School Boards Issue Joint Statement

The Rotan and Roby Boards of Education met in a joint meeting Monday night in Rotan. Each Board entered into an agreement with the architectural firm of Brashear, Spencer and Goyette to conduct a survey of each school district. This survey is in the form of a study of the physical plant, curriculum, scholastics, economy and tax structure of each district. These findings are to be studied by each community and by both communities together to determine the feasibility of a possible consolidation between the two school districts. This study is to be made with the help of the citizens of each community and the assembled information be made public so that every person of each school district will better know the structure of his own school district and the advantages and disadvantages of a consolidated school district.

Another meeting is to be held in the near future to organize the study with the help of information being compiled by Dr. M. S. Wallace and Dr. B. J. Fallon at the present time.

Barry Allen, President of the Rotan Board of Education.

Sales Price Set For Cotton By Corporation

Minimum sales prices for Commodity Credit Corporation stocks of upland cotton have been determined for the 1960-61 marketing year, according to Floyd Smith, chairman, Fisher County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

The new sales prices are intended to emphasize farmers' marketings. The announcement at this time will provide farm operators with information on CCC's sales prices before the March 16 deadline for electing Choice (B) allotments and price support for the 1960 crop.

For 1959 and prior crops of upland cotton in CCC inventory, the new minimum sales price will be higher of (1) the market price as determined by CCC, or (2) 115% of the 1960 Choice (B) loan rate. (This compares with the current 110% of the loan rate.)

For 1960-crop cotton, the minimum sales price is as follows: When the cotton is sold by local sales agencies, the minimum sales price will be 110% of the Choice (B) loan rate; when the cotton is sold by the New Orleans CSS Commodity office, the minimum sales price will be the higher of (1) the market price as determined by CCC or (2) 110% of the Choice (B) loan rate.

Mr. Smith pointed out that carrying charges will be added to the sales price, beginning with 10 points in October 1960, and increasing 20 points per month for each month thereafter to a maximum of 190 points in July 1961. The current monthly increase for carrying charges is 15 points per month for each month after October 1959.

GUIDED MISSILE VII FARMERS UNION BELIEVES

That the present farm program proposals of the administration would be disastrous to farmers. In February the Department of Agriculture gave these estimates of their farm program based on 90% of a 3 year average. By 1963, cash farm receipts will drop 10% there will be an increase of about 6% in farm production and a drop of 10 to 12% in farm prices. Secretary of Agriculture, Benson has asked Congress for a support price of 75% for a 3 year average. By his figures, if a farmer received an average of 33c a pound for cotton in 1953, 31c in 1959, and 30c in 1960, his 75% average for 1961 will be 23.5c. In 1962, he will receive 21c and in 1963, his cotton will bring 18c.

Bad Weather Breaks Tuesday Afternoon

Local citizens were happy to see the sun Wednesday after several weeks cold, damp and foggy weather. The sun broke through clouds about noon and a beautiful spring-like afternoon was enjoyed by everyone. A light norther blew in Tuesday night and temperature dropped to near freezing again Wednesday morning, but a nice day followed.

Farmers, delayed in field work since Christmas, were busy in their fields Wednesday and hope for fair weather until they get land 'put-up'.

Little moisture was received from the siege of bad weather and many stockmen are getting low in tank water, although the soil has a good season.

Farmers Union Passes Membership Quota-306

Foy Mitchell, president, reports Fisher County Farmers Union completed the 1960 membership drive on March 1 with 306 members in Fisher County, meeting the goal of 300 set up for the County.

Several couples from Fisher County are planning to attend the National Farmers Union Convention in Denver on March 13-17.

Any Farmers Union member who would like to attend is urged to contact Mitchell so that arrangements can be made. Mitchell reports that arrangements have been made to handle the largest turnout of delegates and visitors with this year's program including world famous and nationally famous speakers. A special feature of the program will be an address by Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York City. Wagner's appearance is extremely significant in view of the criticism of farm programs among city consumers, inspired in recent years by the Secretary of Agriculture. Mayor Wagner heads a city of nearly 8 million consumers, but he is making the 4,000 mile trip to Denver and back in order to greet family farmers, express sympathy for their problems and explain some of the problems of running the nation's largest city.

Texas Farmers Union elects two delegates and two alternates to the National Convention by popular ballot at its annual convention. Mitchell was elected delegate last year, and is an alternate delegate this year.

Soil Conservation Proving Worth

The basic principle of soil conservation in the Upper Clear Fork Soil Conservation District is the use of each acre of agricultural land within its capabilities and treated according to its needs for protection and improvement.

The capability or potential of the land is determined by many factors which include depth of topsoil, texture, permeability rate, degree of erosion, use of the land and other physical characteristics. These factors which determine the capability class of the land are not ordinarily changed so the potential for sustained production would seem to remain the same. This is not true, for without proper management aimed at treating the land according to its needs, we have seen the damaging effects of wind and water erosion, as well as decreased productivity of our land.

The conservation needs of our land are varied and include so called mechanical treatment such as terraces for cropland, or brush control practices for rangeland. These needs are easily determined and the results are readily seen by most people after they are carried out.

