Don't look, Ethel! Naked man found on ranch last week

An Arizona man was arrested last Tuesday, October 23, after he was found on a Donley County ranch... naked.

Lawrence Ibarra, Jr. from Tucson is facing one count of Burglary of a Building, according to Sheriff Butch Blackburn.

The sheriff says Ibarra wrecked his car at the end of FM 2162 on October 20, and authorities believe he spent the next two days wandering around a ranch in an intoxicated state due to drugs. He entered at least two buildings and spent the night in the barn where he was later discovered.

Ibarra also had driven a tractor and tried to ram it through a gate to exit the ranch.

The morning of his arrest, a rancher discovered Ibarra exiting his barn, totally nude, and held the man at gunpoint until law enforcement arrived.

Justice of the Peace Pam Mason arraigned Ibarra on October 24 and set his bond at $10,000. He was released on bond Oct. 25.

City seeks citizens who wish to serve

The Clarendon City Council is accepting letters of interest from citizens who would like to be considered for the unexpired term of former alderman Beverly Burrow.

The term expires in May 2019, and qualifications for the position include: be a US citizen, be a resident of Texas and the city for at least 12 months, be a current registered voter, be at least 18 years of age, have no felony convictions for which the person has not been pardoned, and not have been deemed mentally incompetent by a court.

Those citizens interested are asked to submit a letter and résumé to City Administrator David Dockery at City Hall. The decision for the appointment will be made by the city council.

City signs with TCG to deal with properties

Cleaning abandoned properties, adjusting the sign ordinance, and the possible end of the personal property tax were among the items discussed at the Clarendon City Council's meeting last Thursday, October 25.

Danny Barrett addressed the board on behalf of Texas Communities Group regarding ways the city can clean up abandoned properties and get them back on the tax rolls.

TCG pursues properties through the foreclosure process after five years of non-payment of property taxes or three years of non-payment of taxes if the property has a history of code compliance issues. Barrett said TCG had successfully gotten 77 of 100 properties in Paducah back on the tax roll using this method and gotten $25,000 in revenue for that city.

City Administrator David

Dockery said the proposal is a good way to help clean up the community.

"When (Code Officer) Grett (Betts) brought this to me, I thought it was a great benefit to the community," Dockery said. "Every city I've talked to said it is a great program."

Aldermen approved a $2,500 contract with TCG to work on abandoned properties in the city.

The council also heard an update from Dockery about possible changes to the sign ordinance recommended by a committee of business people. Dockery said the committee is recommending a limited number of temporary "event" signs as exception to the city's ban on "off premise" signs. The proposal would allow the Whistle Stop Trade Days to still put up a limited number of temporary signs each month if certain guidelines were met.

Dockery asked the council not to take action on the changes last week as Alderman Larry Jeffers was absent from the meeting, and Dockery also wants businesses to have a chance to see the proposed changes. The city's attorney will also be reviewing the recommendations.

Judy Thomas addressed the council expressing her interest in being appointed to fill a vacant seat on the council. Dockery later informed the council that the city wants everyone to have a chance to express their interest in the position by submitting a letter and résumé to City Hall.

Dockery also updated the council on the USDA water infrastructure project and said contractors will soon be very busy ditching and laying pipe. He said additional interruptions in water service are possible due to boring being done in some areas and the inability to see existing pipes.

The administrator also talked about the city's airport board and said City Hall is reviewing the qualifications and resolutions governing the airport board and that new members need to be appointed.

Dockery also talked in his administrative report about the possibility of redirecting the half-cent sales tax currently dedicated to property tax reduction to the city's general revenue, an idea that is part of a discussion about possibly repealing the city's personal property tax. Dockery is gathering more information about the idea. City officials know the personal property tax is unpopular but also have to keep the stability of city revenues in mind when contemplating eliminating the tax.

King talks education during Clarendon town hall meeting

Education funding dominated the discussion when State Rep. Ken King (R-Canadian) held a town hall here October 17.

