Antro demolition to begin this week

Demolition of the Antro Hotel building could begin as early as Thursday, September 13, according to the contractor in charge of the job.

Matthew Tamplen of TNT Construction met Tuesday afternoon with city and economic development officials as well as the neighboring property owners and representatives of Southwestern Electric Power Co. Discussions centered on the order of work, proper insurance for all concerned parties, and how the removal of material would be handled.

Portions of First and Kearney streets are expected to be closed off during the work, which will begin with the upper portions of the south wall adjacent to the former Clarendon Office Supply building.

The historic hotel sign and other architecturally significant elements of the building, including the facing brick, will be salvaged for future use by the economic development board. The rest of the building and related salvage will become the property of Demolition is expected to take about two weeks.

The three-story brick building was already severely deteriorated when a July 29 windstorm pushed most of the north wall into the structure.

The Antro Hotel was built in 1926 and opened in 1927 by G.W. Antrobus. The property has been shuttered for about 40 years.

Hudson receives dentist of the year nomination

AUSTIN – Keith Hudson, DDS, of Goldthwaite has been nominated by the Heart of Texas District Dental Society for the Texas Academy of General Dentistry's (Texas AGD) Texas Dentist of the Year Award. This award is considered the most prestigious honor a Texas dentist can earn.

A native of Clarendon, Dr. Hudson is one of only 19 dentists nominated for this year's award. He and other nominees will be honored at the Texas Academy Awards on Friday, September 21, during the Texas AGD's annual Lone Star Dental Conference in Austin. Each nominee will be recognized and will receive an engraved plaque.

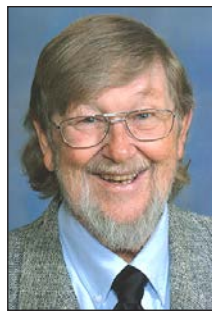

The Texas Academy Awards will conclude with the announcement of the 2018 Texas Dentist of the Year. "The designation of Dentist of the Year carries a tradition of the Best of the Best," said Jeff Geno, DDS, MAGD, Texas AGD President. "The names of past nominees and winners read like a Who's Who of Texas Dentistry."

Dr. Hudson received his Doctor of Dental Surgery from the University of Texas Dental School at Houston in 1966. Over the course of his 52 years in practice, Dr. Hudson held numerous positions in organized dentistry including President of the Fort Worth AGD, Director and Vice President of the Texas Dental Association (TDA), and membership in both the American and International College of Dentists.

"Winning the Cooley Award at the TDA Meeting year after year, and always placing as a nominee is a testament to his willingness to share practical solutions to everyday dental problems including post and core techniques and etching materials for bonding," said Dr. Leslie Fullerton of Conroe, TX.

Dr. Hudson also gave his time to several community outreaches including the Texas Golden Gloves

Hudson

Youth Development, the Haven for Battered Women, and is a founder of the Fort Worth Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. In addition, Dr. Hudson is a nationally recognized Forensic Odontologist called to disaster sites to identify burned and mangled bodies. He has done work with the FBI, ATF, assisted with plane crashes and much more.

The Texas Academy of General Dentistry's mission is to help general dentists succeed. Its 2,800 members partner together to help guide the journey of Fellowship, Mastership, and Lifelong Learning in order to provide quality dental care in general practice.

For more information about the dentistry academy, visit www.TAGD.org.

County okays $2.8 million 2019 budget

Donley County Commissioners approved a $2.846 million budget for fiscal year 2019 when they met in regular session Monday.

County Judge John Howard said the new budget will address improving county salaries and also continue to build reserves for the county.

County employees will receive an across the board $900 per year raise with the exception of road hands and jail dispatchers, who are receiving higher targeted raises.

"We have difficulty training and keeping dispatchers at our current salaries," Howard said.

Health insurance prices continue to be an escalating expense for the county. Premiums have doubled in the last ten years since the passage of the Affordable Care Act. This year, for the first time, county employees will be contributing $40 per paycheck to their own health insurance.

The new budget includes money for building an addition to the county barn to protect equipment. Commissioners also on Monday accepted a bid of $57,300 for construction on that project. Materials for that work costing about $27,000 were purchase in the current budget.

The 2019 budget will be the first to include revenue from the wind energy facility in the northern part of the county. Howard said the $200,000 revenue line item is the first of ten the county will have before that facility's tax abatement expires and the equipment goes on the tax rolls.

