Surveying Work at Start Soon On Highway 16 in Knox County.

From The Benjamin Post—
According to information received here, work on the surveying of the new route of Highway 16 through Knox County will start by the first of next week. #### Fifty Years in Jones County.

From The Hamlin Herald—
The Methodists close fifty years of service in Jones county with this conference year, when J. C. Strickland was sent to Jones county in November of 1882, there was no organized Methodist congregation in the entire county. Anson and Phantom Hill were the only places that might even be called towns.

At the eleven o'clock service Sunday, November 6, in the Anson Methodist church, a tribute will be paid the pioneer ministers and their congregations. In the evening a musical program will be presented. Invitations have been sent the former pastor or their families, and a number of the pioneer membership are expected.

New Fixtures for Rochester Postoffice.

From The Rochester Reporter—
The postoffice received a complete set of new boxes and fixtures last week and work has been going on for several days getting same properly placed. It will add not only convenience to the public and the postoffice employes, but will enhance the appearance of the postoffice in a great measure. Someone remarked to Postmaster Greenwade that he would have to get a larger size hat, and he laughingly remarked that he could not help being proud of the improvements. And not only Mr. Greenwade feels proud of the additions, but the general public feels a pride in the postoffice changes. Rochester can boast of as nice and convenient a postoffice as any town even twice its size. And with the splendid service rendered by Mr. Greenwade and his assistants, we are to be congratulated.

SPORTS

Tomorrow is football day! The most humble high school teams as well as the leading universities of the United States will be out on the field doing their best to win for the old Alma Mater! Good games will be played both during the morning and afternoon—with the high school boys going on the stage first in most instances.

Haskell High meets its first strong opponent in its conference, and from all indications it is going to be a jam up good game. Hamlin has a much stronger team than it usually boasts while Haskell has one that can be branded neither strong or weak. The game is called at 10 o'clock, so everyone be there on time as that is the time the boys go on the field. This game promises to be the best B class high school game in a radius of a hundred miles—and there will be plenty of fans on hand from Stamford, Anson and other surrounding towns. The two towns named should be here strong as this game will be the deciding one for the champions of this district. A win for Hamlin would almost give the championship to Stamford, who beat Hamlin last week 7-0. We must win this game! By doing so we have only Stamford to beat, and the Bulldogs aren't going to luck out on us this year as they have in the two preceding seasons.

Let's back the boys a hundred per cent tomorrow as they will need encouragement. And did you know that the football season will soon be over? Tomorrow we will have football for lunch and football for dinner, so let's get a big lunch by holding the Indians scalp the pale-faces from Hamlin.

Folks your sport writer is picking Hamlin to win—so that makes Haskell a winner sure as I have not picked a winner this fall—have I?

We all know the line up so there is no use naming the boys who will play. It will be worth the price of admission to see the least man on the team tear into that Hamlin line. By watching Gholson tomorrow you will get a good idea of what happened to Goliath when he jumped on David. Yes, folks, Marvin is a little small—but he is a little tough, too!

As an added inducement for the boys to do their best in tomorrow's game, Server Leon, manager of the Texas Theatre has promised the boys and all members of the pep squad a free pass to the Texas Theatre tomorrow night if they win the game from Hamlin.

Three Haskell County students are enrolled this fall in John Tarleton Agricultural College: L. W. Jones, Jr., Jimmie Eaton, and Bert Davis, all of Rule.

Farm Taxes Highest In 1929 in West South Central States

Farm taxes per acre in the West South Central States—Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas, and Louisiana—were from 98 per cent to 196 per cent higher in 1930 than in 1913, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, reporting the results of a survey.

An increase of 161 per cent for the four States combined is the largest regional increase thus far recorded by the bureau in a series of reports covering five geographic divisions. Actual taxes, in cents per acre, however, were much less in these States in 1930 than in any other region for which reports have been issued.

Corresponding figures for Mississippi, also available, show greater increases than those for any of the four West South Central States. Average Mississippi farm real estate taxes were 16 cents an acre in 1913; by 1920 they had risen to 50 cents. There were downward movements between 1920 and 1921, between 1924 and 1926 and between 1929 and 1930, but the general movement for the decade of the twenties was sharply upward. In 1929, the tax per acre stood at 67 cents, and in 1930 was down to 64 cents, at which figure it was 294 per cent more than in 1913.

The record for Louisiana shows an advance from 18 cents an acre in 1913 to 55 cents in 1920, and a fluctuating movement thereafter between 47 cents in 1922 and 58 cents in 1929. The tax was 57 cents an acre in 1930, or 228 per cent more than in 1913.

In Texas, the average tax was 8 cents an acre in 1913 and climbed steadily upward to 23 cents an acre by 1930—an increase of 196 per cent as compared with taxes in 1913.

Farm taxes in Oklahoma were 20 cents an acre in 1913; they dropped to 17 cents in 1914, and fluctuated between 21 cents and 25 cents for the next four years. By 1923, they had climbed to 44 cents, and moved irregularly between 30 cents and 47 cents for the remainder of the period. At 47 cents in 1930, taxes were 131 per cent higher than in 1913.

Arkansas experienced a rise from 16 cents an acre in 1913 to 36 cents in 1922, a decrease thereafter to 25 cents in 1926, and a rise to 32 cents in 1929 and 1930, at which figure taxes were 98 per cent more than in 1913.

The bureau has previously reported increases in farm taxes per acre in 1930 as compared with 1913 as follows: Pacific Coast States, 155 per cent; West North Central States, 151 per cent; New England States, 150 per cent; and East North Central States, 140 per cent.

Five Students from Haskell County Attending C. I. A.

Five students from Haskell county are among the 1180 students registered for the fall term at the Texas State College for Women (C.I.A.). The enrollment for this year represents 168 counties from every section of Texas, eleven states and three foreign countries.

