink of a championship, they kicked things up a notch and routed the 35th 15-2 to take game, match and championship.

"We felt pretty positive going in, but I'd be lying if I said we weren't a little scared," said

A1C Alex Nitterhouse of the 54th, explaining that the height of some of the 35th players concerned them. "Everything went smoothly though, and we were able to pull it off."

"The first match went well and could have gone either way," said 1st Lt. Jim Wurzer of the 35th "A." "I don't know if that (the first-game loss) deflated us or not, but concentration was a problem in the second game."

In the consolation game earlier that evening, the 64th Medical Squadron survived a first-game loss against the 64th Mission Support Squadron to take the three-game match — 9-15, 15-4, 15-7 — and capture third place.

Banquet theme needed

Plans are under way for the 1993 Enlisted Awards Banquet, scheduled for Nov. 20.

Last year's theme was "Professionalism, Commitment and Tradition — The Enlisted Force," and organizers of this year's banquet are looking for wing members to come up with a suggestion for a theme for this year.

The banquet committee will choose the best theme and award a $50 savings bond to the winner.

Send suggestions along with name, organization, date and daytime phone number to MSgt. Marsha Ptomey, 64 FTW/JA. All suggestions must be received by June 1 to be considered.

We Accept Food Stamps.
