Caprock Jamboree to Feature Kansas Group Saturday Night

The Dwain Ingram Family from Tribune, Kansas will be first on the Caprock Jamboree stage for another great night of entertainment beginning at 7:00 p.m. Saturday, August 1, at the Showbarn in Silverton.

The Ingrams have been entertaining for many years, beginning when Dwain started his own band while in high school. Since then the band has gone through many changes and now Dwain is teaching his six grandchildren to play various instruments. They are beginning to build quite a name for themselves among Bluegrass groups.

Cortlandt, 14-year-old grandson, is becoming well known as a fiddler. He already has won numerous awards in fiddler's contests around the country. He was grand champion of the High Plains Heritage Days in Goodland, Kansas, and also won first place awards in Cheyenne, Wyoming; Pueblo and Fort Collins, Colorado. A first-place award was given Cortlandt in the junior division of the fiddler's contest at the 1992 Bob Wills Day celebration in Turkey.

Other groups making their first appearance on the Jamboree will be "Harmony" from Lockney and "OttaBowns" from Littlefield.

Marla McCown, music director of First Baptist Church in Silverton, will be making a first-time appearance. She has been performing on stage for a number of years. One of her most recent accomplishments was as a singer and guitarist for the musical production of "TEXAS". She was part of the performance for three years.

Marcy Ferguson of Lubbock also will be performing for the first time on the Jamboree.

Last, but certainly not least, returning by popular demand will be the 3M Company from Matador.

This is a show you certainly won't want to miss! Get your chairs ready and make your plans to come early and eat hamburgers with all the trimmings prepared by the Quitaque Lions Club, beginning at 6:00 p.m.

Summertime Bash Planned Here July 30

Another Summertime Bash has been scheduled for Thursday, July 30, from 7:00 until 9:00 p.m. at the Briscoe County Showbarn in Silverton.

All Briscoe County youth are invited to attend.

Those attending will learn some new folk games and have the opportunity to dance to a variety of songs.

Refreshments will be served, and anyone who would like to bring refreshments is asked to call the Extension Office at 823-2131.

Parents are welcome to attend.

The Dwain Ingram Band of Tribune, Kansas will be making its debut on the stage of the Caprock Jamboree Saturday night.

1992 Property Tax Rates in City of Silverton
This notice concerns 1992 property tax rates for the City of Silverton. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Steps to More Confidence Given

by Ron Trusler
M.Ed., LPC, LCDC, LMFT
Director of Clinical & Substance Abuse Services
Central Plains Center for MHMR
& Substance Abuse

Lack of confidence is common and has many side effects. This article will give general steps you can take to having more confidence.

1. Recognize your strengths and weaknesses—set your goals according to your strengths. For example, if you don't like people very much, a salesman job may not be the best for you.

2. Look at where you have come from (your roots) and try to deal with past hurts and work toward forgiving others involved in those hurts. Also, forgive yourself for mistakes, sins, failures, and past embarrassments.

3. Don't indulge in guilt/shame. They limit your personal value. Doing bad things does not make you a bad person.

4. Build a realistic view of "reality". "Reality" is nothing more than a shared agreement among people to call something the same way. There are always other views. Another's views may be different from yours but that does not mean you are being rejected or put down.

5. Don't say bad things about yourself, like "stupid, ugly, failure," etc.

6. Don't allow others to criticize you as a person. They can evaluate your actions or performance, but not you as a person.

7. Remember, that failures and disappointments can be blessings in disguise. You may be avoiding a bigger let-down later.

It takes more than reading things to build your confidence. It takes application and practice.

Boll weevil specialists from across Texas met in San Angelo last week to discuss the progress of an advanced computer-model for strategic management of boll weevil, cotton's worst economic pest, into the 21st century. Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. (PCG), through its Boll Weevil Steering Committee, is sponsoring the work being conducted by elements of the Texas A&M University (TAMU) System.

