Be Used to Supplement Government Funds

Considerable interest in being manifest in a proposed $10,000 bond election to be held in Commissioners' Precinct No. 2 on Saturday April 11th.

The election was called recent-ly by the Commissioner's Court following presentation of a petti-tion signed by a large group of property-owners of the precinct. Purpose of the proposed issue will be to supplement Federal and State funds in the construction of hard-surfaced roads within the

Precinct of approved caliche or macadam type. Some misunderstanding as to the purpose of the proposed issue become prevalent, proponents state, and for this reason urge all voters to consider the proposition

Advocates of the issue point out that the proposed bonds can be used only for the purpose of supplementing government funds on approved projects. Ratio of 85 per cent of money expended, according to those favoring the issue. In other words, the precinct would pay only 15 per cent of the cost of building hard-surface roads. Bonds would be sold only as government aid and approval given on projects—and in the event such aid was not available, no bonds would be sold, as money secured through the bond issue can not be used for any other

Issuance of the bonds would en-tail only a slight increase in the tax rate on property within the Precinct, this increase amounting to between 5 and 8 cents on each $100 rendition, proponents have

This figure is based upon the average rendition of all real estate in Precinct 2, the average being $9.00 per acre. On this basis, and with the maximum increase of 8 cents as mentioned above, the bonds would only amount to 72 cents yearly on each 100 acres of land, advocates of the issue estimate. Annual election of trustees for will be held at all voting boxes in tell you. "That's right. And I'll always answer. You see, my dear, we must never meet again. We've looked at glory tegether-and turned away. It wasn't our fault, you know, We rather . . . rushed our fences. But down in that valley of shadow we gave each other judgment . . and the judgments were good."

I could not speak. I sat as though turned to stone. My heart in my breast was ice. The blow had fallen already, had fallen again. I had nothing to lose, and had lost it. "From him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath." "I-I don't know that mine was."

I said desperately.

'Tm afraid it was," said Helena. "I put my love above honor-and you mustn't do that. And in any event mine was. You took my love and you put it back in its place. I don't say you weren't right to do it. because you were. But there are some flowers, my dear, that you can't transplant. I mean-if you move them, they die." Blow upon blow. Couldn't she see that the thing she was striking was dead? There was a long, long stlence.

By the time it was over I had myself in hand. At length-

"Poor Bugle," said Helena slowly. "He did me a very good turn." "By dropping the torch?" said I.

"I suppose he dropped it," she said. "But Rush was bullying me. and sometimes I think that Bugle was going to stop him. I don't know, of course. When it fell, I just flew for the door. And in any event he waited to set me free. I think he was the best of the lot."

"I think you're right," said I. had a weakness for Bugle, to tell you the truth. Of course Rush showed him off."

"I know, I know. But he had a spark of feeling. More than a spark, I think. Very few men, placed as he was, would have troubled to let me out."

There was another silence. With her eyes on young Florin's grave, Helena spoke again. "That wasn't the only reason why I wanted to see you before you went, I want your help in a mat-

"Your cousin is painting my pleture he's nearly done. It is the most lovely portrait. . . . And as he won't hear of a fee, I want to make him a present.

"Well, I've got a cup at Yorick, an old, gold cup, with a curious history. Years ago, in the Sixteenth century, the Yorick of that day was painted. A young painter came from Vienna, a man called Latz. Had he lived, he would have been famous, for the picture is terribly good. Your cousin picked it out in an instant as being the best of the lot. Well, when the painter had finished, the count was so pleased with his work that he called for wine and drank the young man's health, and when he had drained the cup he called for gold. I suppose his treasurer brought it. Then he filled the cup with gold pleces and gave the painter the lot. I hope it was adequate payment. In those days it probably was. The next morning the painter left Yorick to make his way home. On his lonely ride to Salzburg the poor man was robbed and murdered-his body was found by the road. Now the thieves didn't break up the cup, but six months later they tried to sell it at Inns- | Hatchery, bruck where Torick then had a hotel. But, as it happened, they took it to the very goldsmith that Yorick himself employed. The moment he saw the arms, he knew that the cup had been stolen, and, to cut a long story short, the thleves were taken and hanged and the cup came back to the castle because the poor painter was dead.

"So you see that cup will make a most appropriate gift. But I'm so afraid that your cousin may refuse to accept it that, before I ask him to do so, I want to have it engraved with his crest. And that's where you can help me. I must have something of his that bears his crest, to give to the engraver to copy. A cigarette-case or a flask. Perhaps it's on the backs of his brushes. . . . You see, without that I'm stuck. At the present moment I don't even know what his crest is."

