Parsonages in the West.

To the Advocate.

In the first thirty years after the organization of the Methodist Church in Texas, as shown by an alphabetical list in Dr. Bangs' History, 1616 itinerant preachers had united with the different conferences; of whom, two years later, 764 had died in the work, 31 had been expelled, 19 had withdrawn, and 686 still remained members.

These figures show that, during a period about the average of human life, immediately following the organization of the Church, only 7 per cent. of its itinerant ministry died in the service, while 93 per cent. had located. The locations exceeded by 78 the whole number of itinerants then remaining, the accumulation of all these years. Remember that this was the result with men who had completed their probation, tested men, and that, too, in the "heroic age" of Methodism. This vast loss of available force shows an immense strain on the system at some point.

At the same time the efficiency of the itinerancy was demonstrated by the accumulation of more than 200,000 communicants within the period under review. Its aggressive power is all the more conspicuous for this grand achievement, with the waste of more than half its working capacity. What might have been the result if Methodism had conserved its forces, and thus doubled the energy of its itinerancy? This would have swelled the millions who, with glad hearts, celebrate this centenary year, and it would have increased the joy and wonder of each of the increased millions by the added grandeur of the result.

Bishop Coke, as early as the year 1800, appealed to the church to provide parsonages and the necessary heavy furniture for the use of the families of preachers, in order to retain the services of those most experienced and influential. The failure to do this is believed to explain most of the localities in the West.

Here is a conspicuous lesson of the first century of organic Methodism; and attention is called to it just now, because the conditions at present existing in our Western work are similar to those of that period. The country is new, its population is scattered, the distances are great, and the people not rich. As in the new and attractive countries houses are relatively scarce and command high rents, rapidly exhausting the limited means of a preacher, who is forced to pay these prices. It is known to the writer that two of the worthy men furnished by Georgia to our mission-work in New Mexico within the last two years have found it necessary with their own hands to construct a shelter for themselves, as the first condition for conducting their ministry. The meager support from the treasury could not meet their needs, and they were forced to pay prevailing rents. What avails missionary money if it must thus be exhausted?

We are more considerate of our ministers in foreign countries. Homes are accounted indispensable for them. At this point the itinerancy plagues most in a new country, and just here expenditure is first needed, and investment the true economy. The rent of a house for three years will usually buy it. The benevolent fund that meets this first condition yields the surest and the largest revenue. It is noteworthy that, while the fathers saw the difficulty and sought to provide for it, we, so far as the West is concerned, seem to overlook it. The unmarred men, with the attainments and experience requisite for that difficult field, are not to be found in numbers sufficient to meet the urgent and growing demand. Maturity of character and culture are nowhere more important than in this service. Men of enterprise, wide-awake, worldly popular, its cosmopolitan character centers there the ideas of the world, so that the missionary encounters every phase, both of belief and of unbelief, of the gospel, a man, a chosen man, is God's agency to wield it. Any man lacking the elements for a successful ministry in the older conference, is an assured failure in the new.

The missionary money expended on such a man is a waste—it is a goodly hindrance—a repression of the benevolence that supplies it, and an obstruction of the field to be occupied. Besides, all our valuable men without families cannot be spared from the older conferences. In all these conferences there are particular places whose peculiar surroundings require this class of men.

The parsonage is the desideratum for the Western work. It removes the most serious obstruction to an itinerant ministry in new countries, where, if not indispensable, it is certainly a powerful adjunct. It is singular that, while the church provides machinery for almost every other separate interest—its boards for Sunday-schools, missions, finances, literature, and church extension—the right-arm of the itinerancy, to provide for itself as best it can. Parsonages indeed we have in localities able to provide them for themselves, but these are the outgrowth of necessity and convenience, rather than of any thoughtful provision of organic Methodism. In those places where salaries are necessarily small, and parsonages are therefore the more needed, they are unprovided, and there is not even an organized effort to provide them.

Our fathers when there was no old and well-established church to help in their new work, their loss by that lack was great, and the lesson is among the most impressive of their history. This record of their failure, due to lack of aid, is not a record of their failure, but a record to us through our enlarged resources to do this for the Lord which they earnestly coveted to do, but could not compass.

Why not extend the privilege of our good women, who recently by authority of law began their efficient work for the women and children of heathen races? Why not let them share in the glorious work of God at home as well as abroad? It is to be hoped that they will ask the next General Conference to so modify the constitution of the Woman's Missionary Society, that they may enter this inviting field, now wholly neglected. If there be any women and children who appear to be in need of the ministrations of the Christian, let them be the wives and children of the devoted men who have brought them the boon of the gospel. These angels of the home are peculiarly fitted to sympathize with these wanderers on the face of the earth, who are seeking for domestic comfort. And, if, by their thoughtful provision, the number and efficiency of the itinerant ministry may be multiplied, who can measure the magnitude of the prospect for Christian achievement to the glory of our holy women to the church as helpers of its ministry is emphasized in the apostolic age. Paul, that early itinerant, found Mary, and Priscilla, and Lydia, and Phoebe potent adjuncts, and speaks in his epistles their praiseworthy labors, and commends them to the church in all ages. While our women are sending their blessing to foreign fields, exclude them not from entering the harvest that constantly widens on their native shores.

