TURKEY RAISERS SHOULD POOL BIRDS

A large number of the turkeys of Haskell county have been pooled to date but a large number of people have not yet pooled. A low price is in prospect and those who wish to get more for their turkeys should pool for the best interests of all the turkey raisers.

Those interested should see Joe Williams, County Agricultural Agent, or H. K. Henry, teacher of Agriculture.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL CAMPAIGN

The annual campaign for Red Cross funds is now in full swing in Haskell and the entire county. The workers have been very busy all this week trying to see each one and get a contribution but it is a big task and so far they have not been able to see all.

This is a very worthy cause and it is the duty of each one to contribute something for most of these funds stay in our town and county and are used to relieve the distress in our midst. When we think of the good that the Red Cross has done here we should feel thankful and at once decide to have some part in this cause.

During the last year the Red Cross has given us 3 carloads of flour which has practically all been used for hungry folks in addition to that it has furnished garden seed to a lot of people in order that they might have gardens, and furthermore there has been nearly $1,000.00 spent for food, shelter and taking care of those that were not able to take care of themselves. Most of this assistance has come direct to us from the National Headquarters of the Red Cross and it will continue to serve us as long as there is a need but it is now up to us to show our appreciation and help the Red Cross. This campaign is put on once each year and this is the only opportunity that we will have to aid in this worthy cause.

If you have not paid anything then do not wait until some one comes to you but hunt up one of the workers and make your donation as soon as possible. It would be a shame for the county after receiving as much help as it has from the Red Cross to fall down on this campaign. Lend your help and let's put this drive over in a successful way. Today will you try and see a worker and hand in your membership fee of at least $1.00. Workers will be on the streets all day Saturday so when you see one of them ask them to make you a member. It is going to take the help of each one doing his or her bit in order to make the campaign a success. A worthy cause and it needs your support to the utmost. HELP THE RED CROSS!

Reveals Souls of Men Marked for 'Legal Death'

What goes on behind the closed doors of a prison death house where the relentless wheels of justice grind their daily toll of retribution? There is a sensational, gripping answer to this question coming to the Texas Theatre on Dec. 6-7.

"The Last Mile", based on the celebrated stage play, the dramatic sensation that startled the modern theatrical world, is laid almost entirely in the death house of a State prison. The souls of eight men are bared in a pulsating, soul-stirring drama with a smashing climax.

AN EDITORIAL

THE RED CROSS
No one needs to be told of the virtues of the Red Cross, nor reminded of the long and honorable record of achievement it has made for itself in doing deeds of kindness and mercy wherever war and famine and flood have spread their devastations. The record is one that is shared with pride by the organization and those whose gifts have made possible its magnificent portrayal of the Good Samaritan.

Schools Show How to Produce and Pick Quality Turkeys

College Station, Dec. 1—"The American market is no longer forced to buy the kind of turkey Texas has chosen to send it as was largely true 15 years ago when Texas dominated the United States turkey situation," says Paul A. Cunyas, assistant poultry husbandman in the Extension Service of Texas A. and M. College.

"Consumers can now buy North-western or Eastern high quality birds and penalize the Texas turkey in price if quality is not as high."

This is the basis for a series of 36 turkey grading schools just completed for Texas farmers in the great turkey producing areas roughly bounded by lines drawn from Brenham to Goliad to San Angelo to Plainview to McKinney. These meetings, in charge of county and home demonstration agents, were attended by 2793 producers who learned how to produce and how to select quality birds for market under the direction of Extension Service poultry specialists.

Texas produces 22 per cent of the American turkey crop, and to make it sell for top prices, it was pointed out, quality must be improved by observing three main points. These are: (1) select only the best birds for breeders, (2) sell only the "ripe" birds for market, and (3) feed the rest until they are "ripe."

Twenty tom shows held in connection with the grading schools brought out 542 toms that were tagged and strong and weak points noted on the tags for the owners' guidance. The tom to choose for breeding should be short-legged, long-breasted, round, plump-bodied birds that matures feathers early, it was explained. The market does not want extremely heavy birds any more, but the medium weight fat type that furnishes hens weighing 12 to 14 pounds and toms weighing 16 to 18 pounds. A breeding tom may weigh up to 30 pounds when mature.

A turkey is "ripe" for market when its drumstick is yellowish with fat instead of blue, and if not of that degree of finish should be held and fed. To get turkeys ripe they should be fed for two months before marketing. Five pounds of feed will make one pound of turkey, fed to desirable type birds. One and one-half to two pounds of this should be a fattening mash and the remainder ordinary farm grains available.

DATES FOR POULTRY SHOW CHANGED TO DECEMBER 22-24

Dates for the Haskell County Poultry and Pet Stock Show have been changed to the 22, 23 and 24 of December. This was done so that the services of Walter Burton of Dallas might be had as judge. Final plans are being made and a large attendance seems assured.

An entry fee of 20c for singles is to be charged and 50c on a pen. All the money taken in on a certain breed is to be used for premium money on that particular breed. In some breeds the premium will likely run higher than that paid at the larger fairs and shows. People who have cockerels and cock birds for sale may enter them for sale by paying 10c if they do not want to enter them in competition with other birds of the same class. Further information may be secured by communicating with H. K. Henry.

