Man facing charges for sexual assault

A 20-year-old man remained in the Donley County Jail facing a sexual assault charge this week following his arrest last Tuesday, November 10.

Sheriff Butch Blackburn said his office was called shortly before midnight on November 5 with a report that a 19-year-old female had been sexually assaulted in a Clarendon College residence hall room by another student.

The victim was transported to Northwest Texas Hospital for an examination, and an investigation was conducted by the sheriff's office that resulted in an arrest warrant being issued on November 8 and Lenyn Napoleon of the Dominican Republic being taken into custody that same day.

Napoleon was arraigned by Justice of the Peace Pam Mason on November 10, and bond was set at $25,000.

Thanksgiving meal to be held Thursday

The annual free Community Thanksgiving dinner will be, Thursday, Nov. 24, from 11:00 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Clarendon school cafeteria. For details, call 874-2007.

City repeals most building codes

Building permits are no longer required in Clarendon following action taken by the City Council at its regular meeting last Thursday.

Two weeks after a visit from a representative of the Texas State Board of Plumbing Examiners, city aldermen deliberated the municipal codes governing such things as construction and electrical and plumbing work and the costs associated with inspecting those activities.

City Administrator David Dockery said after the meeting that the city feels there is no longer a need for building permits due to the low volume of construction in Clarendon and because of the requirements for inspections to be performed by a certified inspector.

The council voted to specifically repeal codes governing plumbing and electrical materials in houses moved into the city, fences extending into streets or alleys, the building code, the residential code, the plumbing code, the fuel gas code, the mechanical code, and the electrical code.

Still in force are codes governing Property Maintenance and Dangerous Structures.

City officials say plumbing, electrical, building, and mechanical work within the corporate limits of Clarendon will now fall exclusively under state laws governing those areas.

In other city business, the council approved increases to animal fees, raising the cost of dog tags from $1 to $5, the first increase for dog tags since 1901. Other increased rates were impounding, $55 up from $50; boarding, $10 up from $8; and adoptions, $27.50 up from $25.

A schedule of fees was adopted to cover the cost of city workers and city equipment during demolitions of dilapidated properties. Those fees are published in a legal notice in this week's Enterprise.

The council took no action on electrical bids for work at the City Barn, and approved a proposal by architect Lynn Ramsey to conduct an ADA evaluation of City Hall.

Ronna Newman was appointed to a vacant seat on the Clarendon Economic Development Corporation Board, and aldermen accepted the contract with the Donley Appraisal District for the collection of taxes for fiscal year 2017.

Clarendon senior Bryce Grahn runs for his third place finish at the state cross country meet last week in Round Rock. CHS sophomore Gavin Word also ran in the state meet and finished 34th.

Grahn wins bronze at state

By Sandy Anderberg

Clarendon High School's Bryce Grahn ran to a third place finish in the State Cross-Country Meet in Round Rock last weekend.

Grahn finished the race with a time of 16:35.75.

Clarendon High School sophomore Gavin Word also ran in the meet and finished a respectable 34th with a time of 17:48.59. Grahn and Word ran a personal best in the meet.

This was Grahn's fourth trip to a state cross country meet. Before coming to Clarendon, Grahn ran in the Colorado state meet as a freshman. In his sophomore year as a Bronco, Grahn finished 13th and last year he ran 6th.

"We knew this year he had a chance to finish at the top, but you never know how a season is going to go," coach Kalen Grahn said.

"The runner from Sundown that was the state champion is a very good runner and the young man from Port Aransas who came in second was last year's state champ. We felt great where we came in."

"We had a blessed week at Round Rock," Grahn continued. "Bryce and Gavin both ran great races. Gavin grew as a runner to understand what a state meet feels and looks like. You can tell him, but until you experience first-hand, then you fully understand what it is like. It is the fastest meet you will be in."

Word has improved his time by over a minute the last two weeks and he will be leading the Bronco team next year, according to Grahn.

"He has made some great steps the past two weeks to show himself and the other runners that he is ready to take over the leadership role of this team," Grahn said.

Grahn was appreciative of the support the CC team received.

