High school troupe to present comedy

Clarendon High School's drama department will stage the comedy "My Son is Crazy But Promising" this weekend, Saturday and Sunday, November 12 and 13, in the CHS Auditorium.

Tickets for the Saturday performance are $15 each and include a meal at 6 p.m. with the show immediately following. The Sunday matinee performance at 2 p.m. is $5 for the show only. Tickets are available at the CHS office, or from any theatre student.

In the farce by Tim Kelly, eccentric Hollywood screenwriter Bud Granger decides to give up life in the fast lane and buys a lodge in Tumbleweed, Ariz. The inn is a termite pile, but as it's near the fabled "Lost Dutchman Mine," Bud thinks he might soon be a reclusive millionaire.

What he didn't figure on is that the lodge is full of nuts – a little old lady who is in touch with "space people," outraged tourists who thought the lodge would be like the Ritz, Oysters Rockefeller – an emotional mobster who won't stay dead, and aspiring starlet Chi-Chi Vazoom who thinks lizard are "cute." Then Bud's zany mother arrives.

The play is a fun, screwball whodunit with an outlandish plot and amusing complications.

Two for the Road From Donley County to the World!

By Roger Estlack, Clarendon Enterprise

You never know where life's road will take you, and that has certainly been true for Dusty and Nikki Green – a Howardwick couple who decided to follow a dream and are now on their way to becoming national celebrities on public television.

Nine years ago, the Greens started a simple blog – an online journal – called "Two for the Road" when they gave up their careers in Amarillo and started a grand adventure of traveling the globe. What began as a whim evolved into a web video series then a regional PBS television show and is now going nationwide.

"I never in a million years thought this is what we would be doing," Nik says.

Dusty, a former executive with Channel 7 in Amarillo, and Nik, who worked in a dentist's office, sold everything they had to follow their passion – traveling. An eight-month adventure in South America exhausted their savings, and they returned to Texas, setting up shop and combining their careers to shoot testimonial videos for dentists. That led them to shooting videos for touring companies to promote vacation getaways.

The "Two for the Road" blog really started as a way to keep in touch with family, but by the time they started putting videos in a web series, it was television that they had in mind.

"We knew when we started going on trips, we would have this mountain of material," Dusty said, noting that the travel company promotions were only a few minutes long. "The web series was a way to get attention and to put the material together."

The trip that started the series was a journey to Antarctica, and Nik says it confirmed for her the goal of what they were trying to do.

"We were searching for videos about what it's like to travel to go to Antarctica, and there was nothing out there," Nik said.

Having previously moved into a place owned by Nik's parents at Howardwick, the couple returned from their Antarctic trip to what their family calls "the Camp," and there, on a kitchen table, they started producing what would become their "Two for the Road" television series and began pitching the idea to networks.

"We talked to the Travel Channel," Nik said. "They wanted a hook. Like, you take another couple and you have $500, but that's not what we wanted to do."

So Dusty took the concept to the folks at Panhandle PBS last October, where he knew the people that worked there and also knew that PBS would allow them to have more creative control of their show. They loved it and started helping the Greens get their foot in the door with other PBS affiliates.

"It helps when your local station is working as a 'presenting station,'" Dusty said. "They showed us how to pitch the show to national PBS."

By June, the Greens were knocking on the door of the National Educational Telecommunications Association (NETA) in South Carolina, trying to sell the group that licenses and distributes educational programming in all 50 states, the US Virgin Islands, and Puerto Rico.

"They told us, 'don't call us, we'll call you,'" Dusty said. "We just kept calling."

In August, they had about given up, but that's when NETA called and gave them the answer they were looking for and said they would pick up the show with just a few changes.

A trip to a conference in Baltimore then gave the couple the opportunity to start promoting the show to other PBS affiliates.

"Two for the Road," as a 30-minute television show premiered on Panhandle PBS in September with eight episodes in the first season, and Dusty and Nik hit the road to sell the show to other PBS affiliates in Texas.

"Our first stop was in Dallas to meet with this guy that everybody around the state listens to," Dusty said. "And he was just like, 'Well, yeah, I'm going to run the show.'"