"Strangely enough," said I. "It's the same as your own-a leopard. But that doesn't mean-"

"What? The word flamed

As the saying goes, I almost leapt out of my skin; and turned to find her staring-tense, wide-eyed and staring, white to the lins,

TO VOTERS IN THE CITY ELECTION

Time is drawing near towards the City Election, and I wish to remind you that I will appreciate very much your careful consideration and influence in the City Marshal's race.

I promise you the most careful consideration regarding the traffic laws of the City. I will endeavor to direct traffic in the way it should be directed, taking care of all funeral processions, as they need to be. Also careful consideration will be given the school zones, assisting in every way possible to protect the school children.

If elected, you will always find me on the job whenever needed, and I shall likewise cooperate with all other officers and city officials in proper law enforcement.

"UTTER COLLAPSE" VS "SPIRITUAL AWAKENING"

The Honorable Roger Babson, statistical expert and well-known financial writer, after reviewing the economic forces of the world, comes to the conclusion that "business should continue to improve for a few more years."

However, do not conclude that the business forecaster is optimistic. He believes that "eventually a 'receiver' must be appointed for this grand old world of ours, cutting down debts, wiping out trade barriers, and giving every country a fresh

Mr. Babson says, "This can come about either through utter collape or through a spiritual awakening." As far as we are concerned, we wish to go on record in favor of the "spiritual awakening" because we have no desire to experience whatever an "utter collapse" may be. Boiled down, spiritual awakening means a little less selfishness on the part of individuals and nations, willingness and readiness to render service for just reward and the epousal of a "live and let live" policy.

A SOCIAL SECURITY DANGER

The people of the United States should understand thoroughly what is involved in the Social Security Law. At present, when the goals are discussed, few stop to think of the taxes and financial factors involved.

In 1937, however, the workers to be covered will begin to pay a tax of 1 per cent on their wage or salary and employers will contribute an equal amount, making a 2 per cent tax in all. Gradually increasing until 1949, the tax will finally become 6 per cent contributed equally by workers and employers. In 1942 old age pensions will begin, but the first income to the Government is expected to greatly exceed the money paid out, and by 1980 the reserve fund will reach the gigantic total of around $47,000,000,000.

While some critics have questioned the management of such a fund, another objection has been raised by M. Alfred Linton, life insurance executive, who thinks that the real danger will come fromthe failure on the part of Congress to keep its hands off the reserve fund. This actuary says that Congressmen, not understanding the essential principles underlying a present reserve to make future payments, will be tempted to liberalize payments and thus jeopardize the future of those who have contributed to the enormous reserve.

While the Haskell Free Press ardently advocates the principles of social security legislation, the fear voiced by Mr. Linton is based on something besides fault-finding. It undoubtedly will be a menace to the successful operation of old age pensions, un-less the people of the United States are thoroughly educated in regard to the function of an adequate reserve. Moreover, they must stand guard over the fund created. Just how this is to be effectively done

STOCKS NOT A BAROMETER

The stock market has completed a full year tinued gains. An average of fifty stocks, which stood at 33.98 on July 8,1932, the low point of the depression has now risen to 120.78. About a year ago the average was 77.92.

While it is interesting to observe this evidence of confidence on the part of investors, we should not mistakenly assume that stock market prices accurately reflect general conditions throughout the United States. While the nation, as a whole has made tremendous improvement from the depth of the depressions, reflected in the price of stocks. it is possible for large portions of our population to suffer economically in the midst of a rising stock market.

THE PUBLIC FALLS AGAIN

The life of the American sucker seems just one grand scheme after another. It has not been long since the heyday of the chain-letter gag; and now lotteries under the guise of "sweepstakes" and "treasure hunts" are pulling the public leg for a new shakedown. So far-reaching has the lottery me become in recent weeks, declares William Hodson, commissioner of public welfare of New York, that "it appears potentially a more sinister racket than this country has ever before suffered."
To put an end to this racket, Hodson suggests new legislation and intervention of the federal authorities. Because the American people do not mind being fooled if it is done under the guise of "chance," the Hodson proposals appear to be the only safe solution. It is too much to hope that the public will ever refuse outright to be hood-winked.

WE PAY FOR ARMAMENTS

Since the world finds itself again in a mad, headlong race for increased armaments, have you considered your part of the bill, as an individual American citizen? Writing in the London Morning Post recently, John T. Flynn gave figures revealing the burden each individual in all the leading countries must bear for the support of armies. In Canada the cost is $1.24 a person; in New Zealand, $1.50; Denmark, $2.18; Australia, $2.40; Japan, $3.70; Belgium, $4.10; Italy (at war), $8; Great Britain, which defends a vast imperial empire, $9.50, and the United States, $5.60. No statistics are available for Germany. But the United States for the first time since the war, has begun borrowing money for arms, battleships and aircraft. America obviously is at last caught in the maelstrom of arnaments that has burdened the Old World for so many decades. Whether it is the only way out it to be proved. At least we know that it is going to cost us plenty.

