PROTECT BANK DEPOSITS

The prime function of government is to protect the life, the liberty and the possessions of its citizens. In this country a man's life is reasonably safe, his liberty is assured without question so long as he complies with the laws, and his tangible property is protected with a considerable degree of success, but in one respect we have failed badly. Although we have made laws by the score, we have never been able to give assurance to the man who puts his money in the bank that he is going to be able to get it out again. In fact millions of our citizens have recently lost billions of dollars in savings, because our banking system has failed to do the most essential thing it should do—protect its depositors.

With a view to remedying this defect in the banking system the Steagall bill to guarantee all deposits in Federal Reserve member banks has been passed by the House.

It provides for Federal Reserve member banks a guarantee fund of $17 million dollars without a Treasury appropriation.

This fund would be created out of $167,000,000 in franchise taxes paid by banks of the Reserve System; $150,000,000 from surpluses now in the hands of the banks, and an assessment of $200,000,000.

This fund would be administered by a board to be composed of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Comptroller of the Currency, and three members appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. Authority to liquidate closed banks and pay off depositors in full at any time after a bank is closed would be delegated to this board.

Upon payment of an assessment of double the amount required of member banks of the Reserve System, state banks not members of the Federal Reserve system would be permitted to contribute to, and participate in, the guarantee fund provided by the Steagall bill.

By the enactment into law of the Steagall bill, Congress will provide better protection for all depositors in banks which are members of the Federal Reserve system and encourage all state banks to become members of the Federal Reserve system.

THE NAPOLEONS OF BUSINESS

From Human Interest Editorials: Successful financial operators and industrial managers have been compared to Napoleon Bonaparte, who marched his conquering armies all over Europe, and forced mighty kings and emperors to bow humbly in the dust. Old Napoleon tried to put his foot on too many necks. He did not have feet enough to hold all those necks down.

Similarly the Napoleons of Business have had a brilliant audacity that subdued many commercial empires, for the time being. They seemed to possess super-normal powers that enabled them to sail perilous seas, and yet triumph over the billows that had overwhelmed less skillful navigators.

The winds of fortune are like the weathervane. A few favorable turns, and people think they are great men and can do anything. Then comes some howling storm they had not counted upon. The Napoleons of Business had a way of sending out overloaded ships into those storms.

People are not now looking for the Napoleons of Business. Too many folks have had experience of shipwreck under his guidance. Investors no longer beg him to take their savings at any price. When he promises wealth, they ask searching questions.

The world is tired of dashing strokes and daring chances. It is building a better future based on regular work, sure growth, prompt payment. The business hero of today is not some great Napoleonic general of trade and speculation, but the faithful and sure leader, whether he commands a great force or a little one, whose store or factory or bank is working and paying 100 cents on the dollar every day.

TRAGEDY OF DESPAIR AND PRIDE

The story from Pennsylvania of the suicide of a miner, out of work and with two motherless young children dependent upon him, who had been detected in stealing a loaf of bread from a neighbor, resulting in the issuance of a warrant for his arrest, records another of those most pitiful tragedies of despair and pride. The man evidently felt that he had reached the point where he would have to steal so that he and his little family might live. On discovery, he preferred death to the disgrace of trial on the charge.

It is easy to say that he should have gone to the public charity authorities and appealed for help; of course that would have been the sensible and proper course under the circumstances, but pride, even though it be mistaken and exaggerated, will not permit some persons to do that. Their fatal mistake is in looking upon stealing as their only way out. For such souls detection almost inevitably means death.

If the neighbor who made the information had known how it would turn out, the action, of course, would not have been taken. The pity of it is that the neighbors themselves did not know the situation and extend help.

The only lesson to be drawn is the need of such thorough investigation by welfare workers as will discover cases of this nature, and make possible provision for their relief in time.

On . . . Texas Farms

By W. H. DARROW, Extension Service

Control of intestinal worms of poultry and of coccidiosis in chicks has become almost universal on Texas farms as a result of thousands of demonstrations, the extension poultry husbandman believes. He bases it on reports from county farm and home demonstration agents, on common observation, and on the fact that the volume of inquiries on these subjects has steadily decreased for the last five years. "Worms used to cut production 25 per cent or more," he says.

Since December 1st, 384 farm wives in Collin county have been helped in some tangible way such as canning or gardening by the members of 21 home demonstration clubs.

In a Wilbarger county contest 10 home demonstration clubs reported the installation of 85 sanitary pit toilets.

From a garden 300 feet long and 150 feet wide, Ruth Guttery, a 4-H club girl of Jim Wells county sold 318 pounds of cabbage in a recent two-week period, and a bit earlier sold off 1050 tomato plants.

Forty-one home demonstration club members in Deaf Smith county recently re-modelled dresses at costs ranging from 5 to 50 cents each. The total estimated saving in one month from this sort of work was $121.20.

"Terraces has as much to do with our good crops last year as the season, because what water fell did not run off but benefited the crops," says E. L. Jones who was helped by the Kaufman county agent to terrace a 65-acre field last year. The year before the tract produced only four bales of cotton and very little feed. Last year 22 bales of cotton were gathered, 700 bushels of oats, 200 bushels of corn, and 7 tons of sorghum hay.

Are You a Well-Informed Person?

In every issue this newspaper is filled with news. And our experience is that the news which interests you most is the news which affects you most. When one of your friends has participated in a minor accident, you are more interested in that than in a major accident in another city.

Advertising, too, is news of the first importance. It affects you. It is intimate, local news addressed to you. It deals with your comforts, your pleasure and your business. It saves you time by telling you where the merchandise is. It saves you money by announcing fair prices. It is the guide to efficient spending. When you fail to read the advertisements, you do not keep up with news that is most important to you. You miss many opportunities.

