General Viccellio visits Reese today

ATC Commander Gen. Henry Viccellio Jr. will be on hand for the ribbon cutting at the contractor operated and managed base supply warehouse at 9:30 a.m. today.

Everyone on base is welcome at the ceremony for the COMBS warehouse, which is at the northern end of the flightline behind the temporary lodging facility. Base people are asked to enter the warehouse through the southwest entrance (by the loading dock), and they should be in place by 9:10 a.m.

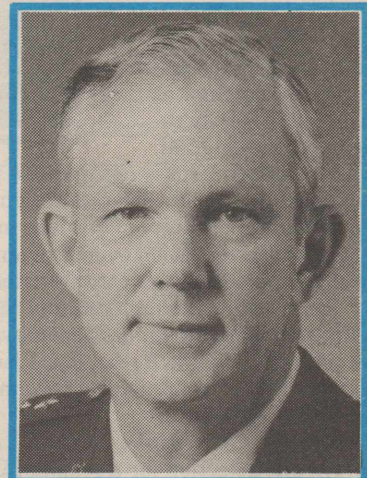

Because parking at the site will be extremely limited, base officials are encouraging people who can walk to the ceremony to do so.

The visit by General Viccellio marks his first since he took over the command Dec. 10. Also attending the ceremony will be Lubbock County Judge Don McBeath, Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors Chairman Buddy Forbess and Chamber Armed Services Committee Chairman David Seim. Also on hand will be Beech Aerospace Systems Inc. President Dan Grafton.

The COMBS warehouse will house all parts for maintenance of the base's T-1A fleet; that adds up to 4,800 line items. At any given time, the warehouse will store in excess of $10 million in spare parts. Work on the 17,760-square-foot facility was done by C.B. Thompson Construction Co. of Lubbock. Ground was broken for the project in September 1991.

Details on the opening ceremony and the general's visit will appear in the Jan. 22 Roundup.

The COMBS warehouse (interior and exterior views) will house all T-1A parts.

ATC vice commander selected for third star

General Habiger

RANDOLPH AFB, Texas — President Bush has nominated Maj. Gen. Eugene E. Habiger, vice commander of Air Training Command since July 1991, for promotion to lieutenant general, the Air Force announced recently. Pending confirmation by the Senate, General Habiger will pin on his third star and remain ATC's vice commander.

General Habiger was born in Oakland, Calif., June 11, 1939. He graduated from Oakland Technical High School in 1957.

He earned a bachelor of science degree in clinical psychology from the University of Georgia in 1963 and a master's degree in systems management from George Washington University in 1974. His professional military education accomplishments include Squadron Officer School, the Air Command and Staff College, the Industrial College of the Armed Forces and the National War College.

General Habiger completed pilot training at Williams AFB, Ariz., in 1966, then went on to fly the B-52 Stratofortress at several locations, including Castle AFB, Calif., Wurtsmith AFB, Mich., and 74 combat missions in Southeast Asia. He transitioned to the C-7A Caribou cargo plane in 1971, then returned to Southeast Asia to fly an additional 76 combat missions.

From there, he went to Langley AFB, Va., as intelligence support officer for the F-15, A-10 and Airborne Warning and Control System, AWACS, weapon systems. In 1975, he became a squadron operations officer in the bombardment wing at K. I. Sawyer AFB, Mich.

In 1977, General Habiger moved to Strategic Air Command headquarters at Offutt AFB in Omaha, Neb. In 1980, he assumed command of the 325th Bombardment Squadron at Fairchild AFB, Wash., later becoming the assistant deputy commander for operations for the 92nd Bombardment Wing there.

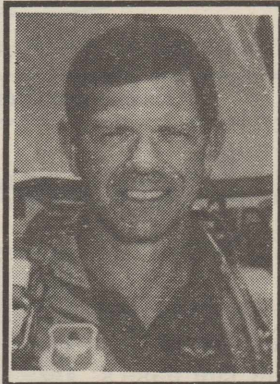

Following graduation from the National War College, he was (See General Habiger, page 4)

From my perspective

by Col. David Love
64th FTW commander

There's a communications experiment which you may have participated in at some time. It goes like this. One individual relates a story to another individual. That person, in turn, tells another, and so forth. When the last individual in the chain recounts the story as they heard it, it rarely resembles the original.