"We want to thank the Clarendon School for all their support," Grahn said. "Especially want to thank the other CC runners who ran and competed this year. I enjoyed taking Gavin and Bryce to state, but I want to take our entire team to Round Rock and bring back a State Championship trophy not just medals."

Wheatly wins easy re-election

Republican straight tickets carry the day

A Republican tidal wave hit the polls in Donley County as local voters chose Donald Trump as their preferred candidate for president during last week's general election.

Of the 1,480 votes cast, 1,073 voted a straight Republican ticket, and Mr. Trump picked up a total of 1,225 votes in Donley County. Democrat Hillary Clinton received 191, Libertarian Gary Johnson picked up 40, and the Green Party's Jill Stein got 14. Four other write-in votes went to Evan McMullin.

In the only locally contested race, Precinct 3 County Commissioner Andy Wheatly received 226 votes over his write-in challenger Neil Koetting, who picked up 88.

In terms of percent, voter turnout locally was up slightly from the last presidential election with 64.2 percent of registered voters casting ballots, but the actual number of voters going to the poll was down from four years ago with 1,480 this year compared to 1,539 in 2012.

Clarendon native Republican Mac Thornberry coasted to another term in Congress and received 1,266 votes compared to 95 local votes for Libertarian Calvin Dewesse and 45 for Green Party candidate Rusty Tomlinson. Republican Ted Cruz led all candidates locally and statewide to succeed Kay Bailey Hutchinson in the US Senate.

Ken King (R) of Canadian was also unopposed in seeking to represent Donley County in the State House of Representatives and received 1,273 local votes.

District Judge Stuart Messer was unopposed and received 1,291 votes. District Attorney Luke Inman also faced no opponent and got 1,252 votes.

All other county level races were also uncontested with incumbents cruising to re-election. Results are as follows: County Attorney Landon Lambert 1,258, County Sheriff Butch Blackburn 1,313, County Tax Assessor/Collector Linda Crump 1,334, County Commissioner Pct. 1 Mark White 295, County Commissioner Pct. 3 and Constable Prcts. 3&4 Doug Wright 578.

The Hands of a Boxer

By Brian Whitt, Goldthwaite Eagle

Two weeks ago, hands that have worn boxing gloves, grappled in wrestling rings, cooked chuck wagon meals and repaired teeth rested from their labors. For Dr. Keith "Fuzzy" Hudson, November 2 marked the conclusion of a highlight-filled dental career that has garnered accolades not only in Texas but nationally and internationally, and as he recalled favorite moments, the stories flowed.

For nearly a decade, patients visiting Hudson's office in San Saba have had access to a visual history of his life, told through high school report cards, awards and other mementos decorating the walls of his office. How good of a dentist has he been? In a word, exceptional.

Hudson is much more than a family dentist. To his colleagues and law enforcement officials, he has been one of the world's foremost forensic odontologists, tasked with identifying human remains at disasters and crime scenes based on the individual characteristics of teeth. Perhaps his best-known identification was of Branch Davidian leader David Koresh and dozens of his followers after the gun battle and fire in Waco in 1993. Modestly, he is quick to mention the people who worked with him.

"We had the best forensic team in the world, and they made us look good. You're no better than the people you're surrounded with," Hudson said.

His leadership in the dental profession has brought Hudson extensive recognition and numerous awards. As a dentist practicing in Colleyville, he was Vice-President of the Texas Dental Association and a multiple nominee for Texas Dentist of the Year. Hudson is also a member of the International College of Dentists, and the list of honors goes on. As a teacher and example, he has helped other dentists to be their best through innovation, which has in turn benefited their patients.

Summing up his friend's achievements, fellow dentist Dr. Tom Cody Graves said Thursday, "He's really good for dentistry."

In his youth, Hudson was also an accomplished athlete, starting out as a boxer while a student in Clarendon, Texas, and progressing to wrestling at the University

See "Boxer's Hands" on page 8.

Dr. Keith Hudson (a.k.a. Buddy Hudson) to his hometown friends, a graduate of Clarendon High School and a distinguished alumnus of Clarendon College, stands with some of his many awards. Hudson retired from a successful career as a dentist earlier this month.

Trump may disappoint his backers

The 2016 election was certainly one for the history books, and now the nation looks to see what Donald Trump will be like as president.

