Veterans Day Program To Be Held November 11, 2005

Knox County Veterans Memorial located on the corners of Hwy 82 and Hwy 6 in Benjamin, Texas.

The 2005 Knox County Veterans Day program will be held Friday, November 11, at the Veterans Memorial in Benjamin, at 11 a.m.

The family of Arthur Thomas Cooke the Gold Star Family, will be recognized and place a memorial wreath at the arch, which is engraved with the names of Knox County veterans killed in war. His parents were Wiley Thomas and Ottis Tomison Cook of Gilliland.

He graduated from Gilliland School in 1942 and was drafted into the Army in 1943. He was in the 27th Infantry of the 25th Division and killed the 31st day of January 1945, in the battle at Luzon. He is buried in the Manila American Cemetery and Memorial at Manila, Philippine Islands. From 9:30 a.m. until 2:00 p.m. a historical exhibit related to veterans and American wars will be opened to the public in the Assembly Room on the first floor of the Knox County courthouse. A hamburger meal with beans and homemade cobblers will be served at noon at the Benjamin Ex-Students Memorial Center.

The Veterans Books with information of veterans engraved on the memorial will be on display. We welcome any additional information from veterans families.

Knox County Hospital District Bids Farewell To Mark Bingham

The personality of the Munday Clinic, owned and operated by the Knox County Hospital District, will be drastically changed on November 18, 2005. Physician Assistant, Mark Bingham, will bid farewell to Knox County and to the patients he has cared for since 1996.

Mark will be joining his wife Heather in Rochester Minnesota where she has begun her Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation Residency Program at the Mayo Clinic.

Mark has remained in Knox City for the last five years while Heather completed her studies in Dallas, but feels the 1,000 mile gap is a little too much distance. After arriving in Minnesota, he will take a two month sabbatical while he learns to cook. Mark will then begin his new duties at the Mayo Clinic.

Mark has been an integral part of Knox County Hospital District for the last 9 years and will be missed by the patients he has served and by the District. Mark will see patients until November 18th until 12:00 noon.

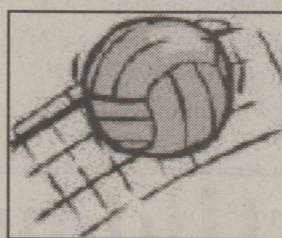

A reception will follow at the Munday Clinic from 1:00 p.m. until 5:00 p.m.. The public is encouraged to attend.

Parties finally agree on judge in DeLay trial

By Ed Sterling

AUSTIN - Merry-go-round, carousel, roulette: newspapers recently used those words to describe the process of finding a judge who would satisfy the disparate comfort standards of indicted U.S. Rep. Tom DeLay and the state of Texas's ethics prosecutor, Ronnie Earle.

State Supreme Court Chief Justice Wallace Jefferson's naming of semi-retired Judge Pat Priest of San Antonio to preside over the Sugar Land Republican's eventual trial seemed acceptable to concerned parties, but only after DeLay's attorneys and Travis County District Attorney Earle filed a dizzying series of trial-related motions and counter-motions.

Before Priest - who happens to be a Democrat - was named, other capable judges were bounced because of their political party affiliations and partisan campaign contributions. It's hard to find a non-partisan judge in Texas, but Priest's record of fairness earned him the nod.

When a trial date is set, DeLay will face a felony charge of money-laundering and a felony charge of conspiracy to circumvent state election laws in the 2002 election. Normally, it would take half a year or more for such a case to go to trial, but DeLay's attorneys have said they want to speed up the process.

Also indicted by Travis County grand juries and facing the same charges as DeLay are Jim Ellis, executive director of DeLay's Washington, D.C.-based Americans for a Republican Majority political action committee, and John Colyandro, former executive director of DeLay's Austin-based Texans for a Republican Majority political action committee. DeLay, Ellis and Colyandro have denied all charges against them.

When DeLay was indicted in September, he stepped down from his powerful post as U.S. House Majority Leader, in accordance with House rules prohibiting indicted members from serving in leadership positions. Governor calls for undelivered aid Gov. Rick Perry wrote a letter to Homeland Security Secretary Michael Chertoff seeking promised but undelivered assistance in the wake of hurricanes Katrina and Rita.

Perry told Chertoff, "(that) tens of thousands of Katrina evacuees will soon be evicted with no place to go, because of poor planning for long-term housing, that we have yet to receive information from [the Federal Emergency Management Agency] identifying sex offenders and violent criminals among the Katrina evacuees, and that our victims of Rita are being treated differently from the Louisiana victims of Rita." Perry's letter also notified Chertoff about the Texas Apartment

Association's announcement that "the eviction of 15,000 people displaced by Hurricanes Katrina and Rita is imminent, because no rent has been paid for three months or serious lease violations have occurred." And, Perry wrote, "An additional 50,000 evacuees could face eviction next month - and these figures only represent the segment of evacuees who chose apartments as their temporary home." Teacher pay incentives ordered Gov. Perry issued an executive order directing state Education

Commissioner Shirley Neeley to establish a new incentive-based pay system for Texas teachers who succeed in economically disadvantaged schools.