The Advance goes on to say: "There has been a fight against rates in this section of the country for a long time, but rates have not come down. We do not know whether or not the gas company can afford to lower rates, but the number of customers that will give them more business on whether more customers at a lower rate, or fewer customers at a higher rate is not known."

Fifty and Fit

A MAN is as old—or as young—as his organs.

At fifty, you can be in your prime.

Why go along with "fairly good health" when you might be enjoying vigor you haven't felt for years?

There's a simple little thing anyone can do to keep the vital organs stimulated, and feel fit all the time. People don't realize how sluggish they've grown until they've tried it. The stimulant that will stir your system to new life is Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. It will make a most amazing difference in many ways.

This famous doctor's prescription is a delicious syrup made with fruit, honey, active acids, and pure pepsin. It starts the good work with the first spoonful. That's all you need to drive away the dullness and headache of a bilious spell, and rid the system of that slow poison that saps your strength. It's better than a tonic for tired bowels, and unlike habit-forming laxatives you can take it freely or give it to any child. And it isn't expensive.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and take a little tonight. Don't wait until you're sick to give your system this wonderful help. You can avoid those spells of biliousness or constipation. A spoonful every now and then is better than constant worry about the condition of your bowels, or fear of auto-intoxication as you grow older. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin protects the system. All druggists keep this preparation.

"BUCKSKIN" BOWDEN, 84, FORT GRIFFIN CHARACTER, VISITS WEST TEXAS AGAIN

(By Frank P. Hill in the Lynn County News)

"Buckskin" Bowden, 84, stooped and gray-whiskered, one of the very few who was in West Texas as early as 1868, is back in this section after an absence of almost exactly fifty years. His first entry was by ox-wagon; his last by automobile. He first came as a run-away from his Indiana home; his second trip out was with a family of Hopkins county cotton pickers.

"Buckskin" which name he says he got in West Texas many years ago, has spent the past fifty years as a "desert rat," gold mining in Colorado and Arizona, but he tells interesting tales of the wild days at old Fort Griffin from 1868 to 1900 of a woman outlaw known as "Bad Nell," and of a rendezvous with Billy the Kid near Tascosa. He does not doubt for a minute but that Sheriff Pat Garrett actually killed the notorious outlaw who carried twenty-odd notches on his gun that July night of 1881 in Fort Sumner, New Mexico.

"I arrived in Dallas, a little berg of just a few houses, in the winter of 1867-68," Bowden relates, "just a 19 year old kid, looking for excitement, and fell in with an ox-wagon driver headed for Fort Griffin with a load of flour and lumber. After several weeks' ride, during which we saw two bands of Indians, we arrived at Griffin, which had just been established by the Government."

He describes Fort Griffin as having been just a few wooden and adobe huts housing a handful of soldiers in February 1868, but it was soon to become a town "worse morally than any gold-mining town ever in the West, and I've been in several of 'em." Fort Griffin had just been established a few months previous to his arrival. The site of the old fort, its location now hardly discernible, is on a fork of the Brazos River in northern Shackelford county.

There were then only two or three ranches in that immediate area, and Bowden could not find work. "I fell in with the wrong crowd," he says, "and was a bad little boy for two or three years. Then I got work from old man Johnson on the Brazos just above the Fort. I done things I shouldn't a did, but most of the ranch herds out there were made up of strays from the trail which then went up by the Fort Worth country but which later came as far west as Griffin."

"When the buffalo hunters began to come out to the Plains, Griffin began to grow. Hunters made their headquarters here and brought their hides back here before hauling them on to Fort Worth and Dallas. Desperadoes, wild women, and other scum began to come in, and I say Fort Griffin was tough. You boys in this day don't know the meaning of 'tough.'"

"By 1871, there were a few more ranchers coming in. A bunch of Tonkawa Indians settled near the Fort. They were the lowest class Indians, or any kind of humans I ever seen, but they were friendly with the whites, enemies of the Comanches, made good guides, and also good thieves in the hands of the crooks around the Fort."

"Thieves began to come to Fort Griffin. They were nearly all wanted for crimes back east. There were saloons kept by Nat Buckham, Poker Jack, and Tol Bowers. They were all desperadoes. Nat was said to have killed several men, and he and Tol Bowers both finally got killed themselves. In a rage one night Nat killed a Tonk buck and beat a naked Indian woman to death with a mesquite limb. Next morning Nat's body was found in his tent with his stomach cut out. Tol was killed in Oklahoma later."

"There were fights every night and killin' was pretty common in spite of the soldiers being there. The soldiers had to keep a heavy guard all the time to keep from getting their horses and supplies stolen. They were afraid to leave the Fort except in groups of at least three or four men."

"I read in the Denver Post or the Kansas City Star last year about some noted women outlaws—Calamity Jane, Poker Alice, Belle Starr, and others. I didn't know these ladies, but I knew Bad Nell of Fort Griffin better than any man, I reckon. Nell was an outlaw and a thief and a poker player, a good shot with a pistol and as good a horse rider as any man—and she played her game solitaire—she didn't have to have any men confederates. Otherwise she was a nice gal morally and had nothing to do with the hundred or more tough women around Fort Griffin. I was her best friend. I guess, and just a casual acquaintance at that."