"We're taking an approach of spending half and saving half of those funds," Howard said. "If we can do that for ten years, we'll have saved $1 million."

The new budget is supported by a total tax rate of $0.69984 per $100 valuation, which is not far off from the current rate of $0.69941. Due to higher property evaluations, the new rate will bring in an extra $103,446.14, which is an increase of about 7.75 percent.

County officials continue to worry about the state government shifting cost burdens to local government without providing funding for those responsibilities, and Howard also said there is still talk in Austin about limiting the ability of counties to raise taxes. But he is optimistic the county can live within its means at the current tax rate.

"I think we can function well at this tax rate even though everything continues to go up," Howard said. "Our expenses are up 20 percent in five years, but our tax rate has only gone up about 10 percent."

In other county business Monday, commissioners approved a resolution declaring September as National Preparedness Month, approved an election services agreement with the clerk's office and Memphis ISD for a tax ratification election on November 6, approved the holiday schedule for 2018-2019, and voted to move the regular October meeting to October 10 to avoid meeting on Columbus Day.

Motions were also approved to purchase a computer for the clerk's office, participate in the Panhandle Ground Water Planning Group, and to approve the county attorney's attendance at a Galveston meeting.

SWCD election planned

The Donley County Soil and Water Conservation District No. 127 Board of Directors will hold an election for the purpose of electing one director for Subdivision 1 on October 9.

Qualified voters will assemble at 6:00 p.m. at the NRCS Office, 321 S Sully St., Clarendon, to conduct the election.

Early voting by personal appearance for eligible voters will begin on Monday, September 17, 2018, and continue each weekday through Friday, October 5, 2018 from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the NRCS Office, 321 S Sully St., Clarendon, TX.

Early voting shall also be conducted on Saturday, September 23, 2018, from 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. at the NRCS Office.

Additional election information is available in the notice in this week's classifieds on page seven or by contacting the Donley County SWCD at 321 S. Sully St., Clarendon, TX or by calling 806-874-3561.

Show us the money Let's see how our tax dollars are being spent

By Kelley Shannon, Executive Director
Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas

It's quite simple, really.

We Texans have a right to know how our taxpayer dollars are spent.

It's our money. We, the people, choose our government. Our elected public officials represent us. They manage and spend our tax money. But we, the people, get to decide whether they are doing it well.

To do that, we need light shining on the workings of our government. But that essential element of our democracy is in jeopardy in Texas.

Taxpayers are being denied information about government contracts with private companies and about tax dollars flowing into large non-profit organizations.

Why? Two Texas Supreme Court rulings in 2015 weakened the Texas Public Information Act and allowed this blocking of information. It's conceivable that the court's justices did not envision how wide the swath of secrecy would grow in the wake of their decisions.

Now, in response, more than a dozen diverse organizations have come together to form the non-partisan Texas Sunshine Coalition to ensure our government doesn't operate in the dark.

"The Texas Sunshine Coalition is dedicated to restoring the Texas Public Information Act to serve its intended purpose," the coalition explains on its website at www.txsunshine.org. The Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas is a coalition member.

Today, not only are the guts of public contracts with private firms often kept secret, but sometimes the final contract amount is, too, because companies argue it could put them in a disadvantage in a future bidding situation.

Contracts for a public power plant, police body camera equipment, college sports marketing deals, a holiday parade entertainer and many more spending agreements are off limits to the public. Sometimes there are attempts to hide licensing and regulatory data or information about hiring decisions.

In Austin, city officials argued they should be allowed to hide the identities of finalists in their city manager search because it would put them at a competitive disadvantage with other cities. Thankfully, that argument to the Texas Attorney General's Office failed.

But some 2,600 attempts to block information using the court's recent secrecy rulings have been permitted by the Attorney General's Office because of how broadly the court's decisions were written.

That's where we, the people, and our elected state representatives come in.

Legislators created the Texas Public Information Act. It's time for them to take charge and ensure that the law once again benefits the people of our state by rewriting some language in the law to address the court's actions.

To be fair, not all private businesses, which now have far more ability to keep government records private, come down on the side of secrecy.