The basis for the advanced strategic planning tool now in its first year of development is another computer model, developed over the past three years, that predicts timing and level of boll weevil emergence from overwintering habitat in the spring. The overwintering survival and emergence model combines the research work of Dr. Don Rummel, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) Lubbock, Dr. Jeff Slosser, TAES Vernon, Dr. Tom Fuchs, Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) San Angelo, and Dr. Nick Stone, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Virginia.

Many elements are integrated into the strategic management model. The prototype is built on information from three counties (Dickens, Motley and Kent) within PCG's boll weevil diapause control zone.

A component of the model is a geographic information system (GIS) in which location and acreage of cotton fields together with the results of a comprehensive vegetation survey, land usage, towns, roads and surface water also are included. Boll weevil infestation data collected over the 28 years of PCG's program operation since 1964 are a unique and valuable resource for the project.

Drs. Rummel, Slosser and Fuchs continue to provide the research data for the new project. The programming and model development is coordinated by Dr. Ted Wilson, professor of entomology at TAMU, College Station. Dr. Wilson is developing a model that simulates boll weevil development and population increase which links to an existing cotton crop system simulation also created by him.

As insect and crop development are linked to the GIS data base, users of the model will be able to forecast overwintering survival, emergence, summer feeding and yield loss for each of many existing and promising management strategies. The effectiveness of these alternate management approaches will be evaluated in field trials on the High Plains Boll Weevil Control Program under the leadership of Roger Haldenby, Program Coordinator for PCG.

The model is targeted for completion in 1995 and should increase the ability to predict major boll weevil outbreaks. Insecticide use in PCG's control zone could be lowered by as much as 40

ASCS will be reviewing contracts this year to determine eligibility for loans and loan deficiency payments. A meeting will be held Wednesday, August 5, at 10:00 a.m. at the Holiday Inn Civic Center in Lubbock to provide the cotton industry with contract information regarding program benefit eligibility. The program will be jointly presented by National Cotton Council staff and Washington ASCS representatives. All industry members interested or involved in contracting are encouraged to attend.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company is asking the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC) for approval to begin charging $3.00 per bill, for duplicate paper copies of a customer's bill up to 15 pages. If the customer's bill exceeds 15 pages, an additional five cents per page will apply. 1992 Property Tax Rates in BRISCOE COUNTY

This notice concerns 1992 property tax rates for Briscoe County. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

	General Fund	Farm to Market/ Flood Control Fund	Special Road/ Bridge Fund
Last year's tax rate:
Last year's operating taxes	$ 410,748	$ 0	$ 0
Last year's debt taxes	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0
Last year's total taxes	$ 410,748	$ 0	$ 0
Last year's tax base	$ 78,967,354	$ 0	$ 0
Last year's total tax rate	$.52015/$100	$ 0 /$100	$ 0 /$100
This year's effective tax rate:
Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 410,748	$ 0	$ 0
+ This year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting value of new property)	$ 78,957,795	$ 0	$ 0
= This year's effective tax rate for each fund	$.52021/$100	$ 0 /$100	$ 0 /$100
Total effective tax rate	$.52021/$100

In the first year a county collects the additional sales tax, it must insert the following lines unless its first adjustment was made last year.

- Sales tax adjustment rate	$ 0 /$100
= Effective tax rate	$ 0 /$100

x 1.03 = maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing $.53581/$100

This year's rollback tax rate:

Last year's adjusted operating taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property and including taxes for state criminal justice mandate)
	$ 410,748	$ 0	$ 0
+ This year's adjusted tax base	$ 78,957,795	$ 0	$ 0
= This year's effective operating rate	$.52021/$100	$ 0 /$100	$ 0 /$100
x 1.08 = this year's maximum operating rate	$.56182/$100	$ 0 /$100	$ 0 /$100
+ This year's debt rate	$ 0 /$100	$ 0 /$100	$ 0 /$100
= This year's rollback rate for each fund	$.56182/$100	$ 0 /$100	$ 0 /$100
This year's total rollback rate	$.56182/$100

A county that collects the additional sales tax, including one that collects the tax for the first time this year, must insert the following lines:

- Sales tax adjustment rate	$ 0 /$100
= Rollback tax rate	$ 0 /$100

Food Safety on the Road

Do you have everything packed for your summer vacation? Many families pack everything they can into the car for the summer trips, in order to eliminate unnecessary stops along the way. When taking food along, for roadside picnics and to keep little stomachs full, there are many things you must remember in order to avoid possible illness.