The census of the United States shows that the population of this country since the organization of the government, with marked uniformity, has steadily doubled in about twenty-five years. If this law of increase is to prevail in the future as in the past, children are now living who will see the day when 400,000,000 of people will occupy this territory. The prospective increase alone in the next 70 years will exceed the present population of China. Let southern Methodists consider that the mass of this multitude is to be in the South and West, exactly where we have our providential place.

The reminders of the departing century are opportune, if they but arouse us to the magnitude of our mission. Methodism, now just emerged from the feebleness of infancy and the perils of adolescence, and starting out in the strength of a vigorous manhood, God calls to occupy a field the grandest of our century. Let us nobly endeavor, let us nobly endeavor, let us nobly endeavor, to longer huddle on one foot, but, thoroughly equipped, go forward to its real capabilities! O for men to devote broadly and execute grandly in this day of our opportunity!

An Uncertain Sound.

Three, Not Four, Leading Causes for Centennial Collections.

To the Advocate.
The address of the Centennial Committee of the Texas Conference follows the statement of Bro. J. S. Smith, that domestic missions is one of the leading causes for these centennial collections to be raised. The action of the Centennial Committee is as follows:—Resolved, That in grateful acknowledgment of God's signal mercies and our increased prosperity and responsibility, we will endeavor, during the year 1884, to raise the sum of $2,000,000, to be applied equally to the cause of education, church extension and foreign missions, save where donors shall give special direction to their gifts under the supervision of a committee hereinafter named.

If speakers in English may be relied upon to convey definite ideas, the foregoing resolution needs no explanation; most specifically does it enumerate three, and not four, leading objects for which collections are to be raised during the year 1884; and domestic missions is not one of these leading objects.

The language employed by the Centennial Committee is as follows:—"Moreover, while the General Conference expressed a willingness to include in the aggregate centennial collections, the local contributions as might be made to relieve church poverty or to erect or greatly improve churches or parsonages, yet our people are everywhere urged to keep chiefly in mind the great leading objects of our century collection—namely, a loan fund of $500,000 to be administered by the Church Extension Board for the special mission buildings, for educational and other purposes in China, Mexico and Brazil, and the strengthening of our schools and colleges with the most liberal aid, and the creation of a "Centennial Educational Fund." These special objects for the liberality of the church are recommended after the most mature considerations. These being realized, we will be able to plant and strengthen our Methodism in all her fields, both at home and in heathen lands.

While these three objects will share alike in the distribution of all undesignated funds which come into the hands of the Centennial Committee, yet donors may give full direction to their gifts." There is nothing equivocal in the phrasing employed by the Centennial Committee, or the General Conference.

more to large and interested audiences, and I think his labors here will result in permanent benefit to the church on this circuit. On last Sunday he raised a collection for the purpose of paying off the debt on our new church here, and also for finishing up the work yet unfinished on the building. The amount raised in cash and good subscriptions was $615. Our beautiful new church will soon be completed, and out of debt. I have never labored among a more kind, intelligent, and liberal people. What we most need is a sweeping revival that will reach all classes and will permanently establish the Redeemer's Kingdom in this part of the vineyard. Some of us are earnestly praying for it.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

[As these notices appear but once, those interested will do well to preserve this paper for reference.]

Rev. J. W. Hill requests us to make the following correction: In his recent article in the Advocate of March 22d, headed "A Term Badly Misused," to read "Kepler" for "Copernicus."

BEVILL, March 17.—A grand centennial camp-meeting will be held near Beville, Bee county, Texas, commencing June 26, 1884. The meeting will be on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers are invited, and will be cared for. A glorious time prayed for and expected. Brethren, "come over and help us."—A. C. BIGGS, P. C.

CALEDONIA, March 25.—Any one wishing to send me money for Church Extension Board, can do so by sending me a postoffice order on postmaster at Henderson, Rusk county, Texas, or by registered letter to me at Caledonia, Rusk county, Texas.—T. S. GARRISON, Sr.

The ninth annual meeting of the Texas Sunday-school Association will be held in the city of Terrell, Kaufman county, beginning on Tuesday, the 29th day of April, at 8 o'clock p. m. Let every Sunday-school in Texas be represented. Ample preparations are being made by the good people of Terrell to entertain all who may come. J. H. HENDRICKS, J. M. COOXY, J. C. STONEY, Executive Committee.

The district stewards for Galveston district, Texas Conference, met Monday night, 24th March, at the excellent church conference at 3 p. m.; 12 joined the church. We are working for a revival in every part of the district church enterprise. Received 13 to date. We have a kind people to serve. They are in sympathy with their preacher, and love the cause of Christ. We expect revivals all over the work. May God bless and prosper his work in every heart. Bro. DeVilbiss is in very poor health. Will do all I can for the Advocate.

5 Conversions—6 Accessions.
H. YOUNGER, Egan's Schoolhouse, March 19: At one of my regular appointments at this place, on Sunday, a good congregation assembled, and during the service much interest was manifested. Bro. DeVilbiss is in very poor health. Will do all I can for the Advocate.

