Sought In Connection With $175 In Checks Given Here In Summer

Examining trial for Ramon C. Zamora, 35-year old Mexican, charged by complaint with forgery, was held Wednesday afternoon before Justice of the Peace R. H. Davis. Bond of $500 was set in each of four complaints lodged against the Mexican, and trial in three additional complaints will be held this week, officials

Unable to perfect bond, the Mexican was remanded to jail to await Grand Jury action.

Charges against Zamora resulted from the passing of forged checks totalling $175 during the summer of last year to seven Haskell county business firms. The checks, each for the sum of $25, were drawn on the Bush and Burnet Ranch in Knox County one of the largest in this sec-tion. Four of the forged instruments were given to Haskell mer-chants and three to Rochester firms on Saturday afternoon, June 22, 1935, according to officers.

Several Mexicans were taken into custody by the sheriff's office for investigation at the time, and aid of R. L. Martin, U. S. Im-migration officer stationed at San Angelo was enlisted.

Zamora, a resident of San Antonio, was arrested at San Angelo Tuesday by Mr. Martin, and admitted the forgeries according to the U. S. officer. He was brought to Ballinger and was returned to Haskell Wednesday by Sheriff Giles Kemp and Deputy Ollie Kittley of Rule.

County Attorney Ben Charlie Chapman stated that Zamora gave officers a detailed written statement confessing the forgeries which will likely result in other parties becoming implicated, the County Attorney said.

We are almost envious of the fellow who lives in a good farm home near the city with a high-way or a hardsurfaced road leadthe comforts of the city with the freedom of country life. C. W. Druesedow living about two miles from the courthouse on Highway 30 north of town is enjoying these ideal conditions. Charlie has a splendid home, a good farm, plen-ty, of livestock and chickens, world of water for home use and to ircream each week, raises his hogs for meat and lard and the egg basket makes its daily trip to town. Charlie uses a tractor for farming

Old Beck and Jude still holds a fascination for V. B. Bowman living east of the city of Weinert and he pulls the lines over the backs of good teams for motor power on the farm. He says that teams are better adapted to his method of farming. He like all other farmers has hogs, cows and chickens, but they specialize in turkey raising and have had good success in the past with turkeys. They have 8 select turkey hens for breeders this year.

Bill Fought-

More than 100 English White Leghorn hens are kept for layers by Mr. and Mrs. Bill Fought on the farm east of Weinert. These the farm east of Weinert. These large leghorns are a special selection, because of the large pearly white eggs they produce which always bring the best market price. They hatch some of their baby chicks at home and place other eggs in the hatchery for hatching, buying baby chicks from reliable breeders to raise their male birds to keep the flock up to a high standard of perfection. These hens make the living in egg production make the living in egg production for this small family and there is always a cash balance left after everything they need has been purchased.

H. Prater-We moved from Oklahoma says
Mrs. O. H. Prater of the Lake Creek Community, and last year was the first crop this family made in the county. They seem to like this section very well, but they still like the friends of their old home and long to see them. They have 8 good cows and sell cream. It seems from what we could observe that this family strives to make the farm produce the living Mr. Prater is a good farmer and will doubtless soon become one of our satisfied farmers building plans for the future which will mean happiness and O. E. J. Brasell—
We have known E. J. Brazell of Lake Creek for a number of years. He is a prosperous farmers and owns his farm. He is now using a tractor for power and was getting along nicely with his farm work. He has fifty acres of barley growing and his stock has excellent pasture from this grain. He sells about $5.00 worth of cream each week and his 5 excellent milk cows from which this cream is produced. He raises hogs for his meat and lard supply and they always grow a good garden from which many vegetables are canned. He and lifes flessell keep pleaty of laying hers about the place and last year they put much feed in the barn and stack lots.

farming, and feeding his surplus feed to livestock and poultry. Mrs. Edge sells butter and raises red chickens and they raise hogs for meat and always have good gardens and keep the cellar filled with canned vegetables and meats.

We heard a tractor humming on the farm of Evans Ray in the Jud community while in that section last week. Evans was rushing to get his farm work in shape for planting his row crops. He owns a good farm with good improve-ments and he is prosperous and happy. Besides his farm he is cultivating 200 acres on another farm nearby and has his land about all broken. Mrs. Ray has a mixed breed of chickens but they are good layers. They sell cream and raise hogs. In fact Evans keeps plenty of livestock to consume the surplus of feed grown and he loes not sell his feed at a cheap market price. Last year he made a wonderful feed crop and saved t all nicely.