The best-informed people are those who read the advertisements regularly. In fact, in this modern age, you cannot ignore the advertisements in your newspaper and still be well-informed!

Sure Fire Way to Kill Red Ants is By "Gasoline Gas"

Here is a sure-fire way to kill red ants: Early in the morning before the ants have emerged from their bed, pour a pint of gasoline down the hole. Turn a fruit jar upside down over the hole, being sure that it is securely seated. DO NOT set the gasoline afire. Then go off and forget about it. That is all. There isn't anything else to do. This remedy has been tried by Mrs. J. H. Epley, 1149 Peach street, on 25 or 30 ant beds on her property and has proved uniformly successful. It has been necessary to repeat the process once or twice on a few beds, but usually the first treatment is sufficient. The method, first used at Plainview, is successful because the heat of the sun, operating on the fruit jar, expands the gas from the gasoline and drives it into the uttermost parts of the ant bed, killing the inhabitants thereof.—Abilene Daily Reporter.

"Over The Hill" is One Film Every Person Should See

Persistent rumors filtering in from Hollywood prepared us somewhat for "Over the Hill," Fox special, which opens June 13-14 at the Texas Theatre. But no rumor could possibly have prepared us for the stupendous human greatness that has been captured for the screen. "Over The Hill," is, beyond doubt far and away the finest human drama since the advent of talkies. A complete modernized version of a classic of American poetry, it runs like music across the heart-strings. A cross-section of a growing family, it is overflowing with the full flavor of life—drama, comedy, and pathos in a perfect harmony of the human heart. James Dunn and Sally Eilers, who we had thought, hit the top in "Bad Girl," give a performance as the young lovers in this picture that will stand as a goal for a long time to come. Dunn has something close to genius in his ability to make us feel what a young man is up against in life today. And Miss Eilers is a team-mate worthy of him in every respect.

JUDGES NAMED FOR COWBOY REUNION STAMFORD IN JULY

Adjutant General W. W. Sterling of Austin has accepted an invitation to serve as one of the judges in the cowboy rodeo to be held in connection with the Texas Cowboy Reunion in Stamford July 4, 5 and 6. General Sterling has a national reputation in judging rodeo contests, having judged in Madison Square Garden, New York, Soldiers' Field, Chicago, and numerous other rodeo performances. He declined a number of other invitations in order to come to Stamford this year. The judging staff will also include Sheriff C. R. Elliott of Knox county and Frank Rhodes, Throckmorton cattleman, both of whom are experienced in appraising rodeo contests. The fourth judge is still to be secured. Two rodeo performances will be held daily during the Reunion, afternoon and night. Contests will be held in bronco-busting, calf-roping, steer riding, and wild cow milking, with over $1,200 in cash prizes offered. The champion cowboy in roping events will receive a $150 saddle. Another saddle of the same value will be awarded to the winner of the old-time cowboy's calf roping contest, which is open to cowhands over 55 years of age. The rodeo arena has been improved this year with the installation of four additional floodlights for the night performances and the laying of a water line for sprinkling the ground. Chutes and corrals also have been improved with a view of speeding up the performance. Masters Jack and Robert Odell of Abilene are spending their vacation with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Therwanger near Weinert.

Then spend your money with Confidence

For some one, every day, the biggest news is not on the front page. It's not even in the news columns.

There may be an earthquake in Italy or a revolution in Central America. There may be a hot election campaign or a million-dollar fire or a metropolitan crime wave. But for Jim Jones, who has decided to buy a new sedan, and for Mrs. Thompson, who needs some school dresses for little Mary Lou, the BIG news of the day is in the advertisements.

Even the doings of Congress and the big-league baseball results pale into significance beside the news of something you really want.

The advertising columns bring you sound information about quality, style and price. They announce new products and new developments that save time, trouble or expense for millions of people. They point out healthful habits of eating, sleeping, exercising.

Consistently advertised goods are safe goods to buy. Behind them stand the manufacturer and the merchant, guaranteeing their uniform quality. Read the advertisements before you buy.

Eastern Demand for Texas Wild Flowers Shows Steady Gain

A constantly increasing demand in the northern and eastern states for native flowers, shrubs and plants of Texas to be used for ornamental and landscaping purposes is noted in the number of reports of inspections for exportation filed with J. M. Del Curto, chief of the division of horticultural inspection and quarantines of the Department of Agriculture. The most popular of Texas native plants that are becoming more in demand in other states as ornamental flowers is the cactus, according to Del Curto. Inspection reports indicate that exports of this plant last year netted Texans more than $100,000 and that this year's exports will be as large. Many nurserymen have specialized in the cross-breeding of various species of cacti to create types suitable to various localities. The various plants can not move out of Texas into other states without first having been inspected and declared free of root rot or other soil diseases. That service is given by the horticultural inspection and quarantine division of the Department of Agriculture. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tabor, baby daughter of San Antonio, accompanied by Mrs. F. M. While 30-ton monsters lumbered over OKLAHOMA

Deep in Oklahoma lie the producing sands of the Cambrian and Ordovician Ages—in some places more than a mile below the surface. Out of these sands Sinclair takes the rich Cambro-Ordovician crude oil which it refines and blends into Sinclair Opaline Motor Oil—a product of 80 million years of Nature's mellowing and filtering treatment. In process of manufacture Sinclair Opaline is de-waxed and freed from petroleum jelly at as low as 60° F. below zero. Try a crankcaseful of Opaline—note how it lasts in the heat of hard driving.