King serves on the Texas Commission on Public School Finance and said the level of state funding for public education continues to drop. The state now pays 35 percent of school expenses with local property taxes paying 55 percent and federal money covering the balance.

"That's going to drop another 14 percent in the next four years," King said of state funding.

King said the state has limited options to come up with more money for schools, and he said the governor has already promised to veto any increase in the state sales tax.

The representative addressed teacher pay and said the governor has promised raises for teachers but has offered no way to pay for it, but he said teacher pay needs to be addressed.

King stressed the importance of public education, especially in rural West Texas, for the sake of our area's economy.

State Rep. Ken King (center) with Clarendon College President Robert Riza, Donley County Attorney Landon Lambert, County Judge John Howard, and County Commissioner Dan Sawyer.

"We need education to compete with our urban counterparts and be able to get our goods and services to market," King said. School safety was also discussed, and King said more needs to be done to address mental health issues.

District court hears local cases in Childress

Three local cases were heard by the district court in Childress recently.

Two pleas were heard on October 11 with District Attorney Luke Inman, along with Assistant District Attorney Harley Caudle, prosecuting for the cases for the State of Texas and the Honorable Judge Stuart Messer presiding.

Herman Lee Jackson III pleaded guilty and was placed on deferred adjudication community supervision for four years for the third degree felony offense of aggravated perjury.

Jackson, 38 from Clarendon, was arrested by Donley County Chief Deputy Randy Bond on August 24, 2018. Jackson pleaded to an information filed by the State on September 12, 2018.

Pursuant to the plea agreement, Jackson is required to pay a $4,000 fine, $488 in court costs, successfully complete 200 hours of community service, and attend and complete an anger management class. If Jackson violates probation, he could face up to 10 years in the Institutional Division of the TDCJ.

Tyler Edward Huddleston pleaded guilty and was placed on deferred adjudication community supervision for five years for the second degree felony offense of possession of a controlled substance in penalty group 2, tetrahydrocannabinol.

Huddleston, 26 from Denison, was arrested by DPS Trooper Chase Overbeek in Donley County on April 11, 2018. Huddleston was later indicted by the Donley County Grand Jury on September 4, 2018.

Pursuant to the plea agreement, Huddleston is required to pay a $5,000 fine, $458 in court costs, $180 in restitution and successfully complete 300 hours of community service. If Huddleston violates probation, he could face up to 20 years in the Institutional Division of the TDCJ.

The court also met in Childress on October 22 with Inman and Assistant District Attorney Greg Buckley representing the state and Judge Messer presiding.

Willie Louis Drew pleaded guilty and was placed on deferred adjudication community supervision for three years for the state jail felony offense of possession of marijuana.

Drew, 32 from Amarillo, was arrested in Donley County by DPS Trooper Berry Spencer on June 3, 2018. Drew pleaded to an information filed by the State on July 5, 2018.

Pursuant to the plea agreement, Drew is required to pay a $2,500 fine, $458 in court costs, $180 in drug lab restitution, and complete 100 hours of community service. If Drew violates probation, he could face up to two years in the State Jail Division of the TDCJ.

Election day next Tuesday

Donley County voters will go to the polls next Tuesday, November 6, to decide one local race and make their feelings known on several state-wide races.

Early voting by personal appearance continues through Friday, November 2, in the Courthouse Annex, and Deputy County Clerk LaVerne Pinion says voting has been brisk so far.

"We've had 513 vote so far," Pinion said Tuesday afternoon. "I haven't seen turnout like this since we voted on alcohol sales."

The only locally contested race this year for County/District Clerk, which has longtime incumbent Democrat Fay Vargas being challenged by Republican Robert "Bobby" Woodard. The race has gotten a lot of local attention with some Republican voters taking out ads in favor of the Democratic incumbent.