Under the directive, schools that show enough improvement in student performance will be eligible for a grant of at least $100,000.

Local school officials will have discretion to distribute the grant to the teachers they determine are having the greatest impact.

However, teacher groups said Perry instead should have worked with the Legislature over the last regular and special sessions to deliver an across-the-board pay increase for teachers that would have moved Texas up to the national average.

Perry's directive was made possible by a $10 million federal grant. Lady who kept her seat laid to rest Gov. Perry ordered flags on state property flown at half-staff on Nov. 2 in memory of civil rights pioneer Rosa Parks. Parks died Oct. 24 at Her refusal to give up her seat to a white man on a Montgomery, Ala. city bus in 1955 resulted in a groundswell of support that grew into the modern civil rights movement in America.

She was the first woman ever to lay in state in the U.S. Capitol rotunda.

Health Fair Held At Knox City Hospital

Jo Brown holds the hand of her daughter Toni, while she gets her flu shot administered by Kathy Dickerson of Texas Department of Health Services.

Knox City Hospital hosted their annual health fair Saturday. They had 28 vendors set up outside the hospital, with 8 on the inside.

They gave everyone the once over with glucose and cholesterol checks, body fat analysis, pulse oximitor testing, and blood pressure checks. They also distributed flu shots. Lissa Myers, an administrative assistant at the hospital, said that there was a good public turnout. The theme this year was Health, Wellness & Safety. They would also like to note that the flu vaccines they ordered should arrive shortly for those that weren't able to make it to the health fair.

Recycling Christmas

I've always had "mis-givings" about the practice of buying expensive Christmas gifts for people thinking they'd return the generosity. So one Christmas I developed a system for Christmas shopping whereby I give gifts to people that were given to me in previous years. I got the idea when my wife's family decided to draw names out of a hat to determine the beneficiary of my extravagance. I was disappointed that year because the cheap family member who drew my name spent even less on me than I did on him. So I stored the shoddy object d'art and gave it right back to him a few years later, thus giving real meaning to the term "exchanging gifts". Now instead of rushing to the mall to do last minute Christmas shopping I merely go to a closet stuffed full of old Christmas gifts I intend to recycle. I have some gifts that have been sent back and forth so many times they have more frequent flier miles than I do.

I thought I was the only person who did this until I read an article indicating that millions of people engage in "regifting." Because I invented the practice, and have more experience at it than anyone, I thought I'd pass along some trinkets of advice to anyone who might want to pursue such a philanthropic philosophy in the future.

First of all, it is very important to keep good records. I put notes on all presents to indicate who gave them to me so that I don't give the same present back to the same person the following year. Now, I'm not suggesting that a gift can't be given back to the gift giver... just not the following year. I always allow a three year waiting period before I give the gift back to the person who originally gave it to me. This works fine except in the case of consumables. Whereas a cheap bottle of wine might actually improve over time, the chocolates in a box of See's Candy tend to petrify after a couple years. The exception to this rule are gingerbread houses which hold up in the mail after several regiftings because the gingerbread turns into a stone-like substance. This is okay because, as we all know, no one actually eats gingerbread.

I've always been embarrassed by my cheap relatives who save crumpled wrapping paper and bows from Christmas gifts. This is totally un-called for as I've found it's not necessary to actually remove the wrapping paper in the first place. Remember as a kid when you'd size-up, shake and peer under the paper to determine what a present was? Just use the same process to determine what gift has been given to you and then leave it wrapped so you don't have to waste money on wrapping paper when you regift it. A word of warning: make sure and remove the gift card or rewrite the names to avoid being talked about in a negative way at future family gatherings.

If, like me, you are an environmentalist and want to recycle the gift and wrapping paper just make darn sure you are right about what's in the box. One year I carelessly gave an aunt a cordless razor. Not that she didn't need to shave, mind you, but for some reason the gift offended her. I also gave a hair brush to an uncle who was bald as a cue ball. If you can't tell what's inside a gift just take it through security screening at any airport. The security people are usually more than willing to help you identify the object unless, of course, it's a firearm. In which case you could end up in prison for your generosity!

When it comes to holiday gift giving my motto is "get before you give." The biggest concern of regifters like me are people who send presents so late that they cannot be regifted during the same holiday season. Also, it seems people are getting cheaper in their giving. For example, last year I received a giveaway hardware store calendar as a Christmas gift! Do you have any idea how embarrassed I'm going to be when someone opens their gift from me only to find a hardware store calendar?

I don't want to seem ungrateful but please, if you are going to send me a present this Christmas buy a nice one, write the gift card in pencil and send it early

BAXTER BLACK

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

ELK SCENT

Brent epitomizes the typical Montana outdoorsman - a hunter, a cowboy, a conservationist and an independent critter. Hunting season, he and his equally capable wife Kathy had hauled their horses to a camp at the end of the road and prepared to begin the morning bow hunt. Brett had prepared thoroughly, including putting a dollop of concentrated elk urine (aka scent) into a plastic bag along with his cammo hunting clothes to steep overnight.