By the end of the Texas road trip, Dusty and Nik had nine of the 12 PBS stations in the state agreeing to air "Two for the Road," and then last week, the announcement came that the show will be available for national distribution to PBS stations in January. One of the first out-of-state affiliates interested in the show is in Philadelphia with an estimated 1.6 million viewers.

There are still challenges. Each PBS affiliate decides on its own whether to run an available show. So the Greens and their supporters must continue to lobby stations to pick the show up, and they must also work to secure their own underwriters for the show.

Meanwhile, Panhandle PBS began re-running the first season last week in the show's regular timeslot, Thursdays at 8 p.m., and Dusty says 11 episodes are ready for season two when it airs next year.

Even with the burgeoning success of "Two for the Road" – which is still literally produced on a kitchen table in Howardwick, the couple is very happy making their home base in Donley County, although they did move out of "the camp" and bought their own house one block away.

"The people at Howardwick are nothing but supportive," Dusty said. "And we've got deer, and turkey, and raccoons, and we can

Heading down the Road to Roman Ruin

By Marian L. Tupy, Cato Institute

Remember the story of an ambitious Roman general who marched his army on Rome, thereby destroying the ancient Republic?

Chances are, many a reader will think of Gaius Julius Caesar, the conqueror of Gaul, vanquisher of Pompey and lover of the Egyptian queen Cleopatra, who had himself declared dictator for life and was assassinated on the floor of the Roman Senate on the Ides of March in 44BC.

Alas, the "hero" of this column is someone altogether different. Lucius Cornelius Sulla Felix was a man large enough to contain multitudes. He was a bon vivant with a seemingly endless appetite for food and drink. He was married to a succession of five women while carrying on a life-long love affair with another man.

Sulla was born to an impoverished but patrician family in 138BC. Having joined the army, he distinguished himself in Numidia, where he captured Rome's foremost enemy King Jugurtha. Other military triumphs, both in the provinces and in Italy's "Social War", followed. These led to a successful political career and an election to the consulship, Rome's highest elected office, in 88BC.

Like a latter-day Marius, Barack Obama has subjected the American constitutional order to a relentless barrage of unconstitutional acts.

Once in power, Sulla became the focus of patrician or optimate opposition to the growing strength of the populares represented by Gaius Marius. Sulla was a staunch conservative, committed to law and order and to scrupulous interpretation of the Roman constitution.

Yet in order to accomplish his political goals, he unleashed an epic reign of terror and broke with many a constitutional precedent. He tried to excise from the Roman body politic the cancerous legacy of Gaius Marius — but failed to revive the dying Republic.

A constitution, once compromised, is difficult to restore by the force of arms. It must be defended by the vigilance and application of a knowledgeable and concerned citizenry. Therein lies a lesson for the US presidential election next Tuesday.

Like Sulla, Marius joined the army at an early age. Unlike Sulla, Marius was an equestrian by birth and his political sympathies lay with the plebs. Elected as a tribune of the plebs in 120BC, he pushed through a number of electoral reforms that curtailed the power of the aristocracy and annoyed the optimates.

Marius' political career continued to flourish and culminated in the consulship of 107BC. As consul, Marius pushed through a set of military reforms that fatally undermined the Roman constitution and, ultimately, doomed the Republic.

Prior to the Marian reforms, a Roman seeking to join the army had to meet a minimum property qualification of 3,000 sestertii. The typical salary of a Roman legionary, by comparison, was 900 sestertii a year. Needing more soldiers to further his military and political career, Marius ignored the minimum property requirement and opened the army to the property-less capite censi.

The new recruits were poor, hungry for the spoils of war, and totally loyal to their commander, Marius. Ignoring constitutional precedent, which banned the same man from holding the consulship twice in his lifetime, Marius — victorious in battle and supported by the swelled ranks of the military — got himself elected to Rome's highest office seven times, including five years in succession.

The optimates were apologetic. They coalesced around Sulla and furnished him with a powerful army to wage war on King Mithridates of Pontus — but also, presumably, to keep an eye out for possible trouble at home.