14 Accessions.
W. M. ADAMS, Union, March 25: Our second quarterly conference is over, and notwithstanding the rain and sickness of the immediate community in which it was held, we had an interesting meeting. The financial report is tolerably good for the number of societies represented. Our report shows 14 persons have been received into the church during the past quarter; also 3 children baptized, and I have taken 17 subscriptions for the Advocate. Bro. Monk, presiding elder, was at his post, and preached with his accustomed power. Bro. W. V. Jones, preacher in charge of Floresville circuit, was with us and preached two powerful sermons, which we greatly enjoyed.

15 Accessions.
T. J. MILAM, Plano, March 24: My second quarterly conference was held March 14th. Reports from the stewards were reasonably good considering that the second quarterly conference came so early in the year. We received into the church 15 members last quarter. The Sunday-school interest is growing. We collected $25 for the Sunday-school cause the first week in this month. The class-meeting is attracting more attention. We have a monthly class meeting just organized, and hope to have others at work soon. The greatest difficulty of our teachers is that they have no text-books. On Sunday, 15th, by Dr. J. S. Smith, presiding elder. It was concise, yet replete with clearness.

16 Conversions.
T. E. SHERWOOD, Henrietta, March 20: This is the thirty-first day in the progress of our protracted meeting here, and the grand work moves on. The Lord's presence is felt, and the souls of sinners are being saved. The Christian ministry will then have a work absorbing it: from which sectarian service will be excluded. The Christian Church then, in all her militant divisions, true to her instincts, will arm herself against infidelity, and eagerly press forward the impersonal and limitless, having throbs of sympathy and words of encouragement for all who are struggling up into a divine life.

17 Conversions.
J. F. DENTON, Blanco City, March 19: This work is slowly but steadily improving. The congregations at all the appointments are about as large as the houses will contain; 22 have been added to the church; by certified and otherwise, up to this time. Dr. D. T. Zeller came up and preached for us a week more to large and interested audiences, and I think his labors here will result in permanent benefit to the church on this circuit. On last Sunday he raised a collection for the purpose of paying off the debt on our new church here, and also for finishing up the work yet unfinished on the building. 18 Conversions.

C. J. SHERWOOD, Black Jack Grove, March 25: The winter is about over; spring is welcomed with its singing birds and growing weather. A few days ago a light occurred at this place. A saloon-keeper had a difficulty with one of his best customers, killing him; the customer seriously wounding the bartender. Such comes of whisky dealing. We are getting along tolerably well on my circuit. I expect to hold a meeting in Black Jack in the month of April. Pray for us.

19 Conversions.
S. B. ELLIS, Waxahachie, March 14: Our second quarterly meeting is over. Results, 3 conversions, 2 conversions, and the church generally revived. Had promise of a grand revival had the weather favored it. Several penitents at the altar Sunday night.

20 Conversions.
H. M. DE BOSK, Huntsville, March 23: I closed to-day a two weeks' meeting with very gratifying and gracious results. The church has been greatly refreshed, class-meetings established, and a renewed spirit of consecration professed by a great number. There were 17 accessions to the church, and as many or more conversions, some having joined other churches, and several yet to be received. A beautiful feature of the closing service was a class of our Sunday-school scholars at the altar to assume the vows of the church.

21 Conversions.
E. Y. SEALE, Benton City, March 17: Yesterday was a good day for Methodism at this place—good congregation in the morning and at night; an excellent church conference at 3 p. m.; 12 joined the church. We are working for a revival in every part of the district church enterprise. Received 13 to date. We have a kind people to serve. They are in sympathy with their preacher, and love the cause of Christ. We expect revivals all over the work. May God bless and prosper his work in every heart. Bro. DeVilbiss is in very poor health. 23 Conversions.
J. A. ROGERS, Ennis, March 19: Last Sunday night three brethren met for prayer. We called upon God, and according to his promise he sent the blessing upon us. May all the people be blessed and the church revived this centennial year.

24 Conversions.
E. G. DUVAL, Richland Springs, March 17: The second quarterly meeting at Richland mission closed on yesterday. Jas. M. Stevenson, presiding elder, held the quarterly conference, but he was suffering from a severe cold which affected his throat and lungs. He is deeply interested in all the interests of the church. His appeal to the quarterly conference to renew their zeal in the future was very impressive.

25 Conversions.
C. E. KILDARE, March 17: Kildare is in a "local option" precinct. Last Friday we voted again upon it with following result: "For prohibition," 71; "whisky," 1. "Against prohibition" 1. The 1 ticket was written "whisky," so it could not count. It is thought to have been put in simply for mischief, the party knowing the ticket would not count the way he wrote it. Prohibition succeeds, and Kildare is unanimous.

C. J. SHERWOOD, Black Jack Grove, March 25: The winter is about over; spring is welcomed with its singing birds and growing weather. A few days ago a light occurred at this place. We are getting along tolerably well on my circuit. I expect to hold a meeting in Black Jack in the month of April. Pray for us.

JOHN M. BAIRD, Temple, March 24: We laid to-day the foundation to our new church here. It will be a nice frame church when completed, but we will have to get some assistance to finish it. This town has over 3000 inhabitants, though not yet three years old. We have only 50 members, and though they are a heroic band, they ought to be helped. If any one who reads this feels like helping a struggling church and making a profitable investment for the Master, their help will be thankfully received.

We are getting along tolerably well on my circuit. I expect to hold a meeting in Black Jack in the month of April. Pray for us.