Packing and storing food with food safety in mind can prevent vacation disasters from occurring. Just remember the "Five Rules of Travelling with Food."

First of all, you have to plan ahead. You need to have plenty of ice or frozen gel-packs on hand before you begin to pack. If you plan on bringing perishable items, such as meat, salads or sandwiches, then you must have plenty of ice to keep your cooler cool, for the entire trip.

The second rule to keep in mind is to pack safely. Taking items from the refrigerator and immediately placing them in the cooler will greatly reduce your chances of a food-borne illness starting to grow. Some items, such as meat, can be placed in the cooler while still frozen. It will thaw during the trip, thus extending its safety and self-life. A full cooler will maintain a cold temperature much longer than one that is only partially full. Remaining space can be packed with ice, fruit or non-perishables. Taking two coolers is a good idea for long trips. One can be used for the day's lunch and snacks, while the other one is used for items needed later.

The third rule is to preserve the cold temperature by replenishing the ice as soon as it begins melting.

Throwing out foods which have reached 40° F. is the fourth rule. Bacteria will grow quickly at warm temperatures. By the end of the day, if the ice has melted and the food feels warm, discard any meat left. Non-perishables, such as fruit, vegetables, breads or drinks should be alright since they do not require refrigeration.

The fifth rule is to protect your family from disease-causing bacteria by keeping hands and utensils clean. Pack some moist towelettes, if soap and water aren't readily available.

Buying family-sized quantities and distributing to each person, can be a real money-saver to families traveling. Offering a small snack every hour or so also will help to prevent boredom during long trips. Some snacks are better than others in the car, so plan ahead and have a great time on your trip!

Family Attends Dye Reunion at Matador Sunday

Ted and LaVern Kingery, Eliza Kingery, Anthony, Kathy, Kara and Shauna Kingery were in Matador Sunday, July 26, to attend the 59th Dye Reunion at the Senior Citizens Building. Seventy-two registered, making it the largest group in attendance in a number of years.

The parents of Eliza Jane Dye Kingery, James William and Beulah Frances Turner Dye, started the family get-together at Whiteflat in 1931. They were parents of eleven children, one of whom, a daughter, died in 1918 at the age of eleven months. Only twice has the group failed to meet annually, once during World War II due to gas rationing and again in 1947, the year Mr. Dye died.

The only surviving children are the eldest, Eliza Kingery of Silverton, and the youngest, Clare Smelser of Big Spring. Mrs. Kingery had all of her family present, which included her four children, six grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Anthony and Glen Kingery grilled steaks for the group which also enjoyed some of Comer's fresh sweet corn.

4th Cavalry to Bivouac In Silvertown August 15

Amarillo-based E Company of the 4th U. S. Cavalry Regiment (Memorial) will bivouac in Silvertown Saturday, August 15, to re-enact the lives of the horse soldiers during the 1870s. Troopers will demonstrate their weapons and skills and display their without changing, and it is no wonder that it was said that the Indians "could smell them coming."

Mackenzie's men usually didn't wear sabers, because the Indians hated their "longknives" and usually kept their distance from them.

and children remained in camp. The braves had fled to fight another day. Mackenzie's men swept past the camp in pursuit of the braves and killed five or six of them in a running battle.

Returning to the camp, troopers found the Indian lodges and most of their possessions in disarray from the hasty retreat. Soldiers burned the lodges, and gathered a large herd of horses, possibly as many as 1,800, to take back to their own camp in Tule Canyon several miles to the south.