"Nell came to our ranch about 1874. I know it was about two years before the Fort Griffin flood, and that was in 1876. She was dressed as a boy, weighed about 150 lbs. I had just gone to work for Old Bill (we'll call him that), and he made her living at the expense of trail herd owners. Nell went under the name of Nell, only had all day, and bunked in the same room with me and three other hands for six months before anybody knew she was a woman. Our main work was to see that the wild longhorn strays from the trail found their ways to Old Bill's ranch."

after "reforming" and then for the Long boys, Andy and Frank, quitting the latter in 1880 to go hunt for gold in Colorado. He rode horseback alone all the way to the Goodnight-Adair ranch in the Panhandle, and spent a night in the Col. C. C. Goodnight's home.

"The next day," Buckskin Bowden relates, "I overtook six men driving a herd of horses. I fell in with them and soon learned they were horse thieves. A few nights later, as we neared Tascosa, five of them hid out with the horses in the Canadian brakes while the leader and me went on to Tascosa."

"Tascosa was then the famous had town of the Panhandle, but I don't believe it was as bad as Griffin in spite of the reputation it got from that hill there where so many men were buried with their boots on. Arriving there, we sat down in a saloon. Soon four young men, well shod with weapons, two of them Mexicans, came in. Pointing to the leader, my companion whispered to me, 'That's Billy the Kid.' I didn't know Billy the Kid from anybody else's kid, so I didn't pay much attention to him. He bought the drinks for the house and I stood right at his side. At that very time, I heard later, the officers at Tascosa were debating whether or not to make a run on the saloon and try to arrest or kill him."

"When Billy was gone, the horse thief I was with told me Billy was the man they were to deliver their horses to. He insisted so much that I go back to the horse remuda that I was afraid not to. Though the Kid and the horse thief had not appeared to recognize each other in the saloon, I found they were the best of friends that night out in the brakes where the horses were delivered. We sat around and talked for an hour with the Kid. Then he started toward New Mexico with the horses. The thieves made me ride back south with them until daylight. I got into Tascosa again about noon but never told about meeting the Kid."

"These stories that are being told that the Kid was not killed at Fort Sumner is bunk. I have known several who knew both the Kid and Pat Garrett personally. Everybody who knew Garrett knows he was not the kind of man that would not have killed Billy, even if he had been his best friend under the circumstances."

Bowden prospected in Colorado until 1906, and was in Arizona from that time until a year ago. He now lives with the daughter of a mining partner of twenty years ago, Mrs. Sam Shugart. She and her husband and family expect to pick cotton in the Littlefield territory this fall. Bowden says he saved a few dollars mining, but that any prospector can not hope to make over $100 to $300 a day panning gold. He admonishes young boys not to run away from home and to be honest. Buckskin Bowden never married. He says by remaining single he has managed to save $15000 in sixty-five years of hard labor.

Note—The writer is reliably informed that parts of Bowden's story do not quite tally out with known historical facts, but the fifty-five to sixty-five years intervening between the time Bowden was in Fort Griffin and the present time may be easily charged to the chances of a man's memory not being quite correct in that length of time. We are seeking to verify his story, as we are sure some of it is new to the general public, and his story should be recorded correctly.)

First Wireless Valve Was Edison Discovery

Many years ago Edison was experimenting with electric lamps, trying to discover how the blackening of the inside of the bulbs came about in those of the old carbon type. He found that if a plate of metal was sealed into the bulb and electrified positively, a current passed through the vacuum from the filament to this plate. He noticed that the current always traveled from the filament to the plate; nothing could make a current pass in the opposite direction.

He thought nothing of the discovery, and no use could be found for it, for it was many years before wireless was to be heard of.

Before we can hear anything of wireless signals the waves must be rectified. Each wave consists of a push of current in one direction followed by a pull in the other. Rectification means straining out the pulls and leaving only the pushes. All early methods of doing this were complicated and unsatisfactory.

Then Prof. J. A. Fleming had an inspiration. He made the first wireless valve in which a filament and a plate were placed in a vacuum inside a glass bulb.

The Edison effect was harnessed for the valve would respond only to the pushes and automatically eliminated the pulls. But for the invention of the valve there would have been no broadcasting today.—London Tit-Bits.

Edison Dragged From Workshop to Wedding

Thomas A. Edison was so preoccupied with his laboratory work that he nearly missed his second wedding. This was recalled by Mrs. Franklin Ives, whose father, the late Benjamin Franklin Card, was associated with the great inventor for more than 20 years, says an article in the Brooklyn Eagle.

"The story of Edison's second wedding was one of my father's favorite recollections of him," Mrs. Ives said. "Edison was hard at work on a problem in his laboratory just before the wedding. He had become so preoccupied that he had quite forgotten time.

"Fifteen minutes before the appointed hour his best man found him there utterly absorbed. He begged the inventor to dress and hurry to the wedding. Edison protested that he was on the verge of a great discovery and couldn't possibly leave. Finally, almost by main force, his best man succeeded in dressing him and getting him to the church—a little late and still preoccupied, but at least acquiescent."