Most people were surprised by last Tuesday's outcome. Hillary Clinton was leading all the polls, and Trump had offended almost everyone at some point during the campaign. But two things were key to Trump's victory. First, perhaps even the man himself did not fully grasp the anger of the working class toward Washington, DC; and second, the Democrats possibly didn't understand how much people absolutely hate Mrs. Clinton.

The campaign then set up the clash of a brash Washington outsider and a classic poster child for DC corruption. Or, depending on your point of view, a racist misogynistic bigot vs. a champion of women and the downtrodden.

For your humble editor, it was a case of an exceptionally unpalatable Republican who seemed to demean the very things that makes America truly great (i.e. a free press, freedom of religion, and the strength that has come from the melting pot of a nation of immigrants) and a lying, conniving, vindictive witch who sounded like nothing more than an angry white woman. Which is why I voted for Gary Johnson, and went to bed with a clean conscious.

The most amusing thing has been to see the people on Facebook who two weeks ago were posting memes touting the abolition of the Electoral College become last Wednesday the biggest fans of the Electoral College.

So what are we left with? A second Clinton administration would have been easy to predict – an extension of B.O.'s policy's, more liberal judges on federal courts, an even larger role for the federal government, and a former president molesting interns in the East Wing of the White House.

But a Trump administration... now that's a wild card!

Donald Trump is beholden to no one. He's independently wealthy, and largely bankrolled his own election. Someone like Trump could make tremendous positive changes in Washington by taking on the established bureaucracy, finding compromise solutions to actually fix things like the tax code or Social Security, etc.

Someone like Trump could do that, but it remains to be seen if Trump is that person. And in fact, right now, it looks doubtful.

Diehard Republicans like to tell you that the party works for limited government, reduced taxes, reduced spending, and conservative judges on the courts. Unfortunately, their record is spotty at best, giving us the PATRIOT Act, No Child Left Behind, expanded federal programs, uncontrolled spending, and Chief Justice John Roberts – the traitor who single-handedly kept Obamacare as the law of the land. You do get generally lower taxes though.

Trump is not a typical Republican. Indeed, many of his positions aren't very Republican at all. So it was quite curious that he became a hero for the Grand Old Party, and even more curious how evangelicals rushed to embrace the man who exhibited the least Christian attributes of any major candidate running. But he had one thing going for him... he wasn't Hillary Clinton.

The president-elect may quickly become a disappointment for his backers. He has now come out and called the question of gay marriage "settled" (which should inflame many of his supporters), and he's already softened his position somewhat on repealing Obamacare, indicating that he may decide to keep the provision that requires insurers to cover pre-existing conditions (although, frankly that seems like the one thing that is driving insurance rates through the roof). You can't really take those positions to the bank though. They will likely change a couple of times before he takes office in January.

Which is the problem with electing a man to office that doesn't seem to have any core principals when it comes to political philosophy. That being said, Donald Trump is a smart man. You don't build the empire he has without some high level of business acumen. But how well can he translate business smarts into running the government? And more importantly, will the divisive language he used to get elected actually reflects his true feelings and the way he will govern?

Trump realistically has one year to prove himself. If he can somehow watch his tongue – and tame his Twitter account – and act sensibly, there may be some hope for him as president. But if he can't, then you can look for the divide in this country to get even wider and expect the Democrats to take control of Congress in two years.

Aggies coming to the rescue?

There's never been a justifiable basis for Aggie jokes – then or now. Most Texas A&M University students and former students have always known such jokes are that, and nothing more. And a majority of the rest of us agree.

In truth, Texas A&M is, was – and no doubt always will be – one of the nation's most distinguished institutions. Its growth and many successes are evident, and recent years have marked additions of many programs, including both law and dental schools.

And amounts of monies to fund research projects are mind-boggling. One recently announced initiative seems critical if Americans can afford to continue their love affair with the beverage that kick-starts their mornings. Texas A&M researchers face a serious challenge....

Not until learning about coffee leaf rust did I realize coffee shortages seem unavoidable, what with climate changes that are responsible for devastating coffee crops in Central America and Brazil.