REALISM IN "THE NIGHT MAYOR" COST PRODUCER DOUGH

Did you ever know that a movie company subjects itself to a possible damage suit if it photographs crowds at a baseball game, a prize-fight or some other public gathering?

Well, it's a fact. Which explains why Columbia was obliged to spend several thousand dollars getting scenes showing Lee Tracy at a prize fight, a baseball game and at the unveiling of a monument for his latest picture, "The Night Mayor," showing at the Texas Theatre on Oct. 13-14.

The scenes occupy only a small amount of footage on the screen, but they are vitally important in the story and for that reason it was necessary for the studio to build a regulation size prize ring and to engage two fighters as well as several hundred extras, also to hire a similar crowd of extras and transport them to Wrigley Field early in the morning and then to use them once again for the unveiling of a statue.

JUNGLE THRILLER OPENING AT TEXAS SOON

With the first episode showing at the Texas on November 12, theatre goers will have the opportunity of seeing the most spectacular Wild Animal Thriller in Years—"Jungle Mystery"—with Tom Tyler, Noah Beery, Jr., William Desmond, and Cecilia Parker.

EDWARD G. ROBINSON COMING TO TEXAS IN FIRST FILM LOVE STORY

Additional evidence of the versatility of Edward G. Robinson, as a master delineator of human types is provided in his latest starring vehicle for First National Pictures, "Two Seconds," which comes to the Texas Theatre Thursday 11 p. m., and Friday Nov. 11.

In previous film roles Robinson has appeared as gunman, gambler, editor and oriental. He has always been a stone-hearted man, dominating men and events with an inflexible will and daring which carried all before it. In "Two Seconds," however, he portrays John Allen, a hard working iron worker who is a victim of circumstances.

Financially speaking, the wages of sin generally go to the attorneys for the defense.

DAANGEROUS DRIVING MONTHS

The fall and winter months are the most dangerous of the year for automobile driving.

Rain, snow, sleet, hail and ice; early darkness, haste to reach home and escape the cold, tightly closed cars and low visibility, all contribute to the hazards.

Skidding is a chief danger of cold weather driving. The motorist must confront not only a visible wet or icy surface, but one hidden under a bed of fallen leaves or snow.

Last year 1,740 persons were killed and 51,720 injured in 44,510 accidents due to skidding cars.

"The automobilist cannot carry the driving practises of the late spring and summer over to the fall and winter without running a great risk of accident," says Maxwell Halsey, Traffic Engineer of the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters. "Conditions become vastly different in the winter months, and the drivers must take them into consideration." Mr. Halsey lays down certain rules for the dangerous driving months.

"Have your car thoroughly inspected for any mechanical defects that may have developed during the summer.

Be especially sure your brakes are effective; be sure your tires are in first class condition, also your lights and windshield wiper.

"Cut down on your summer speed.

"Allow for early darkness and for decreased visibility.

"If you find your car going into a skid, do not jam on the brakes."

Available statistics indicate that automobile fatalities in the United States decreased about 12 per cent the first seven months of the year. If that record were to be maintained up to, and including December 31, it would mean that the number of human lives taken by motor cars during the year would fall below 30,000 for the first time since 1928. However, the supreme test is now being applied. Every agency nowadays is endeavoring to bring about a reduction in automobile insurance rates. A winter driver should realize that he can contribute most to the success of this movement by the kind of driving which will decrease the number of accidents.

Under the most perfect conditions, the driver of an automobile should exercise extreme care, and when the bad days come, that care should be stretched to the utmost.

THE PARABLE OF THE TALENTS

The man who "went and hid his talent in the earth," and thereby became history's most familiar example of unfaithfulness and folly, must have lived in times like our own. His country, we take it, was emerging from one of those depressions which, off and on, have visited every people under the sun since business began. So fearful he was, that he fell into worse trouble than that he was trying to avoid, and tragically missed his life's greatest opportunity. Entrusted with a certain amount of cash, he hoarded it instead of using it. He could have bought the best of goods at bargain prices; he could have made investments, more advantageous than any which had been or ever again would be in his day; he could have done his part toward providing jobs for hungry men, toward quickening sluggish streams of trade, toward restoring confidence and prosperity. But he was afraid, "and went and hid his talent in the earth," wherefore, as a matter of economic and social justice it was taken from him, and given to those who had the courage, the loyalty and the enterprise to use it.

The old parable is now strikingly new. Its truth rings afresh in the following lines from a current advertisement: "Don't say you can't help. Don't say you're too little to help cure a big national crisis. You can help. Have you hidden your money away, buried it in the ground, put it in a sock, locked it up in safety vault? Then bring it out, if you want to help this depression. You'll help your state and your nation and your fellow man. And you'll help yourself. Every dollar you put back into use helps. It helps make a market for the things you grow. And it helps you. Your money is worth more now, in terms of what it will buy, than it's been in many, many years. There is a feast of bargains spread out before you. . . . Prices will go up. The value of your money in terms of what it will buy will shrink. It will shrivel, if it remains hoarded. Bring it into the sunlight. Let it sprout and grow you a new crop of dollars. Not in wild speculation, not in wildcat schemes. No need to lose it that way. The best securities, the best lands, the best investments of all kinds are waiting for you on the bargain table. Did you know that the biggest fortunes were not founded in periods of prosperity? They were founded in times of adversity like these, by men who had cash—and courage."

Those words are worth every man's pondering. They are words of common sense as well as common patriotism. They are approved by all ages of the past, and they will be verified by history now in the making. Who hides his talent today will find himself, at last, shamed and empty-handed; who uses it will be numbered among the fortunate, the faithful and the good.—Atlanta, Ga., Journal.

Someone connected with an Iowa newspaper probably found it expedient to hide out after the following paragraph appeared in an account of the Ladies' Aid Society meeting: "Following the musical program, Mrs. J. T. Miller read an article on 'Personal Devils.' Seventeen were present."