Old Society of Mariners

Records seem to indicate that the corporation of Trinity house, London, was originally a society of English mariners founded by Sir Thomas Spert with headquarters at Deptford, says an article in the Montreal Family Herald. There is no doubt that it obtained its first charter from Henry VII in 1514, and was authorized by Queen Elizabeth about half a century later to erect beacons and other marks on the coast for the guidance of sailors. Its duties today are concerned with the management and maintenance of lighthouses, lightships, beacons and buoys, and the supervision of pilots. It owns a fleet of 19 vessels. The corporation has four special flags, the Master's flag, the Ensign, the Jack, and Bungee, all of which bear the four ship's symbol of Trinity house.

Awesome Hjordund Fjord

A short summer cruise among the fjords of Norway will sometimes bring the tourist to the Hjordund fjord, twenty-five miles long and two miles wide in parts. Here he will see some of the most impressive scenery in Europe, for the unscathed Sandmore Alps raise their peaks about the rock-rimmed waters. Norwegians and English climbed year after year, gradually conquering the heights, but the grandeur is not diminished and at twilight, the effect is awesome. When Norway was visited by the "Black Death" in the Middle ages, the entire population of the fjord perished, and the present inhabitants are chiefly descendants of Scotch immigrants who came to fill the houses left vacant.

Taking Chances

The teacher of the history class had been telling her pupils of the ancient Roman custom in which the bridegroom lifted the bride over the threshold to prevent her stumbling and bringing bad luck.

Just at that moment the bell rang and the class wit, who happened to be a favorite with the teacher, gazed at the desk to pass his customary remarks:

"Gosh!" he exclaimed, "it'd be tough on him if he got a heavy woman!"

Insects Take Apple Toll

Insects take rank among the largest consumers of apples in the country. It is estimated by federal experts that from $20,000,000 to $40,000,000 worth of apples every year are destroyed by insects, which cuts a big piece out of the $100,000,000 annual yield.

Irate Woman Probably Had Time for Regrets

The bus terminal had been reorganized since the Woman's last trip, but she eventually located her bus, and, having three minutes to spare, paced up and down beside it.

From the waiting room emerged a couple engaged in wordy combat, the husband, as usual, losing in the battle. On and on raged the wife, her spouse meekly following with his arms full of bundles. As she got on the bus, he handed the bundles to her and prepared to turn away.

"Don't you dare to be late for supper!" shrieked his spouse. The unfortunate male, his downcast gaze roving humbly over the bus, started suddenly.

"Lily—" he began. "Don't you 'Lily' me!" shrieked the woman, starting off again. "You—" "Lissen a minute!" begged the husband.

"Lissen to you! Every time I lissen—" She finished an irate monologue and disappeared into the bus. "Lissen," the little man called after her. But she was already seated inside. As the little man made toward the bus it jerked suddenly and drove off, leaving him standing, mouth open.

The Woman met his eyes with an involuntary smile. A slow grin spread over his face.

"Don't that beat all?" he asked the Woman, shrugging his thin shoulders. "I only wanted to tell her she's on the wrong bus!" He chuckled. "I hope she finds out soon. The first stop for that one is Philadelphia. And we live in Long Island!"—New York Sun.

"Pure" English Defined

The oft-quoted saying that the purest English is spoken in Dublin, particularly at Trinity college, is of unknown origin, says the Pathfinder Magazine. Inverness, Scotland, and Belfast, Ireland, are often linked with Dublin as places where exceptionally pure and correct English is spoken by the inhabitants. The saying probably means "little more than that the common speech in these places contains an unusually large number of Elizabethan words now regarded as 'archaic' or 'classical' in England and the United States.

Speech in small countries or isolated communities seldom changes as rapidly as it does in the more populous centers. Both Dublin and Belfast were settled by colonists from England and the speech of their descendants did not undergo the same development that the language of the parent country did. The English language of the periods of Elizabeth and King James was, as it were, kept in cold storage in Ireland and many words and phrases were retained in everyday speech which became obsolete in England. Thus it happens that the language of Elizabeth and Dublin more nearly approaches the language in use during England's golden era of literature.

English "Prairie" is an expanse of high ground destitute of trees. It then is occasionally used for a small, round hill. The chalk hills in England are known as the "Downs."

Imaginary Distance If we represent the earth by a single grain of sand in New York city, the nearest star in proportional size and distance would be a six-inch globe in Juneau, Alaska.

Mrs. Sam A. Roberts and children Paul Wesley and Audra Gayle spent the past week end in Byers and Petrolia visiting relatives. They were joined Sunday by Mr. Roberts, who accompanied them home.

New Film Has Long-Sought Life Secret

"Six Hours to Live" the new feature, a famous scientist accidentally discovers a formula by which he can extend life for a period of six hours. The discovery is made with delight by a police officer.

Warner Baxter, Miriam Jordan, a newcomer from the London stage, John Bales, George Marion, Sr., William Hobbes and Edwin Maxwell have the principal roles in "Six Hours to Live" which will be shown at the Texas Theatre, Dec. 1 and 2.

"Hat Check Girl" Is Top-Notch Film Play

No screen actress can portray a wary, wise-cracking but always interesting working girl quite as well as Sally Eilers. And Ben Lyon is at his best as a carefree millionaire in search of romance, even under difficulties. Their joint appearance in the leading roles of "Hat Check Girl," which opens at the Texas Theatre Dec. 3 and 5th, makes this a Fox offering a thoroughly entertaining one.