45 Conversions.
JOHN M. BAIRD, Temple, March 24: We laid to-day the foundation to our new church here. It will be a nice frame church when completed, but we will have to get some assistance to finish it. This town has over 3000 inhabitants, though not yet three years old. We have only 50 members, and though they are a heroic band, they ought to be helped. If any one who reads this feels like helping a struggling church and making a profitable investment for the Master, their help will be thankfully received.

46 Conversions—3 Accessions.
S. B. ELLIS, Waxahachie, March 14: Our second quarterly meeting is over. Results, 3 conversions, 2 conversions, and the church generally revived. Had promise of a grand revival had the weather favored it. Several penitents at the altar Sunday night.

47 Accession.
H. M. DE BOSK, Huntsville, March 23: I closed to-day a two weeks' meeting with very gratifying and gracious results. The church has been greatly refreshed, class-meetings established, and a renewed spirit of consecration professed by a great number. There were 17 accessions to the church, and as many or more conversions, some having joined other churches, and several yet to be received. A beautiful feature of the closing service was a class of our Sunday-school scholars at the altar to assume the vows of the church.

48 Accessions.
E. Y. SEALE, Benton City, March 17: Yesterday was a good day for Methodism at this place—good congregation in the morning and at night; an excellent church conference at 3 p. m.; 12 joined the church. We are working for a revival in every part of the district church enterprise. Received 13 to date. We have a kind people to serve. They are in sympathy with their preacher, and love the cause of Christ. We expect revivals all over the work. May God bless and prosper his work in every heart. Bro. DeVilbiss is in very poor health. Will do all I can for the Advocate.

49 Conversions—6 Accessions.
H. YOUNGER, Egan's Schoolhouse, March 19: At one of my regular appointments at this place, on Sunday, a good congregation assembled, and during the service much interest was manifested. Bro. DeVilbiss is in very poor health. Will do all I can for the Advocate.

more to large and interested audiences, and I think his labors here will result in permanent benefit to the church on this circuit. On last Sunday he raised a collection for the purpose of paying off the debt on our new church here, and also for finishing up the work yet unfinished on the building. The amount raised in cash and good subscriptions was $615. Our beautiful new church will soon be completed, and out of debt. I have never labored among a more kind, intelligent, and liberal people. What we most need is a sweeping revival that will reach all classes and will permanently establish the Redeemer's Kingdom in this part of the vineyard. Some of us are earnestly praying for it.

The editor is in Nashville attending the meeting of the Mission Board. The pressure of work preparing for his absence will cause a brief delay in his correspondence. He will attend to it on his return.

Rev. J. W. Hill writes: "I will soon have a Methodist paper in every Methodist family in my station." That is the watchword for every preacher. Our church papers should show the benefits of the great centennial movement.

We commend the communication of Bishop Hargrove on "Parsonages in the West" to the thoughtful and prayerful consideration of all our readers. It is a paper of the first importance, and presents special claims on the attention of preachers and people in the West. Parsonages are among our leading wants.

Dr. BOWDITCH, an eminent physician of Boston, and formerly chairman of the State Board of Health, recently stated that he formerly was of the opinion that the use of light wines and lager beer would lessen intemperance. He is now satisfied that the opinion is a delusion. The sale of lager beer has not diminished the number of grog shops in Boston nor the amount of drunkenness, while statistics show that in California the use of light wines has been productive of no better results.

"Peace I leave with you." What a princely heritage those words confer on the humblest followers of Christ! Peace, which money cannot buy, nor the patronage of presidents or princes confer, is the birthright of every converted soul. It made Paul calm when the waves were breaking over the ship, and refreshed his soul when he wrote his last message from the prison at Rome. It brings to the humblest home a joy that is a stranger in the palace, and supports the dying saint when the shadows of death surround him.

The liquor dealers of New York, in a recent meeting, denounced high license and prohibitory laws, and called on "a liberty-loving people to discriminate in their patronage, and especially on grocers, who either deal in liquor or are friendly to the principles advocated by us, and not to purchase from those who have made or are making themselves conspicuous in the crusade against the liquor dealers." What these men style a "crusade against liquor dealers," is simply a revolt in society against the domination of the saloons. It has not only debauched the morals of old and young, filled the land with pauperism and crime and the graveyards with dead men, but it has exercised a controlling influence in legislative halls, and resisted the enforcement of law until all good citizens are demanding an abatement of the evil.

The New York Herald, referring to the utterances of a prominent clergyman of that city who "relieved his mind quite freely on the subject of foreigners and their influence in America," says: "Readers who think his language too strong should make allowance for the fact that the preacher lives in a city that is governed, through the aldermen, by a lot of foreign-born run-sellers." That is plain talk, but it will apply to certain towns and cities in Texas as well as New York. If people will search for the brand of every beer barrel, or will look at the name of the leading beer and whisky saloons, they will find that this business is chiefly in the hands of foreigners. Then if they will trace the genealogy of the men who run their city governments, and of the peace officers who are paid by the people for policing the saloons, they will find that a very large per cent. are men of foreign birth. In many cities it is difficult to persuade a respectable American citizen to run for a municipal office. They feel degraded by association with the crew who have assumed, as their right, these offices of honor or profit.

SERMON PAPER. The publishers of the ADVOCATE have prepared sermon paper in a form which will be useful to many preachers who desire to preserve their sermons in compact and convenient form. The paper is folded so that eight pages can be conveniently used if the preacher desires to take his brief or notes into the pulpit.