It Sure Am

Washington afternoon bridge groups are circulating the story of a local dowager who brought a "green" colored girl from the South to help look after the household duties. The mistress had great difficulty in instructing Beulah to answer the telephone. One day while the Tuesday afternoon foursome was in session the phone rang. Beulah answered it.

"Yessum, yessum, yessum," the bridges heard her say. Then, finally, "It sure am." Whereupon the maid hung up.

"Who was it, Beulah?" the matron asked.

"Deed Ah don't know, ma'am," that worthy answered.

"But you answered something," the mistress insisted.

"Yes, ma'am," acknowledged the maid, explaining: "A lady done say it's a long distance from Chicago, so I politely agrees."

A patient who complained of digestive troubles was told by a specialist that he was drinking too much.

"Well," said the patient, "what am I to tell the wife?"

The doctor thought for a few minutes and then said: "Tell her you are suffering from syncopepation."

"What is syncopepation?" asked the wife.

"I don't know," said the husband, "but that is what he said."

When her husband had gone out the wife looked up the word in the dictionary and found it meant "irregular movement from bar to bar."

While Nature created frightfulness in PENNSYLVANIA

UP from the buried sands of the Devonian Age, formed millions of years before even these frightful monsters lived, comes the Bradford-Allegheny crude oil of the Pennsylvania District—the crude which Sinclair refines into Sinclair Pennsylvania Motor Oil. Bradford-Allegheny crude is Pennsylvania's costliest crude. The extra price which Sinclair must pay for every barrel of Bradford-Allegheny crude results from its remarkable lubricating quality—a quality which was established by the perfect oil-forming conditions in the Devonian Age, enhanced by a hundred million years of filtering and mellowing. Ask to have your oil changed to Sinclair Pennsylvania—the year-round Pennsylvania grade motor oil, de-waxed and freed from petroleum jelly at as low as 60° F. below zero.

The above scene is a graphic representation of the homes of two housewives—just before guests arrive for the evening meal. The woman at the left has been working in a hot kitchen all afternoon . . . nothing has gone off well . . . she is nervous, tired, irritable . . . and looks it. But the modern home-manager at the right is cool, fresh, lovely and unhurried. She has been away from home all afternoon, yet is ready to take a delicious, savory and attractive meal from her oven. Her meal will be an unqualified success . . . the success of the other housewife's dinner-party is extremely doubtful.

The difference is that the modern home-manager, at the right, has an Electric Range. . . The other housewife still cooks by old-fashioned methods!

You, too, should profit by the many advantages and superiorities of modern Electric Cookery. With one of the new General Electric Hotpoint Ranges in your kitchen you'll save money, work, time and food. You'll serve better, more beautiful and more attractive meals. You'll be happy, cheerful and energetic. Take advantage of special prices and terms . . . TODAY! See one of our salesmen NOW. He will be glad to tell you the interesting and valuable story of Electric Cookery. There's no obligation, of course.

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule . . . and adds only a small amount to your total bill?

Arthur Hughes Is Given Promotion by Phillips Company

The following article written by N. D. Bartlett, oil editor of the Amarillo News-Globe, recently appeared in that publication regarding the promotion of Arthur M. Hughes, son of Mr. S. A. Hughes of this city, to regional manager of the marketing department of the Phillips Petroleum Company:

"Arthur M. Hughes has been made regional manager of the marketing department of the Phillips Petroleum Company for the Tulsa, Wichita, Kansas and Amarillo divisions comprising the states of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Colorado and New Mexico. He will start his new duties within a few days, moving his family to Bartlesville where he will be stationed.

"Art Hughes, as he is familiarly known to his legion of friends in this territory is being given a well earned promotion with the company he has so faithfully served for the past four years. These friends will have two sensations when they hear of his leaving Amarillo, one of pleasure and well wishing for his promotion and one of regret for his loss to the community.

"Mr. Hughes joined the Phillips family in February 1928 just after that company had decided to enter the retail marketing field. This decision was reached as the result of the success of four experimental service stations established in November and December of 1927 in Topeka, Salina and Wichita, Kan., and Bartlesville, Okla. He was put in charge of the Amarillo division and opened the first bulk station for the company in Amarillo in March 1928 and the first retail station in Amarillo the same month at Twenty-second and Washington Street. The opening day the station serviced 1,886 automobiles and sold 10,260 gallons of Phillips 66 gasoline. Since that time Mr. Hughes has established in his territory 102 bulk stations and 106 retail service stations. He now has 600 people on his pay roll.

"After all there, will be something of Art left in Amarillo as his successor here will be a young man who is making a name for himself in this department of the oil industry and who has had years of training under Mr. Hughes as his assistant. He is M. O. Stark whom Mr. Hughes brought here with him from Fort Worth."

State Capitol Guardian Reminiscence

By LOUIE H. HERBERT
Houston, Texas.

(Copyright, 1932, by the Home Color Print Co.)

UNDER the lofty dome of the State Capitol, in Austin, sits an old gray-haired man, wearing a watchman's badge. His name is C. M. Fields and his job is to protect the property of the State of Texas, to see that tourists who climb the long stairway leading to the dome of the State Capitol do not mar or disfigure this part of the building. Many persons like to gather souvenirs and, while doing so, some of them will go as far as to cut pieces of wood from the dome's interior. Hence the necessity of maintaining a watchman to protect the dome.

Mr. Fields came to Texas with his parents from their Tennessee home in 1852. After a brief visit with relatives in Austin the family settled just over the line in Williamson County.

During the Civil War, Mr. Fields then a lad of sixteen, enlisted as a Texas ranger in MacCoy's Company and spent this unsettled period in protecting the people of Central Texas from the ravages of Indians.

