Interesting Messages To Hearers

The revival compaign at the Haskell Church of Christ is attracting good crowds of people. Minister A. F. Thurman preached the first two sermons which pervious years, for the election were on Sunday morning and of directors for the next ensuing Sunday night. His subject for both Sunday night. His subject for both services was "The Prodical Son"

> Evangelist Cled E. Wallace preached his first sermon of the meeting on Monday night. His subject was "Things That Edify, and Things That Hinder the Church." In this sermon, special emphasis was placed upon the unruly tongue as a hindrance.

Almost a capacity crowd heard the Tuesday night sermon. The Church at Corinth." Brother Wallace brought out the history of the Corinthian Church, from the time of its establishment in the center nees, and which procedure will of its establishment in the center enable each and every member to vote individually for his prefering in this prefering letter. purification after the second Cor-inthian letter. He compared the Church at Corinth with the church today. He showed that they were and had their hardships just as we do today; also that we should bear with each other faults in a kinder way than we sometimes do. In summarizing his sermon, Brother Wallace pointed out the fact that the Church at Corinth, was composed of those who heard the word, believed and were Baptised.

The revival will continue through this week and next. Visit-ors have been present from Stam-ford, Swenson, Munday and other places.—(Contributed).

Three Haskell men lost their lives and five others were injur-ed, last Friday in one of the worst highway accidents to occur in Haskell county. The men, all employed on road work in Precinct 4, southwest of Haskell, were returning from a day's work when the truck on which they were riding overturned and was practically demolished.

Alonzo Dunn, 47 year old war veteran was killed instantly when more rapid rate than last year, according to Mike B. Watson, As-

John B. Tucker, sustaining a fractured skull, broken left arm and right leg, and internally injured, died Sunday morning at 9 o'clock in the Stamford Sanitarium from his injuries. Jessie T. Cook, 33, who received a fracture at the base of his skull, and spinal injuries, was the third victim, passing away Sunday at 12:30 in the Stamford Hospital. Six others injured were: Fred Bishop, with right should-er probably fractured and gashed wrenched and severe cuts about face and scalp.

G. W. Ammons, injuries to back and head. A. R. Graham, torn ligaments in back and shoulder. Jesse Childress, bruised about body and several sprains.

W. E. Brock, slight cuts about face and superficial bruises.

None of the five are injured seriously, according to reports. All of the men live in Haskell.

Overturns On Dirt Road

The truck, owned by the county and driven by Frank Reynolds, went out of control—probably from defective brakes or steeri gear-swerved to a deep ditch and upset, hurtling men and heavy work equipment in every direc-tion. The mishap occurred about five miles south of Haskell on the

Sayles road, and within a mile of Highway 30. Olin Breeden, living n witnessed the accident and the first to reach the scene, and aid of passing motorists on the highway was summoned.

Breeden said the truck was traveling possibly 25 miles an hour, (Continued on Page 12)

T. A. Pinkerton-

Like many other good farmers T. A. Pinkerton does not depend on crop production alone for proits on the farm. For the past several years Mrs. Pinkerton has been that need to be done. We believe he had gathered 48 eggs. They experimenting on a small flock of poultry. She finds that the larger breeds pay her better than the smaller breeds. She sold last month 222 eggs or 18 1-2 dozen from 38 hens of the Buff Orpington breed. She keeps a record and er statement is based on facts.

We learned first hand while in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Stark last Sunday night that a few days ago while Mr. and Mrs. Stark were away from home that their children living nearby had slipped into the home and placed a dinner on the table fit for the kings in honor of their mother's birthday. When their parents returned home they found the table so laden with good things to eat that it almost groaned because of its burden. This was a glad surprise and the entire family spent a good time feasting. We know the cake was good for Mrs. Stark gave us a few big slices.

Bud Davis-

Tractor farming has a fascination to Bud Davis living west of town. He is up with his work and eady to plant his row crops when the spring puts in appearance. Bud is like most of the other farmers. He was not too sure about the weather staying warm. The cold days of February seemed to run a blazer on quite a number of the farmers of Haskell County. He reports his grain crop looking very good since the warm weather and the shower. His cattle came through the winter in fine condi-tion and he says they are giving lots of milk.

