Cost estimate hits $9.1 billion

DALLAS (AP) — TU Electric's latest cost estimate of $6.62 billion to complete construction of the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant jumps to $9.1 billion when interest is figured in, officials say.

In disclosing the new estimate Friday, company officials said a one-year halt had been ordered on the second unit of the twin reactor so the company could concentrate on completing the first unit by the end of 1989.

That completion date is nine years behind the original estimate, which also placed the plant's construction cost at $779 million.

Unit 2 is not expected to be in commercial operation until after the peak season of 1991.

The plant, near Glen Rose about 45 miles southwest of Fort Worth, is in its fourth year of a multimillion-dollar reinspection and corrective action program.

"Although the amount of work has been greater than we anticipated, the results of our hardware and design validation programs are encouraging," said Michael D. Spence, division president of TU Electric. "This exhaustive review has uncovered no problems that cannot be corrected."

The Friday announcement marked the 11th price estimate and a 20 percent increase, the second-largest, for the nuclear facility. The 10th cost estimate of $7.59 billion, released in November 1986, included a $2 billion cost overrun — a 44 percent increase over cost estimates only a year old.

TU Electric spokesman Dick Ramsey said the utility did not specifically calculate a $9.1 billion price tag for the plant. However, the utility estimated the 2,300-megawatt plant would cost $3,950 per kilowatt of generating capacity. The November 1986 estimate was $3,300 per kilowatt.

Ramsey said the cost estimate could rise again because the utility is unsure of the financing costs for the 6 percent of the plant held by the plant's two minority owners, Brazos Electric Power Cooperative Inc. and Tex-La Electric Cooperative of Texas Inc.

The cost also could rise when construction on Unit 2 resumes and interest costs are added into current estimates, Ramsey said.

TU Electric company owns an 88 percent share in the project and has agreed to purchase the Texas Municipal Power Agency's 6.2 percent share. The sale is subject to regulatory approval.

If TU purchases Texas Municipal's share, its total investment in the project will be about $8.54 billion, including interest.

TU officials said electric rates should increase about 10 percent when the plant goes into operation.

Former resident to tape 'You Can Be a Star' show

MCCAULLEY—Dreams can come true and that old age old adage still holds true today, so the Todd Jeffrey story begins. He is a former Snyder resident.

As a youngster, Jeffrey dreamed of becoming a country and western star. Between the ages of five and six, solos had already become common place at local churches and performing seemed natural. All through his early school years, he performed at every function within the area, gaining valuable experience and confidence.

In 1978, however, hardships and tragedy plagued the teenager. His mother, also one of his shining inspirations, was diagnosed with cancer and the same year he was critically injured in the McCauley school bus wreck which claimed five lives including one of Jeffrey's cousins. But despite all adversities, he fought his way back, and once again began the quest for his dream.

In 1981, at the age of 16, he was the lead singer in the 4-H Share-the-Fun group that won second place and was chosen the "Top vocal Group" in state competition.

The group, in the 1982 competition, won first place and was again awarded the "Top Vocal Group" honors. He continued his music by being chosen as a member of the Western Texas College choir in Snyder. While attending college, at the urgings of family and friends, he took his first big step towards his dream.

A demo tape, consisting of four songs, was recorded in 1984 and created a lot of interest. A 10-song album was then recorded with a single released. Using only local promotion, the single was distributed to radio stations from Monahans to the Ft. Worth-Dallas area. Jeffrey received a "very good response" getting air play on over 50 radio stations in only one day.

Very encouraged, he then traveled for the first time to Nashville, Tenn. During this first trip, Home Place Studios of Nashville invested in a religious demo session through which Jeffrey was given wide spread exposure to all major Nashville recording executives.

In 1986 and 1987, Jeffrey made three more trips where he met with several top name stars and record labels.

This past January, he was given an invitation to compete on TNN's (the Nashville Network) "You Can Be A Star" where the overall winner of the 13 week competition will win a major recording contract and $50,000 in cash and prizes.

He will tape his segment of the show on March 24. No air date has been set yet.

Doors have continued to open for Jeffrey and most recently the Todd Jeffrey Fan Club was formed. It is based in Stamford and has branches in several other cities. The membership kit will include an autographed 8x10 black and white glossy photo, an official membership card, personal profile, a letter from Jeffrey and a bi-annual newsletter.

Regular dues are $5 and will be used for supplies and the promotion of Jeffrey's career. For more information contact Susan Griffith, Box 99, Roby, Tex. 79543 (915) 776-2403 or Tammye Halliburton, 3501 Curry Lane, Apt. 311, Abilene, Tex. 79606 (915) 695-7814.