Indians rarely attacked the more heavily armed soldiers, but Mackenzie knew the braves would be back for their horses. He reasoned that the only way to protect his men from raids and put the Indians out of business would be to destroy their mounts.

A troop of about 80 men spent the entire next day killing approximately 1,600 horses near Mackenzie's camp in Tule Canyon. About 100 of the best had been given to the regiment's Indian scouts and another 100 of the best horses were given to the government. The legend of the horses having been stampeded over the cliffs to their death was dispelled by the regiment's historians who say that they never gleaned that fact from any of the stories written by men who actually witnessed the event. It is known that the troopers probably didn't have enough ammunition to spare to shoot that many horses, and it is felt that many probably had their throats cut.

It is doubtful that so many horses could be stampeded over a cliff, since uniforms and camp equipment. Their camp will be set up across the street west of the Malt Shop.

Members of the 4th U. S. Cavalry (Memorial) describe their uniforms, weapons and equipment carried on their person and horses at their bivouac. Note the troopers' "cabins" and the swallowtail flag with 34 stars representing the 34 states in the Union in 1874.

Members of the group began this hobby as a way to show the real history of the period because the versions seen in movies and on television often are far from realistic.

The horse soldiers of Col. Ranald S. Mackenzie were expected to ride for many miles without food or rest, fight a battle and ride again to safety.

Troopers, averaging 140 pounds each, wore heavy wool military jackets, wool trousers and socks, cotton longjohns and muleskin boots. They carried about 25 pounds of weaponry and ammunition around their waists, and with the rider, his weapons and equipment, each horse carried approximately 250 pounds. This included a cloth sack in which 15 pounds of grain, considered enough to supplement the horse's food for three days, was carried.

The wider the stripe down the leg of the uniform pants denoted his higher rank. Gold stripes signified the cavalry, red stripes were for men of the artillery, and green stripes were for members of the medical corps.

Mackenzie's men were accompanied by a very good surgeon who kept the mortality rate of the troops very low.

Mackenzie was described as a man who never forced his troops to wear their heavy wool jackets away from the garrison and while on campaign he allowed them to dress in just their longjohn shirts and wool pants. The troopers were said to have lived in their longjohns for five or six weeks at a time

The 4th Cavalry's biggest triumph may have been ending the Indian threat on the High Plains with very little bloodshed—except for the horses which were slaughtered at the Mackenzie Battleground west of Lake Mackenzie.

Several hundred Indians had left government reservations and had taken up residence in Palo Duro Canyon when Col. Mackenzie led about 300 troopers after them in late 1874. The Indians were considered a threat to settlement, and Mackenzie was to get them back to the reservation.

Palo Duro Canyon made a perfect hiding place for the renegade Kiowa, Comanche, Southern Cheyenne and Arapho Indians. After each raid of a farm or settlement, they would disappear back into the canyons. The 4th Cavalry's first hurdle was to find them; no white man ever had.

But when braves attacked a sentry post at Mackenzie's camp near the canyon one evening, the regiment got its chance. Soldiers gave chase, only to lose the Indians in the darkness. But troopers continued their pursuit in the general direction of escape, and eventually came upon bluffs overlooking a large Indian camp.

Those troopers led the main body of Mackenzie's force back to the canyon rim, where they eventually found a trail leading to the floor about a mile from the Indian camp. The soldiers descended, leading their horses down single file, as the Indians below scurried to escape with what they could.

By the time Mackenzie's men could gather for battle on the canyon floor, probably after 2:00 a.m., only women the first horses to arrive at the cliff would stop, halting the stampede. Of course, a few might accidentally go over the cliff, but based on the natural behavior of horses, it is doubtful that so many could be killed in this fashion.

The slaughter sent the Indians back to the reservation, opening the region to white settlers. Only eight Indians were killed and one injured. Mackenzie's troops suffered only one injury, to its bugler, who was "gut-shot" but recovered through the efforts of the regiment's surgeon and due to the fact that he had not eaten in 30 hours. One other soldier had died of illness before the battle.