And then at last I was ready, with the knife at my hip and a pistol in either hand. . . I had to wait full five minutes

The two were mounting apace. Why this was I could not imagthe. Why should they run? The stars were fighting against them. But for their haste, I should not have heard them so soon.

The rapid, regular shuffle began to grow clear. . . .

Unless they were moving as one, the shoes of one of the two were rubber-soled, for only one set of of footfalls came to my ears. In that case-

I could have done myself violence. Pharaoh was more than warned. My shot, being fired when it was, had reported the ugly news that Dewdrop was dead. The fact that no one came down would confirm this report. And no one could have killed Dewdrop, unless he had first made an end of Bugle and Rush. The truth was in Pharach's

I am bound to confess that I eannot defend my annoyance at finding that I must fight Pharach instead of playing the butcher as I had already done, I can only say that at that time I had no fear for myself; but since I knew very well that the man was as swift and as cupning as I was slow, I was full of apprehension lest he should escape. The bare thought of such an outcome made the sweat start on my brow. Live-after what he had done? Live-to walk out of that room and do it again?

so savage was the report that four or five minutes went by before my full hearing came back; but here, within such four walls, the shock of the violent explosion had appalled the drums of my cars.

To listen for Pharaoh's coming was, therefore, but waste of time, and, since he might arrive at any moment, I made my preparations as swiftly as efer I could.

These were simple-there was not much I could do.

The chair on which Rush was seated I slewed to the left, so that the beam of his torch fell full on the cut in the wall. I then took Dewdrop's torch and studied the room, marking the furniture well in case I must move in the dark. Then I slid the torch into my pocket and lay down behind the great table of which I have spoken

This was a pedestal table of carved, gray oak. Between the two pedestals there was a knee-hole or archway three feet wide by some twenty-six inches high. Looking through this, I directly commanded the cut, while the pedestal offered good cover on either hand. I ventured to settle myself with the greatest care, for I knew that possibly could I must kill my man before he had entered the room: If Pharaoh could contrive to come in, the advantage I presently held would be utterly lost, for, though we should, in a sense, be fighting on even terms, Pharaoh was an expert at murder, but I was no more than a resolute ama-

Since the cut was so narrow, the gauntlet he had to run was extremely strict and, unless my pistol misfired, I did not see how he could do it and save his life. So I lay very still from force of habit straining my useless ears with my pistol-hand on the plinth of the pedestal-table and my eyes on the cut that was waiting to frame my

After a little, I found myself thinking how soft the carpet was. .

I do not know how long I waited, but the first intimation I had of Pharaoh's approach was the sudden roar of his pistol as he fired at and shattered the torch. I fear this tale is a record of bad mistakes, but when I was laying my ambush I made the worst of them all. I have no excuse to offer. I think a child would have seen that he must so place the torch that, while it illuminated the cut, it could not itself be seen from the head of the winding stair. Be that as it may, the horrid shock and the darkness took me aback, and when I fired at the cut. I fired an instant too late. Pharach's answer came swift as a flash. and his bullet went through my knee-hole, to lodge in the wall be-And then-silence.

course; and, remembering that, I at least had the sense to move. An instant later I was standing behind Rush's chair. And then for the first time that night I felt the stab of something I knew to be fear. was as good as blindfolded.

my ears were stopped: four walls hemmed me in, and somewhere within their compass was moving-Death. Pharaoh was trying to find me, stealing this way and that. He had only to brush against me, touch me with the tips of his fingers, and I should be-caught. His deadly swiftness of action would see to that. Any moment this might happen. Any moment the roar of his pistol might make the last sound I should hear. He might be but three feet off-now. In another instant I might feel his breath on my cheek. . . .

I began to tremble: my knees felt suddenly loose: my cousin's words came leering into my mind, "I never liked blindman's buff." . . .

