Reese expects to have more than 40 aircraft on static display, including modern and vintage military, international and civilian aircraft.

This year's air show will feature a free concert by country music recording star Tracy Byrd, May

The air show begins at 9 a.m. on May 13 and at 8 a.m. on May 14.

WI -- It is a very big deal

"The article below was researched and written by SSgt. Glenn Stanton of our Social Actions Office. If you ever use alcohol, you need to read it!"

Col. Roger Brady 64th FTW commander

Many people do not think driving while intoxicated is a big deal and do not pay it much attention.

I remember, about five years ago, being told of an incident involving an intoxicated driver. An individual had been out drinking heavily one night and decided to drive home. He made it home, but when he woke up he could not remember how he got there. Realizing he was late for work he ran out, forgetting his lunch. His spouse saw he forgot it and decided to run it out to him. When she got outside she fainted.

Her spouse saw her and rushed to her side, not knowing why she had fainted. When she came to he followed her eyes to the front of his car and saw the body of a young girl embedded in the grill. Now, put yourself in the shoes of that girl's mother or father and I ask you, "Is driving while intoxicated a big deal?"

Drinking drivers are the major safety problem on our highways today. They result in about half of the more than 40,000 highway deaths each year. Drinking and driving also results in millions of arrests, hundreds of thousands of serious injuries, and tens of billions of dollars in alcohol-related incidents. The cause of most of these cases is the fact that drinking alcohol destroys your ability to judge your own driving skills.

Because alcohol affects the central nervous system, it affects your driving skills. Alcohol can cause a loss of concentration; it can cause drowsiness which increases the chance of an accident. Alcohol can cause double (or multiple) vision and blurring. Peripheral vision is reduced, making it difficult to see vehicles approaching from either side. It also slows reflexes and interferes with coordination.

All 50 states have laws concerning DWI, and many have become tougher. Many states have a mandatory jail sentence for people convicted of DWI. They also have penalties including alcohol education classes, fines, court costs, loss of driving privileges and an increase in insurance rates. As your blood-alcohol level (B.A.L.) increases so does your chance of being involved in an accident.

Blood-alcohol level is figured by the amount of alcohol in the blood. At .05 percent, your chances of an accident are 1 1/2 times greater; at .10 percent it's seven times greater; and at . 15 percent it's 25 times greater. How your blood-alcohol level increases depends on your body size and weight; for example, five drinks for someone 240 pounds results in the same blood-alcohol level as three drinks for someone 140 pounds. How you respond to alcohol can be affected by how fast you drink, your mood, the amount of food in your stomach, and any medication you may be taking. The amount of pure alcohol (.06 ozs.) is the same in 12 ozs. of beer, 5 ozs. of table wine, and 1 1/2 ozs. of 80-proof liquor.

Although there are different factors that affect a rise in your B.A.L. and eventual intoxication, there is only one way to sober up.

Nothing but time will sober you up! Your B.A.L. will drop about .015 percent per hour after you have your last drink, and do not consume any more alcohol. A cold shower, fresh air, black coffee, oxygen and exercise being used to sober up are all myths. The first four may make you more alert or feel more responsive, but you have done nothing to remove the alcohol from your bloodstream. As far as exercise goes, this may speed up the rate of intoxication since your heart rate increases with

So, if you choose to drink take some precautions. Choose a driver who agrees not to drink; you will be more likely to get home without a problem. Know what you are drinking and how much. Do not allow yourself to be surprised. Set a limit and stick to it. Drink slowly so your body has time to handle the effects; the liver can "normally" process one drink per hour without causing intoxication. Eat before you drink; it will slow down, but not stop, the absorption of alcohol in your system. Stop drinking well before you plan to drive and ensure your body has had plenty of time to eliminate the alcohol from your system.

Be honest with yourself, alcohol does affect how you drive. If you have had too much to drink, call your first sergeant or someone for a ride home or stay overnight and sleep it off.

Remember drinking and driving does cause loss of life and yes, that is a big deal!

"A Careline column provides one of many opportunities for a commander to find out what people are thinking, what's bothering them, what they like, etc. If you've wondered why we do something, or just want to make a comment, don't hesitate to call. You can call the Careline 24 hours a day at 3273. If you leave your name and telephone number, we'll get back to you and answer your concern by telephone. Parking for Purple Heart plates

I was assigned at Bergstrom and the Austin city officials allowed people with Purple Heart license plates to park in handicapped slots. Has anyone approached Lubbock about doing this? Also, I have seen a young girl driving around in an old Volkswagon with a colonel's decal. I know she isn't old enough to be a colonel's wife and I have seen the car parked in reserved spaces several

To our knowledge we have never approached the city of Lubbock about allowing Purple Heart license plate holders to park in handicapped slots. I personally believe this would be taking spots away from those who need them.