Adding to the sense of urgency is the 2015 study predicting that 50% of the land used to grow Arabica coffee will be unsuitable for use beyond 2050.

With Americans' taste growing for multiple coffee flavors, we are prone to expect robust coffee crops without interruption. The masses of us are counting on the Aggie researchers to solve the looming problem. If they don't come through, "bottomless coffee cups" featured at some restaurants may go the way of the old goodie.

Hopefully, researchers are hanging "do not disturb" signs at the work place. This is serious business. We are, in fact, "hooked" on coffee, and that's no joke....

Of more concern should be recently announced findings of the Surgeon General. (My 104-year-old Uncle Mort says he remembers the Surgeon "Lieutenant.")

It reveals several additional health problems heaped on findings of the 1964 report that tied cigarette smoking to lung cancer. It is now believed that smoking can cause diabetes, rheumatoid arthritis and immune system weakness. Add to these fears the likelihood that second-hand smoke can cause strokes for non-smokers.

Since initial findings in 1964, cigarette smoking among adults has declined from 42% to 18%. More than 20 million Americans have died because of smoking....

The 1964 report significantly limited cigarette advertising. It also mandated health warnings for packaging. Remembrances of earlier ads flashed to mind during a recent cruise. On Freedom, a Carnival Cruise Line vessel, I opted to disembark when we reached Cozumel.

In the first shop, I noticed a large display of cigarettes. A huge sign – with headline-size type – proclaimed: "SMOKING KILLS."...

Perhaps the shop owner took seriously governmental laws introduced the idle american by don newbury

there in 2010.

Warnings and images must be changed every six months. So far, images have included a dead rat, a partial mastectomy and a laryngectomy with backdrops of cigarette butts.

In Mexico, it is required for sellers to identify smoking-related diseases and statistics, toxins found in cigarettes and other stark claims, including warnings such as: Your baby can die. You will have a slow and painful death. You are hurting your family. Smoking damages your arteries. Another challenge, "Go ahead; shorten your life." It occurred to me that the SMOKING KILLS banner so prominently displayed the day I visited was no starker than others mandated in Mexico, and the warnings are more stringent than in the USA....

Movie scenes showing stars smoking have lessened, and there are no more billboards featuring smokers puffing real smoke skyward. Gone also are other performers specializing in creatively exhaling smoke rings.

References to smoking in song also are relegated to memories. We of a certain age can remember the late Phil Harris rendition about cigarettes. The chorus instructs, "Tell St. Peter at the golden gate that I hate to make him wait, but I just gotta have another cigarette."

In today's world, I'll settle for another cup of coffee. Black. And remember my Uncle Mort's contention: "It don't take much water to make good coffee." Please pardon his grammar....

The blind bard of the Big Bend

I have known George Covington for several years. He has a habit of making people laugh. He writes a newspaper column. "I have fun pointing out the absurdities of everyday life," he says. "Most of the time the people I make fun of laugh with me."

He got to Alpine after living in New York and Washington for twenty years where he was involved in things political. "I love the people and places around here. I moved here from Manhattan and Washington DC and don't miss either place."

He worked in the White House for both Democrats and Republicans. "I started out as a typical low ranking bureaucrat, happy with my obscurity. The government's checks didn't bounce and I had good health benefits. I ended up writing speeches for the Vice President and directed travel for him when he went to disability events. Got to fly on Air Force Two." While working in Washington he was interviewed on the Today Show and other national media.

George has been nearly blind since birth and his eyesight is deteriorating, but that doesn't slow him down. He was born in Texarkana. "For years I used to beg my mother to admit that I had been stolen by gypsies and left in East Texas. I left as soon as I found out where the bus station was."

He took a bus to UT Austin. "I had one pair of jeans, some knee-length walking shorts, some floppies, maybe a tennis shoe or two and I walked from the bus station to the campus and vowed never to leave it. I lived in an old house. My big room had once been a porch. I shared a kitchen with two young guys from San Antonio who lived on the other side of the kitchen."

At the University of Texas he started in pre-law, then went to government, then went to English, then went to journalism. "I switched to journalism because they said the girls were promiscuous and you got to drink a lot," says George. "It wasn't quit like that but I loved it." George went to law school and despised it. "I still have nightmares about waking up and having a law final I hadn't studied for." He got stories of texas

by tumbleweed smith

a law degree and passed the bar. "It's the only bar I ever passed," he says with a smile. He practiced law for a while, but didn't care for it.