Seeing his star fade, Marius bribed one of the tribunes to call a popular assembly, which overrode the decree of the Senate and gave Sulla's command to Marius. This was an unprecedented attack on the power of the Senate and Sulla resorted to the unthinkable: he commanded his legions to march on Rome.

The magic spell that kept Rome at peace with itself for centuries was broken. The Marians fled, only to return after Sulla departed for Pontus. They killed many of Sulla's supporters, but their luck would not last.

Having concluded a truce with Mithridates, Sulla marched back and defeated the Marians at the Battle of the Colline Gate on November 1, 82BC. On that day, 50,000 Romans lost their lives — but worse was to follow.

Once installed as Rome's supreme ruler, Sulla slaughtered up to 9,000 Roman civilians suspected of loyalties to the populares. Per Plutarch, "Sulla now began to make blood flow, and he filled the city with deaths."

Sulla then proceeded to restore the ancient constitution. He strengthened the optimates by declaring that all bills needed senatorial approval before they could be submitted to the popular assembly. The tribunes of the plebs lost their right to initiate legislation and were prohibited from ever holding another office in their lifetimes. They also lost their right to veto the acts of the Senate.

Caesar, who narrowly escaped Sulla's assassins (because of his aunt Julia's marriage to Marius, Caesar was a marked man), would, famously, lead his army across the Rubicon in 49BC, sack Rome and become the city's first (though unofficial) emperor. The Roman people were far too enamored with their victorious general, and addicted to the gold he brought back from the provinces, to check his rising power — and saw their freedom slip away.

In the end, it is not strongmen, however gifted, that are the best defence against institutional decay, but the vigilance of the people — animated by their commitment to the principles of constitutional government.

My comments on this and that...

Two successful football figures who seem "unperturbable" are TV sports analyst Tony Dungy and Kansas State University Coach Bill Snyder. At ages 61 and 77, respectively, they remain vibrant, respected and poised. (Someone said when common sense, values and fairness were handed out, these two men may have gone through the line twice.)

No argument here. They are great by any measure. At K-State — where Snyder has been head coach twice — games are played in "Bill Snyder Family Stadium." (You can be sure he had a hand in the decision to add "family" to the name.)

Dungy, former pro player and longtime National Football League coach, is spokesman for a program to help fathers. It's called All Pro Dads' Day...

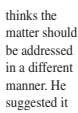

In short, in the essence of the old E. F. Hutton commercial, "when Dungy and Snyder talk, we listen." If we fail to do so, we probably should join Little Jack Horner in the corner, with a Christmas pie.

I thought of these men the other day upon hearing about Carolina Panthers' star quarterback threatening to speak to the commissioner about game officials' failure to protect quarterbacks. "I don't even feel safe anymore," Cam Newton said.

Without regard for whether he is right or wrong, upon learning of his frustration, I wondered: What would Snyder or Dungy do?...

I haven't heard whether Snyder has made a comment, he likely hasn't. Dungy, as expected, offered measured comments that soothed most fans.

He figures the issue is valid, but the idle american

by don newbury

thinks the matter should be addressed in a different manner. He suggested it be taken up the ladder, including opinions not only of players, but also of coaches, general managers, game officials and team owners.

On the face of it, Cam has taken sides with a growing number of folks who want substantial changes RIGHT NOW. His proposal to go directly to the top won't be well received in Commissioner Roger Goodell's office. Cam can expect a fine for airing his grievances, but to his won't need to get a bank loan to pay it....

Game officials are caught in the pinch of an impatient world, where cameras and other types of surveillance reveal much, both on the field of the play as well as the world at large.

Refs, like our men and women in blue, deserve to be "cut some slack." Slack is something none of us cuts off even though.

In a culture which is so maddeningly off-kilter, caldrons of vitriol will continue to boil over....

I'm reminded of an old story of a football coach's verbal objection to an official's call.

"That decision stinks," he roared. The official, easily hearing the comment, increased the penalty from 15 to 30 yards.

"How does it smell from here?" he asked....

Big in "real world" news are volleys of WikiLeaks emails spewed toward us, regularly if not daily.

Some say we may all drop in the sea of emails; others think the leaked emails are akin to airline seat cushions to which we may cling.