This experiment is not unlike a phenomenon which we routinely encounter in our society, the perpetuation of rumors. While it may be human nature to speculate on events in our lives, it is not productive to communicate your speculations as fact.

I'm not an alarmist by nature, and I know a certain amount of rumors are unavoidable, especially on a small base like Reese. But I feel there are a couple of rumors circulating that must be stopped dead in their tracks.

First, I'm sure you're aware of Lubbock's attempts to win site selection for a regional Department of Defense Accounting and Finance Center. The rumor mill is if Lubbock wins its bid for site selection, then an uncertain future lies ahead for Reese. Whoever started this rumor theorized that two job-creating facilities should not be located in one city; therefore, if one comes in, the other goes out.

The other rumor making the rounds is that some of base housing is not being opened to our people because, again, Reese's long-term future is uncertain at this time. The theory goes: why should the final phase of houses be upgraded if they won't be occupied?

Both of these rumors are just that: rumors, pure speculation that began with one or more people putting their ideas together about how the government functions. Most everyone has an opinion on almost any topic you can conceive and Reese members are no different. But let me assure you, no one on this base has an "inside track" when it comes to decision-making about base closure.

Rare is the moment when rumors serve a positive purpose. And in the examples I've cited, they've only served to perpetuate further wild speculations, which, in turn, lead to more rumors. The power of communication is incredible when you stop to think that because of a single person's need to publicly express his or her opinion as a basis in fact, widespread uncertainty can ensue.

I'm asking for your help in stopping these rumors. All you have to do is simply refuse to participate. Consciously take yourself out of the game by not spreading rumors about Reese's future when you hear them.

Again, we will never be able to eliminate rumors. However, we can control the spread of these rumors by applying the common sense test to them. Generally there is a logical explanation for events in our lives, which doesn't mean we have to agree with the outcome. Use common sense and recognize rumor and speculation for what it is.

Safety key to QAF program

by Col. Gary F. Burchell
ATC director of safety

RANDOLPH AFB, Texas — Since the birth of the Quality Air Force program — a system focusing on customers to improve products and services — safety has been fundamental in the program's growth.

Safety has been rooted in Quality Air Force objectives since its beginning. The focus hasn't changed, but the scope widens continuously. From supervisors to the lowest ranking person in the organization, continuous improvements can be made by everyone.

Accomplishing the mission safely is not only a commitment by all Air Force and associated civilian people — it's a right.

Safety people are continuously searching for better ways to protect people. Their duty is to preserve Air Force combat capability by helping commanders conserve resources throughout the execution of the mission.

Every safety staff is professionally qualified and highly trained to direct the commander's safety program, which is their primary job. You, the customer, expect a safe, mishap-free, working environment.

The process used to provide this service includes several tools, but the most important one is a system of reporting hazards and mishaps.

When a fellow worker is hurt, the first step should be to promptly notify the individual's immediate supervisor. If appropriate, they may take immediate action to correct any problem and prevent further incidents.

Next, notify the unit safety representative, who with the help of the wing or center safety office, completes the written report. The depth of the investigation and type of report is determined by the severity of the mishap.

The report is then sent to the safety office at headquarters where the information is entered into the mishap analysis computer program. This report would also go to other agencies for information and action if the problem is within their functional areas.

Analyzing mishap information is needed to improve the process because it identifies deficiencies and measures program effectiveness. Determining the cause allows the safety staff to plan and use methods of prevention.

A good example of how this was successfully used to correct a flight safety problem occurred a few years ago. An increased number of depressurizations in ATC's T-38s caused a rise in physiological incidents.

A close look at the mishap information revealed a large number of canopy seals were failing. After buying and installing new seals, both loss of cabin pressurization and physiological incidents were reduced.

The headquarters safety office maintains a large mishap data base used for trend analysis. The Air Force safety office tracks additional information which is provided upon request and in periodic publications.

A summary of mishaps and trends is provided by ATC to safety offices each month, with an in-depth analysis of all mishaps provided semiannually to field commanders.

This reporting system, along with training and education, mishap investigation and inspections, provides an opportunity for continuous improvement.

Finally, the cornerstone of the safety program in ATC is leadership. Leaders must be personally committed to safety.

The involvement of leadership is reflected in one of the ATC goals. It states, "Emphasize that the first echelon of leadership is the key to safe and disciplined operations."