Other local candidates running unopposed are County Judge John Howard, County Treasurer Wanda Smith, Precinct 1&2 Justice of the Peace Pamela Mason, Pat White for Precinct 3&4 Justice of the Peace, Precinct 4 Commissioner Dan Sawyer, and Precinct 2 Commissioner Daniel Ford.

Also of local interest, US Rep. Mac Thornberry (R-Clarendon) is being challenged by Democrat Greg Sagan and Libertarian Calvin DeWeese. State Sen. Kel Seliger (R-Amarillo) faces Libertarian Jack B. Westbrook, and State Rep. Ken King (R-Canadian) is being challenged by Democrat Ezekiel Barron.

Polling on Election Day next Tuesday will be from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the following voting locations: Precinct 101 - Bairfield Activity Center, Precinct 102 - Howardwick City Hall, Precinct 201 - County Courthouse, Precinct 301 - Assembly of God Fellowship Hall, Precinct 303 - Hedley First Baptist Church, and Precinct 401 - Clarendon Church of Christ Family Life Center. Check your voter's registration card for your polling place. Election results will be posted Tuesday night on ClarendonLive.com and Facebook.com/TheEnterprise.

JP sets bond in Myers' case

Bond has been set in the case of a Clarendon man arrested last week in connection with the death of his three-week-old daughter.

Christopher Bryon Myers, age 37, was arraigned by Justice of the Peace Pam Mason on October 24 on the felony charge of Injury to a Child, and bond was set at $500,000.

Myers remained in the Donley County Jail at press time, according to Sheriff Butch Blackburn.

Law enforcement responded to Myers' residence on October 12 after a 911 call at 5:02 that morning reported a possible dead baby, the sheriff said. Aries Renae Myers was pronounced dead on October 15.

Authorities are alleging that the infant's death was due to blunt force trauma, Blackburn said.

Do young folks know what socialism is?

By David Boaz, Cato Institute

Fifty-seven percent of Democrats and 51 percent of young people have a positive view of socialism, Gallup reports, slightly more than those who have a positive view of capitalism. That's frightening. The record of socialist countries, from the Soviet Union and Mao Zedong's China to today's Venezuela, is horrific: little or no economic growth, hunger, authoritarian government, people risking their lives to flee.

So why are people talking about socialism again? It seemed to start with Senator Bernie Sanders's presidential campaign in 2016. Then came a new breed of Democrats fed up with the influence of money in both parties, typified by Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez's upset victory over a prominent Democratic congressman. The Democratic Socialists of America (DSA) says its membership skyrocketed after Ocasio-Cortez's June win.

Socialism is back, after seemingly being buried in the dustbin of history with the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1989, for several reasons. Young people never knew, and many older voters have forgotten, what the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR) and its Eastern European client states were like. The financial crisis of 2008 certainly gave capitalism a bad name. Bailouts for Wall Street, a very slow economic recovery, and endless wars left people on all sides of the political spectrum looking for alternatives. For some people that alternative was a tough-talking billionaire president, but with his harsh rhetoric toward immigrants and other groups, he seemed like a typical unfeeling capitalist to many other voters.

So now half of Americans 18-29 say they have a positive view of socialism. But there's a lot of confusion about what that means. The traditional definition of socialism, as summarized in the Concise Encyclopedia of Economics, is "a centrally planned economy in which the government controls all means of production." That's what the Communist Party implemented in the Soviet Union and China. It was the goal of the British Labour Party, and the nationalizations of coal, iron and steel, railroads, utilities, and international telecommunications after World War II led to decades of economic stagnation.

But most American "socialists" probably don't support government ownership of the means of production. Ask self-proclaimed socialists what they want, and you get vague and lovely answers. Ocasio-Cortez says that "in a modern, moral and wealthy society, no person in America should be too poor to live." In the Liza Minnelli musical Flora the Red Menace, the Communist organizer sings, "Are you in favor of democracy, the rights of man, everlasting peace, milk and cookies for the kids, security, jobs for everyone, and against slums, the filthy rich, and making cannon fodder of our youth? Then you're a Communist!"