"There wasn't so much to do," he said. "We just rode around, mostly, chasing the Indians away from the settlements and skirmishing with them now and then. I remember one time, however, up near the head of Gabriel Creek, in Burnett county, we did have a pretty lively set-to with the Indians. As we were riding along through the brush and rocks a gun was fired just ahead of us. We looked up in time to see a whole passel of Indians coming 'hell-bent' for us. We jumped off our horses and scattered out among the rocks in a hurry and began to shoot back. This sort of discouraged the Indians who, seeing their surprise didn't work, withdrew several hundred yards.

War Paint and Feathers

"They surely were an ugly, though funny sight, all dressed up in feathers, war paint and grease. But when they began trying to crawl up on us the paint and feathers were a big help in sighting our rifles. I reckon there must have been about a hundred of them and maybe twenty-five of us, and we didn't let them get too close. They came sneaking through brush, with the chief in the lead, but just about as fast as they showed themselves they got hurt. That is, all but the chief. He had some mighty pretty feathers on him and one of our boys wanted them for the girl he was courting, therefore we weren't going to kill the chief until he was so close that he could not be rescued by his warriors when killed.

"These Indians kept on sneaking toward us and we kept on shooting at them, killing a few now and then, until finally the chief crawled up to a small log right in front of several of our boys and lay there hollering. We didn't want to take any chances on missing him, so we let him holler until he got kind of rash and showed more of himself. Then we all took a shot, and he was about the dearest Indian you ever saw.

That Ended the Fight

"The fight ended right there, and soon there wasn't any Indians to be seen anywhere. We collected the dead chief's feathered headgear, buried him under some rocks and rode on to camp for the night.

"When would Indians attack? Well, an Indian would seldom attack except in the light of the moon. No, I don't mean they wouldn't attack in the day time but preferred that period when the moon was light. Another funny thing, they always tried to recover the bodies of their dead. About the time they decided to quit fighting several of them would sneak around quietly, collect and carry away their dead. While they were doing this the rest of the Indians would make an awful noise and feign a new attack in order to distract your attention. They weren't as brave as most people think, either, and they always wanted to fight in the open. One ranger could run into a thicket with a rifle and keep off twenty-five Indians.

They weren't going in that thicket after him. Not on your life!"

Austin a Village

After the trying period of the Civil War, Mr. Fields returned to Austin, which he described as, "sort of small like." "It wasn't much of a town," he said. "Fact is, it wasn't even much of a village. All out where the State Capitol and the University are now weren't anything but brush. We didn't have brick or stone houses in those days—just a lot of small log-cabins, scattered about with a few stores here and there. Austin was plenty lively.

"We looked up in time to see a whole passel of Indians coming 'hell-bent' for us" however, especially on week-ends when all the people for miles around would drive in to do their buying and visiting. Practically all folks were honest and friendly. Occasionally, when some bad man would ride into town, the men folks just got together and told him he wasn't wanted. With this warning he always left town mighty quick. It wasn't at all like it is today with hijackers and gangsters everywhere.

"I didn't stay in Austin very long. It was just after the war between the States and things were too trying with all those carpetbaggers promising niggers forty acres of land and a mule each, so I just went on down to the ranch where ma and pa were.

"Texas was a poor man's country in early days, son. Why, when we first came to Texas we bought our place of 200 acres for $400.00 and half of the 200 acres was cleared, with a good comfortable house upon it.

"Everybody in the South, including Texas, raised their own food stuffs at home. We got our eggs from the chickens in our backyard, hogs were raised by the thousands and we cured our own ham and bacon; we raised wheat and the local miller ground it into flour in exchange for whatever goods we happened to have to offer him.

"All of our clothes were made at home. The cloth was woven at home by the women folks and they cut it and made it into garments for us. Everybody in Texas, the poor and the rich, wore only home-spun clothes, and at that time there were very few rich folks. I still remember the first suit of clothes my mother ever made for me. It was of fine homespun and I was prouder of that suit than any suit I have ever worn since. "Styles were in vogue even in those days. The women wore long full dresses with tight bodices," and the men "long narrow pants, large bow ties, long frock coats, broad brimmed black felt hats, and guns."

Mr. Fields remained on the ranch with his parents until 1869, but, tired of staying in one place, he hired out to the Cottle Brothers, one of the big cattle buying and shipping companies of that day. While in the employ of this company he made several trips up the old Chisolm Trail with company herds. "We sure had lots of fun on those trips," he said, "but there was lots of work, too. We'd usually started buying and collecting our herd just at the first of spring and would be as soon as the grass was good, around the middle or end of May.

Just Grazed the Cattle Along

"Our herds weren't so large and didn't have much trouble on the trail. We usually took from 2,000 to 4,000 head to a herd. We were never in a hurry and we'd just graze the cattle along, usually making about ten or twelve miles a day. Sometimes we start off with the herd poor and all of condition, but when we arrived in Kansas the cattle were always fat and sleek looking. Prime stock they were and they brought prime prices.

"We always went north, crossing through the old Indian Territory, to Oklahoma, and went on up to Kansas taking about five or six months for a trip. Indian Territory was full of Indians. They didn't give us much trouble but they sure got lots of free meat. A bunch of Indians used to ride up to the herd and ask for a steer, and we know if we didn't give it to them they would probably steal it, so we just told them to ride into the herd and help themselves. They always took the best steer they could find, and after it was out of the herd would cut the steer and be gone with the meat in a jiffy.

Wild and Woolly Town

"I've clean forgotten the name of the town to which we drove one herd. It was some little cow town out in Western Kansas, wild and woolly, made up of gambling dens and saloons. We'd come in after three long months on the road and the little town, with all its wildness and lawlessness, looked better to us than any city. You see, we had wait around until they shipped the cattle to Chicago and returned with the money; that took some little time. It was sure worth the wait, though. The cattle, selling for $10 and less down in Texas, brought $40 and $50 per head in Chicago.

Mr. Fields made five or six trips up the old Chisolm Trail, but when railroad roads came to Texas he quit that work and went back to his ranch and farmed in Williamson county.