We must be aware that all Purple Heart recipients are not handicapped and if they are they are authorized the appropriate

About the decal question, please remember that colonels sometimes have daughters who may be driving their vehicles. If the security police find an individual using a base entry decal for which they are not authorized, swift action is taken to seize the decal.

P.S. Sometimes colonels drive beat-up old Volkswagons so they can afford the daughter's (and son's) car insurance. Trust

Bowling center service

I am concerned about conditions at the Reese Bowling Center. I bowl three or four times a week and have had problems with getting balls repaired and the condition of the lanes. Sometimes it is very cold and we can't bowl

Thanks for bringing this to my attention. Our bowling center manager has been monitoring lane conditions closely and I think you will notice the improvement. Building heat has a direct impact on the operation of the bowling equipment. We have been working with the civil engineers and should have the problem corrected. We were temporarily unable to service balls but are now back in full operation, including ball drilling service.

Call the center manager at 3116 if you have any other ideas for future improvements.

Keep an eye on cooking

by Arnold Miranda Chief fire inspector

In just one minute, your kitchen could be involved in a damaging fire.

In the time it takes for you to talk on the phone, answer the door or check the laundry a fire can develop on the stove.

The kitchen, the heart of every home, contains just the right ingredients for a devastating fire to start. Fires and burns caused by unattended or careless cooking results in thousands of fires and injuries

Many, if not all, of these fires could have been prevented by just staying for one minute more. The Reese Fire Department wants to help you reduce your risk of having a kitchen fire by offering the following fire safety informa-

Most cooking fires involve the ignition of greases. Whether it's cooking oils, lard or melted fats from meat, grease is a combustible liquid which ignites easily and burns rapidly. If it ignites in a pan on your stove, smother the fire by sliding the lid or a larger pan on over the fire and turn off the burner.

If a fire starts inside the oven, turn off the heat and leave the door closed to smother the flames. Other methods include, using baking soda (not baking powder or flour) or a portable extinguisher to extinguish the flames. If the fire is too large to slide a lid on, or for the safe use of an extinguisher, leave the house immediately and

With a grease fire, it is just as important to know how not to fight a fire as it is to know how to extinguish one. Unfortunately, the typical reaction to a grease fire is that the individual tries to carry the burning pan outside or pour water on it. Both of these actions are dangerously wrong! Moving a burning pan can spread the fire and cause serious burns. Never use water or flour to extinguish a grease fire. Water only intensifies the fire and causes the grease to splatter. Flour can result in an explosion. Deal with the fire where it starts, on the stove. Keep a lid, baking soda, or an approved fire extinguisher close at hand.

Some cooking fires are the result of leaving combustible materials such as paper, towels, dish cloths, paper bags, ect., near the stove, oven or other hot appliance. Fires also occur because of grease buildup on stoves, ovens, broilers, exhaust fans or vents. To avoid these types of fires keep areas clean and free of grease or other combustible materials.

Avoid reaching over the stove burner. Store frequently used items in other locations of the kitchen. Don't store cookies or candies near the stove, it only tempts small children to climb on the stove to retrieve them. Keep all small children out of the kitchen area while cooking.

Keep pot handles turned inward, out of the reach of children and where you can't accidentally bump into them. Keep appliance cords up on the counter out of children's reach. Frequently check cords for frayed or broken spots.

Never try to move a burning pan.

Replace damaged cords or appliances. The best way to prevent cooking fires is to never leave the cooking area unattended.

Remember, in just one minute, grease can ignite. A watched pot may not boil... but it's less likely to catch on

Reese and Lubbock - a Loyal Partnership

We in Lubbock and the South Plains area appreciate the model relationship which exists with the Reese Air Force Base community. This relationship which has endured for years because of the many valuable friendships made, is among the best base-host community cooperation efforts.

Reese and Lubbock people are amazingly similar. Both are inherently outgoing, friendly and industrious. Their tastes, likes and dislikes parallel in many ways. Many Lubbock area natives are in the Air Force. Many others make their homes in West Texas while stationed here, and many return to live in Lubbock after they separate from the Air Force.