Sanders has often pointed to Denmark as an example of democratic socialism. But don't tell that to the Danes. In 2015 the Danish prime minister said he knew that "some people in the U.S. associate the Nordic model with some sort of socialism. I would like to make one thing clear. Denmark is far from a socialist planned economy. Denmark is a market economy."

If Denmark is the model for today's American socialists, then they should leave the DSA and join Democrats for Higher Taxes and Transfer Payments.

A deeper dive into Gallup's latest poll shows a decided lack of interest in the kind of government control that socialism would entail. Asked if they had a positive or negative image of various things, respondents gave very high marks to small business, entrepreneurship, and free enterprise, and 56 percent approval to capitalism. The federal government and socialism lagged far behind at 39 and 37 percent. (These are numbers for all respondents, not just young people as above.)

Only 44 percent agreed that "government should do more to solve our country's problems." Only 25 percent said there is too little government regulation of business, 39 percent said too much, and 33 percent the right amount. In 2017 Gallup found that 67 percent of Americans believed big government was a bigger threat to the future than big business was. Only 26 percent picked big business, and 5 percent said big labor.

Perhaps most telling: If socialism means anything, it means giving more power to government. But almost no one in the new Gallup poll thinks the federal government has too little power: just 8 percent in the new poll, about where it's been since 2002.

There's lots of talk in the United States about socialism these days, and lots of debate about how high taxes and spending ought to be. But Americans like free enterprise, and very few of them want a more powerful government.

David Boaz is the executive vice president of the libertarian Cato Institute.

And a little child shall lead them

Things that go "bump in the night" bother me no more than mosquitos buzzing about. As long as they're buzzing, they aren't biting. Mine is a "live and let live" philosophy – no harm, no foul.

Brenda, my wife of 52 years, feels differently, however. To her, foreign sounds are precursors of something worse. The buzz of a single mosquito portends thousands more nearby, all eager to bite 'cause they're hungry.

The stage now set, I will describe an ongoing problem, one causing year-long consternation and mild arguments. The story concerns a noise – occurring night or day, at home or away – in our 2011 Camry. Once we reach "school zone speed," the "clunk" occurs on corners or when brakes are applied. I care not a whit; my wife cares many whits....

"There's that noise again," she almost always says, within a nanosecond of the occurrence. (Admittedly, she sometimes says "clunk" or "bump." It's as predictable as sunrise.)

The next sentence – always ice-coated – threatens: "We've got to get it fixed, or get another car."
I wince – though not audibly – thinking how ridiculous to replace a perfectly good car because of a tiny noise – one I've grown to consider a friend, but now my wife's archenemy....

I've made modest attempts to cure the problem. A neighbor drove our car around the block, observing that we "clearly have a problem, and that the car should be repaired professionally."

A mechanic friend at church heard the "clunk," offering a probably repair estimate between $100 and $500.

I winced again – this time audibly....

A few days ago, we heard the "clunk" repeatedly en route to Tyler, a drop-off point for our rescue dachshund Sailor. (He'd rather stay with our grandchildren than in a kennel while we are away on a Carnival Vista cruise from Galveston.)

I mentioned the noise to our son-in-law Kyle, who can "fix" anything but horse races. He interrupted his current project of adding another room and bath to the Penney home to "take a look" (and a "listen") at our car woes.

He confirmed the analyses previously made by the mechanic and would-be mechanic.

Yep, we definitely had a foreign sound, seemingly from the air vents....

Things soon were to get better. First, he located a cabin air filter behind the dropped-down glove compartment. I didn't know it was there, but made a trip to the parts store for a fresh filter.

Kyle reassembled all the dangling wires, tubes and glove box, unconvinced that the noise would go away. I clung to the hope that somehow the old filter somehow was causing the "clunk."

It wasn't....

We took a final spin around the block, only to hear the same old the idle american by don newbury

"clunks." This time, however, Kedren was along with us. He's our 12-year-old grandson who blew out birthday candles during our overnight visit.