Many recognize that if they are paid by taxpayer money, a certain level of transparency is warranted. Openness in government bidding also helps small and mid-sized businesses compete with big business for public contracts because the smaller companies can view the past winning bids.

Let's also be clear on this: There's no effort afoot to force a private company to reveal the formula for its secret sauce. There has always been a trade secrets exemption in the Public Information Act to keep that kind of information private, and that should remain.

Common ground for solving this secrecy struggle is surely achievable.

This and other government transparency issues are on the agenda at the FOI Foundation of Texas state conference Sept. 21 in Austin.

The conference will also focus on whether dates of birth should be available on certain public records, such as candidate applications for public office and criminal justice records; how governments can go about obtaining public records stored on private electronic devices; and whether there should be limits to free speech on college campuses.

Opinions vary on many of these questions, but working together we can figure out how to balance competing interests. We can do this.

Perhaps along the way we will remember the wise words of the Texas Public Information Act declaring that the people insist on remaining informed and "that government is the servant and not the master of the people."

Kelley Shannon is executive director of the non-profit Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas, which advocates for open government and First Amendment rights. For information on the Sept. 21 state conference go to www.foift.org.

Giants who wouldn't pull rank...

Sometimes, selfless decisions are made without fanfare, yet come to light years later. We're running short on noble decisions of late, yet those made decades ago by two prominent Arizonans – both affectionately "adopted" – are noteworthy.

Senator John McCain's recent death resulted in much reflection on his life of service to his country, including his imprisonment in Viet Nam for more than five years. When captors realized his prominence, they saw great public relations value in releasing him soon after imprisonment. He immediately balked, indicating that he would wait his turn. And he did, "staying put" as a prisoner for four more years of punishment and degradation.

Late columnist Erma Bombeck – a "favorite daughter" of Arizona during the final 25 years of her life – made a similar decision a quarter-century later, not from a prison cell, but from a hospital bed....

Gravely ill with a kidney disease, she had the opportunity to move "up the list" for a transplant, thanks to her celebrity status.

She'd have no part of it, vowing to wait her turn. When that time came, months later, she was too ill to survive the surgery when a kidney implant was attempted. One of the world's wittiest persons, her columns brightened millions of lives. She died in 1996 at age 69, still meeting column deadlines until shortly before her death.

Erma's death robbed readers of smiles. She could coax more grins from a column of 400 words or so than anyone I've ever read. And those "grins" often erupted into belly laughs that left us making apparel adjustments, wiping away joyful tears, or – in the case of women – "unsmudging" their mascara....

Several million Americans looked forward to her syndicated columns that, at the height of her popularity, appeared in 700 newspapers in the US and Canada. Revealing the "funny side" of down home experiences, she also turned out 15 books, most of them best-sellers, and all of them with clever titles. When her typewriter key strokes ended in 1996, she had written more than 4,000 columns and had an estimated 30 million readers.

Some 50 years ago, I sent a "thank you" letter for the humor she delivered with each column. A couple of weeks later, I was surprised to receive a note that she no doubt had personally written. It was typed on copy paper, and signed "Erma," the signature scribbled with an editor's pencil. The page's jagged edges were proof enough that it was torn from a roll of paper fed into her typewriter (pretty much paper towel quality).

Even her short note produced grins. It read, "I apologize for being so late

the idle american

by don newbury

writing to thank you for your letter," she said. "I'm nearly as far behind with my correspondence as I am with my laundry." Those few words were "Erma to the core..."

Upon considering a column topic, I often muse, "How would Erma handle it?" (I know; her garment hem would go untouched if it depended on me to emulate her work.) For example, with Senator John McCain's death following Aretha Franklin's passing just nine days earlier, I think Erma would have found ways to lighten national mourning with touches of humor that in no way denigrated their great lives.

Writers and broadcasters covered both funerals in great detail. Somehow, I think Erma would have had a tongue-in-cheek comment about Aretha's funeral procession that included 120 pink Cadillacs (inspired by her hit song, "Freeway of Love"). "Hmmm," the columnist might have noted. "Maybe that explains the 'CLOSED TODAY' signs on the doors of 120 Mary Kay distributors."

"What-Would-Erma-Have-Written?" topics are at center stage every two years at the Erma Bombeck Writers' Workshop. Featuring top writers, it is held at the University of Dayton, honoring the memory of one of the all-time great writers. Her columns and books are chock full of wonderful quotes. A favorite: "When humor goes, there goes civilization..."