The bottom line is a team of professionals working to build a safe, quality Air Force. Keep the communication flowing. Talk to your safety staff and let them know how they can help improve your Air Force. (ATC News Service)

Thanks

Editor's note: The following was submitted by one of the beneficiaries of the "Secret Santa" program, sponsored by the Reese Chapel. Chapel officials said that 13 families and 23 children benefitted from the program this year.

I would like to thank the Secret Santa program for the food and gifts that were provided to my family. Please allow me to explain just how timely your generosity was.

In December 1990, my wife and I were having some problems that made the holidays seem more like "hell days." In summer 1991, I went on a remote tour. The following holidays I spent alone and my family struggled through a season without daddy. Since returning to the states in summer 1992, my wife and I have been struggling to mend what could not be taken care of while I was away. We approached this holiday season with nervousness and fear. Through our struggles, I believe everyone in our family had lost some hope and trust in each other. Due to circumstances, my wife and I were at a point of believing that there were no such things as friends.

When your gifts arrived, I cannot explain how I felt or what it did for my family's holiday. A light seemed to shine in our home. This light grew as Christmas got near. Although we didn't discuss it I could tell that the faith in people we had begun to lose was revived. The simple act of giving has renewed our spirit of gratitude and joy. That's it, that's the word I was looking for — "JOY." After the last two Christmas holidays, which were filled with hurt, loneliness and headed toward despair, your gifts have brought joy and provided a spark to a loving yet struggling family. Thank you again . . . thank you very much.

How to select a Tool for Analyzing Problems

If you need to...

- See how the whole process works
- Identify critical stages of a process
- See how different stages are related
- Determine the causes of a particular effect

- Identify areas where you need more cause-and-effect information
- Get the emotion out of a cause-and-effect situation
- See relationships between factors that contribute to a problem
- See patterns in raw data from interviews and surveys

- Summarize raw data into useful categories
- Identify the major problems and separate them from the minor problems
- Prioritize problems

Cause and Effect Diagram

What it is:

Cause and Effect Diagrams help identify and organize the possible causes of problems, or factors needed to ensure success of some effort. The problem, situation or event is listed on the right. Branches off the central arrow indicate main categories of items. Using this format allows people to easily see the relationship between factors.

The Cause and Effect Diagram, also called a "fishbone diagram" because of its appearance, or the "Ishikawa diagram" named after its inventor, allows you to map out a list of factors thought to affect a problem or desired outcome. These factors lead to questions and discussions of how a process works. Therefore, Cause and Effect Diagrams are most effective after the process has been described (flowcharted) and the problem well-defined. By then, team members will have a good idea of which factors to include on the diagram. By the way, these factors are often derived through simple brainstorming.

Cause and Effect Diagram Example

The publication team for an engineering department wanted to improve the accuracy of their user documentation. As part of a first step, they created a cause and effect diagram to get a picture of what causes a document to be error-free. The diagram below illustrates what this particular team considered important at their first meeting.

Bad weather policy reiterated

Freezing precipitation and high winds can make traveling, even short distances, like to and from work, a hazard.

Therefore, the following Reese Inclement Weather Policy is now in effect for wing members:

□ During duty hours: When weather conditions worsen after the duty day has begun, senior wing officials will determine when only mission essential people need to remain. Units will then release all others without charging leave.

Unit commanders will determine which members need to report for swing and mid shifts.

□ After duty hours: If traveling has been determined unsafe, wing officials will advise the Reese Command Post to initiate a telephone recall no later than 5 a.m., which will advise members that only mission essential personnel are required. The Public Affairs Division will provide this information to radio stations KFYO-AM (790 KHz) and KZII (102.5 MHz). Other radio and television stations will be notified as time permits.

Once traveling conditions clear, a telephone recall will advise all other personnel when to report. Again, unit commanders should provide the guidelines for swing and mid shift workers.

Civilian employees who are released early or told not to report because of a wing decision that only mission essential personnel report, will not be charged with sick or annual leave. However, the hours must be documented on the civilian's time sheet as administrative leave.

In the event there is an unusual situation, such as Reese is clear but Levelland (Texas) is not, it will become the responsibility of the unit commanders and supervisors to develop a flexible work schedule to prevent the members who live in Levelland from excessive loss of leave.

