War Shipping Problem

Figures just published by the War Department give added reason to question whether it is desirable to put 8,200,000 men into uniform by the end of this year.

Even with these figures it is not possible to build up, for public information, a mathematical proof that would be holeproof. Part of the necessary material is known only to a few very highly placed officials, and other can not be printed without giving aid to the enemy. However, from usable, generally known facts, the nature of the argument can be indicated clearly. Every soldier serving overseas, the Army reports, requires 82 pounds of cargo a day. This multiplies to 15 tons a year. Each Liberty ship, making an average of three round trips a year, can transport 15,000 tons a year. That is, one Liberty ship must be kept shuttling back and forth across the oceans for every 1000 men we maintain

To supply 2,500,000 expeditionaires would call for 2500 vessels of 10,000-ton nominal capacity or 25,000,- 000 tons of shipping. There are few who know exactly how much shipping the United Nations now command. We are not of Several transfers and arrivals of that select company. If we were, we should not feel priveleged to mention the figure. But servicing our overseas army is not the only function of our cargo fleet. There is the actual transport of men abroad. There is the lease-lend equipment and material to be taken to Britain, Russia, China, and elsewhere in lesser quantities. Fair and adequate distribution can be accomplished. The record of retail merchants gives strong reassurance of that. 24 HOUR SERVICE—611 WEST WALL

ANNUAL REPORT TO TELEPHONE USERS

A Summary of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's 1942 Annual Report, Recently Issued

"PEARL HARBOR" was only three weeks old as 1942 started, but already the telephone system had felt the first of war's pressing demands.

Most metals vital to war are also vital to telephone service. During the year we were able to get, for example, only a tenth of the copper normally needed.

Telephone people somehow had to make this bare trickle of materials meet demands for entire telephone systems at Army camps and Navy bases, for service to new war industries, for new telephones in thousands upon thousands of homes.

Service held up rather well

The skill and "know how" of these people were in most cases equal to the job. During the year the company gained 123,689 telephones. It ended the year with 1,867,751 telephones in service. But in many cities, lines and equipment simply could not serve all who wanted telephones.

The quality and speed of telephone service held up rather well during the year. There were exceptions, of course. On many crowded long distance lines delays were unavoid-

It was mevitable, in such a year, that some new high marks as well as some low marks should be set.

For example, the money taken in by the company for its services was 120 million dollars-11 per cent above 1941. That seems a

Expenses mount faster than revenue But expenses climbed even faster. They jumped from a little over 88 million dollars in 1941 to more than 101 million dollarsan increase of 15 per cent. Most of this increase was a result of sharply higher payrolls and taxes. Taxes grew from slightly less than 20 million dollars in 1941 to more than 24 million dollars. The result was that the company matched its high record with a low.

Earning rate lower than in depression

The company's earnings for the year were at the rate of 4.4 per cent on the money it has put into the buildings, wires, and equipment needed to furnish telephone service—a lower rate of return than was earned at the lowest point of the depression.

On the whole, telephone service was better in 1942 than telephone people had dared hope it would be. This was due in large part to the competence and fine spirit of service of the telephone men and women in the Southwest. It was due also to the understanding and sympathetic co-operation of the people who use the service.

DARK JUNGLES

BY JOHN C. FLEMING & LOIS EBY

COPYRIGHT, 1948, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CHAPTER I

"TIGHT sailing," murmured Lila. The tall, dark girl in the fur coat dug her gloved hand deeper through the curve of her fiance's arm and strained her eyes toward the blurry outlines of the freighter at the dock. "I used to love the words. It meant crowds, music, confetti, cham-

Barry Fielding tightened his arm against her hand as he paused to let some ship's officers by. "Now it means," he answered as they moved on toward the gangplank, "stealth, silence, darkness, fog-the kind of fog they once canceled sailings for. That's what war does-turns the world upside down.'

The girl was pulling a letter from her smart hadbag. She gave it to the officer blocking her way. When he had read it, he stepped aside with grudging respect and she went aboard with They found their way along the dark, wet deck to his small stateroom, carefully shut-ting the door and pulling down the blinds before turning on the lights. Barry was grinning with amusement. "You went to a lot of trouble, Lila, for five minutes on board.'

"I just wanted to make sure you were going to be comfortable. I've heard some rather sordid stories about wartime travel and l thought I might be able to do some adjusting." She moved croser to him and added softly, "You will be careful, darling?"

Barry's grin widened as his arms went about her. "About being uncomfortable?" he said. "Of course not. Please-this isn't any time for joking.

"You're telling me." "I wish I had time to do your unpacking for you."
"I've been doing it for years

One more trip probably won't "You'll write every day?" "No. As often as I can."

"If you need me, wire. I'll be down on the next plane." "With the New York police force and the State Militia, eh?" "Darling, I wish you'd be seri-

* * * THEY walked back on deck, drawn by a sudden commotion at the foot of the gangplank. Officers and plain-clothes men were dispersing a noisy farewell party on the dock. White shirts and evening gowns glimmered through the fog. A girl was running up the gangplank, laughter, shouts, and the blare of toy horns pursuing her.

Out of breath and laughing, she whirled to stand beside Barry at the rail. Suddenly cupping her hands, she called back, "Where's my aloha?"

A piping horn belligerently of his fiancee. Her voice was type. Whoever advised you to go heavier than Lila's and seemed ought to be horsewhipped."

"Come and get me!" the girl it a moment on his face. She masters gave a gay whistle. "You do have "Snake" taunted.

Lila moved back from the rail.

"Of all the disgusting . . ." she murmured. She started off with Barry. But as they passed the girl, an official was holding a flashlight on her papers. The beam cut past her hair—honey-gold hair, beautifully kept Lila.

McKENNEY ON BRIDGE

By William E. McKenney

cently in New York is usually told in the simple statement, it was won by Mrs. A. M. Sobel. She won the women's pair championship with Miss Ruth Sherman of New York; she successfully defended the mixed pair championship with Ed Hymes, Jr., of New York; she won the teamof-four championship with Charles H. Goren and Sidney Silodor of Philadelphia, and Peter Leventritt and Howard Schenken of New York. She finished second in the foursession open pair championship, just two points behind the winners. This record has never before been achieved in a major tournament in the history of bridge. You will recall that I had selected Mrs. Sobel as the outstanding player in 1942, and she is already well on her way toward winning the same title for 1943.

Here is an interesting hand that helped Mrs. Sobel to win one of her eastern championships. When her partner in the East was unable to double the spade bid, Mrs. Sobel (West) felt confident that North and South had a game in spades. Instead of bidding her hearts, she supported diamonds to assure a diamond opening by her partner.

As a result, the ace of diamonds was opened. The queen of diamonds was then played, the suit-directing play asking West to return a heart. The ace of hearts won the third trick, a diamond continuation was ruffed, and thus Mrs. Sobel and her partner took the first four tricks Several North-South pairs actually made six spades.