W. H. Hobbs— We found W. H. Hobbs to be a splendid farmer on a small scale. He is playing safe by making the farm pay the family expenses and selling the surplus for cash. Mrs. Hobbs has a small flock of barred rocks and they milk three good cows which gives them a bounti-ful supply of milk and butter. They always have a good garden and they were planning for an-other good garden this year.

Living near the Needmore Store operated by V. A. Pack, we came to the home of C. A. Savage a prosperous young farmer. Mr. Savage is not a farmer who tries to prosper by expansion, but he operates a small farm and watches closely each step of his farming and is happy and contented. He moved from Erath County a few years ago and he knows how to farm Sandy land and make it pay. He uses teams and keeps plenty of cows, hogs and chickens, grows a good garden, plants plenty of feed and he does not worry so much about the price of cotton.

We took a spin over across the river into what is known as the Grace School district. Here we

Rev L. J. Frost—

At the home of Rev. L. J. Frost we found three of the family in bed with the Flu, but they were not seriously ill, but those who have had the flu know about how they felt. Bro. Frost was plowing, using a good team for motor power. He has lived in the Lake Creek community for many years and is well known. He is a good farmer and makes the farm produce the living. Mrs. Frost sold $115.00 worth of turkeys last year and has 9 fine young hens this year from which she expects to increase her profits in turkeys.

S. M. Spruill—

I never buy anything and have it charged says S. M. Spruill of Lake Creek. He uses a tractor and has been on the same farm ten years as a tenant, but during that time he saved enough money to buy him a farm in East Texas and began the cultivation of that farm the year sending his cattle, maize

The ground was very dry in that section and they were needing rain very bad-ly. Mr. McElroy owns a large farm. His grain was looking fair and he is preparing his ground for row crops. He is cultivating several hundred acres.

Indoor Ball Tourney Slated at Lone Star

Formers Take Advantage of Recent Spring Weather To Prepare Land

Most all of the farmers in this community have started listing their land since we have had so much pretty weather.

An Independent Invitation Indoor baseball tournament will be held at Lone Star School next Saturday, March 14. The P. T. A. will sell hamburgers and cold drinks. Everyone is invited.

We want to thank all of the patrons of this community and also the many friends, who helped Lone Star to win third place if the Beher-McCarty contest.

and I can behind them, as though we belonged to the crew.

Ahead I saw something white by the castle wall. The three turned aside to avoid it, and I did the same. As I went by, I saw that it was a sheet. At that moment Sabre left me-he seemed to stop. But I had no time to wrangle. . .

The postern-door was open. The three stumbled in and stood waiting. And I stood waiting without, and with a foot on the step and my head close against the wall.

Then came Pharaoh's voice. "Bugle." "'Ere," said Bugle at once.

"A wipe," said Pharaoh. "To which side of the drive are the CATS?

"To the right from here." "Drop the wipe on the drawbridge, and sling the shoe into the fields to the left of the drive. If you to live, They're going to open those gates before you get back." As Bugle went by me, I saw that here was a chance which would never return. Pharaoh had used no torch. If Bugle's reminiscence was true, the probability was that he would not use one tonight. I was tall and thick-set, very much about Bugle's bulld-a suit I had left at Plumage was fitting him very well; and Bugle had been told to whis-

In a flash I was running for the drawbridge in Bugle's wake.

The castle was alive with mur murs-sounds of disorder and distress; someone was out on the ramparts, raving (to me!) men were trampling and shouting; I could hear blows falling upon woodwork and the shiver of breaking glass. But I heard these things as in a dream, for now I knew whose key had opened the postern, whose handkerchief would lie on the Grawbridge, whose slipper fall in the fields. . . .

The knowledge set my heart pounding. Some fountain that had not been working burst suddenly into play. Its liquor was bitterewest - and it made me drunken with rage. A girl had been mishandled. Not the Countess Helena Torick, for she was not of this life; but a slight, pathetic figure, whose head was bare . . . that had stood very still in a valley.

What then took place, happened more swiftly than I can set it down. Bugle was on the drawbridge, and I was standing, ready and waiting to kill him, three paces away. new the man drop the handkerchief and I saw him draw back his arm to discharge the shoe. I've got to lock this door." It seemed best to do as he said. Pharaoh and Dewdrop were gone. I needed Rush to bring me where they were.