Growing up in East Texas, George didn't hear much Spanish. "I had never even remotely been in a Hispanic environment while growing up, so one day one of these San Antonio guys came to me and said, 'I'm gonna teach you the dirtiest words in the Spanish language.' So he taught me the words and I practiced and practiced. This was in November of 1964. So I walked into a friend's room who was studying one night and yelled at the top of my lungs these absolutely filthy, dirty words in Spanish: FELIZ NAVIDAD! His mouth dropped open, his eyes got big and I thought those dirty words must really be bad for him to react like that. A couple of weeks later I was listening to the radio and they were singing those bad words Feliz Navidad. I wondered how they could do that on the radio. Some bi-lingual friends of mine pointed out the words meant Merry Christmas. Years later I told that story to Jose Feliciano, who wrote the song, Feliz Navidad. He's probably still laughing about it."

City sales tax hits new high

Clarendon's sales tax revenue reached a new monthly high when Texas Comptroller Glenn Hegar sent his November distribution to local cities last week.

The city received its highest monthly allocation ever at $44,703.56, which was up 7.28 percent over the same period one year ago. That brings the calendar year-to-date total up 2.3 percent at $369,931.72.

These allocations are based on sales made in September by businesses that report tax monthly, and sales made in July, August and September by quarterly filers.

City Administrator David Dockery says the previous best month was August 2013 when Clarendon received $44,009.56.

Dockery attributed the growth to new businesses in town, particularly the Whistle-Stop Trade Days and Garrison's Convenience Store, and also to increased traffic due to higher water levels at Lake Greenbelt.

Hedley's allocation this month was $939.09, down 39.5 percent from one year ago and bringing the year-to-date total to $6,442.36, up 4.76 percent.

Howardwick was down 21.75 percent for the month at $859.44 and down 8.28 percent for the year at $12,054.

FTC tells how to defend yourself against ransomware

Hi, gang! Well the election is over. Whether you won or lost we got him for four years.

Very good ransomware information this week and how we can defend against it this week. We will take a look on how to buy a used car. The article is chock-full of free information on everything from comparing cars, costs, and warranties and service contracts to understanding payment options and where to report problems.

"How to defend against ransomware" by Ben Rossen, FTC.

In September, the FTC hosted a workshop on ransomware, one of the most serious online threats facing people and businesses today and the most profitable form of malware criminals' use. How does ransomware work? Hackers hold your files "hostage" often encrypting them, then demand payment, typically in bitcoins, for you to get them back.

Missed the workshop? Check out our videos featuring conversations with security researchers, technologists, law enforcers, and business leaders. Want some bite-sized takeaways? Here are some tips to protect your devices from ransomware, and what to do if you're a victim. How can I defend against ransomware? Update your software. Use anti-virus software and keep it up-to-date. And set your operating system, web browser, and security software to update automatically on your computer. On mobile devices, you may have to do it manually. If your software is out-of-date, it's easier for criminals to sneak bad stuff onto your device.

Think twice before clicking on links or downloading attachments and apps. According to one panelist, 91% of ransomware is downloaded through phishing emails. You also can get ransomware from visiting a compromised site or through malicious online ads. Back up your important files. From tax forms to family photos, make it part of your routine to back up files on your computers and mobile devices often. When you're done, log out of the cloud and unplug external hard drives so hackers can't encrypt and lock your back-ups, too.

What if I'm a victim of ransomware? Contain the attack. Disconnect infected devices from your network to keep ransomware from spreading. Restore your computer. If you've backed up your files, and removed any malware, you may be able to restore your computer. Follow the instructions from your operating system to re-boot your computer, if possible. Contact law enforcement. Report ransomware attacks to the Internet Crime Complaint Center or an FBI field office. Include any contact information (like the criminals' email address) or payment information (like a Bitcoin wallet number). This may help with investigations.