Plenty of action and colorful settings are packed into the picture which Sidney Lanfield directed.

LIGHTS THROUGH of NEW YORK

There was a New York bachelor who was smarter than most of us. He bought stocks low and sold many of them before the crash. Yet, he was one of the men deeply concerned about present conditions. He had something to lose, and he did not intend to lose it. Some of his money went into government securities, some went into savings banks; a considerable sum he turned into gold and put in safety deposit boxes. He did not stint himself on what he considered necessities, but he was careful not to indulge in luxuries. He said it was no time to throw money around. He died the other day. They haven't been able to find a will. The relatives certainly are having a swell fight over his estate.

For some reason this makes me think of a story a friend told me about an uncle of his. It seems that this uncle spent his money in a manner viewed with alarm by members of his family. They used to remonstrate with him; speak somberly of a rainy evening; urge economies; deplore the willful waste which makes woeful want. To their best intended warnings, delivered only for his good, the uncle would reply:

"I may go to the poorhouse once. You go there every day. I like my way best."

The most expensive restaurants and the cheapest restaurants are the ones that are getting along best in New York these days. The places in between these two classes are having a tough time. Even the bootleggers are feeling what is known as the depression. Customers who used to buy several cases at a time, now purchase their liquors by the bottle.

There is now a contrivance on the market which, fastened to the window, silences all the noises of the town while still permitting and even encouraging air to enter. Willard Fairchild says that this is well enough, but that what really is needed is a contrivance for windows in the country which will soothe the visiting Manhattanite to slumber by reproducing all the different sounds he is accustomed. Mr. Fairchild thinks that perhaps it might have to have some sort of taxi horns, the rumble of the elevated, and the flat wheels on surface lines. A good inventor might go even further. He could arrange perhaps to sound the special note, the voice of the city from which the visitor came.

A city fellow, who visited a small village last summer, thought it would be romantic to take a young lady for an old-fashioned buggy ride. The only horse available belonged to the local grocer and general merchant. This led to complications. The man from the metropolis couldn't steer a horse very well, and the animal insisted upon turning smartly into the yard of any good customer and stopping at the back door. It was the delivery wagon horse and it knew its stuff.

It was a most conservative newspaper and the most conservative person on it was the gentleman of the old school who ran the clipping bureau, or "morgue." It was on this old-timer's day off that the chief editorial writer wished to make some reference to the bomb outrage in Wall Street. In order to be exact, he sent for the clippings on that subject. It was reported that no clippings could be found. The editor was annoyed; said they must be there; asked under what headings a search had been made. He was told there was nothing under "bomb," "reds," "explosions," "outrages," "anarchists," "cataclysms," "catastrophes," or any other head which seemed to bear on the matter. They finally got in touch with the gentleman of the old school. "Certainly it is there!" he exclaimed indignantly. "You will find all clippings concerning it filed under 'mishaps.'"

Most of the former New York play boys are now plow boys. Their foreheads are furrowed and their spirits are harrowed. From flying high, they have come back to earth with disconcerting force.

Marshall, Wis.—After carrying mail a distance equal to nine times around the world in the last 30 years, Thomas T. Pyburn, rural mail carrier, has been retired on a pension. A conservative estimate of the distance covered by Pyburn is said to be 235,000 miles.

Policemen Unable to Open Own Safe

Horn and Trumpet Long Used to Direct Armies

According to the best authorities, it appears that the forerunners of the modern trumpet and bugle were first used for military purposes by the armies of Gideon and Saul of Biblical fame. The Romans appear in the scene next, since prior to the fall of the Roman empire, about 493 A. D., the musical instruments used in the Roman army were the bugle (Buccina), the trumpet (tuba), the cavalry trumpet (lituus) and the horn (cornu). The latter was made of the horn of the buffalo, and provided with a silver mouthpiece. The others were probably of brass.

The Romans knew very well a fact familiar to modern tactics, that to carry a command amid the tumult of battle or down a long line of march, the penetrating tones of a brazen horn are much more effective than the sound of the human voice. Accordingly the signals for the various evolutions of march and battle were given by horn and trumpet; first by the horn, at the command of the general, then taken up by the trumpets. The bugle was used to sound the divisions of the day, that is to say reveille, noon and nightfall.—United States Recruiting News.

Only Three Essentials in Food for Steinmetz

Steinmetz' attitude toward food was an example of his simplifying human problems as if they were the private wants of electrical apparatus, wrote Jonathan Norton Leonard in "Loki, the Life of Steinmetz." An induction motor seemed to him much superior to the human body, so much stronger and so much more useful. Its requirements in the way of current, lubrication and cooling could be accurately calculated. Why not the same with the needs of the human body?

"So," he would say, unwrapping a brown-paper package, "to sustain life the human body requires only three raw materials. Potatoes provide the carbohydrates. Steaks provide the protein. And fat comes from the butter the steak is fried in. What more can be done? It is complete."

He never tired of this standardized ration and never could understand why others did.