He was "riding shotgun" as Kyle drove.

I was weeping in the backseat....

After the first turn, Kedren reached above the mirror to open the little compartment designed to store eyewear. He extracted a pair of sunglasses my wife thought she had lost last fall.

Voila! The "clunking" sound disappeared, and my wife has her favorite sunglasses back. How great this will be in the sunny Caribbean!

We proceeded to Galveston. It was a quiet trip. With no "clunks," there wasn't much to talk about....

Upon return home, I'll contact my auto dealer friend, Dwain Bruner, telling him about the design flaw. I'll explain that if the eyeglass compartment were reduced by a single inch in each direction, there'd be no more "clunking." My fear is that his response will suggest that when eyeglasses are properly encased when storing, this, too, will eliminate offensive sounds.

Now, though, my conscience is bothersome. I probably should give Kedren $100 – the lowest repair estimate – and maybe I will.

Before you ask, my wife's sunglasses are rose-colored....

Democrats get bombs in the mail

By Noab Elam

Early last week, many of the top members of the Democratic Party including Eric Holder, George Soros, Cory Booker, James Clapper Jr., Hilary Clinton, and former president Barack Obama received bombs in the mail in the form of packages.

Media stations, CNN, and The San Diego Union Tribune and other celebrity figures including Robert De Niro also received bombs. Authorities discovered the bombs through suspicious package reports. In total, 12 bombs were sent.

Apparently, the bombs were marked with a flag and the phrase "Get 'Er Done". The flag was thought to be an ISIS flag, but was later discovered as actually a parody of an ISIS flag showing silhouettes of three women. The phrase is a catchphrase from Larry the Cable Guy.

On Friday, a Florida man was arrested in connection to the suspected packages. NBC reports that the suspect, 56-year-old Cesar Sayoc, was arrested due to DNA evidence lifted from the packages delivered to Congresswoman Maxine Waters and former President Barack Obama. He has also been arrested in the past due to threats of throwing a bomb in 2002 and for theft in 1992 and 2014.

The charges come on five federal counts include: interstate transport of explosives, mailing of explosives, threats against former presidents, making threatening interstate communications, and assault of current or former officials. If convicted, Sayoc could face 48 years in prison.

In another report from NBC News, the bombs had many flaws that, in some cases, made it impossible for them to explode. As of right now, however, there is no way to know if the flaws were intentional or not.

Attorney General Jeff Sessions commented on the incident stating that Sayoc appeared to be a political partisan but would examine the facts as the case moved forward.

According to Sayoc's cousin, "he's always been a little bit of a loose cannon. He's always been a lost soul. Too many steroids in his day. That stuff will melt your brain."

So basically Sayoc was a crazy person. But, of course, the media is pushing all of the responsibility to President Trump. To the media, since the packages were sent to Trump critics it is Trump's fault that it happened. This is just false and reckless rhetoric from the media. Unless Trump has incited violence, which he hasn't, then he is not responsible for the actions of other people. That goes for any political figure, Democrat or Republican.

Scammers spoofing Social Security

Hi, gang! Scammers are always changing up their ways to attack us and get our money, and some of us will fall for the new scams. I can only use a few of the new scams each week, otherwise I would fill up a page. With the holidays coming on so will the scams. Be prepared. Bob

“Hang up on spoofed SSA calls” by Lisa Weintraub Schifferle, FTC

If you get a call that looks like it's from the Social Security Administration (SSA), think twice. Scammers are spoofing SSA's 1-800 customer service number to try to get your personal information. Spoofing means that scammers can call from anywhere, but they make your caller ID show a different number – often one that looks legit. Here are few things you should know about these so-called SSA calls.