It was the remembrance of Helena that put to shame my fear. I had heard her whip Pharaoh-here. in this very room; whip him before his fellows; cut him across the face, and the whip she had used was my courage. "You fear him . . you fear his hand." For an instant I thought upon her and strangely enough remembered the way she had pushed her hair from her temples, as though by that pretty gesture to banish care. Then I turned refreshed to my duty, which was to take Pharaoh's life. At once I set out to find him, with my left hand stretched before me and my pistol all ready.

I truly believe that my action saved my life, for Pharaoh passed me in the darkness and came upon Rush, I knew this was so, for he fired upon the body, supposing it to be me, and the flame that lenged from his pistol gave me a mark to aim at, instead of lighting my face. In a dash I had fired and had

This showed me, once for all, that so far as snap shots were concerned, I stood no chance whatever against such a man. As I whipped to one side, I made up my mind I must not fire again until I knew for certain that my bullet was going to kill. In a word, if I was to win, I must come to close quarters with Pharaoh, if not to grips. I had now come back to the table. and, as I edged my way round it, I thought of the knee-hole below. I think it will be admitted that in making you way to and fro in a room that is dark, your tendency is to skirt the furniture which you encounter, keeping in touch with its edge, because, I suppose, you like to be able to feel your way. After all, this is natural: blind men move by the wall. If, then, I entered the knee-hole and let Pharaoh move to and fro. sooner of later he would skirt the pedestal table, and, though I should not hear him, I had put out my hands, and I should feel the slack of his trousers as he went by. An instant later I was crouching beneath the archway, with my pistol on the carpet before me and my empty hands outstretched upon

I had not long to wait. When I did not return his fire, I fancy the man was uncertain whether or not I was dead. He, therefore, sought the spot from which I had fired and, finding nobody there, turned and came to the table exactly as I had done. And exactly as I had done, he began to edge his way round it. . . . The slack of his trousers brushed

In a flash I had him by the ankles and, ripping his feet from beneath him had brought him down on his side. Then I snatched my pistol, thrust it into his stomach and pressed the trigger-in vain.

The magazine was empty. Slovenly to the last, Rush had never troubled to replenish his clip. Pharaoh had fallen on his right and so on his pistol arm. While this was taking his weight, he could not aim, and though in a flash he had thrown his weight to the left. in that instant my fingers had caught the wrist of his pistol-hand. For a moment he fought for his freedom: then he let himself fall on his back; but now my wits were working and before it could reach his pocket, I had hold of his other wrist.

And in that instant the room was flooded with light. For a moment I thought that someone had entered the chamber. And then I guessed that Pharaoh had turned the switches when first he came into the room, and the switchboard itself might report the repair of the damage which he had

So far the first time that night I saw my enemy's face.

I think he must have known that I was his assailant, but the sight of me seemed to send him out of his mind. He fought no more like as a serpent, but like the madman he looked, his face convulsed with passion and his eyes staring out of his head.

At last, to my relief, the tempest blew itself out, and he lay back. spent and panting, to take his rest; but, before I could think of moving. he had lifted his head once more and was staring into my eyes. I looked back, grimly enough.

He did not struggle: he simply gazed upon me, as though he would brand my image upon his memory. Then the fellow spat in my face. So a madman made a madman.

If he resisted, I knew not, but used him as a lay figure from that time on

I dashed his hand on the massive plinth of the table, to break his wrist, and when his pistol had fallen I brought his hands together and got to my knees. And then I was clear of the table and had jerked him up to his feet.

I let his broken wrist whipped out his second pistol and pitched it across the room, Then I seized his throat with both hands, turned him back to the table, bent him across its corner and place, I wiped my face and my hands on Helena's black silk scarf. This had been wrung and creased and I had no doubt that Pharaoh had used it to gag her, before he had carried her off.

Now that the business was over, found it hard to believe. I looked at my watch.

The time was twenty minutes past twelve. Not an hour had gone by since Pharaoh had "talked" from the ramparts and Dewdrop had read his message to Rush and Bugle and me. And now they were all four dead, but I was alive.

The reflection brought me up my feet. Alive, if you piease; but I was shut in a chamber from which I could see no way out. . . For twenty minutes I sought that upon the woodwork, using Helena's name-all in vain.