The base will never close completely, according to wing officials. Essential services will be maintained at all times; therefore, mission essential units such as fire department and security police, should establish a list of personnel required to continue base operations during bad weather.

These members need to be briefed on their status, in addition to what actions need to be taken if they are unable to report.

Wing members need to bear in mind that safety is of paramount importance at all times and no one should take any unnecessary risks just to get to work. The wing needs all alive and well.

Monday morning's bad weather resulted in numerous accidents around Lubbock, including these two near 19th Street and War Highway. Drivers need to exercise extreme caution when weather conditions become icy.

General Habiger

(Continued from page 1) assigned to Headquarters, U.S. Air Force in the Pentagon in 1982, first as the chief of the Strategic Offensive Division, then deputy assistant director for Joint and National Security Matters in the Directorate of Plans. While in the Pentagon, General Habiger also served as the executive officer to the Air Force vice chief of staff.

He moved to Minot Air Force Base, N.D., in 1984 as vice commander of the 5th Bombardment Wing, and in 1985, became commander of the 379th Bombardment Wing at Wurtsmith AFB, Mich. In January 1986, General Habiger took command of the 2nd Bombardment Wing at Barksdale AFB, La., SAC's largest bomb wing.

He returned to SAC headquarters as Inspector General a year later, then went back to the Pentagon in 1988 where he was deputy director, then director of programs and evaluation in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff, Programs and Resources.

General Habiger is a command pilot with more than 5,000 flying hours and 150 combat missions. (ATC News Service)

New uniform a 'winning combination'

WASHINGTON — A new uncluttered, streamlined wool blend service dress uniform is the Air Force's choice for the future, the Air Force chief of staff said Jan. 12.

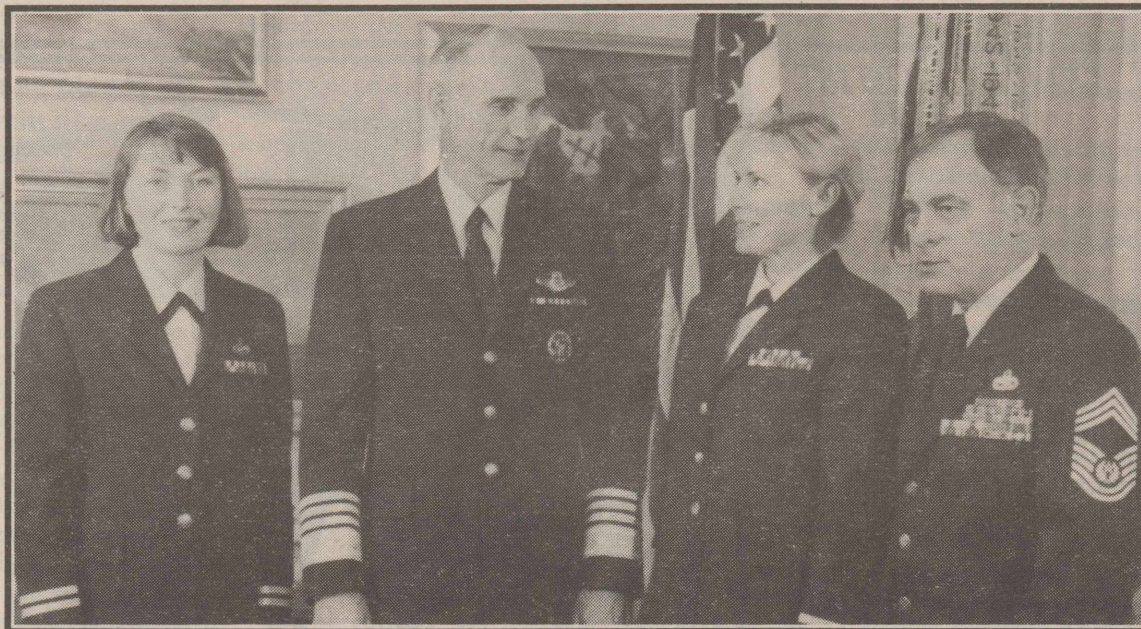

More than 700 people participated in a wear test of the prototype service dress uniform, including jacket, trousers and skirt, to see how servicemembers felt about the new design, three different fabrics, fit and comfort.

"The results are in and I think we have a winning combination," Gen. Merrill A. McPeak said. The Air Force has also opted for the braided sleeve-style rank insignia for officers.