Not All Chinese "Coolies"

The original coolies were unskilled laborers from China, India and the Orient in general who first were imported into western countries under contracts according to which they bound themselves at a low wage to a certain term of service, at the end of which they were entitled to free passage back to their native land, says Pathfinder Magazine. The name is believed to be derived from Chinese "koo," meaning strength, and "lee," to hire. Hence a coolie was a hired laborer. During the decade between 1850 and 1890 more than 40,000 Chinese coolies were imported into California. It is incorrect to refer to Chinese immigrants in general as coolies.

Peccolier "Art Form"

Peidermeier was a fictitious character invented for the pages of Hildegarde Blatter, a good-natured bourgeois with no esthetic perception. Germany, after the Napoleonic wars, was either too poor or too prejudiced to follow the prevailing fashions in French furniture; hence the Peidermeier style, which eliminated the ornate mounts and expensive carvings naturally symbolic of empire decoration, and substituted merely pretty forms, pretty details, unmeaning and weak. The Peidermeier period began with 1809 and ended about 1820.

Ocean Weather Reports

The idea of receiving weather reports from vessels at sea was inaugurated in 1906, when the captains of 50 vessels plying the Pacific with the necessary radio equipment agreed to make the observations and endeavor to transmit their reports to Washington each day. This is now done by 250 sea captains, and about 50 messages are received every day. These observations have proven very valuable, and a small fee is paid for each observation made and successfully transmitted to Washington.

Scared Them to Death

Some of our local sportsmen may have had a similar experience with the high cost of duck shooting as a Winnipeg man's report of one day on the marshes. This nimrod fired seventy-five shells, costing $3.75. His gasoline for the trip cost $2.25 and his hunter's license $2. His bag was three ducks, or $2.00 per duck. As there was no evidence of pellets in the birds, it is believed they died of heart failure caused by the barrage.—Vancouver Province.

Topsy-Turvy Woman

A woman who lived in a topsy-turvy world, who wrote, read, and spelt backwards, is mentioned in the British Medical Journal. She was admitted to the Devon County mental hospital suffering from Ste and suicidal tendencies. It was found that in writing she reversed her words and when she drew pictures she drew them upside down. When she wanted to read the text of the book upside down. When she was asked to write a letter she wrote it backwards.

JUST A BOOMERANG

"Let the rich pay the tax." This slogan has been and is now a popular expression with a large section of the unthinking public, state and national legislators included.

Every fair-minded person now has ample opportunity to observe the effects of reckless spending by the Federal government and "the soak the rich" tax theory.

These tax millions pour into the government coffers 365 days of the year; there is no ceasing. It is paid out for road building, improvement of rivers and harbors, salaries of government workers, upkeep of army and navy, erection and repairs on Federal buildings, extension work in education, health service, assistance to agriculture and industry, pensions to veterans of our wars, postal service, subsidies to aviation, merchant marine, inland waterways, etc.

How does this affect the average working man and that class of society which advocates "soak the rich." Naturally, the ones who pay the tax include it in their charge for their product whether it be a manufactured product or the labor of their hands.

A better slogan than "soak the rich" is "live and let live." Don't be fooled into thinking the government gives you anything. You are the government and you will pay the bill.

GIFTS NOT MADE WITH HANDS

Christmas this year will not be celebrated with the lavish gifts and luxurious gaiety that characterized it in more prosperous years.

In any event, however, it is worth remembering that the exchange of gifts does not form the primary function of Christmas. Hundreds of years ago people began to give Christmas presents to one another simply as lesser symbols of the gift of Jesus Christ to the world.

We all realize that these qualities are imperfectly realized in the world as a whole and in each of us as an individual. They are ideals rather than present facts. We can hasten their realization by a little renewed emphasis upon them in our thinking, our talk, and our actions during the approaching Christmastide.

FULL PUBLICITY IS VITAL AID TO GOOD GOVERNMENT

Complete publicity showing receipts and expenditures in all county and local units of government is one of the most effective means of keeping public expenses down.

"It has been demonstrated in Minnesota that public opinion can definitely cut public expenditures," Mr. McDonnell said. "But the public must be kept informed thru public statements. The knowledge that all transactions will appear in print has a restraining influence on public spenders."

LITTLE PEN-O-GRAMS

Revolutionary Small House of the Future Depicted in President's Conference Report

Houses of steel and copper and even of aluminum as well as of wood and masonry, built at the factory with rooms such as the kitchen and bath completely equipped and the rest ready to be assembled at the site, insulated against heat and cold and noise, costing perhaps only half as much as the present small house, and placed in cities free from smoke, are described as merely awaiting the application of knowledge already largely in hand, in the seventh and concluding volume of the final reports of the President's Conference on Home Building and Home Ownership, published today.

This statement comes from a committee of nationally known scientists and engineers led by the late Dr. George K. Burgess, Director of the Bureau of Standards. It is supported by a careful analysis of practices and materials at present employed in small-house building which leaves no room for doubt of their relative wastefulness and inefficiency. For example, the Committee shows that the adoption of the practice of welding pipe would permit the use of thinner sheet steel and eliminate the laborious hand threading at the site which now raises the cost of plumbing. This practice plus the possible reduction of numbers of pipes, fittings, and fixtures by simplification and standardization, would in the opinion of one contractor who has installed a great deal of welded piping "reduce the cost of heating and plumbing installations by one-half."