"It was lots of fun while it lasted," he said, "but I didn't want to spend my life on a cow trail. Texas was settling up real fast, so I went on home and settled down."

Again the Tariff Becomes a Dominant Issue

By CHARLES MERZ
(New York Times.)

FOR the first time in twenty years, the tariff is a dominant issue in a Presidential election. Prohibition, national defense, regulation of utilities, questions of taxation, cooperation for world peace—all these are overshadowed at the moment by an issue which has not achieved such eminence since Woodrow Wilson made his campaign in 1912 on a platform calling for repudiation of protective tariff as unjust, un-economic and unconstitutional.

Governor Roosevelt invades the West, denounces the Republican record on the tariff as a series of costly blunders, and insists that "no substantial progress toward recovery from the depression, either here or abroad, can be had without forthright recognition of these errors."

President Hoover replies that the Republican tariff is an indispensable bulwark against foreign competition which would drive domestic prices to still lower prices and throw more millions out of work. "There has never been a time in the history of the United States when tariff protection was more essential to the welfare of the American people," says the President.

Into this controversy leap Senators, Governors and Cabinet officials, elaborating the charges of their party leaders, debating the consequences for American trade of the British Empire tariffs announced last week in London and Ottawa, and supporting irreconcilable conclusions with columns of conflicting figures.

It is at least agreed, by spokesmen of both parties, that the issue raised is broad enough to blanket a long list of related questions; that, in the words of the Democratic candidate, "there is can not now successfully compete with foreign producers." For this purpose Congress was called to meet in special session early in the new administration. To it the President recommended, on April 16, 1929, that "some limited changes" be made in existing duties. He

For nearly fourteen months Congress wrangled and bartered over the 3,500 items on which duties were imposed under existing laws. A bill was finally adopted increasing rates in 890 cases and decreasing them in 235. The most important changes were made in 1930 show the following estimates of the average ad valorem duties in the new bill compared with those in the preceding tariffs:

Hawley-Smoot act of 1930	41%
Fordney act (Republican) of 1922	38%
Underwood act (Democratic) of 1913	25%
Payne act (Republican) of 1909	40%
Dingley act (Republican) of 1897	46%
Wilson act (Democratic) of 1894	41%
McKinley act (Republican) of 1890	48%

These figures suggest that the new tariff was somewhat higher than its immediate predecessor and much higher than the Democratic act of 1913, but lower than the Dingley and McKinley acts of 1897 and 1890. Such figures, however, must be read with caution by those who are not satisfied with political oratory on either side. Radical changes have taken place in the character of American imports during recent years, thereby changing the significance of "average" rates. Moreover shifts of items from the free to the dutiable list, and vice versa, make comparisons of schedules in different laws misleading.

It is still more difficult to answer categorically the question whether the Hawley-Smoot tariff is higher than that of any other nation at the present time. Difficult enough to decide at best, considering the wide range of protective methods used in different countries, this question is complicated by the prevalence of "quota systems" and other similar devices to restrict trade. It is pertinent to note, however, that (Continued on Page 6, Column 1) scarcely a major problem in our national life—agriculture, industry and labor, merchant marine, international debt and even disarmament—that does not involve the tariff."

The Present Tariff

The storm center of the controversy is the present tariff law—the Hawley-Smoot act of 1930. This measure had its origin in a campaign pledge made in the last Presidential election.

Reaffirming its faith in a high tariff, the Republican party then promised additional protection for farm products and also for "certain industries which believed no general revision to be necessary. "It is not as if we were setting up a new basis of protective duties. We did that seven years ago."

As affairs fell out, Congress proceeded immediately and effectively to ignore this counsel. Even before a new bill was reported to the House of Representatives, plans for "limited" revision were discarded. Log-rolling made its familiar appearance in both Houses. Members from different sections of the country traded votes in order to obtain higher duties on goods produced in their localities. Democrats as well as Republicans took a hand in this procedure.

the agricultural schedule, but increases were also made in the schedules covering imports of wool and manufactures, sugar, tobacco, silk goods, chemicals, metals, wood manufactures, paper, earthenware and glass.

The change is now made by Democratic spokesmen, and vigorously disputed by Republicans, that the changes thus adopted, at the end of a long and quarrelsome debate, gave the country the highest tariff in its history and the highest tariff of any nation in the world.

On the first of these points, figures prepared by the Tariff Commission in

A Frog Farm—New Industry of the Southwest

(Copyright, 1932, by the Home Color Print Co.)

LD Polecat Creek, that drains a major portion of Creek county, has been famous for the origin of many things, from orchestras to frog farms, says Ed Roberts, county farm agent of Creek county. The original Catfish string band of old Polecat reached national fame by the way of the radio, and by appearing before national gatherings. Now something of a more unique nature has been added to the creek's fame. It is the Sapulpa Frog farm which was recently established by F. A. Gaasch and his father-in-law, H. L. Bush. The farm is situated one and a half miles southwest of Sapulpa.

Gaasch, the owner, for many years has followed the oil industry as has his partner, H. L. Bush. In recent years they constructed a modern rural home adjoining the frog farm. Gaasch conceived the idea of starting a frog farm on a medium-sized scale in addition to his other farming activities. So two years ago he sent to Vancouver, Washington, for ten pair of Mammoth Jumbo bull frogs.

30,000 Frogs

His farm is of the sandy hillside type. A spring on the side of a hill, not far from his home, supplies the water. Terraces were built in such a way that water from the spring would flow into and form a pond at the base of the hill.

The frog propagation pond is fenced in by small meshed poultry wire and galvanized tin, making a frog-proof fence.

Fresh water is available at all times from the running spring above. A drain pipe has been arranged to take care of overflow. The frogs are contented and doing well, said Gaasch. He estimates his frog crop at 30,000. The yearling bullfrogs are larger than a man's fist.