Helena was locked in the turretmy hand in my pocket fingered her master key; which I had taken from Rush, but the turret, no doubt, had embrasures, and she would be found and released so soon as she could make herself heard. She had, of course, heard the firing, but if the thieves were fighting what did that matter to her? Let Pharach revenge her escape upon Bugle and Rush; or seek to blast his way out of the secret room. (Here perhaps should say that though Helena heard the firing, the sound was so muffled that she could not be sure what it was, while, so thick were the walls of Yorick, that nobody else in the castle heard it at all.) Now when Helena's release was effected and Geoffrey and the warden were found, the three would take counsel together upon her report. The position would be considered-but not for long.

The thing was clear. To open the room would be madness. The counrach and his companions must be left to die where they were. Somewhat dazedly I surveyed my surroundings. No windows, no doors. How did one get out of chambers that had neither windows nor doors? It was then that I thought of the fireplace. A grate must have a chimney; and if the chimney was wide. . .

I must have climbed forty feet when my hand encountered a ridge and I felt a current of air. And then I came to a fireplace. As I crawled out of that fireplace, knew where I was. I had come to Helena's bedroom. Roughly I washed the filth from my head and my hands, but though I did what I could to wipe the soot from my shoes, I very soon saw that until I could change my clothing, I should not be fit to move in a furnished room. And what clothes I had were at Plumage. . . At once to get to the farm be came my burning desire.

Before I did so, I must set Helena free. That was simple enough. had her master key, and there was her private stair to bring me down to the hall. And yet I dreaded the duty. I did not want to see herat least, not now. I dreaded the explanations which I should be forced to give. I did not want her to know that I had been there, in that room; that I had seen Pharaoh break her, that I had beard her purchase my safety for ten thousand pounds a year.

I heard the whine of a dog and then the scratch of claws on the door that led to the ramparts. In a moment I had it open, and there to my joy was Sabre.

I afterwards learned that, percelving the bustle above him, the dog had declared, by barking, that he was down in the moat. His rescue was effected.

The great dog seemed pleased to see me, but none too pleased to see that I was alone. "Come and find her, Sabre," said. "I know where she is." The Alsatian started and stared. Then he bounded toward me, put his great paws on my shoulders and licked my face.

One minute later we stood in the little hall.

With the master key in my hand, turned to the turret door. For a moment I hesitated. Then I took a deep breath, fitted the key to the lock and pushed open the oak.

Helena was not to be seen. Neither, for that matter, was Sabre. He had gone to join his mistress at the head of the turret stair. I was wondering whether to follow or whether to wait where I was, when I suddenly saw that my duty to the lady was done.

The appearance of Sabre would show her that she was released. The way to her bedroom was open, and she had no need of escort, because the terror was laid.

With trembling fingers, I whipped the key from the lock of the turret door. Then I opened the door which gave to the winding staircase, passed through and locked it behind me with all dispatch. Five minutes later I crossed the most by the footbridge and entered the tunnel which would bring me into the woods.

As I walked to Plumage, I rememhered those terrible moments-how in her pride she had flung my puny efforts in Pharach's face and how in her fear and trembling she had sought to buy my safety by committing a breach of trust. No queen could have done more for the king the loved.

Although I had come to regard opening of Helena's eyes to the truth, of course, that it was I and not Bugle that had stood in the secret chamber and listened to all she said-it had never occurred to me that, if only I held my tongue, neither she nor anyone else need ever suspect that I had entered the eastle that Friday night. Yet before my cousin had spoken a dozen words, I saw that, if I was careful, my secret would keep itself. He found me finishing breakfast in his room at The Reaping Hook. "Well, you have missed something," he said. "Let that be your punishment for deceiving three simple souls. Not that I blame youthis time. My lady had no right to treat you like that. I told her as much in the coupe. But she wouldn't listen to me. But that's secret door. I shouted and beat by the way. You've missed-in a way you've missed the most astounding show that ever was seen, Lady Helena saw a good bit-more than enough, I'm afraid." He threw himself into a chair. "Upon my soul, I don't know where to begin," "What do you know?" I said.