Should I pay the ransom? Law enforcement doesn't recommend paying the ransom, although it's up to you to determine whether the risks and costs of paying are worth the possibility of getting your files back. If you pay the ransom, there's no guarantee you'll get your files back. In fact, agreeing to pay signals to criminals that you haven't backed up your files. Knowing this, they may increase the ransom price and may delete or deny access to your files anyway. Even if you do get your files back, they may be corrupted. And you might be a target for other scams. Worried about ransomware affecting your business? Check out our Business Blog for specific tips.

"Shopping for a used car? The FTC has a deal for you!" by Colleen Tressler, FTC

If you're in the market for a used car, but don't know where to begin, the FTC welcomes you to its new webpage, ftc.gov/usedcars. The page is chock-full of free information on everything from comparing cars, costs, and warranties and service contracts to understanding payment options and where to report problems.

Ready to shop? Here are a few tips to help steer you in the right direction: Consider your driving habits, what you'll use the car for, and your budget. Test-drive the car under varied road conditions — on hills, highways, and in stop-and-go traffic. Get a vehicle history report before you buy. Vehicle history reports can tell you a lot about a used car. A report might include ownership history, whether the car was in any accidents, its repair records, and whether it ever was declared as salvage. Consider getting an independent inspection by a mechanic you hire. An inspection is a good idea even if the car has been inspected by the dealer.

Figure out how much to pay for a used car. There are commercial services with information about the value and pricing of used vehicles, including: Edmunds.com, Kelley Blue Book, and the National Automobile Dealers Association Guides. Look for the Buyers Guide. Dealers are required to display a copy in every used car they offer for sale, and to give it to buyers after the sale. The Guide tells you the major mechanical and electrical systems on the car, including some of the major problems you should look out for; whether the vehicle is being sold "as is" or with a warranty; what percentage of the repair costs a dealer will pay under the warranty; and to get all promises in writing. If the dealer doesn't display the Buyers Guide, you might want to shop elsewhere

Dog training adventures

A few weeks ago, I got my new dog, Raider. I've been working with him a lot, and I've taught him to lay on his bed instead of the furniture. I've also taught him to go to his cage when we need him to.

He's very, very sweet and he likes pretty much anyone that comes up to him. He started off pretty shy, but I think he's warmed up to my whole family.

I've also been trying to get him to sit, which has been an adventure.

The way I've learned how to train him is through a book series called Puppy Place. It basically takes a dog that may be too hyper or spoiled, and this one family takes these dogs and train them and put them up for adoption.

I think Raider has been a great dog for my first dog because he's very mellow and he doesn't bark a lot. He'll listen to you most of the time. He's also a lazy bum and likes to take naps.

I think Raider is going to live a long and happy life because he's had a lot of fun so far. Even though he's about two years old, he still thinks and acts like a puppy.

Presidential election finally ends

I think I heard a collective sigh of relief across the entire country! The election is finally over!

Trump was not my ideal candidate, but I am pleased with the election results and do accept Trump as my president. I wonder why those people threatening to leave the country think it matters to anyone else? What harm are you causing the country if you leave? If I think of their move at all, I personally think we are better off without them.

As we have since the first presidential election that lasted from December 15, 1788, to January 10, 1789, (remember the type of communicating in those days was by horse) the election of George Washington as president was unanimous, but the fuss was about vice-president (John Adams), and many people were displeased. The third presidential election in 1796 was the first contested election with John Adams elected president and Thomas Jefferson vice-president, each from different parties. Oh, boy! What a history our country has with another chapter being written in front of us so hold on tight.

This has been a week of sadness for some members of our community, and I would like to send condolences to Susie Dale on the loss of her husband Frank Dale, Johnny and Debra Hubbard on the loss of his brother, and Ruth and Jerry Carter on the loss of her brother, Jerry Chisum. Our hearts go out to these families, and God bless you all.

Whistle-Stop LEGENDS

Whistle-Stop owners Jordan and Kimberly salute our Weekly Legend...

FRED CLIFFORD

Fred Clifford was born and raised in Donley County and has a long history of helping other people. He served in the United States Army for three years, and worked many years in the family grocery business.

He delivered groceries to just about every elderly widowed lady in town and was also known for helping them with everything from changing light bulbs to carrying out the trash. Later as a salesman for Chamberlain Motor Co., Clifford worked diligently to get people the best deals possible and helped people get to and from work or appointments while their vehicles were being worked on.