Gaasch, who knows frogs, told the writer that frogs must be four years old before they can produce off-springs, and are marketable at two years of age. They will eat almost anything.

The field surrounding the pond is alive with grasshoppers. The frogs have a happy time feasting off these hoppers, and off the crawfish which hibernate in the pond. Frogs are discriminating, and absolutely refuse to eat dead hoppers or dead crawfish. Their food must be alive—and plenty of it.

Three Different Hatches One Season

Frogs spawn as late as July. They usually lay about three different hatches of eggs during the season. The female frog mates with a male frog and lays a spawn of eggs. She will then mate with another male and lay another spawn of eggs, so continuing throughout the season. The eggs hatch into tadpoles, the tails of which disappear by absorption in the fall and late summer.

Some markets in the middle western cities have quoted frogs at $5 per dozen. Frog legs are highly prized by many epicureans.

A light has been constructed on the edge of the pond which attracts bugs and insects. Many of these fall into the water, furnishing more food for Mr. Frog. Small pieces of blackjack brush have been thrown into the water to provide places for the frogs to lay their eggs.

On the east and west sides of the pond rocky recesses have been provided, where the frogs can rest in coolness and comfort.

Recently a group of 75 farmers visited the frog farm under supervision of the county farm agent. It has attracted wide attention, and letters of inquiry have been received all the way from Minnesota to Texas. Many persons have traveled hundreds of miles to view the unique layout.

COLLECTION OF CIRCUS RELICS
 A collection of circus posters, programs, heralds and other items, as well as their prized possessions, was nearly gathered in Philadelphia, where George Washington was living at the time, the poster is a line that "The President will honor the company."

The collection shows that the circus poster artists means the equals of the great artists in the glories of the circus. Few thrillers adorned the posters in the early days, and they were used to be compared to the flaming posters which herald the coming of the circus, marvelous and before which the country was captured. The flamboyance and wealth of advertisement used to tell of the great exhibition to have been by the greatest of men, Phineas T. Barnum, including letters to him by Schuyler Van Rensselaer, Vice President of the States, General Winfield Scott and Rev. T. DeWitt. The letter to Scott asks for one of his well-worn hats, and by Mr. Barnum in one of the hats of one of the world's most famous men. A new hat was exchanged for the old one.

GUBERNATORIAL CONTEST
 The close race in the primary for Governor led many to say, the papers to print, was the closest race in the history of the state, but this was not so. It was indeed a very close race, the difference in the cast for Miram A. Sterling being only 100, though nearly 1,000 votes were polled, but there were closer races in high office in Texas. The close races were: T. Wood, elected over his opponent by a majority of 2,048 votes.

Bell, elected by a margin of 1555 votes in 1849. The closest race for the Governor of Texas was in 1845. There were three races that year, and a vote elected. F. R. received 21,864 votes, Clark 21,730, and T. Wood 13,759. In spite of the closeness of the vote, nothing on record to that there was a contest in the courts. Lubbock's over Clark was 124.

Sam Houston served out the term which Sam Houston had served, Houston having followed the session of Texas from the Union.

RELICS EXHIBITED AT WICHITA FALLS
 Interesting relics of the days were on exhibition in a museum at the Anniversary Celebration at Wichita Falls, which celebrated in the latter part of September.

That attracted much attention was a castron button used by Vasquez de Coronado in 1536 when he made his second exploration in North America. A picture of Quahua Park, a picture used by Daniel Boone in surveying the route to Abraham Lincoln's gavel, fashioned by the minut logs cut in the woods and used in the battle of Shiloh. The relic was shown. The relic was the pioneer hat worn by the first settler in the territory.

A SALT LAKE IN TEXAS
 An Edinburg correspondent of a Houston paper gives the following account of a salt lake in Texas:
 "A lake with crystal bottom, which for 106 years has furnished the salt for inhabitants of Texas and northern Mexico, is located on the Texas side of the Rio Grande between Edinburg and Raymondville, and is still being 'mined' by residents of that section. No matter how much salt is taken out of the lake, the supply apparently remains inexhaustible, more crystals forming to replace those hauled away. In this the lake may be likened to the remarkable salt spring of China, from which however, the salt can only be obtained from evaporating the water."
 "Spades are used to loosen the rock from the bottom of the shallow Texas lake, where it hardens into crystals as large as the end of a man's finger. The lake floor is so firmly paved with salt that five-ton trucks may drive out into its center, load to capacity and drive out again safely. The brine, however, corrodes the truck wheels and their rubber tires."
 "Ordinarily the salt is spaded up into scows, pounded with great wooden mallets, washed by throwing buckets of the clear lake water over it, pulled into shore and then loaded on trucks. It is sold in this State to manufacturers of ice cream and other similar products."
 "Covering between 200 and 300 acres, surrounded by wide, salty sand beaches and fringed with mesquite, the lake has been known for over one hundred years as La Sal del Rey. It is so called because the Spanish people for years paid a tax to the King of Spain for carting the salt out. The lake is not fed by mineral springs. It is located fifty miles from the nearest gulf waters. The source of the salt deposits is undetermined. Red Fish Bay, which is the nearest body of water to the lake, is noted for its exceedingly heavy salt content, but no crystalline salt is found on the floor of this bay, nor is any attempt made to procure commercial salt there."
 "Great curative powers are credited to the water, especially for skin disease, and many bottles of the water are carried away to be used medicinally."
 "A cup of the lake water will yield half a cup of salt when boiled. Waders in the lake find that salt creeps up to their knees in powdery form, even though they do not enter the water above their ankles."