One sure thing is that mothers whose last name happens to be "Leaks" have another first name possibility to consider. Reckon some of 'em will be christened "Wiki"? ...

Finally, this appeal we've heard for generations — "Vote as you please, but please vote." Perhaps we should suggest an addendum: But just ONE time.

I'm amazed that some voters casting early ballots were upset by election officials forbidding their "selfie" photographs.

Threats abound....

And here's a old one; consider the source. My Uncle Mort, 104-year-old down in the thickets is confounded both by issues concerning oil wells and the election.

"At one place, they're considering a referendum about drilling rigs in town, and at another, they're up in the air about 'rigged' voting." He predicts there may be referenda — one for rig voting, and another for vote rigging.

Let us pray for common sense, patience and the common good....

New Cowgirls enter Hall of Fame

It was like a fashion show for women's upscale western wear. There were signs of elegance and grace among those present, most of whom were women dressed in boots, hats, long dresses, suede suits with fringe, miniskirts and items seen in fancy magazines like Cowboys and Indians. Turquoise was the jewelry of choice and the boots were art objects, with their colors and designs. Some vendors were on hand with all types of western merchandise for women, including purses in several types of leathers with price tags in the thousands of dollars.

The event was the induction of four women into the National Cowgirl Museum and Hall of Fame, located in Fort Worth's Will Rogers Coliseum area. More than 900 people gathered in the Roundup Inn, which resembles a convention center. It's near the rodeo grounds and stock pens. The $200 ticket included a meal of salad and cornbread, a tenderloin steak with vegetables and corn soufflé and a dessert of spiced nutmeg tres leches. Table decorations made everything from rotating sculptures made of horseshoes to impressive bronze pieces. Guests were not allowed to take their home.

If you haven't been to the Cowgirl Museum, you should go. It is a state of the art museum with a two-story moving mobile that has both still photographs and videos on it. The mobile was designed by a group from Paris, France that also did the displays in the museum.

The facility had its beginnings in 1975 in Hereford, Texas. At first it was housed in a temporary location, later moved into a home. In 1990 the museum organizers wanted more exposure so they put the museum up for bids to several cities. Fort Worth submitted the highest bid and in 1992 the museum was moved to Cowtown. An art deco building was constructed to house the honorees' artifacts and photos and the museum opened in its present location in 2002.

In the forty-one years the museum has been in operation only 224 women from all over the United States have been inducted into the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame. Four or five are selected each year among several nominations. "We're not looking for just great women," says Dr. Diana Vela, Associate Executive Director. "We're looking for exceptionally great women." The nominees go through three separate screenings, which come after a several page narrative about them is submitted. Supporting material is carefully examined and facts are checked.

This year's inductees include Marilyn Williams Harris of Arizona, a rancher and philanthropist; Pat North Ommer of California, a trick rider and movie stunt woman; and Veryl Goodnight of Colorado, a sculptor and painter. The only Texas woman inducted into the Hall of Fame is Frances Rosenthal Kallison, a community activist who lived in San Antonio before her death in 2004. Many of her family and friends attended her induction. www.tumbledweedsmith.com

CC Theatre department to present 'Dulcitus'

The Clarendon College Theatre Department will present its fall production next week with the one-act Dulcitus. Performances are Thursday, November 17, at 7 p.m. and Sunday, November 20, at 3 p.m. Admission is free.

Dulcitus is a medieval play by Hrotsvit of Gandersheim, a 10th century German nun and the world's first female playwright. Her plays were never performed in her own time, and the earliest confirmed productions of Hrotsvit's plays was more than 800 years after their death.

Dulcitus tells the story of three young women who are tried by the Roman emperor, convicted, and martyred for their faith. During the course of the play, a governor and a count attempt to seduce and ridicule the young women, but their efforts to cause the women sin and shame are repelled by divine intervention. Though the women meet an untimely end, the play confirms that their purity is realized, and they remain shining behavioral models for fighting an oppressive regime.

The productions are the work of the fall semester's Introduction to Theater students and involve two separate casts and crews. The casts and crews include baseball, basketball, softball, and volleyball players; members of the meat and livestock judging teams; members of the rodeo team; nursing students; Clarendon locals; and members of the Clarendon College Theatre Department.