Without a word, I turned to the steps I knew. . . As I came to their head, I came aware of a radiance-a faint suggestion of light, enough to outline the doorway that gave to the little hall. Another step, and I heard the drone of a voice. I entered the hall a-tiptoe. One of its doors was half-opennot that of the staircase which led to Helena's room. Beyond this a light was burning, the light of a torch - and an ice-cold voice was teaching a bitter senience to cut like a whetted knife. "So you see, there's not much left. Tomorrow morning, no doubt, order will be restored. Very likely the police will arrive. They won't is now proceeding in a somewhat hapbazard way, will be organized; clues will be sifted; the abduction will be reconstructed. Your sheets are below the ramparts, so they'll Your handkerchief lies on the drawbridge; the slipper which you kicked off will be found in the fields. I expect they'll employ your Alsatian-I'm sure I should. But as I carried you here, I don't think that he will come off. One has to think of these things. Be that as simply a question of testing these it may, no stone will be left unturned to find the beautiful countess - you really are lovely, you know-the worshipful mistress of Yorlck, that carted her drunken brother out of her way. And all the time you'll be here, sharing this somewhat unfriendly chamber with me and my friends. . . You do see the point, don't you? They won't search the castle, because they'll know for certain we're none of us here. You didn't search it this morning - you knew I was gone. And if they did search the castle, I hardly think Florin would let them look in this room. It's cleverly done, that door, You've got to be curious to find it and an expert to find its lock. I'm both. I found them on Wednesday evening gold." -with the help of your brother's key. I need hardly say that had I known that the key which you handed the warden was his and not yours, we should have adjourned to this chamber this morning instead of tonight. However, all's well that ends well. . . . " A stealthy step behind me remembered Rush.

As I turned, he was locking the door at the head of the curling stair.

For a fraction of a second I hesttated. Rush was at my mercy. Was this the time to unmask? And then I decided to stake my winnings once more.

Rush straightened his back and turned to the half-open door. Then he hung on his heel for an instant, to breathe in my ear.

Come on you. I'll give you Pha rach's a genius. He's got little Sheba cold."

Here, since it bears upon my story, I must describe how you entered that secret room.

This was the way of it. In the massive door from the hall the keyhole was set to the right, and when you had turned the key. the iron-studded oak opened inwards and so to the left. At once you found yourself at the foot of a stalrease-turret, the steps of which rose to the right and after three or four rises curled out of your view.

Now the door was very heavy and, not being truly hung, had to be held open: if it were not so held. It at once swung back to its frame and, since its lock was a springlock, shut itself fast. A catch was, therefore, provided, to prevent it from playing this trick-the sort of self-acting catch that is used for an entrance gate; and do bring this catch into action, you had but to open the door as wide as you could. But by so doing you were masking

Enter the turret and let the door shut behind you, and there in the wall which the door, when open, had hidden, was another smaller doorway which gave to the secret room. The door which is framed was also of oak and iron, but though it boasted a handle, there was no keyhole at all. It was in fact locked by the catch which held open the major door. Turn this catch to one side, and the minor door would swing open without a sound.

From within the room this door when shut, could neither be opened nor seen, because it was backed with the woodwork which covered the walls.

All this, of course, I learned later. All that I knew at the moment was that the door to the room had been "cleverly done."

Rush whispered over his shoul "Watch out for this door.

wedged." He sidled round the oak and I followed, with a hand on my pistol and Geoffrey's knife in my sleeve.

I shall never forget the scene. Only one torch was alight, and this was so held by Dewdrop that its beam fell on Helena's face. To this the eye naturally turned, and in an instant the rest of the room

She was sitting upright on ach with her back to the panelled wall. The neck of her dre. was torn and had fallen from one of her shoulders. If anything, her air was listless; she did not seen to be breathing, she sat so still. Her eyes were lowered to avoid the glare of the torch, but her beautiful head was high, and for all the emotion she showed she might have been sitting in a church. The sight of her captive and desolate hit me hard. That Pharaoh had been able to seize her was all my fault; but for me, she would have had Sabre, her bodyguard, More. Had I returned to the castle, my cousin and Barley and I would all have been there, and the odds against Pharaoh's success would have been absurd; as it was, I had made them evenand Pharaoh had won.