SNAP SHOTS

Judging by the great increase in income tax returns reported by the Internal Revenue Depart-ment, the New Deal must not have done so badly by a lot of people.

"Distribution is our greatest economic problem," says a business executive. Right! Mainly distributing the proceeds of the pay check right after pay

CURRENT COMMENT

HIGHWAY POLICY The Dallas News

The Texas Highway Commission made a flat pledge last year that it would provide Texas with an efficient cardinal route system for Centennial traffic. Probably ambitious communities translated that to mean that everybody would get all the roads he wanted. The commission meant what it said, however. Under the intensive program of the last ten months, Texas cardinal roads from border to border have been planned to meet the demands of tourist traffic.

Now the commission points out that it must concentrate on completing this phase of the work by June. No new projects can be initiated and ended in time. It is probable that on the cardinal highways some detours must be arranged but these are to be made as attractive to the traveler as possible The commission has joined whole heartedly in the idea of selling Texas to America and theirs is the first commodity to catch the trade-good roads,

Today the commission has given Highway Engineer Gibb Gilchrist authority to finish the job. Its difficulty must be appreciated. A year ago there were few of the border-to-border roads which could be traversed from end to end on pavement. Some of the gaps were long. The Highway Department has been busy filling in the blank spaces and finishing out the necessary roads.

The Highway Department today is a splendid example of what can be done when politics is kept out and efficiency in.

Seeing a man with the dropsy and realizing fully the rather hypocritical legalistic strictness of the Pharisees regarding conduct in the Sabbath Jesus asked the critics two questions.

The first was whether it was lawful to heal on . - Sabbath and receiving no answer Jesus healed the afflicted man. Then, answering their unspoken disapproval, Jesus asked the second question, whether or not there were any present who would not rescue his ox fallen into a pit, even if it happened on the Sabbath Day. Once again, there was no answer.

Observing the conduct of those who were also at the dinner Jesus used the situation there to hammer home vital spiritual truths. To the guests, who were vying with each other for favored places of honor and prominence, he recommended humility. To the host, Jesus pointed out that hospitality to friends, kinsmen and rich Oliver Duggins, botanist: "Weeds are found only neighbors in the expectation of a whereas it would me a much more generous and friendly act to invite the poor, the maimed, the lame and the blind, who could not repay socially, to such a gathering.

A True History of My Black Notebook

By Miss Vick In the beginning it belonged to my brother. I assumed ownership of it, to retaliate for his appropriating my nail files, combs, lotions, and what-not, during his high school day. But he has not re-entered college so never has had occasion to miss it. Hence it ceased to be a trophy long ago; I regarded it in later years more as a token. So much, then, for its

The Haskell County Track Meet held here last Saturday again showed that when it comes to athletes, Haskell is leading the field.

In the Haskell County Track Meet for each successive class, one year after another, I used it as my portfolio, my strong-box, and my portfolio, my strong-box, and my filing cabinet. Written in it I had the Senior Class roll, notes week. About the only thing left to do is study in the study hall and sleep at night.

Aren't you glad we had some heap big Indian braves who went in the building and saved our trophies. They should have a medal for that. That's something we probably could not have replaced but since we have a collection we can add to it. While we're talking about trophies we might men-tion some of the trophies were won this year. The basket ball girls won the county meet and were awarded a trophy. The boys and girls Debate teams both won trophies at the County Interscho-lastic League Meet. The track team won the Invitation Meet and

Say we're getting some college methods since the fire, going from one building to another to meet class. It will be lots of fun at least until the new wears off. Some of the classes will be lec-tures too, since the books that the students bought will not be

Don't forget we're going to have Warwhoop Books for sale the last of May. That's one thing the fire didn't destroy or even damage. We think the book will have more value to you now than it did before the fire, 'cause all the pic-tures in the book were taken on the steps of the old building and there's a picture of the building too. Then, just the regular oc-curance of the day that the "Pisen Arrow" and other columns have recorded will be in the Warwhoop Book. If you would like to have a book make arrangements now for one.

There is a great mystery about Anita Jo. People have often wondered whose green Chevrolet she rides in every Sunday night. Would you like to know?—Try to find out.

Ouida Homesly and Robert Thompson both came to school Monday with a black eye and a chewed ear. It looks like Robert tripped Ouida and she chewed on his ear. (Look at Robert if you don't think so.)

Woodrow F. is still mad or nearly mad at Lorene for going with Jimmy Crawford. Let us say as a referee in a prizefight "May the best man win."

Did you ever hear of a seven-teen year old girl going with a fifteen year old boy? Well Bever-ly and Joe Isbell have.