Nike's plunge into social justice

By Noab Elam

For the 30th anniversary of the phrase "Just Do It", Nike chose former NFL quarterback Colin Kaepernick as the poster boy, along with the expression "Believe in something. Even if it means sacrificing everything." This obviously refers to the Colin's kneeling of the national anthem, which started in 2016. So it seems that Nike has now taken the plunge into the social justice deep end just like many other companies. However, Nike seems to be in this movement to make a profit using capitalism rather than turning full SJW.

According to Ben Shapiro, founder of the Daily Wire, seven out of 10 black Americans, compared to four out of 10 white Americans, support Kaepernick kneeling for the national anthem. Black Americans also, as stated in a study by Slate, tend to spend more money on things like sneakers than white Americans. So Nike is trying to reach the black demographic and white Kaepernick supporters in this ad, and it's not necessarily a dumb move on their part. Considering there is a greater percentage of African Americans buying sneakers and supporting the cause, Nike could more than counterbalance the effect the ad creates to the population against Kaepernick's cause. Also, there is no doubt that the people against this ad will speak out, including President Trump, which just creates free publicity for Nike in the process.

Now do I agree with Kaepernick's position? No, I don't. In fact, I think it's extremely stupid and unnecessary. There are many other people Nike could've put as the face of the ad, including many veterans that are in the NFL. Pat Tillman, for example, left the NFL to serve in the military and lost his life fighting for our country. That is a prime example of sacrificing everything for something you believe in, and he is a hero for doing it. Colin Kaepernick has not sacrificed anything. He gets paid millions of dollars by a brand to create a news cycle and in the past got paid millions to play football and then ultimately sit the bench. He is spoiled, and ungrateful, and frankly wrong. But Nike made a capitalist, profile-based move, which, if those shopping and support statistics are correct, definitely makes financial sense for Nike. However, Nike does have to be cautious about the three percent dip in their stock, costing them $4 billion. If the trends hold, the stock should end up balancing out. Twisty Tex the Texas Rubiks Man

By Tumbleweed Smith

Casey Weaver of Austin had a successful career as a computer expert and retired at the age of 51. Now he makes complicated Rubik's Cubes as a hobby. Some are shaped like rectangles or triangles.

"I build them for my own enjoyment," says Casey. "I send them out to other cubing enthusiasts who make videos about them and show them off. The original Rubik's Cube was 3 pieces on each side, commonly known as a 3 by 3. Now there are also 2 by 2 and others, 17 by 17 being the world's largest mass-produced puzzle. The other puzzles that are mass-produced are 8 by 8, 9 by 9, 10 by 10, 11 by 11 and 13 by 13. The 17 by 17 puzzle sells for about $600."

Casey has a workshop filled with drawers full of cube making material. And although he doesn't sell any of his pieces he spends a lot of time with his hobby. He is known around the world as Twisty Tex.

"I have a friend in France who assembled a 33 by 33 by 33 Rubik's Cube. Nobody has solved that one yet. Another friend in England made one that's six feet tall on each side, currently the world's largest. The larger or more intricate puzzles, which I've become well known for making, don't look anything like a typical Rubik's Cube when they are scrambled. Some of my pieces resemble architecture models or a Mondrian painting. They take on a very sculptural, very modern art look to them. When you get into the big ones like a 7 by 9 by 11, which is the biggest that I've made, they're practically unsolvable. It took the best solver a couple of days to figure it out. I make puzzles that I can't solve."

He makes parts for his cubes on a 3D printer.

"One thing you want to do is make puzzles that nobody has made before. It takes a lot of just sitting and figuring out the different combinations. One of my puzzles has just one color. Instead of solving it by color you solve it by shape. There is also a type of puzzle called cuboid which has different dimensions. A common cuboid is a 3 by 3 by 5. Some cuboids have an odd, odd and even dimension."

He has been creating Rubik's Cubes for 10 years.

"By being able to change the puzzles you can introduce new strategies that are required. It makes the hobby more dynamic."

Casey says scrambling a Rubik's Cube is as important as solving it.

"In the case of some hard puzzles you actually have to learn not only how to solve them but also how to properly scramble them."

In taking the Rubik's Cube to a higher power, he encourages young people to experiment. He has a creative group on Facebook where he and others get together and talk about the cubes.