The beam of the torch was blinding and I shut my eyes and sank my chin on my chest. I wanted arrive tonight, for the telephone to be able to see where Pharaoh isn't working. I'm afraid I'm to was. Rush was beside me; he had blame for that. The search, which lingered a moment to take up the wedge and to lock the major door, but now he was standing beside me -1 could hear him licking his lips. And Dewdrop, a pace or two distant, was holding the torch. But know you were taken that way. I had not distinguished Pharaoh, and Pharaoh was first on my list. Then the man spoke again, and I knew that he was standing or sitting on the farther side of the room. "As always, I'm perfectly frank. My hand is upon the treasure. It's walls and this floor. But I can't get it out of the castle-at least, not as much as I want. I don't like to use the drawbridge: I believe even your bucolics would find that strange. But I know there's another way out. You took it with Mr. Spencer five nights ago."

There was a little silence. Then-"Go on," said Helena, quietly. "You will tell me that way," said Pharaoh.

"And then?" "We shall work till dawn, removing as much as we can."

"And then?" "We shall clear up and go," said Pharaoh. "And you will be free. I hardly think you'll want anybody to find us-in possession of so much

"What do you mean by 'clear up?' "I mean what you think I mean. There's a nuisance I've got to abate."

"'Clear up and," said Helena

"If you were honest, you'd say 'a score to settle."

"I prefer the term 'nuisance. Still, that may have to wait a little. At dawn we shall leave the castle, and you will be free." Helena took a deep breath.

"I see," she said, "And now I'll tell you something. You've got a long way, but a long way is never enough. You know that you're near the gold, but you don't know how to reach it. It's very well to talk of testing these walls and this floor, but that's a job for a mason, and you know it as well as I. But if the gold was here, as you admitaway. More. So long as you stay here, you're safe, for no one will open this room. But the longer you stay here, the slighter your chance of escape. You've only the Rolls and my men will very soon find that, looking for me. And tomorrow, as you surmise, order will be restored. Quite good order, I warn you: Mr. Bohun will see to that. If you wait till then, therefore, you will have to cut your way out. You'll have no gold to carry, so that should be easy enough: but once you are out, you'll have no sort of transport and the park will be full of my people, looking for me. Of course, as I say, if you stay here, you're perfectly safe. But you've neither food nor water, and nothing that you can think of will make me talk."

"What, nothing?" said Pharach. "Nothing," said Helena, calmly, You've no one here to torture, and I'm not afraid for myself. For the moment I'm up against it: but you are up against time."

It was clear that she meant what she said: her fearlessness was sub-

I wondered if she believed what Pharaoh had said. "Removing as much as we can . . . clear up and go . . . and you will be free." Once Pharaoh had access to more than a million pounds, was Pharach the man to grab what he could and bolt? If she opened her mouth, Pharaoh would certainly go. It seemed likely that he would take with him a thousand pounds. Fifteen hundred, perhaps; Dewdrop and Bugle and Rush could each of them manage a bag. And something else he would take against his return: and that was her master key. And she herself would be free, or she would be dead. Was it likely that Pharaoh, the ruthless, would spare her life? Spare her to cut off his access. If nothing else? "It certainly looks," he said, "as though we shan't be able to finish tonight. Still, these things shouldn't be rushed. And you know I can't help feeling that twenty-four hours in this chamber will help you to change your mind. The quarters are close, aren't they?"

"So much," said Helena, calmly, "may happen in twenty-four hours." "As I was saying, here we are out of the world, and time will stand still. Outside-well, the warden will rage and your people imag-ine vain things; Mr. Bohun will organize: Mr. Spencer will grin like a dog and run about the-" "Mr. Spencer's the rock you've split on from first to last."

"In a sense that's true," sat! haraoh, "I frankly admit I'm more accustomed to dealing with knaves than fools. And he's been very fortunate so far; but I don't think his luck will last, It's all my fault," he sighed. "I've only myself to thank. But he made such an excellent lever that against my better judgment I let him live. But there -we all make mistakes. To be perfectly honest, I went to the forester's cottage because I believed he was there. I didn't need you, you know. I always knew of this room."

"You seem to need me now," "Quite," said Pharaoh, "quite, But that's because your brother has gone. As a host-well, his hospitality left nothing to be desired. I and you more exacting. Never mind, only a matter of time." A gust of passion suddenly shook his accents. "If he goes to Tibet, I'll get him." The gust died down and he laughed. "Stupid," he murmured, "Let's say I don't like his face."