Jeffrey, now 24, has come a long way from the small country church altar to the stage of a televised program with millions of viewers. Asked to sum up his feelings of all that has taken place, Jeffrey had this to say, "I believe with all my heart that God has left me here for a reason, and that it's to touch peoples lives with song. I have the will and the determination to do just that and I'll never give up until I succeed."

Teacher accused of child abuse cleared by district

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An elementary school teacher returned to her first-grade classroom duties after being exonerated by school officials of charges she had mistreated her students.

Superintendent Victor Rodriguez said Friday that a 3-day investigation failed to uncover any evidence supporting allegations of child abuse.

Ms. Kronick, in her third year, had been placed on administrative leave with pay on Tuesday, when the district began its investigation.

"I am satisfied in my own mind that she is a good teacher, a professional individual and not guilty of child abuse," Rodriguez said at a news conference Friday.

The allegations surfaced on March 11, when a group of parents accused Ms. Kronick of punishing their children excessively. They said she forced their children to stand with their noses next to a heater, forced them to hold heavy loads of magazines with their arms outstretched, and poked them with a pencil while they stood in an unlit closet.

Foundation gets AIDS vaccine research grant

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — One of the largest federal grants ever awarded for AIDS vaccine research has been approved for the Southwest Foundation for Biomedical Research, U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez says.

The five-year grant from the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases includes $953,508 for the first year and similar amounts each of the next four years.

The grant is the federal government's investment in an international consortium involving British researchers and scientists from the Southwest Foundation.

The foundation Wednesday disclosed the formation of the international effort to find and market an AIDS vaccine.

"This grant and the other things are obviously related and dovetail together," Southwest Foundation spokesman George Larriou said Friday.

Details on the international effort to battle AIDS are being kept under wraps until a news conference scheduled Thursday at the foundation.

The federal grant, earmarked for developing antibody-based vaccines against the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, names

Southwest Foundation Associate Scientist Ronald C. Kennedy as the principal investigator.

Kennedy is considered the foremost American advocate of the unusual form of antibody-based immunizations, known as anti-idiotypic vaccines.

He and Southwest Foundation Associate Scientist Tran C. Chanh are expected to have a leading role in the multimillion-dollar consortium.

Chanh, with London researcher Dr. Angus Dalgleish, published results in the British scientific journal Lancet — demonstrating that such an antibody-based vaccine could block infection by three major forms of AIDS.

Troops from Honduras are sent to Nicaraguan border

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — President Jose Azcona Hoyo said he was sending troops to rugged mountains near the Nicaraguan border to oust Sandinista forces, and a White House source said U.S. helicopter assistance was requested.

Azcona said Friday that 2,000 troops had begun moving into the Bocay jungle region on orders to drive out the Sandinistas, adding that his government was preparing "an operation to bomb inside Honduran territory."

He told a news conference he was "counting on the support of the United States" to deter Sandinista aggression. He called the arrival in Honduras Thursday and Friday of more than 3,000 U.S. troops a "warning" to Nicaragua.

At the United Nations on Friday, Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government denied U.S. and Honduran claims that its troops invaded Honduras, where the rebels maintain base camps.

Managua's U.N. envoy accused the Reagan administration of creating "an artificial crisis" in a bid to get Congress to restore military aid to the Contras.

On Thursday, Honduras mounted air raids in the border area where Sandinista troops allegedly penetrated Honduran territory in pursuit of Contra rebels. Azcona said his forces would bomb Sandinista positions until an estimated 1,000 remaining Nicaraguan troops withdraw.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Michael O'Brien said Friday evening that the United States was considering airlifting Honduran troops to non-combat areas. In Washington, administration sources said the Honduran request would likely be approved. The sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

The United States helped Honduras move troops to the border in December, 1986, after Nicaraguan forces attacked Contra camps in Honduras. No Americans were involved in combat.

The U.S. Embassy said about 800 American paratroopers — the last group of the 3,200 troops sent to Honduras — were dropped on to Palmerola air base Friday morning. The Defense Department said the U.S. troops would be in Central America for about 10 days.

Azcona said he expected the "simple presence and immediate response" of U.S. troops would scare the Sandinistas into withdrawing. He repeated what U.S. officials have been saying, that U.S. troops would not be involved in any fighting.

Sandinista troops retook the border military encampment of San Andres de Bocay from the Contras in an offensive Managua says began March 8 and drove hundreds of guerrillas into Honduras. Privately, a Sandinista military official indicated Nicaraguan troops had entered Honduras.