Management needs are not so easily seen, or understood by some people. These management practices are actually the most needed, are easier to apply, and produce more beneficial results if properly carried out than the mechanical practices.

No conservation practice is complete within itself without proper maintenance treatment or follow up. A definite frequency, or sequence of treatment is needed to fulfill the basic conservation needs of the land. Cover on the land is the greatest need in the Upper Clear Fork Soil Conservation District. This needed cover could be obtained by growing high residue producing crops, and leaving the residue on the surface of the soil during the critical wind erosion period, or by growing winter cover crops, which would protect the cropland from wind erosion. These are but two of the management practices which are needed on cropland.

The conservation needs of rangeland are varied, but the same principal holds true have also that of cover. The ways in which cover may be obtained on rangeland are by reseeding, deferred grazing, and proper use. These are but tools an operator might use in the needed conservation management of an operating unit.

Savings Bond Sales Good In January

"Savings Bond sales for January 1960 totaled $10,921", Lance Davis, chairman of Fisher County Savings Bonds Committee reported this week. "Our county has reached 13.6% of its 1960 goal of $80,000."

Sales in Texas for January were $16,537,766 which is 10% of the state goal.

"When we buy our Country's Savings Bonds we are helping to save things that money cannot buy" concluded Mr. Davis.

Mrs. B. H. Doty left Tuesday for her home in San Francisco, Calif., after spending several weeks in Texas visiting relatives. She also spent five weeks at Christoval for treatment.

Rural Electric Celebrate First 25 Years

16,000,000 Rural Americans Now Served With Low-Cost Dependable Electric Power

This year, rural people everywhere are celebrating the 25th Anniversary of the rural electrification program, a social and economic "miracle" that has brought electric light and power to more than 16,000,000 Americans who were, almost literally, living in the dark, only a quarter century ago.

On May 11, 1935, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the Executive Order that created the Rural Electrification Administration. It seems laughable now, with $3 1-2 billion having been invested to bring electricity to rural people, that Roosevelt's original appropriation was for only $75,000.

But, the nation's farms needed power, and the nation's workers desperately needed work. So rural electrification began as an arm of the Works Progress Administration in that depression year.

In 1936, Congress passed the Rural Electrification Act, setting up a long-term program, now known as REA, which made it possible for groups of rural people to work together to serve themselves with electricity.

Almost from the beginning, use of electricity had been confined to town and city areas because the experts thought it would cost far too much to bring it to the country.

Power companies said it was impractical, if not unprofitable to extend electric lines to most people living outside of the city limits. They thought rural folks couldn't, or wouldn't pay the cost involved in getting electricity to them.

So, only 3% of American farms were electrified by 1925. 10% by 1931, and barely 11% had central station electricity when REA came to life in 1935.

The picture has changed rapidly since the first REA loan was approved in July 1935. Gone are the days of drab drudgery and back-breaking toil of pitching hay with a fork, carrying water by the pail, and firewood by the armful. Kerosene lamps, lanterns, pump handles, and sadirons have lost their meaning to youngsters still in high school. The day is long gone when farm folks seemed to age overnight, and young people were forced to leave for the city's bright lights, better jobs and easier living.

The Rural Electrification Act of 1935 authorized REA to lend funds to "persons, corporations, cities, districts, states, and cooperatives" for the construction of rural electrical systems. The Act specifically prohibits making a loan to extend electrical service into the more profitable areas of towns and villages of over 1500 population, or to anyone already being served.

At the same time, rural electric borrowers agree to serve all who are without electrically in their area, regardless of whether the service is profitable or not. These restrictive handicaps leave America's rural electric systems operating in many marginal and uneconomical areas.

Although from the start opportunity for REA loans have been available to all, it was the rural people themselves who took the ball and ran with it to build the lines. Today, mainly as the result of this consumer cooperation, this "do-it-yourself" approach, more than 96% of the farms, homes, rural churches and businesses have low-cost electric power.

Rural people knew of the comforts and uses of electricity. Farmers, especially, were determined to have electrical service in their homes or on their farms. By the tens and hundreds, these people organized into cooperatives under the laws of their state and applied to the Federal Government for a Rural Electrification loan.

By working together, and with REA loans to finance construction, farmers and people in small towns soon were supplying themselves with dependable and economical electric power, a service they could get in no other way.

Cooperative leadership is shown by the fact that of the 1084 electric systems who have borrowed Federal funds through REA, 983 have been cooperatives, 49 public power districts, 27 other public bodies. Only 24 were private power companies.

In the short span of 25 years, the locally-owned and managed rural electrics have built about 1.4 million miles of electric distribution lines in rural America serving more than 16 million people.

They furnish electricity to nearly 5 million meters.

That rural electrification is one of the best investments the Nation has ever made is shown by the loan repayment record of borrowers. From the start of REA in 1935, until July 1, 1959, loans totaling almost 3 1-2 billion had been made for generation, transmission, distribution and consumer facilities.