These scam calls are happening across the nation, according to SSA: Your phone rings. Your caller ID shows that it's the SSA calling from 1-800-772-1213. The caller says he works for the Social Security Administration and needs your personal information – like your Social Security number – to increase your benefits payments. (Or he threatens to cut off your benefits if you don't give the information.) But it's not really the Social Security Administration calling. Yes, it is the SSA's real phone number, but the scammers on the phone are spoofing the number to make the call look real.

What can you do if you get one of these calls? Hang up. Remember: SSA will not threaten you. Real SSA employees will never threaten you to get personal information. They also won't promise to increase your benefits in exchange for information. If they do, it's a scam.

If you have any doubt, hang up and call SSA directly. Call 1-800-772-1213 that really is the phone number for the Social Security Administration. If you dial that number, you know who you're getting. But remember that you can't trust caller ID. If a call comes in from that number, you can't be sure it's really SSA calling.

If you get a spoofed call, report it. If someone calls, claiming to be from SSA and asking for information like your Social Security number, report it to SSA's Office of Inspector General at 1-800-269-0271 or <https://oig.ssa.gov/report>. You can also report these calls to the FTC at ftc.gov/complaint.

For more tips, check out the FTC's How to Stop Unwanted Calls and Government Imposer Scams. If you think someone has misused your personal information, go to IdentityTheft.gov to report identity theft and find out what steps to take.

“Checking out your AMG check?” by Jennifer Leach Acting, FTC

We told you last month about the $505 million in checks going back to 1.1 million people who got an online payday loan from a company affiliated with AMG Services. And we've heard from many of you that you got your check and cashed it. We've just heard, though, that scammers are trying to get into the act, using fake checks that look like the real one. So far, we've heard that scammers have given job applicants a check that looks like an AMG refund check, and then asked people to deposit the check and use the money to go buy supplies for the supposed employer.

Here's what you need to know if you get a check from the FTC's settlement with AMG: If you get a refund from the FTC, just deposit or cash the check within 60 days. You don't have to pay for an FTC refund, and you don't have to give any information to cash a refund check. If you have questions about your AMG refund check, go to the FTC's AMG refunds page, or call the refunds administrator at 1-866-730-8174. Legit employers will never pay you by telling you to deposit a check and wire money back to them – or buy stuff for them. Anyone who does is scamming you. Has someone asked you for something in exchange for your AMG refund check? Please tell the FTC at ftc.gov/complaint.

“FTC is Making Consumer Complaint Data More Accessible”

The Federal Trade Commission hears from millions of consumers each year about fraud, identity theft, and other problems, allowing us to warn other consumers about scams they should watch out for, while also providing the agency with an important source of information to support our enforcement actions.

Infographic: gift cards and reload cards are the #1 payment method for imposter scams. Click to learn more or go to ftc.gov/gift-cards Starting today, the FTC will be making this information more accessible by releasing its aggregated consumer complaint data on a quarterly basis in a new interactive online format. Up until now, the FTC has released aggregated consumer complaint data collected through our Consumer Sentinel Network on an annual basis. Our new tool will provide a more timely snapshot of what consumers are reporting, while empowering users to explore the data by types of fraud, state, and a variety of other dimensions.

As part of this initiative, we are also introducing our first Consumer Protection Data Spotlight, which will take a deep dive into the data to illuminate important stories we are hearing from consumers. This first edition of the Data Spotlight focuses on a disturbing trend in 2018 scammers are increasingly demanding to be paid with gift cards, particularly iTunes and Google Play cards. The percentage of consumers who told the FTC that scammers demanded to be paid with gift cards or reload cards such as MoneyPak has increased 270 percent since 2015. Gift and reload cards are now the number one reported method of payment for imposter scams.

Imposter scams involve someone pretending to be a government official, tech support representative, loved one in trouble, or someone else in order to get consumers to give the scammer money.

As with our 2017 annual report, the latest quarterly consumer complaint data shows that imposter scams, along with debt collection and identity theft, were the most reported consumer complaints. Gift cards are attractive to scammers because they provide anonymity and are very difficult to reverse once used. The FTC's advice is simple: If someone tells you to pay with a gift card, don't do it. Gift cards are for gifts, not for payments.