A high-ranking Honduran officer, speaking on condition of anonymity, said about 2,000 soldiers were moving Friday into the area of hostilities from a base at Juticalpa, about 90 miles west of San Andres de Bocay, and warplanes were on call.

The officer said about half of the original force of 2,000 Sandinistas who crossed the border had returned to Nicaragua, while the rest penetrated deeper into Honduran territory and were spread over an area of about 40 square miles.

Another source in Tegucigalpa, who asked not to be identified, said the Sandinistas stopped penetrating deeper into Honduras when the United States publicized the incursion earlier this week.

The source said the only activity reported in the region Friday involved Sandinistas he said fired highly flammable white phosphorus at Contras inside Honduras, estimated at 600 fighters.

The main objective of the Sandinista offensive was to destroy a Contra headquarters and a large rebel supply depot in the jungle north of San Andres de Bocay, the source said, declining to name the site.

President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua said Thursday that his soldiers were ready to "combat and liquidate" the 82nd Airborne and would continue the anti-Contra offensive in an area from central Nicaragua to the border.

At the U.N. Security Council meeting Friday, Nicaraguan envoy Rita Delia Casco said the United States would be to blame if war broke out, saying the crisis was "artificially created by the U.S. administration."

U.S. Ambassador Herbert S. Okun said Managua had planned the anti-Contra offensive after Congress denied further aid last month. He denied U.S. forces sent to Honduras constitute a threat or use of force against Nicaragua.

Ambassador Jorge Ramon Hernandez of Honduras said Nicaragua was trying to derail peace efforts in Central America. Sandinista-Contra talks set for Monday are now doubtful.

Noriega declares emergency state and talks about exile

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The government of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega declared a state of emergency that suspended civil liberties but was also seen as an attempt to reopen banks and stores closed by a cash crisis.

Also Friday, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State William Walker arrived to negotiate the departure of Noriega. In Washington, a White House official said that if Noriega flees, the United States will not seek his extradition to answer drug trafficking charges.

The general's opponents responded to the emergency decree by calling for an indefinite general strike starting Monday.

The economy already is reeling from walkouts that intensified this week and U.S. sanctions — all part of a campaign to drive Noriega from power that has become increasingly violent.

Under the "state of urgency" declared by acting President Manuel Solis Palma, the government may suspend basic civil and property rights.

A government statement announcing the move blamed the nation's economic chaos on the U.S.-backed freeze of its international bank accounts and the opposition campaign. "There is a real undeclared war against the Republic of Panama."

Solis Palma was named to succeed Eric Arturo Delvalle, who was ousted Feb. 26 by pro-Noriega legislators and went into hiding after he tried to fire the general, who heads Panama's 15,000-strong Defense Forces.

The United States recognizes Delvalle as Panama's legitimate president and said Noriega must go after he was indicted by a federal grand jury last month on charges of trafficking in Colombian cocaine.

Just hours after the emergency decree was issued Friday, troops broke into a radio station owned by opposition national assemblyman Francisco Artola, arresting 12 people, Artola said.

He said those arrested, including members of the opposition umbrella group National Civic Crusade, were on the air discussing a strike against a subsidiary of United Brands Co. in the town of Changuinola.

In a late evening news conference, Crusade leader Aurelio Barria said another general strike was being called "to put a halt to the catastrophic national situation."

Asked about the negotiations aimed at facilitating Noriega's departure, Barria would say only that the Crusade had been approached by a Noriega intermediary, but had refused to deal with the general.

Friday's decree allows the government to suspend virtually all civil rights, from freedom of speech and assembly to habeas corpus.

Undercover cop plays role well

MANSFIELD, Texas (AP) — A police officer did such a good job as an undercover drug-dealing miscreant that he had to endure two paddlings for his loud-mouthed, class-cutting behavior.

But the 25-year-old narcotics officer was willing to do just about anything to maintain his cover at Mansfield High School, police say, because of a similar undercover project that ended with the shooting death of a Midlothian officer in October.

Officer George Williams Raffield Jr. had posed as a high school senior. He was found shot to death, and police say they believe Raffield was killed because he was suspected of being an officer.

The Mansfield narcotics officer, who enrolled as a senior Jan. 18, played the key role in the arrests of four students and a former student Friday on felony and misdemeanor charges of selling drugs to the officer. Police were searching for a sixth suspect, an 18-year-old Mansfield High School senior. The narcotics officer played the role of a wayward student so well he received two paddlings from Assistant Principal H.F. Wurzbach for problems such as continually skipping class.