Reese workers — officers, enlisted men and women, civilian employees and contractors — will earn combined salaries of more than $80 million this year. Most of this payroll will be spent in Lubbock and the surrounding area. Air Force people with their stable income can afford quality goods and services.

You can increase your chances of winning Reese customers by advertising in The ROUNDUP, the base's weekly — and only— newspaper, published by Chandelle Publications in Lubbock. Through The ROUNDUP, Reese people and their families find out what's happening on base, in Lubbock and in the Air Force.

You not only increase your chances of tipping the profit scales in your favor by placing ads in the base paper, but you also help out the military. The number and depth of articles depend on the size of the paper. Your advertising, then helps your business while it helps keep Reese people informed.

ECAMP begins Monday

by Steve Jones 64th CES Environmental Flight

We are all responsible for the environment in one way or another. With this concept in mind, Reese is committed to protecting the health of its personnel, their family members and the environment around them.

The primary way of accomplishing this is through a basewide environmental appraisal, otherwise known as the Environmental Compliance Assessment and Management Program. The primary objective of ECAMP is to find and address environmental problems that could impact our mission, jeopardize our health or erode the public's confidence in the Air Force as an environmental pacesetter. Beginning Monday, Reese will receive an internal ECAMP inspection, which will last for the entire week.

The purpose of the ECAMP is to allow Reese to evaluate itself on the basis of federal, state, and Air Force environmental regulations. Results of the assessment will allow Reese to correct areas of weakness internally before outside agencies such as the Envoronmental Protection Agency or Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission become involved. Though this may appear on the surface as another inspector general type inspection, it is nothing of the sort. The purpose of the evaluation is not to find problem areas and bring the law down on those who caused the problems. Instead, the team will be looking for areas of noncompliance, whatever the cause, with the sole purpose of fixing them in an expeditious In order to accomplish this goal successfully, the ECAMP Team will need the cooperation of everyone on base in order to identify any problem areas. Those being assessed are encouraged to ask any questions or voice any concerns they have about existing laws which may have an environmental impact. Remember, the ECAMP assessor is there to help you do things the way the law requires.

The value of an ECAMP was recently demonstrated during an environmental inspection by state regulators. The regulators covered several aspects of the environmental program at Reese and thanks to the thorough external ECAMP performed last year, the base was able to avoid receiving any violations.

With your continuing support of the environmental programs at Reese remain a success

Lt. Col. Mike Jones, 64th Support Group deputy commander, examines a dumpster to ensure it doesn't contain any environmentally unsafe materials. An ECAMP outbrief will be held at 2 p.m. on April 14.

Protecting you

There are safeguards in the officer promotion system

RANDOLPH AFB, Texas (AFNS)—There are a number of safeguards built into the officer promotion process to ensure every officer receives fair and equitable promotion consideration. This article—one of a regular series designed to "demystify" the promotion process—will focus on the safeguards that protect you.

Civilian oversight

The most important selection board safeguard is the civilian oversight of all promotion board activities. By law (Title 10, U.S.C, Chapter 36) the secretary of the Air Force convenes promotion boards and appoints the board members, recorders and administrative support staff. The SECAF's Memorandum of Instruction, discussed in an earlier article, is the only guidance given to the board and is read verbatim to members by the board president.

The secretary annually reviews the administrative briefings given on the board's first day to ensure they are consistent with her written guidance. The SECAF also annually conducts interviews of board presidents, members, recorders and the administrative support staff to ensure boards are conducted according to applicable laws, regulations and instructions. Finally, she receives the post-board briefing from the board president and approves the board report.

Given the importance of her oversight function, strict rules govern who may perform reviews and interviews if the secretary is unable to do them personally.

These responsibilities may only be delegated to a subordinate civilian official who has been appointed by the president and confirmed by the Senate. Currently, only the under secretary of the Air Force and the assistant secretary of the Air Force for manpower, reserve affairs, installations and environment are authorized to perform these important safeguard duties on the secretary's behalf.

Pre-board safeguards

Some safeguards are at work even before the promotion board convenes. Prior to each promotion board, a military personnel flight letter is sent to all units announcing the board date, the eligibility criteria and the promotion opportunity. Approximately three months prior to convening a board, officer pre-selection briefs are sent to all eligible officers directing them to review their records to ensure such information as duty history, professional and military education, advance education and decorations are accurate.