This form of folding paper the editor first saw used by Rev. R. Alexander, D. D., and it has been enlarged and improved. Two sizes are prepared. One for the 16 mo. Bible, convenient for the saddle-bags; another of larger size. Send to Shaw & Blylock, Galveston, Texas, for samples. Price 50 cents per package.

MALFEASANCE IN OFFICE.

John Foster, the county attorney for Salina county, Kansas, refused to prosecute cases brought before him for violating the prohibitory law. Complaints were brought against him for willful neglect of his official duties; he was tried before the Supreme Court, was found guilty, and will be removed from office. That is the treatment every official deserves who assumes an oath to enforce the laws of the State and persistently fails to meet his obligations. One of the chief needs of Texas just now is the faithful enforcement of the laws of the State against faithless and forewarned officials. The Sunday law and laws against gambling can be enforced when men in office have proper respect for their official oaths. The Dallas officials have demonstrated that the laws against gambling are not of necessity a dead letter in the statute books. This could be done in Galveston and many other cities, were our State and municipal officers made out of the same material as are those who have upheld the law in Dallas. That the law is not enforced in the Island city is patent to every man who will walk down Market street on Sunday and look into the open saloons, or who will go out on the beach and mark the amount of business openly carried on in the beer gardens. There is not a newsboy in the city who could not pilot the police into well known gambling dens. If our officials are in ignorance of these offenses, they ought to be removed for stupidity. If they know their existence and fail to arrest the offenders, or if they refuse or fail to testify when summoned before a grand jury and are sworn to tell the whole truth, they ought to be expelled from office for violation of their official obligations.

In the report of the Galveston grand jury, published in the Galveston News March 25th, we find the following general indictment of the city government: "From the evidence brought before us we find that there have been certain irregularities in the administration of the city government which all right-minded citizens deplore, and to which the attention of the legislature of the State should be called to the end that such laws should be enacted as would reach all officials guilty of malfeasance in office, and that penalties of a nature strong enough to prevent those whom the people elect to honestty represent them from disregarding that trust."

This sweeping arraignment places every officer of the municipal government, from Mayor Fulton down to the latest made policeman, on trial before the bar of public sentiment. This gross neglect of official duty is not only deplored by all good citizens, but the grand jury considers it an evil of such enormity that legislative relief is invoked, not to reach the violator of the law alone, but to "reach all officials who are guilty of malfeasance in office." This proclamation of lawlessness of this city of Galveston, be it noted, is not, this time made by a "certain religious paper," as some of our dailies have styled the TEXAS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, but by grand juries speaking under oath. It places Galveston in a pitiable plight. Its daily papers may as well spike their guns, which they so often turn against the lawlessness of the fence-cutters, and support public opinion in its demand that law be enforced within our corporate limits.

Public sentiment in other cities is making earnest demands for the enforcement of law. In the News of March 26 we find a special telegram from San Antonio, from which we copy the following extract: "The repeated charges of Judge Noonan to successive grand juries regarding gaming and malfeasance in office in that connection has created no end of talk. The grand jury, after a two weeks' session, came into open court this morning and announced that they had completed their labors. No written report was submitted, but in its stead a verbal rehearsal of the work accomplished was announced with the handing over of the last of 329 indictments found. Among the batches of true bills found there are two each against Mayor French, Recorder Callahan, Marshal Sharden, Sheriff McCall, Constable Bader and Justices Adams and Shields in their official capacities for failure to arrest and prosecute gaming and the enforcement of the Sunday law. The batch also contains a number of indictments against members of the San Antonio Club for playing cards in public places, prominent among which are the mayor, the city attorney, the county treasurer and the clerk of the United States District Court. Judge Noonan did not discharge the grand jury, but adjourned them over until the first Monday in May."

Judge Noonan and that grand jury will command the respect of every good citizen in the State. San Antonio has won, in time past, for itself, an unenviable reputation by the bold defiance of law and the scenes of bloodshed which have been enacted in its saloons, Vaudeville Theater, and places of kindred character. The lightning time has struck the right spot. The good citizens of that beautiful city have long deplored the lawless reputation which has made it the rendezvous of reckless desperadoes. The action of Judge Noonan and the grand jury will meet their cordial support. Let the law-abiding men of Galveston and every town in Texas also demand the faithful enforcement of law, and the grand juries will not be compelled to publish our own disgrace by the indictment of men the people have placed in offices of trust.

ONLY A FEW LEFT. The publishers have a few memorandum books adapted to centennial collections, etc. They are so arranged as to contain "much in a nutshell." Every preacher should have one. Price 25c. (fifty cents). Address Shaw & Blylock.

UNPROFITABLE DISCUSSION.