Fake check scams bait consumer

Hi, gang! Nice rain and cool weather. This week we have information from The Panhandle Better Business Bureau. The Panhandle BBB can be reached at 806.379.6222. Let's all be watching for scammer's and please pass this information to your elder friends and make sure they understand it. Bob

"BBB study shows how fake check scams bait consumers"

An in-depth study by Better Business Bureau finds that, while consumers may write fewer checks in this era of electronic financial transactions, fake check scams are on the rise. Fake checks are used in a variety of frauds, from employment scams to prize and sweepstakes fraud. In all cases, victims deposit the check and send money back to scammers. BBB warns consumers to be on guard against these serious and pervasive frauds and their perpetrators.

The investigative study "Don't Cash That Check: Better Business Bureau Study Shows How Fake Check Scams Bait Consumers" looks at how fake checks dupe consumers. It digs into the scope of the problem, who is behind it, and the need for law enforcement and consumer education to address the issue. Read the complete report. Scammers often succeed because consumers don't realize: Crediting a bank account does not mean the cashed check is valid.

Federal banking rules require that when someone deposits a check into an account, the bank must make the funds available right away within a day or two. Even when a check is credited to an account, it does not mean the check is good. A week or so later, if the check bounces, the bank will want the money back. Consumers, not the fraudsters, will be on the hook for the funds.

Cashier's checks and postal money orders can be forged. A cashier's check is a check guaranteed by a bank, drawn on the bank's own funds and signed by a cashier. If a person deposits a cashier's check, the person's bank must credit the account by the next day. The same holds true for postal money orders. Scammers use cashier's checks and postal money orders because many people don't realize they can be forged. "Everyone should understand how fake check scams work," said Janna Kiehl, President & CEO of BBB Amarillo. "Scammers scam those they can and if you are not aware you may be an easy target." As the study shows, young people can be particularly vulnerable if they are not aware that these type of solicitations are fake. Fake check fraud is a huge problem, with complaints to regulatory agencies and consumer watchdog groups doubling over the last three years.

Fraud employing fake checks is rapidly growing and costing billions of dollars. Fake checks were involved in 7 percent of all complaints filed with BBB's Scam Tracker. The number of complaints received by the Federal Trade Commission's Consumer Sentinel database and the Internet Fraud Complaint Center more than doubled between 2014 and 2017.

Based on complaint data trends, the study suggests that there may be over 500,000 victims of counterfeit checks in 2017. The study found the fraud affects victims of all ages and income levels, but consumers between 20-29 reported being victimized by the scam more than consumers of any other age range. Local callers tell BBB they encounter this scam when selling an item online. In one instance, an item was for sale for under $100 and a "buyer" offered to send a check for over $2,500.

bob's whittlin'
by bob watson

In another, a consumer received a check for over $2,000 to provide housekeeping services and was told to use some of the money as her payment and return the remainder. The BBB has also seen this type of fraud when consumers are offered to wrap their vehicles with advertisements from "national companies."

"Fortunately, our consumers are getting pretty wise to this type of fraud," said Kiehl. They want to inform us so we can all warn others. And now that's fast and easy to do with BBB Scam Tracker. The National Consumers League, which also receives complaints from fraud victims at fraud.org, found that fake checks complaints in 2017 were up 12% and was the second most common type of complaint over all, after online order issues. Nigerian gangs appear to be behind most of this fraud, often using romance fraud victims and other "money mules" to receive money from victims. Many fake checks and money orders are shipped to the U.S. from Nigeria.

What to do if you have deposited a fake check into your account: Notify your bank or the bank that appears to have issued the check. File a complaint: Better Business Bureau, Federal Trade Commission (FTC), or call 877-FTC-Help, Internet Crime Complaint Center, or IC3, U.S. Postal Inspection Service, Western Union,

Never forget the lessons of 9-11

It has been seventeen years since our country came under attack from 19 Al-Qaida radicals on 9/11/2001, and we have seen many changes. I have to believe those changes have made us a safer country. If you lived through this event I would encourage everyone to record your memories in some way, mine are written in story form and titled "As America Watched".

I poured my first cup of coffee and strolled outside toward the patio to enjoy it, looking at the beautiful blue sky with a hint of fall in the air that Tuesday, September 11, 2001. My husband, Jim, called me back in and pointed to the television tuned to the Today Show with Matt Lauer and Katie Couric.