"I feel sure," said my cousin, "that you will be glad to hear that your failure to arrive at the castle knocked the three of us flat. We couldn't assimilate the fact that simple, honest John Spencer had iald himself out to deceive us-and done it so devilish well. You certainly got your own back. Lady Helena was wild. Td never have believed it of him,' she raged. "Well, now that she was safe in the castle, I was only too glad of an excuse to get out, and so I announced that Barley and I would seek you without delay. She insisted that we should take Sabre and gave the dog his orders before we left. It's right you should know that she was extremely worried." My cousin paused, to frown on his finger-tips. "I hope, in the merciful course of time, to forget the way we employed the next two hours. We used Sabre exactly according to the instructions on the box. Should the dog display emotion, release him at once. Remain exactly where you were when he left you, until he returns. Then take hold of his collar and he will lead you to John." I began to shake with laughter.

"Quite so," said Geoffrey. "Quite so. After about an hour the dog displayed emotion and was released. After another hour Barley and displayed much more emotion and withdrew to survey the mouth of the entrance drive. . . .

"We hadn't been there ten min utes when we heard the Carlotta coming-coming from the castle all out. By the use of our torches we stopped her, to find that she was manned by a flying squad. Watchmen, porters, grooms-all of them armed to the teeth. They were going to compass Yorkk, traveling east; and the coupe was coming after, to travel west. The Countess Helena had been kidnaped. Yorick was plunged into darkness and my lady was gone. Let down in a sheet from the ramparts. Her handker chief had been found on the drawbridge and Sabre had been found in the most."

I felt that it was time to say something.

"But how," I began. . . .

"Don't interrupt," said my cousin. "Listen to me. Well, I let the Carlotta go, deciding that Barley and I would do better on foot. I sent him east and ran west-yes, ran, with my heart in my mouth. The idea was to find the Rolls . . if the Rolls had not gone.

"I found her at a quarter to one, up a little track-and very near cried with relief. You see, that meant that my lady was yet in the

"I rushed off and stopped the coupe, which was lapping for the twentieth time, told the chauffeur to go on patrolling, but to send me reinforcements and tell everybody he met. Then I went back to lay my ambush. I soon had plenty of men and I did the job well. Pharach simply hadn't an earthly. Though he didn't know it, that track had become the scaffold on which he and his little friends were going to die.

"At a quarter of two a wallah comes pelting with a message-we very nearly killed him, of course, But by the time he'd said his piece he was nearer death than before, The Countess Helena's compliments, and will Mr. Bohun come back to the castle at once."

My cousin covered his face.
"I don't think I've ever feit such a blasted fool. But blasted . "Well, I took the Rolls and drove back-to hear Lady Helena's tale. "She was lying down on her bed when a gag was clapped over her mouth. Pharaoh, of course; but alone. She put up a fight, but he very soon had his way. He bound her wrists and ankles and took her master key. Then he carried her down her private staircase and into secret room—the ante-chamber, in fact, to the cellar where lies have been pretty ruthless, for in The end she opened the secret panel con-"Well, Pharaoh and Dewdrop went down, to view the gold: but Rush and Bugle remained in the chamber on guard. I ought to have said that her hands and her feet had been freed. Still, she hadn't much chance, for they kept a torch on her face.

"I shall never understand why Pharaoh employed two such washouts as Bugle and Rush. The first thing those two bright lads did was, between them, to drop the torch. Fy the time they'd found it again their prisoner was gone. The door to the secret room is a secret door It cannot be opened from within

It was, therefore, standing open. In a flash my lady was out and had shut the door.

"Well, though she was safe, she wasn't clear of the wood. She was locked in a staircase-turret, and Rush had her master key. She called from the embrasures, but, as the castle was empty, there weren't any ears to hear. Then, after a while she found Sabre standing beside her, licking her hand." I felt that such a statement demanded some sort of expression of disbellef.