BERBERINE PROVES POWERFUL AGAINST DIABETES
 This plant alkaloid, revered in traditional Chinese and Ayurvedic medicine but largely ignored elsewhere, is poised to become one of our most powerful natural therapies for preventing and treating diabetes and cardiovascular disease. Plus, it helps to facilitate weight loss, combats cancer and can maybe even stave off dementia and the ravages of aging. The big news, however, is that research shows berberine works just as well as the top-selling drug for type 2 diabetes, metformin (Glucophage).

BERBERINE AIDS HEART HEALTH
 But berberine also does something diabetes drugs cannot do. In another randomized, placebo-controlled trial, berberine lowered triglycerides by 35.9 percent, LDL cholesterol by 21 percent, and total cholesterol by 18 percent, compared to minimal declines in cholesterol and an increase in triglycerides in the control group. Furthermore, the group taking berberine had lower blood pressure (average drop of 7/5 mm Hg systolic/diastolic) and modest weight and abdominal fat loss.

BERBERINE RESEARCH UNCOVERS MANY BENEFITS
 Other studies have shown berberine improves:
 • Bone density and preserves cartilage,
 • Protects against acute brain damage and neurodegenerative disorders,
 • And may play a role in warding off dementia and Alzheimer's disease.
 • And because it mimics the effects of calorie restriction, I predict that berberine will be the next big thing in anti-aging.

Watch for fraud during Medicare enrollment

Hi, gang! This Medicare fraud article and a must read for all of us "old folks". All younger ladies and gentlemen should make sure your older friends and relatives read this article and discuss it with them. The second article is The Better Business Bureau of the Texas Panhandle announces a Call for Entries for the 2017 Better Business Bureau Torch Awards for Ethics. The Better Business Bureau honors outstanding businesses from the 26 county area annually with the only ethics awards in the area.

"Medicare Open Enrollment is Prime Time for Fraud," by Laurie McAfee, Area Agency on Aging.

For Medicare beneficiaries, October 15 to December 7 provides them the opportunity to change their Medicare Part D plans and their Medicare Advantage Plans, but it also provides scam artists an opportunity to take advantage of the elderly. Representing themselves as government officials, these thieves contact seniors by phone, email, or by coming to their doors, asking questions about their health insurance or offering them new cards to replace their current card. Why do they want this personal information? These scammers might be collecting Medicare numbers that will be used to commit Medicare fraud or Medical Identity Theft.

Medicare Part D Enrollment Scams to look out for: Medicare or a health plans call and wants to send you a new health card for $299. You receive a call about a refund from last year's premiums or your drug plan cost. An agent tries to sign you up for plan that you don't need, isn't right for you, or doesn't even exist. Watch out for fake RX cards offering big discounts with little or no benefits. You receive a call offering big discounts on a new health insurance

T i p s on how to Stop Fraud During Enrollment: Medicare will never call or visit. Medicare will only send information via postal mail service. Guard your Medicare card and number like a credit card. Don't give out your Medicare number except to your doctor or other providers. Don't let someone push you into making a fast decision. If you receive a call, especially from a number you do not recognize or anyone requesting personal information hang up immediately. Know your health care options. Get help from your family, the Medicare website or your local State Health Insurance Assistance Program (SHIP). No health care plan is allowed to cold call.

If you have questions about any phone calls you have received about your Medicare, you can contact the Texas Senior Medicare Patrol (SMP) at 1-888-341-6187 or 713-341-6184. A nationwide program, the Senior Medicare Patrol works to educate seniors about Medicare fraud and abuse and is credited with saving taxpayers more than $100 million since 1997.

We'll survive these political upheavals

By the time the Enterprise goes to press, the election of 2016 will be over followed by days, months, and years of political analysis. Whatever happens, God is in charge of me, and my prayer is I will wisely follow His direction.