The cameras of NBC were pointed to the Twin Towers of New York City, we watched black smoke billowing from one tower and then saw a large passenger plane slam into the second tower which immediately caught on fire. This was unbelievable, the HORROR of this event unfolding in front of millions of Americans! We were under attack! We watched as people unable to face certain death by fire chose to jump, their bodies tumbling in air. We watched the South Tower collapse followed closely by the North Tower, a huge cloud of smoke and debris coming down the street with people running to escape the cloud. We watched people emerge from the cloud, unrecognizable, covered with ash and soot but alive. Our brains still unable to process the event, suddenly the cameras were on Washington DC, the Pentagon had been hit by a plane and the most secure building in the world was in flames. It was soon announced a fourth passenger plane headed for California was not responding and appeared to be heading toward Washington, DC. Suddenly it disappeared over Pennsylvania. Those brave men and women aboard had shouted, "Let's Roll" and prevented the crash into the Capital.

We watched as President Bush sat in a first grade classroom in Florida, his press secretary whispered in his ear, President Bush carried on the program, thanked them and left to emerge into a different world.

What was happening? Was this the end? Jim and I sat huddled in front of the television, the children all called, we cried, prayer vigils were held, so much blood was donated the Red Cross had to stop donations.

American flags were flying, congress stood on the steps of the White House and sang, "God Bless America." We were a country under attack but a country united.

That day 2,997 people died, more than 6,000 were injured with many others dying of cancer and respiratory disease in the months and years that followed. This was a day that changed America forever, a day I won't forget.

Making memories while hunting dove

Last weekend, I spent the night at my uncle Michael's and aunt Anndy's house since my parents went to a B&B for the weekend. We had to go to Amarillo because my sister had ballet, so we made a trip out of it and went shopping for clay pigeons.

Later that weekend we went to a get together at Michael and Anndy's friends' house to shoot dove and clay pigeons. I had never shot a shotgun before, but I was willing to try and shoot a dove or two. After a little bit of quick training on how to use a shotgun, I was instructed to shoot a weed... I blasted the top off it. I then tried to shoot my first bird but sadly missed the first time. But as soon as I tried again, I shot the bird right out of sky. That night I end up getting nine doves. We didn't have time to shoot clay pigeons because we had to clean the birds.

I had a really great time, and I hope to go hunting when pheasant season rolls around.

Sherrod

Calvin Ky Sherrod, 89, of Amarillo, went to be with his Lord and Savior September 6, 2018.

Sherrod

Funeral services will be held at 1:00 p.m. Saturday, September 15, 2018, at Region 16 Education Service Center, 5800 Bell Street. Burial will be at Llano Cemetery East. Visitation will be Thursday, September 13, 2018 from 6:00 to 8:00 p.m. at LaGrone Blackburn Shaw, 8310 S. Coulter St.

Ky was born in Aspermont, Texas on September 3, 1929, to Lester A. and Claudie Bell Sherrod. He graduated from Aspermont High School and West Texas State College where he was a kicker on the football team. He obtained his Master's Degree in Education. Ky married the love of his life, Frances Florene Bussard in Raton, NM on August 23, 1952. They moved to Channing, Texas where Ky was employed by the Channing ISD. He coached for one year before he was promoted to Principal. He held that position for one year and was promoted to Superintendent. He proudly served as Superintendent of Channing Schools for 36 years. Frances and Ky were blessed with three athletic sons, Randy, Brent and Mark. Family time was spent honing basketball skills, disciplining school kids, and contributing to the Channing community. He believed the "Spare the rod, spoil the child" theory as taught in the Bible. He disciplined with love and was respected by both school children and their parents.

The Channing School System was fortunate to have excellent teachers who gave each student a solid base for furthering their careers at the University level if they so choose. Many lifelong friendships were begun in Channing and students still came by to visit Ky through the years. What an educator Ky Sherrod was in all aspects of his life! He never met a stranger. Ky loved his family, friends and especially "those" grandchildren. He was always ready to do anything his grandkids wanted to do and take them anywhere they wanted to go. It did not matter what day it was or what time, Ky would not disappoint!