"But you said-" "You shut your face," said Geoffrey. "Truth is stranger than fiction-every time. The door to the turret was open and so were the doors to her room. But her room had been used. The thieves had escaped by the chimney, entered her room by the fireplace, cleaned themselves up in her bathroom and disappeared." "The obvious thing to do was to search the castle forthwith, I ought to see each and every voters in the precinct if possible between to have said that long before I got back the switchboard had been repaired and the lights had come on, and while my lady was talking, the staff which had been scattered was trickling back. Florin and I induced some sort of order before beginning the search. 'We began with my lady's bedlived in Texas twenty-eight years room. One look at the hearth was enough. There was soot all over the place. But nothing and nobody else. We left the watchmen there and my lady and Florin and I went down to the secret room. It was empty now, we knew, for Pharaoh and company were gone: but the door to the cellar was open and my lady wanted it shut."

He took a deep breath.
"I'll tell you what we found. We found Pharaoh, Dewdrop and Rush
—all three of them dead."

"Go on," said I, incredulously. "Fact," said my cousin, shortly. "I'm glad you weren't there to see it. It was a dreadful sight. Bugle had done the three in and then cleared out. I fancy there'd been some scrap. Pharaoh's back was broken; he had no wound. "And here's my interpretation of this astounding find.

"In Pharach's absence Bugle and Rush between them let Lady Helena go. Warrantably fearful of the con sequences of what they had done. Rush and Bugie quarrelled, and Bugie killed Rush. Afraid to face Pharaoh-such a dereliction of duty meant almost certain death-Bugle decided to kill him and Dewdrop, too, And so he did. Then he escaped by the chimney, with Lady Helena's master key. This let him out of the castle by the way by which he came in. Why he waited to let her out, I cannot conceive. Possibly some twinge of conscience -you never know. That's one of the points which we shall never clear up." "Then everything's over," said L

"The terror is laid." "The terror is laid," said Geoffrey. "Bugle remains, of course. But I very much doubt if we shall see Bugle again." Thoughtfully I regarded my nap-daily newspapers, it is apparent that advertising in the smaller newspapers of the nation is increasing. This is true of local advertising, which includes that originating in the home county of a newspaper and applies to some extent to advertising from other The Haskell Free Press does not compete with the New York Times, the Chicago Tribune and other metropolitan journals, in the way of news coverage and advertisers, but it is safe to assume that advertisers in Haskell County do not wish to cover the markets dominated by the larger newsapers. However, the Haskell Free Press does cover Haskell County where our business must originate. Advertising rates are based on circulation, whether figured for magazines or daily and weekly newspapers. The effectiveness of advertising depends to a large extent upon the character of the medium used. Obviously, some newspapers are worth more to a merchant than others because they render better service to readers, print more news, and are given greater attention.

There are many schemes submitted to advertisers to replace the use of newspaper space. Has-kell merchants are often solicited by promoters who have something to sell which they say will produce results. However, in the face of competition from many schemes and devices, newspaper advertising continues to get most of the advertisers' dollars. Possibly this is because newspaper advertising is worth the money when considered as a salesman

"AS ONE GETS OLDER"

The next time you meet a friend, after many years of separation, do not worry if recognition is difficult.

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, anthropologist, after measuring thousands of faces, announces that as one gets older, the mouth widens, the nose goes down and outward, and the ears lengthen. The process starts in childhood, is conditioned by hereditary and climatic factors, but is sufficiently pronounced to alter a well-remembered appearance.

ENCOURAGING

One of the most encouraging signs of industrial progress is the heavy increase in expenditures made by railroads for equipment. This reflects improved traffic conditions, which are indicated by the face that car-loadings for the last week in February were 69,000 ahead of the same week last year.