We have had political upheavals before. Who remembers our leaders Richard Nixon-Spiro Agnew in 1973-75? Agnew, a Greek-American from Maryland was elected Governor in 1966 where he served for three years until he became Nixon's running mate, and they were elected President and Vice President. This was during the time of the Vietnam war, and our country was split with riots in the cities. After being elected for a second term as Vice President,

Agnew was accused of bribery, conspiracy, and tax evasion while serving as Governor of Maryland and resigned in 1973. The 25th amendment to the Constitution had been ratified in 1967 which allowed the President to nominate a new Vice President if the office became empty. Nixon nominated Gerald Ford as Vice President. Gerald Ford became President in August 1974 following the resignation of Richard Nixon because of the

"wick picks" by Peggy Anderson
Howanick • 874-2886

Watergate scandal.

Therefore, Gerald Ford became the first person in history to serve as Vice President and President without being elected to either office. Our country pulled through all that. We will pull through Hillary/Trump, but it will be at a price. God, please bless the USA.

Following Election Day is Veterans Day, and we should all stop and give thanks to our veterans who have kept us free. I proudly trace my Veterans back to the French & Indian War, through the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, Civil War, WWI and WWII, Korea, Vietnam, and Afghanistan/Iraq. A proud salute to these brave men who helped form our country into what it is today.

Raider football

Last weekend, I got to go to Texas Tech University to see my mom's friend Cassidy and watch a Texas Tech football game. They were playing against the Longhorns. I think we should have won.

Some of my favorite things about the game were some challenges they did between plays. There is one where people try to kick a field goal from the 35-yard line; and if they made it, the people would get a free trip to Las Vegas. There was another where two couples tore through packages to find a $10,000 diamond ring!

At half time, after the band marched, one band member proposed to another band member on the field and she said yes from what I could tell. She was jumping up and down.

We also got to see the movie Trolls at the Alamo Drafthouse. It's like a movie theatre, but when you sit down, there is a table and a waiter comes around and you can eat dinner while you watch the movie! It was a lot of fun, and I really liked their milkshakes and the surround sound. It was awesome!

JOE ROBINSON

Clarendon's Joe Robinson is a member of America's Greatest Generation, the people who stood up to tyranny and secured peace and freedom during World War II. "Freedom is not free," Robinson has said. "Someone had to pay for it."

Today, Joe is mostly known for his ranch work, but his biggest achievements came while serving his country 20,000 feet off the ground in Europe. Commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Army in 1942, Joe entered training at Ft. Knox and then volunteered for pilot training in Florida.

Robinson flew a B17 plane over France complete with thirteen 50-caliber guns in formation with 36 other planes, sometimes his wing fitting almost inside another plane's wing while turning. Robinson went on 30 missions and he says the only thing that became routine was making sure everyone set their watches by the second because two or three seconds could make a huge difference in their formation.

As the only surviving member of his crew, Robinson has three medals for his service and one medal from France.

The Whistle-Stop and the community salute Joe Robinson – and all of America's veterans – for their heroic acts in keeping our nation free in the face of great personal danger. Thank you, Joe!

Texas VLB celebrates 70 years of service

AUSTIN - On Monday, November 7, 2016, Commissioner George P. Bush congratulated the Texas Veterans Land Board (VLB) on 70 years of service to Texas veterans. The 70th anniversary was celebrated with a VLB Inception Day ceremony. VLB Senior Deputy Director Col. (ret.) Matt Elledge and more than 100 employees and guests marked this special day by commemorating the history of the VLB and enjoying refreshments.

"One of the great privileges of serving as Texas Land Commissioner is chairing the Veterans Land Board," Commissioner Bush states. "The men and women of the VLB - many of whom are veterans themselves - continue to serve their fellow veterans through their work. Whether they are manning the statewide Veterans Call Service Center, caring for an elderly veteran in one of our homes, planning an unaccompanied veteran burial or helping a veteran finance his or her first land purchase, these men and women continue to honor the sacrifices of those who have served our country. Today we celebrate 70 years of serving veterans and look forward to the next 70."

Since the days of the Republic,

Texas has supported its veterans in appreciation of their military service. In the early days, land was awarded for military service in the Texas Revolution. In 1946, Texas voters approved a constitutional amendment to establish the Texas Veterans Land Board, under the Texas General Land Office, to administer benefits exclusively for Texas veterans returning from World War II. Since then, more than 200,000 VLB loans have been funded for veterans and military members in Texas.