The Federal Trade Commission works to promote competition, and protect and educate consumers. You can learn more about consumer topics and file a consumer complaint online or by calling 1-877-FTC-HELP (382-4357). Like the FTC on Facebook, follow us on Twitter, read our blogs, and subscribe to press releases for the latest FTC news and resources.

November 6 may be scarier than Oct. 31

With all the rain we have received in the past few weeks, the Panhandle is looking so nice, trees are turning different colors, and the smell in the air is different. October 31 brings Halloween, one of the scariest days of the year. I said one of the scariest because Nov. 6 is midterm elections, another scary day.

Have you noticed election day is always on a Tuesday in November and wondered why? The answer is complicated but makes perfect sense. Between the years 1787 (first presidential election) and 1845, states could set their own date for elections which led to corruption such as going from state to state and voting multiple times.

In 1845, Congress passed a voting law setting the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November as the date. It took many rural residents at least a day to travel to the county seat where elections were held. They could not travel on the Sabbath. In early November, most crops were in, and the weather was usually decent.

Therefore, the first Tuesday in November and it has remained for 173 years.

Voting laws are set by both federal and state lawmakers. No place in the Constitution are we promised “the right to vote.” The first people that were allowed to vote were white,

Big birthday fun with friends in the big city

Two weekends ago, I took three of my friends to Cinergy for my birthday. Cinergy is a new place in Amarillo that has an arcade, a big sky walk thing, laser tag, and other attractions like bowling and movies.

The friends I took were Serenity, Bryce, and Mason. My sister and parents went also. We started with a round of laser tag. The laser tag arena was really fun. It has two stories and one target for each team. If you shot the target, you got multiple points. If you run out of health and “die,” you have to run back to your team's recharge point to get more health and ammunition. One of the coolest things about this arena was that it was two stories with a target on each level and you could shoot from the top to the bottom.

adult male property owners. In 1856, all white males were allowed to vote. The 15th amendment, ratified in 1870, allowed non-white men and freed male slaves the right to vote, women were granted that right in 1920 with the 19th amendment, the Voting Rights Act of 1964 placed stricter laws to assure everyone who wanted to could vote, and finally the 26th amendment gave anyone 18 years old or over the right to vote.

The states put in place other voting laws, registration, places to vote, districting of the state and counties and many other laws. Yes, it is complicated but this Republic form of government has served us well with all the checks and balances. It works, just vote.

Time change is November 4, remember to “fall back”.

Broncos pull out win over Booker

By Sandy Anderberg
The varsity Broncos upped their record to 6-1 overall and 1-1 in District play with a narrow 21-19 win Friday night on the Kiowa field.

Clarendon stayed solid with several players making crucial stops on defense and executing their offense at the right time to stay on top. Head Coach Clint Conkin was grateful for the win.

"It was not pretty, but it was a win," he said.

Ryan McCleskey was success from the backfield as he racked up 132 yards rushing on 17 carries. McCleskey was also responsible for on Bronco touchdown. Preston Elam stayed solid as usual with 41 yards on six carries, two pass receptions for 26 yards, and one TD. Dalton Benson helped the Broncos to the win with four yards on the ground and 20 yards in the air. Collin Butler found the end zone for the other Bronco score and added 16 yards rushing.

Quarterback Noab Elam came on strong once again and was 5-10 passing for 62 yards and on thrown TD.

The Bronco defense had their work cut out for them against the Kiowas, but were able to stand their ground.

"Defensively, we had a bunch of guys making tackles," Conkin said.

Benson led the way on the defensive side with 18 tackles and P. Elam added 15 tackles. Always solid from his position was Caton Grahn with 14 tackles on the night. Robert McGuire finished with 11 tackles and Zane Sneathen grabbed eight.

Clay Ward posted seven tackles, Ryan Ward and N. Elam each had three, and Koyt Tucek helped with two.