In the first two months of 1936, railroads bought twice as many engines as they did in 1935. They ordered 8,286 freight cars in the two months, which is almost 10 times as many as those ordered in the same period of 1935. Already half as many passenger cars have been ordered as were bought

THE COMMON TOUCH

Kipling long ago made famous one measure of a man in that line, "If you can walk with kings-nor lose the common touch.." And today we have the splendid example of a king himself who has not lost the common touch. Speaking to the world for the first time since he ascended the throne, young Edward VIII emphasized the sort of monarchy he wants for the British Empire. It stirs a refreshing international and democratic note. Said the new king: "I am better known to most of you as the Prince of Wales, as the man who during the War and since has had the opportunity of getting to know the people of nearly every country of the world under all conditions and circumstances. And although I now speak to you as the king, I am still the same man who has had the experience and whose constant effort will be to continue to promote the well-being of his fellow men." Certainly this attitude promises much for the British Empire and for the world.

As Mexico approaches the day of women suffrage, its politicians stress the old argument that omen are not prepared to vote. And proponents of equal rights retort, "neither are the men." in is a significant point quite applicable to our own use of the franchise. Unfortunately, the average American male is not so well prepared to cast an intelligent ballot as he might be. In fact, the average woman, through her clubs and social contacts, is quite likely to be better informed. Women have been quick to realize the value of their vote and opportunity to hold office. They recognize their so-cial responsibility, in other words. Men for the most part have taken the ballot too casually. Hence it has become characteristic of us that we show common sense in nearly everything but politics.

OUR BANKS ARE STRONGER

A little more than three years ago the banks of the United States were closed and people wonderwhat might happen. Today the banks of the country are open and it might be well to check up on a few figures.

When the bank holiday began in 1933, the total money in circulation was $7,538,000,000 and monetary gold stocks were down to $4,243,000,000. Today the monetary gold stocks have passed the ten billion dollar mark and the total money in circulation is $5,775,000,000. Three years ago the banks of the Federal Reserve System owed $1,414,000,000 to the Reserve Banks and their resources were $1,776,-000,000. Today they owe nothing and their reserves are $5,839,800,000, of which more than half is sur-

CURRENT COMMENT

DEEPER WATER (Semi-Weekly Farm News)

The one-two-three agricultural program of Secretary Wallace, as announced at Chicago, clears up most of the doubt as to what he has in mind as a substitute for the plan that was based on the processing taxes, but the substitute plan raises more questions than it settles, if one looks beyond the immediate needs of the farming industry.

A program that employs a subsidy to build up the productivity of the Nation's soils as a subterfuge for holding down production to control prices s patently inconsistent. Again, any talk of the new program being "democratic" is inconsistent with prospects of long range effectiveness. The Government cannot afford to give full subsidy for reduced acreage. Any program of crop control must call for some measure of sacrifice on the part of the growers themselves. This means that a program of voluntary cooperation will not be practicable. The newly announced program is also inconsistent in basing its future plans on State programs. This provision is placed in the new scheme to get around objections raised by Supreme Court decisions, but it does not get around cold facts. Handing the program back to the States is as impractical as handing it back to voluntary individual co-operation.

Secretary Wallace understands the problem before him. He has stated it simply when he has said on numerous occasions that tariffs must come down or agricultural subsidies must go up. He seems to have decided that bring down tariffs is a hopeless task. Though not in a position to admit it, Secretary Wallace knows, too, that, if the Government is to pay Farmer Jones to reduce acreage, then it must be in position to force Farmer Jones' neighbor to take a subsidy for acreage reduction. This would be efficiency but it would not be democracy, nor could it be done through any program of State co-

LIFE'S TRUE VALUES

International Sunday School Les son for March 22, 1936.

Golden Text: "Seek ye first His Kingdom and His righteousness; and all these things Matt. 6:33.

(Lesson Text: Luke 12:22-34)

Time and again Jesus condemned hypocrisy. In the opening ver-ses of the twelfth chapter of Luke's gospel he again struck this familiar note urging his hearers to be sincere. He condemned the Pharisees, religious formalists, outward ritual.

While talking Jesus was interrupted by a man who wanted him to make his brother divide certain property with him. Realizing that this listener at least had his attention upon material things far removed from the spiritual teachings which he was giving, Jesus warned him to beware of covetousness. "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." While physical life, the body, is entirely de-pendent upon material things, the higher life, the soul, is entirely independent of such possessions.