"You don't like him because you fear him." "He may prove inconvenient. Unabated nuisances sometimes do." "It isn't his tongue that you fear. You fear his hand."

"But you don't, do you?" flashed Pharaoh. "It's astonishing how you've fallen for that young calf." I could just distinguish the man, but the resolute beam from the torch went far to distract my eye. I could make out that he was standing beside a chair, about six paces from Dewdrop, close to the wall. There was furniture standing between us, a massive writing table against which Dewdrop was leaning, holding the torch, For fear of missing my man, I

This week we present formal statement from J. H. (Henry) Ivey regarding his candidacy for Con-stable of Precinct No. 1, in the Democratic Primary in July.

Mr. Ivey is no stranger to the office which he is seeking, having served as Constable of Prec. 1 for several years prior to 1932. He has had many years experience as has had many years experience as a peace officer, serving in various West Texas towns in addition to holding office in Haskell county. He is thoroughly acquainted with the duties of the office, and states that he will welcome an investigation of the records during his tenure in the position.

His formal statement:

New Chevrolet Truck on Economy-Safety Run

Carrying a 10,000-lb. cement block from Los Angeles to New York, a 1½-ton Chevrolet truck—one of the new 1930 models just introduced—demonstrated that safe driving means economy. Speed limits were observed in every community, with 35 m.p.h. the maximum on the open road. The 3511.4 miles were completed on two quarts of oil and 308.6 gallons of gasoline, at a cost of 01.6 cents per mile, or one-third of a cent per ton mile. The entire run was completed without any mechanical failure, repairs, or even a scratched fender. The illustrations show the test truck and features of the new 1936 models. Coupe type cabs with solid steel roof, full-floating rear axle, and full-length water jackets, are some of the improvements. In the lower right, Harry Hartz, who drove the cross-continent test, is seen beside the 10,000-lb. block. The test was officially observed by the American Automobile Association.

LIGHT INTERLUDE

Washington's famous nine old men have tremendous and far-reaching problems to pass on.

One day they must handle the farm problem; the next they must review the TVA experiment. One day they give new life to a man condemned for murder; and the next they give Congress a new rap on the knuckles. It's always something, and the something is usually a matter of incalculable importance. But now comes the capstone of the whole edifice. The Supreme Court in all its dignity is asked to pass on the famous Vanderbile guardianship case. Doubtless you remember it? A Vanderbilt has a 12-year-old daughter, and the daughter has a vast fortune left in trust for her. A lower court has made the girl a ward of her aunt, after a trial in which 5,000 pages of testimony were recorded. And the whole ball of wax now goes to the nine old men, who can forthwith pass up the problems of state for a while to settle a family quarrel of the idle but ornamental rich.

CHILD'S PROSPECTS

An economist at the University of Wisconsin, Dr. O. E. Baker, expresses the sincere hope that his boy, now 5, will eventually become a farmer. That is why, reasons the professor: The farmer has better food even in times of depression, than his city neighbors; he has better health; he can accumulate more property; he is more likely to enjoy his work than town people; finally, and most important, the farmer is more likely to rear a family and do his part to promote the general welfare of the nation. From that viewpoint, this economist's ambition for his boy ought to set up an example for many other urban fathers. In any event it is one bet in their children's future that parents cannot afford to overlook. And, incidentally laying aside the customary jibes directed at farm life, agriculture, in the final analysis, is the nation's fundamental business.

TRIUMPH IN HARD WORK

A cure for cancer may be found within three generations, according to Dr. Maude Slye, famous for her years of research work in Chicago, Dr. Slye believes that the solution may be found through exhaustive compilation and study of family medical records. She herself has compiled thousands upon thousands of case histories of mice in her own laboratory. She can tell you exactly which mice in her group are susceptible to cancer and where such cancers will appear; it is reasonable to suppose that similar knowledge could be gained about human beings, if records were voluminous enough. This simply illustrates the tremendous amount of unexciting detailed drudgery which is a part of scientific research. For many years Dr. Slye has been keeping records on cages full of mice. Out of this monotonous routine may come, in the end, one of science's most amazing victories.

GONE QUOTATION CRAZY

The one distinguishing hallmark of the 1936 presidential compaign so far is its heavy reliance es of other days. No spe platform any more without the backing of Jefferson. Washington, Lincoln, Jackson, Wilson, and occasionally Socrates. The amusing angle of this widespread use of quotations is that either side can use the same words. There seems to be a wholesale disregard for what Washington may have done or Lincoln recommended. If the quotations fit, that is what counts. One wonders how the campaigners would fare if they were suddenly forced to reply on cold, sound logic, devoid of the support of half the former Presidents of the United States. Certainly an anti-quotation speaker just now would refresh the political scene.