Modestly we suggest that it would be well for brethren who write for the Nashville Advocate to "succumb" from the unprofitable and ill-timed discussion about the atonement, human depravity, and other theological questions. There is no real controversy among Arminians on these great and essential topics. We do not believe in that "in Adam's fall we sinned all," and yet we do all believe that in Adam's fall our race suffered a dire calamity—a "depravation, resulting from a deprivation." It is unseemly to charge Dr. Harrison with being a Pelagian because he uses a little different phraseology in describing this state from some other authors. "Sin," as Bishop Marvin says, "is an act, and not a state." A man may inherit a nature predisposed to sin without being a sinner, or without incurring guilt. So, in a certain sense, it may be said that infants are not sinners; that is, have not committed sinful acts. On this topic we venture the assertion that there is not a minister in the Southern Methodist Church, not even Dr. Harrison, or Dr. Kelley, or Dr. C. W. Miller, who does not cordially subscribe to our seventh article, which declares that man "is very far gone from original righteousness, and of his own nature inclined to evil, and that continually." Men who subscribe to this article ought not to be held up to the public as Pelagians, even though they do not use, in describing this state, the nomenclature which some of our writers have adopted from Calvinistic authors. Many Methodists cannot subscribe to the statement that a child is a sinner, and deserving punishment, until he arrives at years of accountability, personally violates the divine law, as a free moral agent.

Again; as to the atonement of Christ, we believe that he "truly suffered, was crucified, dead and buried, to reconcile his Father to us, and to be a sacrifice, not only for original guilt but also for actual sins of men."

Those who accept Christ as their Savior; who believe that he died, the just for the unjust, to bring us to God, are truly orthodox; and discussions as to the manner, or the measure of Christ's sufferings, are not profitable. Some Methodists object to the declaration that Christ, as our substitute, fulfilled all the law for us; or that he suffered all that we deserve to suffer; or that he has kept the law as to deliver us from its claims or penalties. Because brethren cannot adopt our sibboleth of orthodoxy it is ungenerous to accuse them of being Pelagians, or Socinians, or heretics of any more modern type. Do they believe that Jesus Christ is the Savior of the world, and that through him we have redemption, even the forgiveness of sins? If so, no orthodox Christian should enter into a controversy with them. Speculations on these subjects are unprofitable, especially in the pulpit. Our auditors are sinners, and need pardon. Of such Christ is a Savior; and our business is, to preach Christ crucified; though this preaching may be, to the philosophical Greeks, foolishness, and to the prejudiced Jews a stumbling block.

This is our grand centennial year. Let no discordant doctrinal note jar the ear of universal Methodism.—G. W. Briggs.

POLITICS MAKE STRANGE BED-FELLOWS. When our parents, in the garden, yielding to temptation had violated the command of their ruler, the Lord, said to the serpent, "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed, and her seed." As the result of the great transgression, "the carnal mind is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." There can be no accordance between good and evil, "for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?" A fiercer enmity rages in the hearts of unrenewed men when occasion fuses the flame of evil passions; nevertheless Moabite and Ammonite, laying aside their deep malignity toward each other, united against poor Israel; and thus also Herod and Pilate were made friends, on the same day on which Herod arrayed Christ in a gorgeous robe, and sent him again to Pilate. Whenever Christ's followers are to be persecuted, or the truth of the Bible is to be assailed, the wicked join hand in hand.

The rabbins have a proverb that, "when cat and weasel marry together, misery becomes increased."

Our homely proverb, "Politics make strange bed-fellows," is equally true.

THE GOLDEN TREASURY OF POETRY AND PROSE. I am indebted to the publishers, Messrs. N. D. Thompson & Co., of St. Louis, for a copy of this magnificent work. The matter is invaluable, being selections in prose and verse from the finest writers in our language; selections made with exquisite taste and the greatest care. Five hundred different authors, representing the entire period of our literature, are here represented; illustrated in five hundred beautiful pictures. In this incomparable volume the typographic art, and the illustrative art, and the binders' art seem to have reached their ultima thole, the point beyond which no farther improvement can be reasonably looked for. Thanks to the publishers.—H. S. T.

BRIEFMENT.

THE Gospel of Mark has been published by the government press of Japan.

A school for instruction in English is to be opened in Guatemala by the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions.

THE Baptists recently finished a neat church at Salt Lake, Utah, at a cost of $12,000, and have erected a two-story schoolhouse on the same lot.

The Bulgarian national schools in Macedonia have adopted many of the Protestant Sunday-school hymns. The gospel spreads by speech and song.

THE reports at the late Sunday-school convention at Scranton, Pennsylvania, show an increase of 1123 schools and 91,941 scholars in that State the past year.

A NEPHEW of the King of Corea, the son of the prime minister, and the son of a military mandarin have entered the Southern Methodist College at Shanghai, China.

In the catalogue of books at the British Museum the list of publications entered to the names of John and Charles Wesley occupy two hundred and forty pages.

The older churches of Amoy, China, in connection with the London Missionary Society, have begun missionary operations on their own account. The gospel has taken root and is sending its branches abroad.

THE Episcopalians of Philadelphia have forty Chinamen under instruction in their Sunday-schools. They contribute every Sunday, and are sending $30 annually to endow a bed in the hospital in Wuchang, China.

FIFTEEN years ago Sunday-schools were unknown in Denmark, and now there are about 200 with 500 teachers and 21,000 scholars. When infidelity can stop the work of the Sunday-school it may prophesy the failure of the gospel.

The net gain of the Presbyterian foreign mission churches in membership last year, was thirteen and one-fifth per cent. In the synod of China there was a net increase of twenty-three and one-half per cent. Can any church in America report as large an increase?