During the same period, borrowers had made payments to the Federal government of over a billion dollars, in principal and interest—a credit record envied by bankers everywhere.

Record of achievement in miles of line constructed and number of people served, as well as loan repayment record, attests to the success of this important and peaceful revolution through the electrification of rural America. Although 96% of rural America is now enjoying the benefits of electricity, scattered across the nation are an estimated 1 1-2 million people who still do not have central station electricity.

Providing electricity to those still without it, lowering the cost, improving the service, and heaving up electrical service to supply demand that is doubling every seven years, almost twice as fast as the national average, ranks high on the agenda of America's rural electric systems.

S-Sgt. Charles Gabel, Mrs. Gabel and their two children visited several days last week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gabel. Sgt. Gabel is stationed at Enid, Okla., and his wife and children are staying with her parents in Arkansas while he is there. They left Monday morning. Also visiting Mr. and Mrs. Gabel Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Allie Deel, of Hamlin, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Tankersley and three children of Sweetwater. Mrs. Gabel is still confined to her bed since having surgery several weeks ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard McCombs, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Goodrum, Mr. and Mrs. Devon McCombs and Dale attended a family gathering in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tracy King near Roby, Sunday night.

Rural Electrification...good for All Americans!

Business is better today—paychecks fatter, jobs more secure in every American city and town. And—there's a good reason why.

This year 16 million Americans, now served by non-profit rural electric systems, will buy over a billion dollars worth of electric appliances—made, sold and serviced in these cities and towns.

That was impossible 25 years ago. Then only one of ten American families, outside the city limits, had or could get electric power. That's when rural Americans, by working together, began to serve themselves with this necessity of modern living.

So—we cordially invite all Americans to share our joy as we celebrate the 25th Birthday of rural electrification. We are proud to have played a small but important part in bringing this "miracle" about. We are happy that rural electrification has proved to be "good for ALL Americans."

County Agricultural Agent Texas A. & M. College Extension Service

One way to safeguard against excessive insecticide residues on harvested crops and protect those who handle the materials is to follow the recommendations of the manufacturer.

C. F. Garner, associate extension entomologist, says the labeling of all insecticides shipped intrastate must be registered with the U. S. Department of Agriculture. All applications for registration or labeling are thoroughly examined to remove or modify any directions for use on particular crops which do not seem to meet the requirements of the law. Among other things, the USDA determines whether any treatment is likely to leave excessive chemical residues on the harvested raw agricultural commodities.

Garner suggests that the following rules be closely followed. Use an insecticide only on the crops for which it is recommended and in the amounts specified on the label. Applications of the insecticide should also be made in accordance with the label directions.

If a crop is not named on the label of a particular insecticide, it may mean that no residue of that pesticide is permitted on that crop; and hence the treated crop could not be shipped if it contains a residue of that chemical.

Growers who follow the recommended time and rate of application can be assured the insecticide will not contaminate the edible part of fruit or vegetable, or will have been removed or decreased enough by weather, decomposition, or other process so that the residue will not be excessive at harvesttime.

If custom applicators, including those using airplanes, are employed, be sure they too follow the rules or directions listed by the manufacturer of the insecticide used, emphasizes Garner.

The fastest and best method for growing large fish in the farm pond is to stock the pond with the proper kinds of fish and at the right rates and fertilize. According to Ed Cooper, extension wildlife specialist, farm ponds in the Rio Grande Valley can be fertilized from January and other sections of the state from March until June. Proper fertilization, small amounts at intervals during late winter and spring, will usually shade-out troublesome underwater plant growth.

Cotton is the most valuable cash crop in Texas, although it now ranks second in acreage to sorghum for grain. For the five years, 1952-56, the Texas cotton crop, including lint and seed, had an average yearly value of more than $720,000,000. This was more than three times the combine value of wheat, sorghum grain and rice during the same period.

new bulletin released jointly by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and Texas Agricultural Extension Service, discusses in detail virtually everything cotton producers should know about this important crop. Production practices, varieties, soil and climatic adaptation, preparation of land and seedbed, planting, cultivation, weed and insect control and irrigation are a few of the many topics covered.

Trends in cotton production in the State is one of the most interesting features. The bulletin points out that since 1933 cotton production in Texas has been shifting from certain areas to others. A remarkable shift has been made to the extreme westerns, northwestern and southern portion, or to the Trans-Pecos, High Plains and Rio Grande Plain of Texas. These areas accounted for about 12% of the acreage at the start of governmental control programs in 1933, but now have more than one-third of the acreage and more than half the total production. During the same period, the Blackland, Grand and Coast Prairies, and the East Texas

"Who owns the electric company?"

"Here's who--"

The answer is that thousands of people own it. People like you, people who invest money in the electric company and help it grow. They become an investor... this is the reason we are known as an investor-owned company.

This electric company is not owned by the city. It is not owned by the state. It is not owned by any kind of government agency or co-op. It is owned by investors.

It is a good question — especially since surveys show a lot of our own customers don't know the answer.

This is one of the reasons why we can give you the best possible service and just about the best bargain you can buy.