The Committee's analysis takes no aspect of the present small house for granted, and concedes no authority to tradition. Beginning with the foundation and cellar and going through the walls and floors and finishes to the roof every feature of the house as we now know it is made to answer as to whether present materials and practices are less efficient than others that might be used. As a result, a good many things which we now take for granted are found wanting. The universal practice of fabrication at the site and the use of the sloping roof are alike condemned as costly and unnecessary and practical substitutes recommended. It is definitely shown that some of our present heating practices are wasteful and that it is possible to reduce the cost of heating to the home-owner and eliminate the dirt and smoke nuisance. Again it is shown that our methods of garbage disposal are crude and expensive beyond reason.

In short, the Committee has painted a realizable physical ideal for the small house of the future. It has shown how much of this ideal could be immediately translated into reality and what is still to be worked out. The Committee's report will inevitably serve as an inspiration and a guide to engineers, to architects, to builders, and to dealers in materials in the development of the house of the future.

Man Who Walked Out During Trial Captured at Munday.

From The Munday Times— Night officer Jack McGraw Saturday night arrested a man on the carnival grounds here who has been wanted in Throckmorton county for the past two years, according to Sheriff Jim Ballard, who came here Sunday and returned the prisoner to Throckmorton. Mr. Ballard stated that the man, Martin Brogren, was being tried on a burglary charge at Throckmorton and during the progress of the trial walked out of the courthouse and has been a fugitive for the past two years.

T. D. Goodwin, Resident of Jones County Fifty Years, Is Buried.

From The Western Enterprise, Anson— Funeral rites were held at First Baptist church of Anson Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 p. m. for Thomas Dabney Goodwin, 84, one of the best known pioneers in the county, following his death at about eight o'clock Tuesday night.

Mr. Goodwin, while in poor health for a year or two, had been seriously ill for only a few days following a rather severe spell a few weeks ago. He had suffered from dropsy and complications.

18,000 Turkeys Marketed at Seymour Last Week.

From The Baylor County Banner— In round figures about 18,000 turkeys were marketed in Seymour last week, nearly all of them coming from Baylor county and this immediate section. The home pool handled about 4,500, the Plains Co-Op about 4,000, the Western Produce Company about 6,500, and Armour Company about 3,000. The price for No. 1, was approximately 11 cents per pound, and most of the birds made this grade. Some were light weight and were cut back for Christmas, with others too heavy, and will be sold separately. The old toms and lower grades were much in the minority.

Side Quit Hurting, Got Stronger, Well; CARDUI Helped Her

Mrs. R. L. West, of Huntville, Ala., writes: "I was weak and run-down. I had a pain in my side, and I kept losing weight. I grew nervous over my condition—this was unusual for me, for I am very cheerful when I am well and don't readily get nervous. I knew I ought to take something. My aunt told me I ought to try Cardui, which I did. I began to feel better. I kept it up until I had taken three or four bottles. My side quit hurting and I was once feeling strong and well." Cardui is sold at drug stores here.

partment in this matter. The department had agreed to pave this highway in Ford if the county would, furnish the right-of-way. B. K. Garrett, resident engineer, is completing the location survey for the highway from Crowell to Pease River now and Monday special session of the commissioners court was called to act upon the matter of accepting the department's proposition, according to the route worked out by Mr. Garrett and approved by John Nabors, Childrens, district engineer.

TWIN BALLOTS

A citizen of Haskell brought in for publication the following straight shot in the form of verse taken from a religious magazine and marked "Selected":

Along in November, when chill was the weather,
Two ballots were cast in a box together;
They nestled up close like brother to brother;
You couldn't tell one of the votes from the other.

Both were rum ballots equally plain
And both sanctioned the license plan;

But one was cast by a cunning old brewer,
And one by a Sunday School man.

The Sunday School man—no man could be truer—
Kept busy all summer denouncing the brewer,
But his fervor cooled with the change of the weather,
And late in the autumn they voted together.

The Sunday School man had always been noted
For fighting sabons—except when he voted;

He piled up his prayer with a holy perfection,
Then knocked them all down on the day of election.

The cunning old brewer was cheerful and mellow,
Said he, "I admire that Sunday School fellow;

He's true to his church—to his party he's truer,
He talks for the Lord, but he votes for the brewer."

To break up a cold overnight and relieve the congestion that makes you cough, thousands of physicians are now recommending Calotabs, the nameless calomei compound tablets that give you the effects of calomei and salts without the unpleasant effects of either.

One or two Calotabs at bedtime with a glass of sweet milk or water. Next morning your cold has vanished, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish, no danger.

Calotabs are sold in 10c and 25c packages at drug stores. (Adv)

GOVERNOR FERGUSON TO HAVE OPPORTUNITY TO REWARD FRIENDS

(By Lee Satterwhite)

Austin, Texas, December 1—With the inauguration of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, on the third Tuesday in January, as Governor of Texas, will come the opportunity for rewarding many supporters and friends who gave earnest and faithful support to her candidacy during the strenuous pre-primary campaign last summer; and it is reported that the demand for such recognition is unusually large.