The habit of opium smoking has increased with such rapidity in the United States that measures for its suppression are demanded. A bill providing heavy penalties on all who import or sell the drug is before congress. The importation of the drug increased from $5,075 pounds in 1881 to 208,153 pounds in the year ending June, 1883.

The demand for the New England divorce reform is evidently increasing in strength. It was time that the civilized world was beginning to think of New England and Salt Lake at the same time. The stretch of the moral ulcer from both sections was strangely alike.

That sermon paper. I received the sermon paper. The plan is new to me, and a capital idea. The sheets need no fastening, and turn just as easily or perhaps more so than in the old plan. The larger sample will hold exceedingly full notes, or if the hand writing is small and close, an entire sermon of average length. It seems to me to meet the general want with which any sermon paper will better than I am acquainted.—G. W. Briggs.

Rev. C. Crain. We are in receipt of the following sad news: The Rev. C. Crain, one of the most useful local preachers in the Terrell District, died at his home in the Terrell District, on the 28th of March, yesterday morning. His death will be a serious blow to the church in that circuit.—R. M. Powers.

Good men are passing away. Let those who remain fill up the ranks thinned by death and press on the victories of the cross.

Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh. BY W. H. ANDERSON, D. D. The wealth of church or state is in the great names which adorn human history. Among these honored names, professed religionist, died about seventeen years of age, and early giving evidence of the zeal that characterized his life, he commenced to exhort sinners to repent. He sustained the relation of exhorter for three years, and was licensed to preach at twenty. He remained a quiet, zealous, local preacher for about ten years. At about thirty he ventured into the mercantile business with a man of experience without money. The ungrateful man ere long had all the money, while his partner, an artless, honest man that he ever was, had much experience, but was robbed of his money.

To pay the claims against the mercantile establishment, he used every means; and mostly by teaching school, succeeded in paying every farthing. After clearing himself of these embarrassments he studied medicine, and after long and careful preparation commenced to practice, and that too with wonderful success. The praying, conscientious, careful physician—how could anything but success attend his practice? In 1843 he married Miss Louisa Kid, of Parkersville, Alabama, and continued to practice his profession, and preach the gospel in Alabama up to 1846. He then moved to North Mississippi, remaining there but four months. He moved to Louisiana in the winter of 1850 and 51, and from thence to Eastern Texas in 1857.

During the fifteen years he labored in Louisiana he had one appointment twenty miles distant that he met once a month during the whole fifteen years, being compelled to make the round trip in the same day. During the revival season he was constantly at work in the pulpit and altar. In 1867, after moving to Texas he joined the itinerancy, and from that time till the day of his death, at the advanced age of nearly eighty years, was an active, faithful, diligent, and unflinchingly persevering laborer in his manner; his presence was like a glad sunbeam; he was the light and joy of the social circle. His Christianity had no asceticism in it; it was all sunshine and love, and yet humble and loving and trustful as a child. There never was any show of self-importance or of assumed dignity. The Christian gentleman impressed all with whom he associated. He was the true friend, who seemed to lay aside all selfishness in his efforts to aid others.

The pulpit was his throne, redemption his tireless theme, Jesus and the cross and eternal life the inspiring topics of his natural melting eloquence. He was a profound thinker, a close student of nature and art, of men and of books. He would often astonish you with the extent and excellence of his knowledge of natural science or of the philosophy of mind. He would take an old theme and treat from other lips, and dress it with beauty and inspire his hearers, and so attract all the hearts of novelty. His knowledge was very varied and extended, but all connected with religion and the ministry. He never wandered outside of our pure Wesleyan theology to find themes. As he loved his own loved church, he found something ever new, beautiful, grand, soul-inspiring.

In reviewing his life we find that, like John Wesley, a mother's superior intellect and devoted piety impressed themselves on the mind of her noble son, and permeated her to live long enough to see the blessed results of her early care and labors and prayers. We see the true genius of Methodism exhibited. She took this lad, and in her excellent theological school—the Lincoln in the pulpit, she trained him for more than thirty years, then made him a bishop, and rejoiced in the rich, mature fruits her distinguished son laid on her altar and on the altars of Christ.

Perhaps I overestimate him; if I do, let me as I love his true piety and pulpit ability, I have the honor of a good company. "Much people followed him and thronged him." At Sarolis alone, in company with Price and one or two others he labored for his first meeting ever held on that historic spot. Hundreds of souls were converted—the exact number will not be known—this side of "the bar."

The pastoral work was his chief delight. The employment suited his aggressive soul. He said time and again, "I am growing old, I don't want to locate, I want to die with the harness on!" and like Drs. Pierce and Summers, God answered his prayer and called him in the midst of labor. So anxious was he about his charges, that he had his steward to write me to "come at once to him." He wanted to turn his work over and make his last earthly report. God was with him and filled his sick room all the time. As a local preacher he was "not wise above that which is written," but modest, not self-conceited, not dictatorial, not envious of men of low estate, "to work where and when ever he could for the glory of God. He believed if he had true merit the world would find it out and accord him his true place. He was a man of vital piety; he loved God, prayed much and enjoyed the communion of the Spirit. He was a gentleman, urbane, scrupulously careful of the feelings of others. His moral character was spotless. But he has gone. I bless God for his acquaintance and influence. He leaves two sons, both grown and in business, men against whom there is no charge, and in many respects resembling their noble father. Miss Minnie, his only daughter, finds a home in the family of the elder brother, the glorified spirit of the wife and mother having long since gone to God. Can we not sing with much propriety, "Servant of God, well done. Rest from thy loved employ. The bright light, the victory won. Enter thy Master's joy."