STATES GIVEN FULL AUTHORITY IN REDISTRICTING
 When the Legislature of Texas takes up the work of redistricting the State congressionally at the coming January term, it can do so with the knowledge that it has full authority in the matter, entirely independent of the Federal government.
 Some question had arisen as the Federal government's right to interfere, provided the districts were not compact and contiguous, containing as nearly as possible an equal number of inhabitants, but a recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States gave unrestricted freedom to the States in the matter of shaping their congressional districts.
 The Supreme Court decision was in a Mississippi case. The high tribunal upheld the redistricting in Mississippi and declared regulations imposed in the Federal reapportionment act of 1911 were no longer in force under the reapportionment act of 1929 the representation of Mississippi in the House was reduced by Congress from eight to seven members. In 1922 the Mississippi Legislature redistricted the State by combining the old Seventh and Eighth districts into a new Seventh, leaving the other districts unchanged. This was unsatisfactory to some of the members of the State and the question was carried to the Supreme Court of the United States for final decision. The State of Texas is expected to be represented in the next congressional session of the United States which will convene in 1931.

The Mother o' Pearl
 "You're looking bad, old man," said an acquaintance to Browne. "What's the trouble?"
 "Domestic," answered Browne.
 "But you always said that your wife was a pearl," remarked the friend.
 "So she is," returned Browne sorrowfully. "It's the mother o' pearl that's the trouble."

Tommy Knew
 The teacher had asked Tommy to spell "responsibility," which he did.
 "Now, can you tell me the meaning of that big word, Tommy?" she asked.
 "Yes'm," replied Tommy. "If I had only four buttons on my trousers and two would come off all the responsibility would hang on the other two buttons."

What Bobby Sang
 Mother—"Bobby, did you do anything besides eat at the school picnic?"
 Bobby—"Yes, Mummie, we sang a hymn called, 'We Can Sing, Full Though We Be.'" Inquiries revealed that the title of the hymn was, "Weak and Sinful Though We Be."

A chinese newspaper contains this letter from an applicant for work: "Sir: I am Wang . . . I can drive a typewriter with good noise and my English is great . . . My last jab has left itself for me, for the good reason that the large man has dead. It was of no fault of mine. So, honorable sirs, what about it? If I can be of big use to you, I will arrive on some date that you shall guess."

Some Jump
 An Irishman, who had been in Alaska told the following story:
 "I landed me boat on an island. I went ashore and when I got up to about the middle of the island I met the biggest bear I ever see in my life."
 "There was one tree on the island and I made for that tree. The nearest limb was a big one which was about twenty feet from the ground, and I jumped for it."
 "Somebody listening to the story said, 'Did you make it?'"
 The Irishman replied, "I didn't make it going up but I caught it coming down."

The End of a Perfect Clock
 It was about bedtime, so Enoch Perkins started to wind the clock while his wife was fastening the windows.
 Suddenly his wife jumped at the sound of a crash which came from the kitchen. She hurried there and found the clock in pieces on the floor.
 "Enoch," she said, "What have you done?"
 "Maria," he said, "I have smashed that clock to smithereens."
 She said, "Enoch, you ought to be ashamed of yourself. Why did you smash that fine old reliable clock that we have had with us for the thirty-two years of our married life?"
 He said, "Dammit Maria, for thirty-two years I have wound that clock every single night. I have just discovered that it is an eight-day clock."

Commas Are Important
 A pupil was having trouble with punctuation and was being called down by the teacher.
 "Never mind, sonny," said the visiting school board president, consolingly, "It's foolish to bother about commas. They don't amount to much anyway."
 "Elizabeth Ann," said the teacher quietly, to a small girl in the class, "please write this sentence on the board, 'The president of the board says the teacher is a fool.' Now," she continued, "put a comma after board and another after teacher."

DEVELOPMENT OF TEXAS OIL INDUSTRY
 Think of it! In the year 1897 the production of crude oil in Texas was only 6,500 barrels, and that was far in excess of the production in any previous year.
 In the year 1931, under proration which allowed but a slight portion of the possible production, Texas produced 330,720,000 barrels.
 The first people to receive benefit from oil in Texas were the Indians. The Red men did not profit physically. Always on the lookout for remedies for ills of the flesh, when they found a blue-black greasy water in the depressions among the rocks in Brazoria county, they were quick to ascertain the medicinal value thereof and found that it had curative properties. White settlers saw the same greasy water and immediately sought to turn it to financial profit, and in 1866 several shallow wells were drilled in Nacogdoches county. There was very small production from these wells, and no established market for the product, and those who had hoped to grow rich through oil production soon turned to other pursuits.
 In 1877 an interest in oil was developed, which has increased as the years have rolled on, making many rich and sending many into the mire of bankruptcy. During that year, a company while drilling for water at Corsicana, found showings of oil. This created an interest and soon a drill was going down in search of the liquid gold. The first well in the Corsicana field came in on October 15, 1895, with a production of two and one-half barrels per day. Other drillers soon drilled deeper and at a depth of 1,040 feet obtained a well that yielded 22 barrels a day. Other wells were drilled in the same field and at the close of 1847 the Corsicana field was good for 6,500 barrels a year.
 Texans, however, received their first tip of the greatness of her oil deposits early in 1901. On January 10 of that year the great Lucas gusher at Beaumont came in and threw the whole State into a fever of excitement. The Lucas gusher, from a depth of 1100 feet, spouted petroleum 200 feet into the air, and people rushed to famed Spindle Top field from all sections of Texas, and other States, to make their investments and lay the foundation of their fortunes. Other fields—Sour Lake, Batson, Saratoga, Petrolia, Humble, etc.—followed in quick succession, and during the year 1905, the production of oil in Texas jumped to 28,136,000 barrels.
 Since that time many great fields have come in, in various sections of the State. Many of these fields have been pumped dry, leaving the towns which they built up somewhat desolate, but many others are in the full flower of production.
 In 1928 Texas became the leading oil producing State in the Union, a lead which she still retains. A new all-time record for any State in the Nation was established in 1931, when Texas produced 330,720,000 barrels, a figure exceeding the combined output of all producing States in the Union, leaving out California, and which represents a total almost equal to the annual quantity produced by all foreign countries. Figures of American Petroleum Institute show that at the present time the State is producing approximately 40 per cent of the Nation's output.