Mackenzie, himself, had been wounded in the battle of Blanco Canyon earlier in the campaign.

That was the extent of cavalry casualties in the campaign, earning Mackenzie high praise from his superiors as an effective campaigner. His move to wipe out a herd of horses had spared human lives and forced the Indians back to the reservation.

Mackenzie and his men later were dispatched elsewhere to quell Indian uprisings, and they were responsible for finishing the job Custer couldn't do, as well as getting Indians back to their reservations in two or three other states.

INSURANCE ANSWERS

Strengthen your bargaining position if insurance company totals your car

You treat your car with tender loving care. It may be five years old but it looks and runs like new.

But a speeding truck rear-ends your pride and joy. Your head bumps the windshield, and you feel a pain in your neck.

The other driver's insurance company pronounces your car a total loss. That means the company thinks it would be cheaper to pay the "actual cash value" of your car than to have it fixed.

Courts have interpreted "actual cash value" to mean the price you would pay on the open market — that is, at retail — to obtain an automobile similar to your car that was damaged.

Many drivers feel shortchanged by the insurance settlements they receive. But there are ways you can strengthen your negotiating position.

The company is likely to base its offer on the retail section of The NADA (National Association of Automobile Dealers) Official Used Car Guide — the "blue book" — or a special pricing service to which some insurance companies subscribe.

Neither may accurately reflect what your car is worth, based on its condition, special features and local market conditions.

An insurance company is more likely to raise its offer if you can document that your auto would sell for a higher price in your area.

One way to do this is to visit several used car dealers and obtain written quotes of what they would charge for a vehicle identical to yours.

Newspaper advertisements are another form of documentation.

The standard Texas auto policy provides a way to resolve a deadlock with the insurance company over the amount to be paid. It is called "appraisal."

You and the insurance company each choose a damage appraiser. The two appraisers select an umpire. An estimate to which any two of the three participants agree is binding. Each party pays its chosen appraiser and shares equally in the other expenses of the appraisal.

The insurance company is obligated to pay the lesser of the actual cash value of your car or the cost of repairing or replacing it with a vehicle of like type and quality.

This, however, might not equal what it costs to pay off the loan on your car.

Sometimes, an automobile owner would rather get his or her vehicle repaired than take a cash settlement based on its actual cash value.

You can keep your car if you are willing to deduct its salvage value from the insurance settlement. You can document the salvage value with estimates from several salvage yards. If you choose to do this, be sure to record the telephone numbers of the salvage yards and the names of the people with whom you spoke.

Insurers know that if an accident case goes to court, a jury might award damages for pain and suffering as well as for economic losses. A reasonable amount for pain and suffering could, therefore, be built into your injury claim settlement and may provide a cushion if your economic losses were not totally covered.

You might wish to consult an attorney before making a final decision whether to accept an appraisal or insurance settlement. Injury claims often take longer to resolve than those involving auto repair. There might be circumstances in which the company offers an acceptable settlement on your auto damage while your injury claim remains open. Otherwise, if you were injured, don't sign a release until you are satisfied with your total settlement. Get a letter from your doctor estimating the cost and length of your future treatment.

Any insurance company that delays payment for your car repairs to pressure you into signing a release on your injury claim is violating Texas insurance law.

In addition, Texas has a new law requiring prompt payment of claims. An insurance company must acknowledge your claim and begin investigating it within 15 days after receiving written notice. It must accept or reject the claim within 15 days after you have submitted all requested documentation to prove your loss. Once the company agrees to pay, it must send your check or draft within five business days. Any company that cannot meet these deadlines must explain why; it then has 45 days to approve or reject the claim.

Editor's Note: Texas State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison addresses various issues related to personal finance and state government. However, these views are not intended to replace the advice of reputable financial advisers or other professional counselors.