Mr. J. E. Gaskell could furnish us. But this rough outline will furnish us enough to see at once that the subject of this memoir was something more than an ordinary man.

"Such rare exception shining in the dark. Prove, rather than depend on the just remark." Dr. Gaskell was remarkable for his physical endowments. Up to a few days before his death he was as agile as a boy, moving with a quick elastic step, attending with methodic care all the duties of a pastor.

In walking, riding or preaching he was as full of vital power as a man of forty years. This physical vigor was largely due to his knowledge and close observance of the laws of health. He felt that "cleanliness is next to Godliness," and was "temperate in all things." He ate sparingly and only of such things as were wholesome; used neither tobacco, coffee nor wine. Only under the most pressing circumstances did he ever even taste coffee.

Intellectually he was by nature a giant. Dr. Gaskell was born in a country, and at a time, when intellectual training was not so easily to be had as at present. Schools were scarce in that, then frontier country, and those to be had were only of the poorer class. His preaching was practical, present work being the object. Methodic, largely after the style of the fathers, logically laying down well defined propositions, and reasoning with might to just and recognized conclusions, his vocabulary was sometimes good and sometimes imperfect. Like most earnest men of God, he was largely dependent upon "the divine breath that blows" for that wonderful power he sometimes wielded in the pulpit. His friends and those who have lived in Ellis county will remember his pulpit efforts. Hundreds have heard his clarion voice as he was calling them to turn to a beckoning Savior.

Perhaps I overestimate him; if I do, let me as I love his true piety and pulpit ability, I have the honor of a good company. "Much people followed him and thronged him." rated. This is a feature of great value in the study of the Sacred Word, showing the authenticity of each book, etc., etc.

False Gods, or the Worship of Idols—Illustrated. This remarkable feature covers seventy-four pages, has one hundred and twenty-nine illustrations, and is wonderfully interesting and instructive, exhibiting by strong contrast the terrible inferiority of false religions to the true religion. Being copyrighted, it can be found in no other Bible.

Travel of the Israelites, of Christ, and of Paul, describes the pilgrimage of the Israelites from Egypt to Canaan; the journeyings of our Savior about Palestine, and the Travels of the Apostle Paul, in establishing the churches—with the aid of superior maps.

Biographies of the Inspired Writers. This is a most entertaining and instructive portion of Sacred Biography for family reading. The Bible Stories for the Young—Illustrated. A series of seventy-two very impressive illustrations of the most remarkable incidents in Bible Story, from Adam to Christ, with reference in each case to the Sacred Record.

Historical and Chronological Index. A most valuable index of events, covering over 4,000 years, from the creation to Christ.

Plates by Gustave Dore. The plates used in this Bible are from genuine copper-plate facsimiles, the originals in Paris, procured at great expense expressly for this volume. Their author, by universal consent, ranks first in the world of his art; and there are decidedly the finest set of genuine illustrations from his designs used in any Bible in America. There are many recuts and "process" copies in use, but a comparison with these superb originals exhibits at once the glaring inferiority of the former.

Great Deeds of Bible Heroes—Illustrated. A series of illustrations from the lives of prominent Heroes of Sacred Story, with explanatory and practical expositions; making a beautiful and richly instructive feature.

Its Superior Typography. The text of this Bible is printed from the latest and best copper-plate plates (made from new and improved type) and is altogether superior to the set of worn-out plates generally found in other Bibles, and is richly stored with Folio references.

Emblematic Binding. Especial study has been given, and the greatest possible care taken, to make the outer adornment in perfect keeping with the excellence of the matter within. Superior artists have been employed to produce ornaments of rare beauty—a combination of the choicest symbols of the Christian faith; emblems of the glorious truths contained in the Bible.

The Very Latest Edition. This volume has been produced later than any other edition, and it has been the aim of the publishers to avoid the defects and improve upon all the advantages of previous editions; and they confidently invite careful and critical examination, assured that it is in all respects the most attractive and valuable Bible ever offered to the public within the range of prices.

The Tabernacle and its Services, Unfolded and Illustrated. This is one of the most instructive and artistic features ever yet introduced into a Family Bible. It is designed to unfold the rich spiritual meaning of the greater of ancient types and symbols which God gave, through Moses, to fore-shadow the glorious coming and work of his Son. It is copyrighted, and can be found in no other Bible. The four beautiful chromatic plates accompanying this feature are in accordance with the measurements as dictated to Moses by Jehovah, according to the best understanding of the most competent judges. The whole feature will be found unique, interesting and instructive. As an object-lesson in these sacred symbols, it is without equal. The pictures illustrate the descriptions, together making the entire subject plain and profitable to every reader.

The Most Magnificent Artistic AND Instructive Feature. Yet Introduced into any Family Bible.

The Parables of our Lord Unfolded AND ILLUSTRATED.

This unique feature is designed to unfold the rich spiritual lessons of each of the Parables of Christ. The Lord of heaven and earth chose to teach humanity the great lessons of His kingdom through instructive pictures drawn from His earthly kingdom. He took of the natural to open up the spiritual.