"The officer sleeve braid links the Air Force with its rich heritage," General McPeak said. As plans developed to establish an independent Air Force following World War II, air power leaders advocated a distinctive uniform for airmen.

The braid is similar to that currently worn by allied air forces as well as other aviation professionals.

"Just as the Merchant Marines' uniform looks like the Navy in many respects, the Modeling the newly approved Air Force service dress coat featuring braided sleeve-style rank insignia for officers, and bigger, bolder chevrons for enlisted members are, left to right, Capt. Cathy McGinn, Air Force clothing board chief; Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Merrill A. McPeak; Maj. Martha Will of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service; and CMSAF Gary R. Pfingston.

new Air Force image will reflect our ties with the aerospace profession," General McPeak said.

Enlisted members' rank insignia will return to tradition with the addition of the star to all chevrons and everyone in the Air Force — officers and enlisted — will wear the same quality uniform.

Enlisted stripes will be larger and bolder on the new uniform. Standard four-inch chevrons will be worn on outer garments with three-and-a-half-inch chevrons on shirts. Women will be authorized to wear either four- or three-and-a-half-inch insignia on the service dress coat.

To provide greater recognition to the top three enlisted grades, a new design feature — one stripe taken off the bottom and put at the top, starting with master sergeant — will clearly designate all senior NCOs.

The wear test of two new women's skirts with functional pockets was also included in the service dress coat wear test. The style selected was the skirt with the zipper in the back, and featuring belt loops, pockets and a kick pleat.

Individuals will be able to purchase the coat, trousers and skirt as separate items rather than as a uniform set, making it easier to find the right size and avoid the cost of major alterations in many cases.

With elimination of name tags, epaulets, metal rank insignia and collar insignia, the new look for the Air Force is uncluttered, with high-quality design and materials, officials said.

The overall cost to buy and maintain uniforms will be less once the new uniform comes on line. With fewer accouterments and less duplication on the same items, Air Force people will save as much as $800 over a 20-year career, officials said. It will be offered initially by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service as an optional garment in 1994. Air Force issue uniforms will start arriving in late-1995 and the new mandatory wear date will be late-1999. (Air Force News Service)

Editor's note: To help clear up some of the confusion about how the base closure process works, the following information is provided by the public affairs directorate in the Office of the Secretary of the Air Force.

Key dates for 1993 base closure and realignment process

May 1992 — The Deputy Secretary of Defense issued the initial policy guidance for the 1993 closure cycle to the armed services and defense agencies. It recapped the provisions of Public Law 101-510, its timing, and the department's basic policies regarding the base closure process.

June-November 1992 — The armed services and defense agencies gathered data on their base structure and installations for use in the closure study process. They will determine the manpower needed and analytical procedures used to arrive at closure and realignment recommendations. The Department of Defense will consider all installations meeting the manpower thresholds equally, without regard to whether any installation was previously considered for closure or realignment.

December 1992 — The armed services and defense agencies begin their deliberation process.

Jan. 25, 1993 — Deadline by which the president must provide the Senate with nominees for the base closure commission.

Mid-February — Service and defense agency recommendations due to secretary of defense for final review.

March 15 — Legal deadline for secretary of Defense to submit his closure/realignment recommendations to the President, to the Base Closure Commission, and the Congress.

April-May — Expected time frame for base closure commission public hearings. The commission will schedule public hearings, both in Washington, D.C. and in the field, where community and congressional testimony regarding the department's closure recommendations will be accepted.

April 15 — Deadline for the General Accounting Office to submit its report to the commission and the Congress on the DOD analysis and selection process.

June 1 — Deadline for the commission to publish any proposed changes to defense secretary's recommendations that add to the list of closures of realignments or increase the extent of a realignment. (The commission must publish these changes in the Federal Register and will hold public hearings addressing such changes.)

July 1 — Deadline for the commission to transmit its report and recommended closure and realignment candidates to the president.

July 15 — Deadline for the president to approve or disapprove the commission's recommendations. If approved, the president sends the commission's report to the Congress.

Aug. 15 — Deadline for the commission to submit a new report to the president, if the original was disapproved.

Sept. 1 — Deadline for the president to approve the revised commission report. If the President disapproves the second report or fails to act on it, there will be no base closures approved this round.