Over the years the VLB has evolved to include seven programs that provide benefits and services for Texas veterans, military members and their families. These programs include: low-interest land, home, and home improvement loans; skilled nursing care in eight Texas State Veterans Homes - with a ninth home planned for Houston; burial services in four Texas State Veterans Cemeteries; the Voices of Veterans oral history program; and veterans benefit information and assistance services through the statewide Veterans Call Service Center, a collaboration between the VLB and the Texas Veterans Commission.

"In 1946, the citizens of Texas chose to honor our veterans for the defense of the freedoms we enjoy here in the United States of America," said Matt Elledge. "We are proud to be a part of the state of Texas tradition that recognizes our veterans and military members for their service. As the VLB moves into the future we hope to inform and educate more veterans about the many benefits they earned while serving our great nation."

The mission of the VLB is to ensure that we offer the very best package of veterans benefits in the country, and those of us who work for the VLB strive to meet those goals every day. For 70 years we have had the honor to serve veterans, military members and their families in Texas, and we look forward to keeping that promise in the years to come.

For more information about the benefits and services available to veterans in Texas, visit www.TexasVeterans.com or call 1-800-252-VETS (8387) or listen to "The Dog Tag," a podcast for veterans by veterans, at www.TexasVeteransBlog.com/DogTag.

The new Parish Hall dedication and ribbon cutting will be held Sunday, November 20, 2016 at 1:00 p.m.

St. Mary's to dedicate new building

Father Arokia Raj Samala would like to announce that the Most Reverend Patrick J. Zurek will celebrate mass at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Clarendon on Sunday, November 20, 2016, at noon with the dedication and ribbon cutting of their new Parish Hall following at 1:00 p.m.

St. Mary's Catholic Church is the oldest Catholic Church in the Texas Panhandle dating back to 1892.

Several years ago Father Raj and the parishioners of St. Mary's had a vision for a new Parish Hall. The dream for the new building included housing Faith Formation classrooms, offices, a library, kitchen, and seating for up to 208 people.

Finally, in March of 2014 architect Pat Tunnel was chosen to draw the plans for the hall. In October of 2015 contractor Clauddell Wright of Amarillo began the building. Mr. Wright finished the 6,750 square foot structure in May 2016.

The final stages for finishing the new building was a labor of love from countless volunteer hours by parishioners, friends, and family that did all the dry wall, finish work, cabinets, painting, and fund raising. The project is now complete and will become a testament to the blessings that come from faith the size of a mustard seed.

Hedley names Students of the Month

Hedley's Students of the Month are Ida Thomsen and Lylah Goodwin.

Ida Thomsen is 16 years old. She is this year's foreign exchange student from Denmark. She used to live with her brother, sister, and parents in a city close to the capital. Her hobbies are running cross country, playing basketball and cheerleading. She hasn't figured out what she's going to do after that but she wants to do something that includes Social Science and Math. She admires her mom the most. Ida says "She is the sweetest most lovely woman I have ever known, and she has done everything she could to make me happy." She also said that "I miss her more than anything."

Lylah Goodwin is a six year old at Hedley Elementary School. Lylah has a baby sister and brother. Lylah likes to play outside in the dirt with her friend Radon. In the future, Lylah wants to get a tablet. Lylah admires and loves her Mee Mee, because she always gives Lylah snacks after school. Final walk

Colts end season

The Clarendon Junior High Colts have been playing solid football all season long and their record shows that. Even though, their last game did not go as planned, the Colts still finished a respectable 5-2 over and 4-1 in district. Their only district loss came against Wellington on the road last Thursday at 6-34.

Wellington grabbed the early momentum as they played powerful defense in the first half of play to stop the Colts in their tracks. The Rockets were able to put 20 points on the board while holding the Colts scoreless.

"We did a better job of moving the ball in the second half," coach Brandt Lockhart said. "We were able to score in the fourth quarter on a 35-yard run by Antwan Bassett."

The bonus for that touchdown failed, and the Colts settled with six.