DEPRESSION EDUCATES

Evaluating the American educational system the other day, Dr. Stephen Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education, noted that the depression has done much for our philosophy of learning. "Because of the hard times," he declared, 'educators and students have been obliged to adopt a more realistic view of higher education." word, the depression has taught us that the educational system must prepare men and women for life. It may mean wholesale revision of our present theories, but the challenge is unavoidable. The depression caught our system napping. It had dwelt too much on abstractions. Now we have learned better. The task is to build upon this new realistic view of education.

SEVERE EXAMPLE

Death at the hands of a firing squad was decreed by a Soviet court for a hit-and-run admittedly drunken motorist who smashed into a farm wagon, killing a horse and injuring three persons. On past occasions the Soviet courts have handed down stiff sentences, but none has reached the severity of this last. One can well agree it was too harsh. But, at the same time, one must admit the Soviets have touched the key to the whole problem of drunken and careless driving—that is, that the ase is serious enough to deserve a heavy penal-. There is no greater traffic hazard today than -and-run, intoxicated drivers. And we have such drivers largely because they hold no fear of the equences of their acts.

FEARLESS EDUCATION

Doubtless the best news the country has had in the educators' world for a long time was that port prepared in St. Louis by a group of leading schers who urged that schools deal "boldly and schers who urged that schools deal "boldly and mly" with all controversial problems. "Perhaps e greatest threat to education in the world toagreed the educators in their study, "is esnent of narrow political control over the sools and severe regimentation of the minds of a sole generation of children." Wisely the teachers sole generation of children. Wisely the teachers acluded that the great need today is for a school ogram that drives straight ahead toward sane lysis of the problems of the hour. No greater reibility faces our schools today than to awaken keep alive a straight-thinking philosophy for future. Upon such fearless education depends th of our democracy through the years.

It's said that the old folks do not have the in-sence over youth that they used to have. That's Democrats showed a net gain of 18,000 over the Republicans, comparing this year's figures with those for last year. In city, townships and boroughs the Republicans showed a smaller registration than they did last year, while the Democrats showed a gain. During the same period, 2581 Pittsburgh Republicans changed their registrations to Democratic. Only 143 registered Democrats changed to Republican. That doesn't indicate that many Democrats have "taken a walk."

And the reason? We suspect that it is a reaction to the strange tatics which were so conspicuously used in the last county campaign and which are now being employed nationally—the tatics of trying to spread fear.

Four years ago the Republican party was trying to show that the decline wasn't really as great as the figures proved it to be—and that recovery was just around the corner.

Now they are doing an exact reverse-trying to show that recovery hadn't been as great as the fig-ures prove, and that disaster is just around the

A LESSON ON PRAYER

International Sunday School Le son for March 15, 1936 GOLDEN TEXT: "If we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us." 1 John 5:14.

(Lesson Text: Luke 11:1-13)

The disciples of Jesus came to him asking that he teach them how to pray, and in reply to this request Jesus reported the various petitions which Christianity calls to this day, "The Lord's Prayer."

"Prayer is not a burden to be borne, an obligation to be fulfilled, something that is due to God and must be paid," says Harry Emerson Fosdick. "Prayer is a privilege; like friendship and family, love and laughter, great books, great music and great art, it is one of life's opportunities to be grasped thankfully and used gladly. The man who misses the deep meanings of prayer has not so much refused an obligation; he has robbed himself of life's supreme privilege-friendship with "A devout religious life blossoms into prayer as inevitably as the bulb of lily unfolds, through growth, the prophetic loveliness at the heart of it," says Gaius Glenn Atkins. "Prayer, therefore, is as old as religion itself. Wherever religion has risen above the lowest level of fear and superstition, it has expressed itself in some kind of prayer. We find prayers on the broken clay tablets of old civilzations. They are imbedded in old literature; they are aspects of ceremony and sacrifice. The world has always been girdled by a chain of praying folk, the centuries are bound together by prayers of the devout." Charles Kingsley says if God's will were done on earth as in heaheaven overhead, in perfect order their courses, without rest, yet without haste; as all created things, even the mast awful, fire and storm, fulfill God's word, who hath made them sure for ever and ever, and given them a law which ual faith of those who profess to shall not be broken. But above verse, and the winds which are God's angels, and the flames of fire which are his messengers; above all, the prophets and apostles have caught sight of another divine and wonderful order of raangels, thrones and dominions, principalities and powers, fulfilling God's will in heaven, as it is not, alas! fulfilled on earth." The petition and daily bread is commented upon by J. D. Jones