Unless rejected by both houses of Congress, the provisions of the commission's report take on the force of law 45 days after the President forwards the report to the Congress. This 45-day period does not include days when the Congress is in recess for more than three days, but it does not last any later than the end of the first session of the 103rd Congress.

Selection criteria

Military Value

□ The current and future mission requirements and the impact on operational readiness of the DOD's total force.

the existing and potential receiving locations.

□ The cost and manpower implications.

Return On Investment

□ The extent and timing of potential costs and savings, including the number of years, beginning with the date of completion on the closure or realignment, for the savings to exceed the costs.

Impacts

□ The economic impact on communities.

□ The ability of both the existing and potential receiving communities' infrastructures to support forces, missions and personnel.

Questions and answers

□ How many Air Force bases will be closed in the next round of closures?

There is no target number or quota. The secretary of defense recommendation will be determined by the force structure needs and the closure criteria.

□ How will the current court cases challenging the base closure and realignment process affect the base closure commission?

We cannot speculate on cases until the judicial process, including any appeals, has been completed.

□ What kind of data is being collected during this early phase of the BRAC process?

All of the bases which meet the legal threshold for consideration have submitted replies to a standardized set of questions, the base questionnaire, which form the master data base. (This data has been certified as accurate by the installation and the major command to which the base belongs.) This data will be reviewed and measured by the application of the eight DOD criteria which are used in selecting bases for closure or realignment.

□ When will we know if a certain air force base will be closed?

The sequence of events details the major steps in the base closure process. The secretary of Defense's list of recommended bases will be released no later than March 15.

□ Will the commission consider the desires of the community in making their final recommendations?

The economic impact on the community is one of the criteria used to make closure decisions. However, all other criteria must also be considered. Interested citizens will have an opportunity to participate in the public comment and/or public hearing portions of the closure process. The law also requires that special emphasis and consideration be given to any request by a local government requesting closure or realignment of a nearby installation.

Sergeant Tucker

(Sgt. Greg Spraggins)

Quality performer

It's usually pretty hard not to notice someone who is "heavily armed," but for TSgt. Dale Tucker, it's an everyday occurrence.

As the senior munitions manager and inspector on Reese, Sergeant Tucker oversees a munitions account with about 100 line items and worth more than $750,000. He said that people are often surprised when they hear what he does.

"Because this is a training environment, people usually ask 'We have munitions here?'" the Texas native said. "Even though Reese is a training base, munitions are still a big part of the mission." He cited security police, aircraft ejection systems and mobility training as examples.

The sergeant has been at Reese more than two of his 16 years in the service. He and his wife, Karen, have three children — Amanda, 9; Joshua, 6; and Kalynn, 4.

Sergeant Tucker is involved with numerous volunteer causes, including several youth sports organizations.

He's also very interested in furthering his education, an area that he said Reese and Lubbock are ideal for.

"This is the best place I've ever seen for education," he said, praising Wayland Baptist University and South Plains College in particular. "If everyone in the service knew about this, there would be a lot more people looking to come here."

KING

Civil rights leader remembered

by Rudi Williams
American Forces Information Service

Since Martin Luther King Jr. Day was first observed on Jan. 20, 1986, it has evolved into an international observance of his birth in more than 140 foreign countries.

In November, Arizonans voted to make their state the 49th to join the holiday observance. Legislators in New Hampshire, the only holdout, created a civil rights day instead of a King holiday, said Alan Minton of the King Holiday Commission in Atlanta.

The third Monday in January is the federal holiday observing the slain civil rights leader's birth. Born on Jan. 15, 1929, King was assassinated at Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968.

"King Week '93" will run from Jan. 9 through Jan. 18 in Atlanta, King's birthplace. Minton said 1993 is also the 25th anniversary of the King center and King's Poor People's Campaign and the 30th anniversary of his Birmingham (Ala.) campaign against discrimination.

"Nov. 2, 1993, will be the 10th anniversary of the creation of the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday — that's the date the president signed the bill creating the holiday," Minton noted.

Events will commemorate the 30th anniversary of the March on Washington and King's "I Have a Dream" speech.

Each year, the King center and the commission have different holiday themes. This year, the commission's theme is: "Living the Dream, Let Freedom Ring: Building Bridges of Understanding."