Another ever-recurring warning of Jesus was against coventousness. Jesus illustrated with the parable of the rich fool. This man had very fertile soil, which brought forth a fruitful harvest, but instead of appreciating the divine miracle involved in making a crop or reflecting upon the responsibility for the possessions which he had thus obtained, he selfishly decided to store up for his own individual use in order be merry. Because this man had entirely missed the spiritual appreciation of wealth and lacked every conception of its responsithe foolish one.

According to his story his life was taken from him and the question put as to where all these material accumulations stored away for his own selfish use would go. made three mistakes. He mistook

Teachers Attend Oil

A large number of the Haskell teachers attended the sixth annual meeting of the Oil Belt Educational Association which convene in Abilene Friday p. m. March 13 and continued through Saturday In this convention it was their privilege to hear a very noted educa-tor, Dr. George W. Frazier, of Greeley Teachers College, which is said to rank second only to Columbia University among the teachers' colleges of the nation. Dr. Frazier was heard in three different addresses, and all who heard him were greatly impressteaching.

The theme of the convention was "Pupil Growth Through Participation", and in accordance many students appeared on the various programs, not only in bands, choruses, and special numbers, but also as speakers on topics of vital interest to teachers.

Williams-Daugherty

Miss Ermine Daugherty and Dr. T. W. Williams were united in marriage Saturday evening, March 14th, at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Daugherty. Entering the living room to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Mrs. O. E. Patterson the couple took their places before an improvised altar of English ivy and ferns. Tall floor baskets of pink and white snap dragons were effectively placed on either side. Forming a background for the altar, beautiful bouquets of pink rosebuds adorned the mantle. Lighted candles in bronze candelabras enhanced the setting. "The Elegy" by Massent was played softly by Mrs. Patterson throughout the impressive ring ceremony read by Rev. R. N. Truck Wreck-

Tracks of the truck indicated that brakes on one of the front vheels locked, swerving the ma chine into the nearby ditch.

Cecil Jones of Abilene, repre-sentative of the Hagelstein Monument Works of that city was next on the scene, and with the help of those not seriously injured, and Irs. Breeden, extricated the victims from the wreckage. Frank Reynolds, driver of the truck and employed by the county as overseer of this particular crew, although severely hurt, would not leave the scene until all the men had been secured transportation to doctors and hospitals.

Ambulances were summoned from Haskell, and Cook, Tucker and Graham were rushed to a Stamford hospital in a Jones, Cox ambulance. A Kinney ambulance cemoved the body of Dunn to the Funeral Home and later arried Bahop and Ammons to the hospital after they had been given first aid treatment by Drs. T. W. Williams and Gordon Phillips in Haskell.

Jesse Childress and W. E. Brock following treatment by physicians. Prynolds, also brought o Dr. Welliams for first aid, was carried to the pospital by Mrs. Reynolds and R. L. Burton.

All of the men with the exception of Reynolds, were employed on a WPA road project in Preinct No. 4 Approximately 70 men are employed on this work, being ransported to and from Haskell daily in trucks furnished by the ounty. Wm. T. Soft Ball Tourney Held at Lone Star

On Saturday, March 14th, the one Star School campus was the cene of one of the finest soft ball tournaments the county has ever seen. Six independent teams participated.

In the first game New Mid trounced Roberts 6 to 0. The second game, however, was a thriller. Cottonwood and Brushy battled for 12 innings before J. Freeland the Lone Star team in 9 innings by a score of 2 to 1. In the fourth game Cliff went down before the Mrs. A. J. Josselet and daughters hard hitting New Mid team after Ruth and Dorothy; Jesse Josselet 12 innings of determined playing Brown won the game for New Mid with a home run in the 12th inning; score 2 to 1.

The New Mid team then won the championship by defeating Brushy 1 to 0 in a final 8 inning

The Roberts vs. Lone Star girls game was postponed because of the whirling sand.

The Lone Star P. T. A. sold hamburgers, candy, cold drinks, and chewing gum to the visitors. The complete success of the whole undertaking is attributed to the good sportsmanship manifested by each school represented.