He placed his new $350 compound bow on the hood of the pickup. Several 30" 4-blade razor point arrows were attached to the bow. Ben Gay, his good 12-year grulla gelding was saddled in anticipation. Brent applied the frightening black Rambo face paint, then changed into his cammo gear doused in elk urine. Its pungency stung the eyes of small mammals and made knot-holes water.

Kathy stayed upwind a horseback Brent swung aboard Ben, squiggled his slick-seated polyester cammo pants in the saddle, picked up his bow and swung his horse downwind. The full force of the elk urine bouquet enveloped Ben Gay's head. He reacted as if a real bull elk had just walked up behind him and blew into his ear. He started bucking! (Kathy said crow hopping.) Brent was holding his bow out at arms length as he slid around on the seat like a Frisbee in a frying pan!

They were bucking down a grade, which meant every time Brent pitched forward over the saddle Ben bucked under him and caught him! The bow and arrow flapped like a broken wing.

At the bottom of the hill Ben mistook a small sapling for a giant log and cleared it by four feet! On impact Brent cartwheeled over the front, breaking bones! Brent was down. Kathy called Duane, the local veterinarian who was the only one who could find the remote location of their camp. Brent said between clenched teeth to bring a stretcher.

It took Doc an excruciating hour to reach them in his Explorer. He had no stretcher but had brought a 5-foot steel small animal exam table. The fifteen miles of Forest Service road were particularly uncomfortable for a 6'7" man on a 5' stretcher wedged in the Explorer. Once on the blacktop Dr. Duane kicked his rig up to 95 mph with the windows down and a scarf over his face. The gale force winds helped alleviate the poisonous effect of elk urine that now permeated the cockpit.

Of course, they were stopped by the Montana Highway Patrol. As soon as the officer leaned up to the driver's side window, he was hit by the rolling waves of odor that melted the brim of his hat, pitted his sunglasses and turned his brass cartridges green. He staggered away. Duane left.

The emergency room doctor was a pediatrician and was only able to give Brent a children's dose of Morphine. But our hero survived. It turned out that Brent had broken his hip. The patrolman was treated for facial paralysis, Duane had to burn his Explorer, they reported the pediatrician to the ASPCA, Kathy still says crow hopping, and Ben Gay carries several small scars on his rump and right flank in the shape of an X.

Benjamin didn't lose from a lack of trying, they fought to the bitter end. They never gave up and just weren't able to pull it out. They go home beaten but definitely not broken.

O'Brien Bulldogs Finish Season Undefeated

The O'Brien Bulldogs have completed the season not only victorious but undefeated. They crushed the Haskell with a score of 26-6. Congratulations to the many players that pushed themselves with the determination, heart, and Bulldog pride that was needed in order to come out on top. "These are a bunch of little guys with big hearts that played up against bigger teams.

Going 8-0 their last year of 11-man is great" says Joy Butler parent of two Bulldogs. O'Brien was a sleeper team this year that slowly came up and bit every opponent they faced. "I am very proud of this group of kids, they played their hearts out and worked very hard this year, and it payed off for them," says head coach Colin Howeth.

The mighty Bulldogs have bought themselves some bragging rights being the last undefeated 11-man team to come out of O'Brien. Next year's change to 6-man should be no problem for the Bulldogs as they have already conquered the 11-man world.

Hounds Lose To Indians 34-14

The Knox City Greyhounds battled the Haskell Indians last Friday, and fell victim with a final score of 34-14. It was the Hounds last game of the season, and last 11-man team forever. With some impressive runs and amazing high flying catches, it seemed that there was no stopping this hard hitting team.

The defense stuck with the tough offense of Haskell and made them earn every point they received. The Hounds never gave up and went into the half ahead of the Indians 14-13. With the stadium jam packed, there was no lack in spirit, and the fans couldn't be prouder of the team they know and love.

There are nine seniors leaving the mighty Greyhound team, and they played with more determination and heart than any other team in the district. It is truly the end of an era with the change to 6-man coming soon, but the many great teams from years past can hold their heads high.

They may not be advancing to the playoffs, but they will always be number one in the hearts of Knox City fans everywhere.

Lady Houndettes Fall to Miles Bulldogs

Indira Monge returns serve in Thursday night game

The Lady Houndettes traveled to Sweetwater last Thursday and went up against the Miles Bulldogs.

They were defeated in three games with a score of 17-25

Tiffany Wilde sets ball to Sarah Burt

but were overpowered by the Bulldogs and just couldn't get back into the groove.

It seemed that the Houndettes just couldn't find their nitch as the score was back and forth in the third and final game. They came home defeated in the first round of the playoffs, but they can always look at their first place trophy from their victories in district.