The King center's theme is: "Where Do We Go From Here? Nonviolence: Learning It, Living It, Teaching It."

In explaining the difference, Minton said the commission's focus is completely different from the King center's. "The center is involved in nonviolent conflict resolution, whereas the commission is more about institutionalizing the King holiday," he said.

"It shouldn't be a day where everybody stays home from work and does nothing," Minton said. "We'd like for it to be a day where people get together with family, friends and acquaintances to do something to better their communities in honor of Dr. King."

Last year, only 17 percent of employers closed their doors and paid their employees for the King holiday, according to a Bureau of National Affairs survey. King Day, Veterans Day and Columbus Day are the holidays most ignored, the survey noted. The Fourth of July, Christmas and New Year's are the most celebrated holidays.

"Our mission is to educate and inspire people, especially young people, to embrace Dr. King's values of nonviolence so they will be empowered to struggle for economic security and peace with justice," she said.

Myriad conferences, seminars, forums and entertainment programs are held in Atlanta each year to promote better understanding and respect between groups forming America's melting pot of humanity.

For example, King Week '93 will feature a social responsibility seminar, American Indian forum, public interest hearings and various tributes and celebrations. Also scheduled are a presidential proclamation ceremony, state of Georgia tribute to King, a national parade, national march of celebration, a federal employee tribute in Washington, a State Department reception honoring King and other events. A symposium will bring together students, teachers, parents, law enforcement officials and community leaders to deal with problems of violence in the schools, neighborhoods, homes and community.

Luncheon, matinees planned

The annual Reese Martin Luther King Jr. memorial service/luncheon is set for today. The 11 a.m. chapel service will be followed by a noon luncheon in the Reese Enlisted Open Mess. Guest speakers will be retired CMSAF Thomas Barnes and SMSgt. Ron Ward from Washington D.C. For details, call Capt. Garland Bennett at 6684.

In addition, the Reese Black History Month Committee will sponsor several free Simler Theater matinees between now and the end of February, which will feature well-known African-American stars. "A Raisin in the Sun" will air at 2 p.m. Saturday.

World-class athletes participate in a three-day Selma, Ala., to Atlanta relay to dramatize the 1965 protest against voting discrimination.

Athletes travel the route protesters took from Selma to the Alabama state capital at Montgomery. From there, they trek to Birmingham and to King's birthplace in Atlanta, where he returned to the fight for civil rights for all people.

Cagers shooting for playoff berths

The past week saw intramural basketball action heating up as teams scramble to earn playoff berths.

In games played Jan. 7, the 35th Flying Training Squadron "C" team defeated the 64th Operations Support Squadron "A" team, 49-37; the 64th Logistics Squadron beat the 35th FTS "B" team, 70-25; and the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron "A" team defeated the 64th OSS "C" team 54-53.

In the Tuesday games, the 64th Communications Squadron beat the 64th CES "A" team 40-30; the 35th FTS "A" team defeated the Ladies, 59-41; the 35th FTS "C" team defeated the 54th FTS "B" team, 57-40; the 64th Mission Support Squadron defeated the 35th FTS "B" team 55-33; and the 64th Medical Squadron defeated the 64th OSS "A" team, 56-50.

In Wednesday night's action, the 64th MSSQ stomped the 64th OSS "C" team, 70-32; 64th CES "A" beat the 35th FTS "B" team, 48-21; the 54th FTS "B" team beat the 54th FTS "A" team, 63-57; the 35th FTS "C" team defeated the 52nd FTS, 35-29; and the 64th LS defeated 64th CS, 65-43.

The 35th FTS "C" team appears to have the National League under control, as they ended this week as the only undefeated team in the league.

The 64th CES "A" team, only one game behind the 35th FTS "A" team, was handed their first loss this week by the 64th CS. The 64th MEDSQ seems to have the final National League playoff berth wrapped up at 8-3.

In the American League, the 64th LS holds the lead at 12-1, with the 64th CS close behind at 9-2.

Third place in the American League is still close, but is currently held by the 52nd FTS at 6-4.

Only two other teams will make the playoffs this year. They will be the two teams with the next best records, regardless of squadron.

The playoffs are set for early February, and there are still games to be played, many that will decide who's in, and who's out.

Games are played Tuesday through

Thursday, beginning at 5 p.m. at the physical fitness center.

For more information, call the gym at 3783.