Lockhart praised Jordan Evans and Brock Hatley for their outstanding defensive play in the game.

"We did a good job battling in the game despite having several players injured and unable to play," Lockhart said. "I felt like we continued to improve all season long and finished at 5-2."

Twenty-five teams play in Polar Bear

By Sandy Anderberg

The Clarendon Country Club hosted its last tournament of the season, the Two-Person Polar Bear, which consisted of twenty-five two-person teams.

Steve Russell and Dan Landry won first in the first flight with a 61-59 in the two-day, 36-hole contest. Jeff Robertson and Justin Hargrady, and Leigh Ann and Mark Ward tied for second with a total of 126.

Chad Pernell and Cody Parks won the second flight with a 127, and Daniel and Alexis Escodedo and Josh and Doug Sims tied for second with a total of 132. Scott Allen and Mark Largin were the third flight winners with a 135, and Bob Permenter and Robin Lorzano tied with Steve Gray and Lane Huntington for second place with a score of 139.

Broncos end season, prepare for playoffs

By Sandy Anderberg

Clarendon's last game in Bronco Stadium clearly did not go as planned Friday night. Not for the players, seniors, coaches, or fans.

However, the Broncos, who have secured a playoff spot, are still looking forward as they begin post-season play next Thursday in River Road. Their 7-40 loss to the Wellington Skyrockets was just a setback as they prepare to take on Wheeler in the opening round. They soundly defeated the Mustangs early in the season and are looking to repeat that win and continue on.

The Broncos, according to head coach Gary Jack, were not on their game Friday night.

"This was a tough way to finish," Jack said. "I think it was our worst game of the year on both sides of the ball."

Preston Elam scored the lone TD for the Broncos on a 40-yard pass from Damarjae Cortez in the fourth quarter and Koetting added the kick. Jack noted that Wellington's defense bottled out offense up. The Broncos only had 118 total yards in the game.

Defensively, several Broncos posted good stats. Preston Elam and Nick Shadle had 11 tackles each and Damarjae Cortez added 10. Justin Christopher had nine, and Keandre Cortez, Bryce Grahn, and Koetting grabbed eight tackles apiece. Grahn also caused and recovered a fumble.

"Wellington and Memphis both are in the top 10 and are good teams," Jack said. "Our guys played hard as a team, but we just didn't play well."

The Broncos will get back on track this week as they prepare for Wheeler in the first round of the playoffs.

"We will regroup and heal up," Jack said. "We just need to get back to what we were doing. It is playoff time; it is critical."

The Broncos will take on Wheeler at River Road High School on Thursday, November 10, beginning at 7:00 p.m.

Hustle, Hit, Never Quit

Two for the Road:

The Greens are now planning their next series of adventures to shoot footage for "Two for the Road." Costa Rica is up first, and they would like to add Cuba, Australia, and Jordan to their destinations. Through it all, they are guided by a desire to produce a show that will tell their friends and family what it's like to travel the planet. They are also gratified that people are taking such a personal interest in their adventures.

"I never expected people would be sitting around the television with their kids, watching the show together," Nik said. "But that's what's happening."

The journeys have also given the Greens a different outlook.

"The greatest thing is that everywhere we've been, the people are just good," Nik said. "The government may be awful, but the people are good. We've never felt unsafe."

"It's reaffirmed our faith in humanity," Dusty said. To learn more about Dusty and Nik's adventures, visit TwoForTheRoad.com.

Drugs in the News

FDA Approves First Drug to treat Duchenne's Muscular Dystrophy

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently approved the first drug to treat individuals with Duchenne's Muscular Dystrophy (DMD). Exondys 51 (eteplir-sen) is indicated for patients with a specific gene that thirteen percent of those with the disorder have been found to carry. Exondys 51 increased dystrophin, (a protein in the muscle) production which is likely to predict improved function in individuals with DMD. Additional research will be done to confirm this benefit. Common side effects include are skin irritation and vomiting.

DMD is a rare, inherited disease characterized by the progressive weakening of muscles. The disorder is caused by a lack of dystrophin which keeps the body's muscle cells intact. Those affected (primarily children) lose the ability to perform certain daily activities.