For 26 years, Clifford was the head of the Citizens Cemetery Association and kept it running smoothly. He spent countless hours just making sure there was someone out there to mow the grass and make sure things were kept up in addition to numerous additional hours sending out thank you notes for donations to the cemetery.

The Whistle-Stop and the community salute Fred Clifford for his lifelong service to the people of Clarendon. Thank you, Fred!

Clarendon CISD names October's servant leaders

Clarendon CISD has named its Student Servant Leaders for October.

True leadership is rooted in the service of others. To be a servant leader is to think of others first and place their needs before your own, to be kind and generous, and to be a positive influence. Furthermore, anyone and everyone can be a servant leader, and if we have a campus, school, community, nation, and world of those that respect others and sacrifice their time, efforts, and treasures for others, then we all benefit.

The following students have been positive role models, peer tutors, and respectful to teachers, other adults, and classmates. In addition, there are acts of making sure classrooms are clean at the end of the day, including other students in various classroom and playground activities, assisting younger students in finding their homework, and working hard to prepare for upcoming UIL events (we believe that committing to a purpose whole heartedly with hard work and seeing it through to the end also embodies the servant leader spirit).

Please join CISD personnel as they recognize and extend our gratitude to the following students:

Elementary: Kindergarten-Braxton Gribble; 1st grade-Bruce Campbell; 2nd grade-Trystan Ritchie; 3rd grade-Elliot Frausto; 4th grade-Bryce Williams; and 5th grade-Braden Hobbs.

Jr High: 6th grade-Taylor Halsell; 7th grade-Hadleigh Halsell; and 8th grade-Zhala Bassett.

High School: 9th grade-Madisen Gay; 10th grade- Noab Elam; 11th grade-Alex Bilbrey; and 12th grade-Bryce Grahn.

Country singer Tim McGraw sings a song about being humble and kind; if we add gracious to this, what better traits could we teach our children? We are very honored to have these students attend Clarendon CISD and are very pleased to recognize them for serving others.

Elementary servant leaders are (not in order) Kindergarten Braxton Gribble; 1st grade Bruce Campbell; 2nd grade Trystan Ritchie; 3rd grade Elliot Frausto; 4th grade Bryce Williams; and 5th grade Braden Hobbs.

Junior High servant leaders are (not in order) 6th grade Taylor Halsell, 7th grade Hadleigh Halsell, and 8th grade Zhala Bassett.

High School servant leaders are (not in order) 9th grade Madisen Gay, 10th grade Noab Elam, 11th grade Alex Bilbrey, and 12th grade Bryce Grahn.

Broncos fall short in last minutes of game

By Sandy Anderberg

The Clarendon Broncos ended their stellar season at 8-3 in the first round of the playoffs against Wheeler at 18-20 at River Road High School.

"This was a tough game for us," head coach Gary Jack said. "We played pretty good, but the first two times we touched the ball, we turned it over."

The Bronco went on to post five turnovers in the game, which proved to hurt them in their fight.

"Our defense stepped up and played well, and offensively we were moving the ball well," Jack said. "We had our opportunities, but it just didn't work out."

The Broncos got behind early, but were able to recover and actually take the lead at 18-14 with minutes left in the game.

But with only 2:49 left in the game, Wheeler's quarterback busted a 40-yard run to put six on the board and take the lead.

"Overall we played hard," Jack said. "But just a couple of little things went wrong. We needed a stop, but it didn't happen."

The Broncos took the loss pretty hard as they felt they were back playing like they needed to.

"This was a tough loss for all of us, but especially our nine seniors," Jack said. "We just needed one more play either way to win the game."

Lady Broncos begin season

By Sandy Anderberg

The Clarendon Lady Broncos have practiced all year and proved they were ready for their first games of the season last Tuesday and Friday night when they hosted Follett and Miami. They coasted to a 63-19 win over Follett and grabbed a 42-25 win over Miami.

In the first game, the ladies took full control of the court and the game proving they were too much for the Lady Panthers. Because of their quick defense, the Lady Panthers were only able to score 12 points in the first half of play compared to 39 for the Lady Broncos. The second half was much of the same as they executed their offense just the way they wanted while staying solid on defense.