The purpose of a credit report is to provide a lending institution with a snapshot of a potential borrower's financial standing, credit reputation and credit history. While the timeliness with which you pay your bills is an important component of a credit report, it is not the only information that is included. Your place of employment, court judgments, and the number of times your credit history has been requested in the last year are other items that often are included.

You are entitled to receive a copy of your credit report. If you have been denied credit because of a negative credit report I suggest that you ask the lending institution which credit reporting bureau they use. Contact the bureau and request that a copy of your report be sent to you. In most cases this request must be made in writing. You should receive a copy of your credit report within two to four weeks of your written request.

Occasionally the three major credit reporting bureaus; TRW, Equifax and Trans Union, make a mistake on a credit report. Information is gathered from a variety of sources, such as retailers and credit card companies. Mistakes can occur at any point during the transfer of this information.

This notice concerns 1992 property tax rates for Silverton I.S.D. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:

Last year's operating taxes	$	88,479

In the first year a hospital district or city collects the additional sales tax, it must insert the following lines unless its first adjustment was made last year:

- Sales tax adjustment rate	$	0	/ $100
- Effective tax rate	$	0	/ $100

x 1.03 = maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing

$.17595	/ $100

90% of Hospitals Report It's a Problem —

Hospital Overcrowding Strains Emergency Care

When you're sick you want immediate medical attention. Unfortunately, as emergency departments across the country continue to close at an alarming rate, long waiting times for care have become the norm.

Overcrowding is a growing trend in which the seriously ill and injured are being turned away or delayed care. In fact, many hospitals, because of limited resources, staff, and space are forced to temporarily close their emergency departments to all incoming patients and go on "diversion," meaning ambulance patients are sent to the next open emergency department. This not only delays the patient's treatment but in some cases also increases waiting times for others in need of pre-hospital emergency medical services, such as ambulances and helicopters.

A nationwide survey of nursing staff and managers on the problem of overcrowding in hospitals and emergency departments found that nearly 90 percent of those responding considered overcrowding to have become an issue in their state or region within the past two years.

"It's [overcrowding] not just affecting the poor, not just affecting the uninsured, it affects everyone. Whether you're hit while driving your Mercedes or you're an indigent stabbed in a knife fight, that's not going to change the fact that if a trauma center is busy or a hospital is on diversion, you'll end up playing Russian roulette trying to find a hospital that can take you," says Nigel Keep, RN, MICN, CEN (certified emergency nurse), nursing services manager at Alta District Hospital in Dinuba, California, and co-author of the survey on overcrowding.

The survey, conducted by the Emergency Nurses Association (ENA), shows that in a majority of states overcrowding occurs when there are no available hospital beds for patients who are ready to be admitted from the emergency department. Either a lack of funding or a nursing shortage usually is to blame for the insufficient number of hospital beds.

"I see the frustration," says Vicky Bradley, RN, MS, CEN, who in addition to her daily duties as divisional director of emergency services at the University of Kentucky's Albert B. Chandler Medical Center in Lexington, serves as president of the Emergency Nurses Association. "The front door of the emergency room is open, yet the back door is closed — we can't get patients up to their beds. Nurses feel overloaded in trying to meet so many diverse patient needs. You can't make people happy because you're being pulled five different ways," she continues.

"It's [overcrowding] not just affecting the poor, not just affecting the uninsured, it affects everyone."

Adding to the problem is the increasing number of patients who, unable to pay for medical care because they are uninsured or underinsured, inappropriately rely on the emergency department as their primary health provider. These patients know hospitals will treat them, despite their inability to pay. Under the current system, hospitals are not adequately compensated for the high costs of caring for these patients who usually are sicker and require more care for longer periods of time. The financial strain can be devastating. In fact, according to the American Hospital Association, more than 600 hospitals across the country have closed since 1980 — further intensifying the overcrowding crisis for remaining facilities.