The Broncos will play Gruver at home Friday, November 2, at 7:30 p.m. in Bronco Stadium.

Colts slam Booker at home

The Clarendon Colts handled Booker on both sides of the ball Thursday night in Bronco Stadium earning a 34-12 win. With the win, they protected their perfect district season. The Colts are currently 4-1 overall and 2-0 in District.

"The boys played great on both sides of the ball," head coach Clint Conkin said. "We had several guys make tackles on defense." Davin Mays came up with a huge safety on the defensive side.

Offensively, Sylvester Ballard had another great game as he scored three rushing touchdowns for the Colts and made good on two two-point conversions. Ballard also threw a touchdown pass to Josh Dunn. Anthony Martin and Easton Frausto each caught a two-point conversion pass from quarterback Harrison Howard.

The Colts will travel to Gruver Thursday, November 1, and play at 5:00 p.m.

Bronco JV avenges loss to the Mustangs

Clarendon's junior varsity team opened their shut-out win with a 20-yard run by Rhett Caison in the first quarter of play to get things going for the Broncos in their 14-0 shutout over Wheeler after losing to them earlier in the season.

Caison also ran in the two-point bonus to put the maroon and white up by eight.

Josiah Howard earned the next Bronco score from six yards out in the third quarter of play for their final score of the night.

"On a cool and rainy night, I thought the Broncos dominated on both sides of the ball," coach Brad Elam said.

Defensively, the Broncos stayed strong and did not allow their opponent to find the end zone at all and the Bronco offense was solid.

"(Our) defense was stingy not allowing Wheeler much on offense and the secondary did not allow a complete pass," Elam said. "And Aaron Roys and Nate Lee picked off passes. Offensively, I was very pleased with how well the offensive line blocked and how well Rhett ran the ball. The game was the best I have seen our line block."

The Broncos will play Wellington at home on Thursday, October 25, immediately following the junior high game.

Correction:

Last week's article about Kenny Overstreet advancing to state in cross country mistakenly said he is a senior at Clarendon High School. Overstreet is in fact a junior. The Enterprise apologizes for this error and any confusion it may have caused.

dent Mike Norrell asked about legislative priorities and the anti-public education agenda in the state senate.

"Dan Patrick is on TV every day with a borrowed dog telling you how much he loves public education," King said but noted that lieutenant governor focuses instead on school vouchers.

King also said politics in large urban centers like Harris County (Houston) is driving property tax issues and said the state needs appraisal reform.

"I think politics is trumping policy too often, and that's why I'm combatting," King said.

PGCD sets meetings on proposed rules

WHITE DEER – The Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District (PGCD) is holding informational meetings every Tuesday at 10:00 a.m. at the District's office in White Deer concerning upcoming proposed rule changes. Meetings are scheduled every Tuesday between now through the end of November.

District constituents are invited to the office to discuss upcoming rule changes before the hearing scheduled for 9:00 a.m. on December 20, 2018, at PGCD's office. In addition to these meetings, staff will also conduct meetings throughout the District. Please be on the lookout for more information in local papers and on social media.

The major proposed changes are: Operating Permits will be required on all production wells, new or existing, capable of producing 17.5 gallons per minute or more. An Operating Permit is required before any production takes place.

Meters are required on all wells capable of producing 17.5 gallons per minute or more. PGCD has a 50/50 cost share program in place for wells that have not been required to install meters in the past.

It is important to note, the Maximum Allowable Volume of one acre-foot per acre per year, that has been in place since 2004, will stay the same. The Maximum Allowable Rate of 2,880 GPM/section or 4.5 GPM/acre is staying the same, as well as Spacing Rules.

The proposed rules are scheduled to go into full effect on January 1, 2020, giving the District and all operators a full year to grant Operating Permits and make necessary changes for compliance. To view a copy of the proposed rules, visit www.pgcd.us. If you have any questions, please call the PGCD office at 806-883-2501.