It is expected, as a matter of course, that Governor Ferguson will follow the usual custom of changing administrations in replacing heads of State Departments coming under the appointive power of the Governor, by selecting such appointees from her own political camp. It means, also, present employees in such departments will be replaced with administration friends and supporters, except where employees may remain through the good graces of powers that be.

With administration change some very interesting situations and developments may be expected in the Highway Department, both in management and personnel. This department being under the management of three six-year term commissioners, one of who is appointed every two years by the Governor, makes it rather difficult for the new Governor to have any say as to the policies and management, or the personnel of employees, so long as the commission follows the laws governing the department. The Constitution provides that the Governor "shall cause the laws to be faithfully executed," but otherwise the department is under the control of the Commission, except as their personal influence of the Governor may have effect with the Commissioners. The department spends annually from forty to fifty million dollars and employs some two hundred and fifty people in the administrative divisions, besides a list of more than five thousand day laborers in maintenance of State designated highways, with an additional list of one hundred and twenty-nine people in the highway patrol division. With this vast army of employees and millions of public funds to spend it is but natural that the friends and supporters of the Governor look upon the Highway Department with envious hopes.

In order to gain control of the Highway Department it will be necessary for Governor Ferguson to obtain either the resignation or removal of one, or both of the hold-over commissioners. The term of C. J. Johnson, of Tyler, expires February 15, 1933, which gives the Governor an opportunity to appoint his successor in the beginning of her administration, but Chairman W. R. Ely, of Abilene, holds over until January 15, 1935, and D. K. Martin, of San Antonio, until January 15, 1937, thus leaving a majority of the Commission the appointees of the retiring Governor Ross Sterling. Recalling the Ferguson severe campaign attack upon the present management of the Highway Department, alleging the misuse or wasting of more than one hundred million dollars of highway funds during recent years, and the well known political bitterness existing between the outgoing and incoming Governors, together with the defeat of Mrs. Ferguson six years ago for a second term as Governor, by Dan Moody, with the management of the Highway Department by the Ferguson as the paramount issue; and then the come back of Mrs. Ferguson this year in defeating Mr. Sterling for a second term, he having gone from the Chairmanship of the Highway Commission to the Governorship two years ago, winning over Mrs. Ferguson in a heated second primary contest, it is not a far-fetched imagination in anticipating that Governor Ferguson will exercise every means open to her in gaining control of the Highway Department. In fact the move on the part of the Ferguson and others last week to enjoin the Highway Commission from making further contracts involving the expenditure of highway funds, is evidence that the new administration is laying plans to gain control of the department at the earliest practicable moment.

There are more ways than one by which the Governor may gain control of the Highway Department in the event the holdover members of the Commission refuse to resign or fail to cooperate with the Governor in such way as she may desire. Article 5067, Revised Civil Statutes, 1925, provides that "All State officers appointed by the Governor, where the mode of their removal is not otherwise provided by law, may be removed by him for good and sufficient cause, to be spread on the records of his office, and to be reported by him to the next session of the Legislature thereafter." Another method is that a friendly Legislature so amend existing statutes as will provide for additional members of the Commission, thus giving the Governor the opportunity to appoint a majority of the Commission. And still another method is to amend the law so as to provide for an elective Commission by popular vote, but authorizing the Governor, upon taking effect of the new law, to appoint the members to serve until the next general election. It will be recalled that the Ferguson advocated an elective commission during the campaign last summer. Whether the Forty-Third Legislature responds to either of these methods remains to be seen, but in the event it fails to do so, then it will be up to the Governor to exercise the authority given her in Article 5067; provided the courts sustain such action, there being no other statutory authority for the removal of Highway Commissioners. Other departments under the six-year term management include the State Prison System; State Board of Control; State Health Department; Board of Pardons; Board of Water Engineers; Commission Aid Court of Criminal Appeals; State Board of Insurance; Game, Fish and Oyster Department, and the Industrial Accident Board. The State Board of Education; the Board of Directors for all State Educational Institutions; as well as all examining boards governing trades and professions, fall in the class of six-year terms, with one-third of such memberships appointed every two years by the Governor.

Among the appointments available to the Governor not under six-year term commissions or boards, will be a Secretary of State, salary $2,000; Adjutant General, salary $3,000; State Auditor, salary $7,500; State Banking Commissioner, salary $5,000; Three Livestock Sanitary Commissioners, Chairman's salary $2,500, the other two members, $1,250; State Reclamation Commissioner, salary $3,600; Commissioner, salary $3,000; State Tax Commissioner, salary $2,500; State Prosecuting Attorney before Court of Criminal Appeals, salary $3,600. In addition to the above list of appointments will be numerous minor appointments, as well as the opportunity for making many changes in the personnel of clerks, stenographers and other employees in the various departments and divisions of government.

The Superintendent of each of the seventeen State Eleemosynary Institutions is appointed by the State Board of Control, with the exception that the Superintendent of the Confederate Widens Home must have the approval of the Governor. Mr. and Mrs. Jno. E. Robertson returned to their home in Houston Monday after spending several days here with relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Curry spent the week end in Abilene the guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Austin. Mrs. Tom French of Dallas and Miss Maybell Taylor of Albany spent the Thanksgiving holidays with their parents, Dr. and Mrs. L. F. Taylor.