derful order of the material uni-

as follows: "This prayer proclaims the fact of our dependence upon God for the very simplest of boons. It is a prayer for all men, for the prince as well as for the the poor, because all are absolutedependent upon God. In the last resort all men depend upon the produce of the field and the produce of the field is the gift of God. Man cannot make food. He cannot create bread. He cannot command a harvest. God must give it. And he gives the harvest year by year. I have read somewhere that, when the month of August comes around, the world is, each year, within two months of famine. How forcibly such a fact preaches the truth of our dependence upon God!" Deliverance from temptation is another plea. "Temptation sometimes spoken of in Scripture as coming from God, sometimes as coming from Satan," says Adolph Saphir. "God tempts no man to evil, but for good; he tries and tests, as he tempted Abraham and the children of Israel into the Wilderness. Satan tempts unto evilhe tries to infuse evil into the human mind. Many of God's providential dealings are probationssuch as prosperity, health, talent, or sickness, poverty, affliction. Satan converts them into temptations; our sinful hearts give him abundant facility in this. The ing the fruit-some believing that ven, "it would abolish all the vice child of God distrusts himself of the world and therefore the dreads sin and says to God, Lead misery which spring from vice. me not where there are snares and Ah that God's will were but done pitfalls-I am short-sighted; on earth as it is in the material where there are strong enemies, I am weak; keep Satan, keep sinand obedience, as the stars roll in ful allurements from me, keep my heart, so that probation may not become temptation to me; lead me, has finished the work from here that I may not fall, but abide in to Stamford and the right of way Christ." Good Qualities to Observe

We have numerous campaignsclean-up campaigns, election campaigns, health campaigns, and others. Wouldn't it be beneficial if we could have a campaign to en-courage qualities of character to give our school even a little better name than it has? Then let's be honest on examinations and home work; return all lost articles; keep our school property free from any kind of writing or drawing; be attentive during assembly programs and always have a democratic at-

All of these virtues show the making of a good character. Let's be thoughtful and considerate of others. Let's be proud of our school. We make it what it is.

The barracks are in a co and the neatest barracks at the end of each week gets a free trip to Juarez. Barrack 5 won Saturday night. There is plenty competition to win this trip. The barracks are judged by the neatness of the beds, windows being clean floors being swept clean and the general appearance of the bar-racks. Maybe you think these ar-my officers don't know how to inspect a barrack. Just one wrin-kle in a bed counts against you. If the Lieutenant finds even one match stem in the whole barracks it counts five points against you. To win the trip a barracks must average as much as 90 percent perfect, and that is really hard to do. The pleasure we derive out of these trips is really earned and is made possible only through the Lieutenant's courtesy, which we

A Proclamation

WHEREAS, we believe it to be to the best advantage of the City of Haskell, Texas, both from the standpoint of health and of beauty, that the streets, yards and vacant lots be at all times as clean and free of weeds and trash as is possible, and

WHEREAS, we believe that this is particularly so during this year of 1936 inasmuch as the State of Texas is now celebrating the Centenary of her independence and inviting the world within its borders to inspect the progress made during the last hundred years and to join in the festivals to be held all over Texas in the course of this celebration, and,

WHEREAS, by reason of such fact Haskell as a part of the State of Texas, should by all means show itself to the best of advantage to those many visitors who will visit us and travel upon our highways during the course of this year.

THEREFORE, we have proclaimed the week of March 23 to 28, 1936 as CLEAN-UP WEEK and it is here so designated. We urge all the citizens of Haskell to observe it as such by making a concerted effort to clean their premises for their individual benefit and for the benefit of Haskell as a whole.

What About SMITTY?

Who's going to pay that outrangeous gas bill for last month? How can he satisfy the demands of that corporation saying that Smitty's house was illuminated to a greater extent last month? And those telephone bills . . . while our wife was away the blooming thing wouldn't ring at all . . . but Roy K. has it down in reverse.

We are overstocked on lots of items and need money.—The prices are too low to quote here. Come in and get what you need while I am losing money.