Since the pre-selection brief contains the same information as the officer selection brief used by the promotion board, this safeguard gives each officer the chance to make sure board members see the correct information.

Officers are encouraged to review their official officer selection record, maintained at AFMPC, throughout their career and especially before a promotion board. This review can be accomplished in several ways: (1) by requesting a copy of the record through the review by mail program to: HQ AFMPC/DPMABR4, 550 C Street West, Suite 5, Randolph AFB, TX 78150-4707; (2) by confirming a specific document is in your record over the telephone, by calling the officer records section (DSN 487-5404) at AFMPC; or (3) by reviewing your record in person

How promotion board members are selected is another safeguard. While the law requires board members to be senior in grade to the officers being considered for promotion, Air Force policy is to only use senior officers in the grade of colonel or higher as board members. This ensures the most experienced leaders are making critical promotion decisions. As an additional safeguard, the board membership mirrors the eligible population to the best extent possible in terms of race, sex, aeronautical rating, major command and career area.

As a final pre-board safeguard, eligible officers can submit a letter to the board concerning any matter they consider important for consideration. The letter is generally used to clarify something in, or missing from, an officer's record. This letter is placed in the selection record for review by the board.

In-board safeguards

During the board, numerous measures are taken to ensure the board process itself is fair and equitable. The preparation of the board members before actually scoring records is one such measure. Several briefings are presented, covering demographics and facts about the eligible population and specific board procedures. Board members, recorders and administrative staff are all administered an oath of office.

A trial-run exercise is conducted where a sample group of records from the previous year's board are reviewed, scored and discussed by the entire board. This helps board members familiarize themselves with the contents of an officer selection record and establish a scoring pattern they can apply consistently over the course of the board.

When the real scoring begins, eligible officers' records are given to the scoring panels in groups of 20. A random distribution of records among the panels is achieved by using a reverse social security number method to sequence all the records meeting the board.

All scoring of records is done by secret ballot. Only in cases where a significant difference in the scores exists, called a split vote, will panel members know how others scored a record.

Split votes occur when two or more panel members differ in their scoring on an individual record by two or more points. When this happens, the record is brought back to the panel for discussion and resolution of the split. The split resolution process ensures no one board member can adversely impact an officer's chances for promotion.

Another important safeguard employed during the board process is a quality review by the board president. Throughout the board, the board president reviews the records of numerous officers to get a good understanding of the quality of the population and to ensure the quality of records is evenly distributed across the panels. The board president reviews the records of officers who fall near the promotion cutoff line and those who are specifically addressed in the SECAF's Memorandum of Instruction. While the board president cannot change the score of a record, he or she can direct a record be rescored to ensure fair and equitable consideration for all officers.

Finally, before the board adjourns, each board member must certify all actions were in accordance with the applicable laws, DOD directives and Air Force regulations and, in the opinion of the majority of the board members, the best-qualified officers were selected for promotion.

Other safeguards exist to protect you after the promotion board is over and the promotion list has been released. These safety measures — appeals, the Air Force Board for Correction of Military Records and special selection boards — will be featured in an upcoming article.

Operation Provide Promise tops 1,000 days of support

RAMSTEIN AB, Germany (AFNS)—Operation Provide Promise flew into the history books March 29 marking 1,000 days of the humanitarian airlift operation.

Ù,S. Air Forces in Europe flying units, as well as several augmenting units from the United States, have airlifted more than 55,953 metric tons of food, medicine and other relief supplies to Sarajevo, Bosnia-Herzegovina, since the operation began July 3, 1992.

Additionally, U.S. and allied aircrews have dropped 18,002.48 metric tons of relief supplies into areas of Bosnia-Herzegovina which U.N. convoys were unable to reach over land.

Operation Provide Promise is a humanitarian relief effort conducted by the United States as part of a multinational U.N. effort in the former Yugoslavia.

Ramstein's 37th Airlift Squadron flies up to three shuttles from Ancona, Italy, to Sarajevo each day. Total Sarajevo mission time, including stops, averages about two hours.

Provide Promise is the longest sustained humanitarian airlift in history, surpassing the length of the Berlin airlift almost a year and a half ago. During some of the worst months of the war, the operation supplied more than 95 percent of the humanitarian assistance for the capital.

Other countries involved in the operation are Germany, France, Great Britain, Canada, Italy, Greece, Kuwait, Turkey, Norway, Sweden, Algeria, Belgium, Denmark, Jordan, the Netherlands, Portugal, Saudi Arabia, Spain and Tunisia.