The cumulative effect of these factors is a severe backlog of patients in emergency departments nationwide. Because staff must provide ongoing acute care, they are forced to delay basic emergency care to incoming sick and injured individuals — often for hours, sometimes for days. In some facilities in New York City, patients are waiting for five to seven days before being admitted to the hospital. In fact, some patients never are admitted to the hospital and are treated for as long as a week in the emergency department and then discharged.

"It's like 'no frills' — you just try to meet everyone's basic needs. That's not the way you want to do nursing care. I think the overcrowding problem takes a lot of the caring touch out of nursing," explains Bradley, an 11-year veteran of emergency nursing.

Because emergency nurses serve on the front lines of health care, they play a vital role in the resolution of this crisis. Last year, ENA drafted recommendations to begin resolving this problem. Their recommendations include: providing financial incentives to hospitals that offer critical and emergency care; addressing the shortage of nurses by providing incentive for students to choose nursing as a career, as well as increasing federal funding for nursing research; crafting a national plan that makes health care affordable to all Americans; and supporting education, prevention, and treatment programs to help reduce the number of injuries and illnesses associated with human neglect, abuse, and violence.

Since injuries are one of the most expensive health problems in the United States, ENA also recommends funding public protection programs, enforcement legislation, and educational programs that would help control the severity of injuries. These programs include, mandatory air bags, increased roadside sobriety checks, stricter motorcycle helmet and seat belt laws, and funding for DUI prevention programs.

Because many of the injuries seen in the emergency department involve children, ENA is offering a free brochure on child injury prevention and home safety. It offers tips on what to have in your home in case of an emergency and guidelines on what to do and what not to do when a child is injured. The brochure is available by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Emergency Nurses Association, 230 East Ohio, Suite 600, Chicago, IL 60611-3297.

Coulter Gardens and Nursery is the end product of Jim, Sheila and Warren Reid's goal to own a garden store in Amarillo.

Garden Store is Realization Of Long-Held Goal

Coulter Gardens and Nursery, located at 4200 Coulter, was started by Jim Reid, his wife, the former Sheila Jarnagin, and their son, Warren. The store is a retail garden center that sells trees, shrubs, flowers, fertilizers and spray solutions. The Reid family also does minor planting jobs, but no major landscaping. Coulter Gardens and Nursery is a Christmas tree center when the holiday season rolls around.

Jim and Sheila Reid are 1963 graduates of Silverton High School. He graduated from West Texas State University with an agriculture business degree in 1968. It was his goal to own his own garden center. Reid's goal became a reality in January 1991, when he moved Coulter Gardens and Nursery from its 34th and Coulter location, which they had leased, to its present location at 4200 Coulter, which they own. Sheila and Warren share ownership with Jim.

The Reid family attends the Central Church of Christ where Jim is a deacon. They do everything together. The family built their home from the ground up from materials they obtained from an old air base barracks, which they dismantled themselves. They also landscaped the two acres where the house sits. Using their talent and a spirit of family cooperation, they have turned their store into a show-place.

The death rate from heart attack declined 30 percent from 1979 to 1989, says the American Heart Association, but heart attack remains the number one cause of death. The AHA estimates that about 1.5 million Americans will have a heart attack in 1992, and about 500,000 of them will die.

BAD HABITS MAY BE FUN,
 BUT WE PAY THE PRICE LATER

Many of us, because of job stress, family problems, or just being "one of the gang," have fallen into the trap of tobacco, alcohol or some other drug, and have become addicted. "I can quit any time I want to," we say, but some of us never seem to want to. "It's fun." "I enjoy it." "It calms my nerves." "It makes me feel happy." Maybe it is fun now, but we will eventually have to pay the price in permanent damage to the heart, lungs, liver, brains, and worst of all, our unborn children. And speaking of children, we should teach them to shun these things, before it's too late. Prevention is a lot easier than trying to stop, once we're "hooked." Your clergyman can be of great help in this situation, so have a talk with him. It's a vital first step.

Many a dangerous temptation comes in fine colors that are but skin-deep.
 - Mathew Henry

"And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil."
 - Matthew 6:13