Hannah Howard led the ladies on the scoreboard with 13, which included one three-pointer and two for two from the free throw line. As a team, the Lady Broncos made 21 out of 32 attempts from the charity stripe for 66%, which is a good showing for the first game. Shaelyn Owiti turned in nine points, Brianna Butler put in eight, and Hannah Hommel and Berkeley Alexander each put in seven from their post position. Brandalyn Ellis racked up four, and Emily Johnson, Briley Chadwick, and Madi Gay each put in three, while Kira Weatherton, Aliyah Hill, and Eboni Butler each helped with two.

New coach and Clarendon High School alumni Corey Conkin was proud of the way her team began their season.

“Wow! What a great start to the season for these girls,” Conkin said. “They have worked extremely hard and deserved the win due to their defensive intensity. (I am) looking forward to seeing them grow and improve throughout the season. We are playing three Varsity games to start the season, so our younger girls are getting the opportunity to step up to the higher level of competition and get some experience. Twelve of the fourteen girls scored in our first match up.”

The game with Miami was somewhat tighter, but the ladies stayed solid to get the win. Clarendon led through the entire game and left no doubt as to their strength on both ends of the court. The Lady Broncos used good teamwork and hustle to get the job done and everyone contributed to the win. Owiti put in 11 points to lead the Lady Broncos and Butler and Howard helped with nine each. Hommel racked up five and Weatherton and Chadwick each had four.

“Another great defensive battle for the Lady Broncos,” Conkin said. “Great first quarter of play, marking the score at the end of the quarter, 15-2. We need to do a better job of dealing with adversity; be mature and handle it. We will continue to work hard in practice and improve.”

The Lady Broncos will travel to San Jacinto November 18 beginning with the junior varsity at 5:30 and varsity at 7:00 and will play at home on Tuesday, November 22, at 6:30 p.m. against Lockney.

Boxer's Hands

of Texas. That love of athletics continued on into later years, when he was a member of the Board of Directors of Texas Golden Gloves, where he helped instill a sense of purpose and self-respect in young men from difficult backgrounds.

"Any time you can help a kid or an adult or anybody, it's a big, big deal," he said last week. That philosophy lies at the center of his life, and has served him well in sports and dentistry.

Like any good dentist, Hudson has his hobbies, among them chuckwagon cooking. Charles Goodnight, founder of the ranch where Hudson lived as a boy, invented the chuckwagon, and it's not hard to imagine how young Keith Hudson was inspired by tales of the famous rancher's exploits.

"I grew up on the ranch that the chuck wagon was invented on," Hudson said, and of his chuck wagon cooking experiences, he said, "It was so much fun." He has received letters "from all over the world" praising Dr. Fuzzy's cactus stew.

Perhaps his early days on the sprawling Goodnight ranch did as much as anything to shape the larger-than-life man Hudson became. He was never going to be average, that much was obvious to his classmates, teachers and colleagues. As the Russians prepared to launch Sputnik, he and his Clarendon High School friends sent their own model rocket flying so high it vanished from sight. When ABC, CBS, and NBC sent crews to film their second launch, the rocket appeared on the radar screens at a nearby Strategic Air Command base.

Leaving a bright rocket trail across the years, Dr. Fuzzy Hudson retired last week to care for his beloved wife Olivia. He vividly remembers the two of them dancing to the music coming from yet-unfinished Sundance Square early in their courtship, and their ranch wedding the first year of the new millennium. His heart filled with gratitude, he set down the tools of his trade and returned to the dance.

PLAYTIME WITH A PURPOSE

Every child, no matter how big, small or physically able has a right to play. So, when members of the community wanted to build a playground where children with different abilities could play, Southwestern Electric Power Company employees David Langston and Twila Griffin knew they'd found something to get behind and do anything they could to help. These two employees joined in as the volunteer construction crew. And every season, they're back, along with some of their SWEPCO friends to keep the park in playtime condition. It's just another example of our people doing all they can to keep little miracles like the Leaps and Bounds Playground going strong.

We may be a power company, but the true power in our communities comes from our people.