Savings bond rules ease

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — The Treasury Department announced changes in savings bonds March 20 that will make the program easier to understand.

The changes in regulations, effective May 1, 1995, will insure that Series EE bonds—the most widely held—will earn market-based rates from the date of purchase.

"For the first time, savings bond investors will get market-based rates right from the start. Whether interest rates are high or low, savings bonds investors will always get a return linked to market rates, a fair return on their money," Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin said.

Now, two different marketbased rates will be announced each May 1 and Nov. 1.

Short-term savings bond rate: Series EE bonds earn the short-term rates for the first five years.

The short-term rate is 85 percent of the average of sixmonth marketable Treasury security yields. A new rate is announced and becomes effective each May 1 and Nov. 1. The May 1 rate reflects market yields during the preceding February, March, and April. The Nov. 1 rate reflects market yields during the preceding August, September and October.

Long-term savings bond rate: Series EE bonds earn the long-term rates from five years through 17 years. The longterm rate is 85 percent of the average of five-year marketable Treasury security yields. A new rate is announced and becomes effective each May 1 and Nov. 1. The May 1 rate reflects market yields during the preceding November through April and the Nov. 1 rate reflects market yields during the preceding May through October.

This change makes it easy for investors to know exactly what rate their bonds will earn during the interest period, officials said. For example, if the short term rate is 5 percent, Treasury will compute the amount to be added to a bond's value on its next interest date using that annual rate.

The new market-based EE Bonds will increase in value every six months. This means that a bond issued in January will increase in value each July 1 and Jan. 1. Investors who redeem a savings bond will receive the cash value as of the last date interest was added to the value of a bond. Investors redeeming savings bonds between interest accrual dates will not receive any interest for the partial period since the last interest accrual date.

Savings bonds will still be sold for a price of half their face value or denomination. Because they earn market-based rates, it is not certain when a bond will reach face value For example, a bond earning an average of 5 percent will slightly more than double in value in 14 1/2 years. If the market-based rates are not sufficient for a bond to reach face value in 17 years, however, Treasury will make a onetime adjustment to increase it to face value at that time, implying a minimum rate of return of just over 4 percent if a bond is held for the full 17

Outstanding Series E bonds and Savings Notes as well as Series EE bonds issued before May 1, 1995, are not affected by the changes.

The War in the Pacific

The key to victory against Japan was a rocky fortress called Okinawa

One plane for one warship. One boat for one ship. One man for 10 enemy. One man for one tank.

This was the creed of the Japanese 32nd Army on Okinawa in 1945. Japanese leaders believed this creed was necessary; if the American invasion of Okinawa was successful, nothing stood in the way of the Allies invading Japan itself.

Okinawa became the bloodiest battle of the Pacific

The island was the intersection of the Central Pacific drive under Fleet Admiral Chester Nimitz and the Southwestern Pacific drive under General of the Army Douglas MacArthur. The landings themselves on April 1,1945, were remarkably peaceful. This was because Japanese leaders decided to concentrate in the southern section of the 60mile-long island.

In addition to defending the island, the Japanese flew kamikaze missions against the warships and transports of the Allied fleet. About 1,800 Japanese pilots carried out these suicide raids against Allied ships.

The tenacious defense on the ground and the suicidal attacks from the air led many American planners to believe taking Okinawa foreshadowed casualties an Allied invasion of Japan would entail.

Army troops ran into the main Japanese defense line on April 4. The Japanese had heavily fortified the area around Shuri Castle, and American advançes were measured in yards.

On April 22 Marine Corps divisions after clearing the northern part of the islandjoined the assault in the south.

The Japanese took advantage of every terrain feature and obstacle.

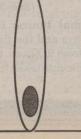

They turned Okinawan burial vaults into pillboxes, and the Americans had to secure each strongpoint. Kunishi Ridge, Shuri Castle, Yuza-DakeYaeju Dake escarpment and a hill the Marines called Sugarloaf all had to be taken, often in brutal frontal assaults.

By June 21 Americans had finally reached the southern portion of the island, and Marine Corps Maj.Gen. Roy S. Geiger — who took command of the U.S. Tenth Army when Army Lt. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner was killed — declared the battle

On land the Americans lost 7.374 dead, 31.807 wounded and 239 missing. At sea the kamikazes sank 36 ships and damaged 368. The Navy listed 4,907 sailors killed or missing with another 4,874 wounded. (AFNS)