LARGEST AND SMALLEST COUNTIES IN TEXAS
 The largest county in Texas is Brewster. According to the Census Bureau the area of this county is 3,798,400 acres, which is equivalent to 5,935 square miles. However, the county has been surveyed and its area reported at 6,187 square miles; it is believed that the census failed to account for some of the land belonging to the county.
 Three States of the Union—Rhode Island, Delaware and Connecticut, are smaller than Brewster county.
 Rockwell is the smallest county in Texas, containing only 62,799 acres, or 98 square miles.

HOME CANNING DOUBLED IN TEXAS
 Miss Lola Blair, Nutritionist in the Texas A. & M. College Extension Service, says home canning in Texas has already doubled this year over last year if comparative figures from scattered counties are representative for the state as a whole. A check-up in these counties compared to a similar count made at the same time last year showed 3,279,244 tin cans and glass jars used up to that time in 1932, to 1,770,850 used for the same period in 1931. This is an increase of 85 per cent. The figures were based on dealers' reports of tin cans and glass jars sold.
 Canning for 1931 in about 120 counties where demonstration agents were employed totaled a little more than 32,000,000 containers, which led to an unofficial estimate of 50,000 containers canned in the State as a whole. If the final reports made by home demonstration agents this year bear out the preliminary check mentioned, canning in home demonstration agent counties will run more than 50,000,000 containers this season, and the total for the State may be expected to nearly reach, or perhaps pass the million mark.

STUDYING COTTON MARKETING IN TEXAS
 Because of the importance of Texas in the world cotton industry, three members of the Royal Egyptian Legation are studying cotton marketing at the University of Texas, doing a year's research work under the Director of the Bureau of Business Research.
 The men are connected with the Department of Agriculture of the Egyptian Government and have been on leave for several years studying the cotton industry in major producing countries. In addition to studying English in schools of their own country the representatives have spent several years in schools and universities of England and France. Their proposed itinerary includes Germany and other European countries.

Increasing Egg Production by Artificial Light
 In the fall and winter the period of daylight is comparatively short. Artificial illumination makes the days longer, the fowls eat more food, lay many more eggs and any increase during the months when eggs are high priced is highly profitable. This practice is recommended for laying stock, but not for the breeding pens.

When to Use Lights
 Careful experiments indicate that the best time to use artificial lights is all through the winter months until about March. There is some difference of opinion regarding the time of day to use them. There are three different methods, as follows:
 1. The lights are turned on an hour or two before daylight and again in the evening before dark, making a twelve-hour day for the hen.
 2. Lights are turned on only in the evening before it gets dark and remain on to give the hens the same number of work hours as mentioned above.
 3. The lights are turned on in the morning, only usually about four-thirty o'clock and turned off as soon as there is enough daylight for the hen to see.
 Of the above plans, the latter appears to be the best. When used for a while before turning them off, observing the hens' count on the way to the nest and many will nest on the floor. Dimmers or red lights should be provided for this purpose.
 Kind of Lights to Use
 Of the three important ways of providing artificial illumination, electric lights are undoubtedly the best, as they involve less work, better light and less danger from fire. Another great advantage is that they can be installed to work automatically. The home lighting plants, such as DeLco and others, are now featuring electricity for lighting hen houses. We have found that one 40 to 50 watt light is sufficient for 100 hens on the basis of 500 square feet of floor space for 100 hens. On farms where electricity is not available, other methods can be used. One gasoline lamp is usually sufficient for 100 hens, but with kerosene lamps you must use reflectors and allow four lamps for every 100 hens. Insufficient lights causes hens to roost as soon as it gets dark, or if the lights are used in the morning they will not come off the roost. The light must be strong enough so the hens can see to eat.
 Fowls under artificial illumination should be fed somewhat differently from the usual practice. Grains must be fed while the lights are in use, especially in the beginning, to keep the hens off the roost. It is important that everything be fed so as to get the hens to exercise and to keep them healthy under these more or less unnatural conditions. All drinking vessels, feed mash hoppers and green feed should be on stands two feet above the ground, so they must exercise to get it. It is useless to keep hens up with artificial illumination if they are not given something to eat. Lights alone will not make hens lay. They must be fed an egg-making ration. Lights only help to make more eggs when all other things are provided.

Mrs. Frank Williams left Wednesday for a few weeks visit and rest in Northampton. After she returns she will assume the duties of the sheriff's office which she is employed.

One woman was killed almost instantly, her husband received injuries from which he died later, their daughter was critically injured, her brother-in-law was perhaps fatally hurt, and three of her other children sustained painful bruises in an auto and truck collision on the Stamford and Haskell highway north of Stamford about 7:30 Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe E. Edwards of Gatesville were killed. Tom James, who was riding in the car with them suffered a fractured skull and possibly internal injuries. Aime, Mrs. Edwards' 11-year-old daughter, also suffered a fractured skull and possibly other injuries. Her youngest child, Pauline, 3, who was sitting in her mother's lap, was thrown clear of the car and escaped with minor injuries. Two of Mrs. Edwards' sons, L. Z., 9, and O. Q., 15, also escaped without serious injury. All of the injured were rushed to the Stamford sanitarium.

All of the injured persons were riding in the same car and were members of a family of cotton pickers traveling in another car and truck. All were from Gatesville. They had been picking cotton near Haskell and were en route to a farm near Stamford at the time of the accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland Beck and Mrs. Tom Jones, mother of Mrs. Beck, were in the lead car in the party. They had stopped by the road to repair a flat tire, when the truck carrying Reba Edwards, 18, J. W. Edwards, 16, and Doyle James, 19, drove up behind them and came almost to a stop. The third car immediately behind ran into the rear of the truck and overturned. Occupants of the truck and the first car were unhurt.