Broncos add another shutout to season

By Sandy Anderberg

The Clarendon Broncos took the sting out of the Highland Park Hornets last Friday at Bronco Stadium. The Broncos racked up an impressive 389 total yards in their 54-0 win.

"I thought we played great once again," head coach Clint Conkin said. "The defense played great, and we shut out Highland Park. That's two games in a row without letting the other team score."

The Broncos rushed for 290 yards and posted 99 yards through the air with senior Noab Elam at the quarterback spot. Elam earned 12 yards rushing and was four of seven passing for 99 yards and two touchdowns. Preston Elam got in on the action for the Broncos with 98 yards on the ground on eight carries with one touchdown, and he caught three passes for 78 yards and one touchdown.

Ryan McCleskey was also a workhorse for the Broncos and converted 18 carries into 114 yards for two scores. Cole Franks carried nine times for 46 yards and caught one pass for 16 yards and on TD. Freshman Aaron Roys added a touchdown to the score and had 14 yards, while Collin Butler carried four times for 23 yards.

Defensively, the Broncos were strong all night long and posted notable stats. P. Elam led the team with 10 tackles and Caton Grahn added eight tackles, two sacks, one caused fumble, and two fumble recoveries. Robert McGuire had eight tackles, one caused fumble, and a fumble recovery and Franks had eight tackles and one caused fumble. Harm Drenth and Nate Lee each had five tackles, and Isaac Dunham and N. Elam each had four. McCleskey had two tackles and one fumble recovery. Ryan Ward posted one tackle and one sack, and Clay Ward had three tackles, one fumble recovery, and one sack.

The Broncos will take on Wheeler this Friday in their Homecoming game beginning at 7:00 p.m.

Bronco JV squeaks by HP by two points

The Clarendon junior varsity opened their season with a 14-12 win over Highland Park last Thursday night on the road.

According to coach Brad Elam, the Hornets ran the opening kickoff back to take a 6-0 lead. The Broncos were able to answer, however, when Josiah Howard hit Jordan Evans on a 14-yard pass. Howard then singled out Jodee Pigg for the two-point conversion, which was called back on a holding call.

The Hornets were able to put six more points on the board before halftime on a long run putting them up by six at the break.

"We looked sluggish the first quarter and a half, but looked pretty good after that," Elam said. "The second half, we had two turnovers early and did not get much going until late."

The second Bronco score came when Howard ran it in from one yard out after Jamal Butler put the Broncos in great field position after returning a punt late in the fourth quarter. Howard then hit Butler for the two-point conversion to take the lead and get the win with time running out.

"We were able to stop their final drive for the win," Elam said. "Koyt Tucek had a good game on defense including several big plays on the last drive."

The Bronco JV will play at Wheeler Thursday, September 13, beginning at 6:00 p.m.

Colts drop season opener to Panhandle

The junior high Colts fought hard last week against a good Panhandle team but fell short at 22-58.

Sylvester Ballard had two touchdown runs in the game with one being 80 yards. Anthony Martin caught a touchdown pass from quarterback Harrison Howard, and Easton Frausto reeled in a pass for a two-point conversion. Ballard was strong on defense for Colts with several tackles.

"Our line blocked pretty good," coach Clint Conkin said. "We are still learning and a few kids had to go in at different spots than they are used to. We played really good early and it was 16-16 at a quarter and a half. It was good for our first game and we competed well."

The Colts will travel to Wheeler Thursday, September 13, with a 5:00 p.m. kickoff time.

Armstrong County Museum invites public to meeting

The Armstrong County Museum is inviting members of the public to an informational meeting Tuesday, September 25, to learn more about the operation of the museum.

The meeting will be held at 6 p.m. at the Gem Theatre/Art Gallery at 121 North Trice Street in Claude.

The meeting will address concerns, questions, and comments regarding governance, by-laws, and review other information about the museum.

Election of board members will also be discussed as well as offering an invitation for people to apply to run for the board.

More information about the meeting is available online at CharlesGoodnight.org/about. Copies of the ACM By-laws will be available at the Public Information Meeting. Hard copies may be obtained at the Armstrong County Museum and the Goodnight Historical Center. The By-laws are also posted on the website, charlesgoodnight.org.

Immediately following the Public Information Meeting on Sept. 25, the current Board of Directors will hold its regular monthly meeting. The public is welcome to attend that as well.