"He did a lot of things that a disciplinary problem would do," Wurzbach said. "He mouthed off at teachers, cut classes, didn't go to detention."

The undercover project — part of a plan the Mansfield district started more than a year ago to show teachers how to identify students with drug problems — was aimed at cutting the drug supply in the school.

The officer, who finished his assignment March 11, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that drug use was surprisingly low and not widely accepted.

But police and school officials said Mansfield wants to stay abreast of teen-age drug use. Another undercover agent might soon be placed in the school, they said.

"It's kind of tough to see some of your kids taken off in handcuffs," Mansfield Principal R.L. Williams said. "But if you've got one kid smoking marijuana, you've got a problem."

The school district decided in November to ask the city's police to put an officer in the high school.

Only Williams and the school registrar knew the Mansfield officer's identity. School disciplinarian Wurzbach knew only that the district planned to put an officer in the school, but not when or who.

Authorities said the youthful-looking officer got into the circles of drug suspects by using a fake identity Williams crafted: He needed a semester to graduate, his parents lived in Mansfield and he was re-entering public school after a stint in a South Texas detention center.

The officer's bad-boy antics quickly snagged Wurzbach's attention.

Wurzbach paddled the officer once for skipping detention. He was preparing to do so again a month ago when the officer called Williams at home one night.

"I think we'd better tell Wurzbach who I am," Williams remembers the officer saying.

"Why?" Williams inquired. The reply: "Because I just cut sixth-period, and Wurzbach's going to bust my butt tomorrow."

The officer said he submitted to the first spanking to protect his cover, but he didn't want to deal with being bent over a table again.

DIAL A DEVOTIONAL 573-8801

Nigerian takes unusual oath in court

HOUSTON (AP) — To Lincoln Biola Fagemi, "so help me God" just didn't hold water when it came to swearing to tell the truth in court.

Instead, the 42-year-old Yellow Cab driver from Nigeria swore to tell the truth at his assault trial using his "akomologbon," a large brown gourd containing "Yoruba native medicines." As he explained it to State District Judge Jay Burnett, his fate would be far worse than a simple trip to jail if he lied after swearing on the akomologbon.

One lie, Fagemi said, and a terrible tragedy — perhaps death — could befall him in 77 days.

The odd promise, allowed under a Texas Rules of Criminal

Evidence provision entitled "oath of affirmation," was made just before Fagemi testified about a fracas with his former girlfriend, Pauline Chinyere Onwu, on Feb. 7, 1987.

It also preceded his conviction Friday: The jury placed Fagemi on five years probation and ordered him to make restitution for shattering Ms. Onwu's arm.

Prosecutor Nancy Conlin said Fagemi, a U.S. resident since 1972 who has a pharmacy degree from Texas Southern University, and Ms. Onwu, who has a master's degree in home economics, had long been romantically involved.

The problems started when Ms. Onwu decided to end her relationship with Fagemi, Ms. Conlin said.

"Onwu testified she was using his old cab and he had a new one," Ms. Conlin said. "She was moving out of her apartment and he didn't want her to do it. He came over and wanted his old cab back."

What happened is in dispute. Ms. Onwu, now living in Indiana, said he beat her severely with a pipe, crushing her arm. Fagemi said she hit him with a club and he struck back with a 2-by-4 board.

One basis of their problems is that he is from the Nigerian tribe known as the Yorubas and she is an Ibo. The problems between the two tribes are legendary, one example of which is the bitter civil war fought in Nigeria in the 1960s. Thousands died in that bloody conflict.

Fagemi shook his head when asked why he became so involved with a member of the rival tribe.

"She was stranded here and I helped her out," he said.

The trial was unusual by everybody's standards. Defense attorney Barry Boorstein said prosecutors had even offered to dismiss charges and let it go with restitution for Ms. Onwu's injuries. But Fagemi turned that down, citing the feud between the Ibos and the Yorubas.

The matter of the akomologbon puzzled everyone concerned. None of the attorneys in the case actually knew what was inside it, and Fagemi was not doing much explaining.

Pressed on the issue, Fagemi would only say some of the "native medicines" in the brown gourd were funeral wrappings from bodies and miscellaneous beads.

One thing about the akomologbon, though, was made perfectly clear, as defense attorney J.C. Whitfield quickly discovered.

When he picked it up, his client ordered him not to touch the container's bottom.

"Unless the person holding it says something according to the contents it won't work," Fagemi said cryptically and without elaboration.

"I guess I only have 75 more days to live," Whitfield told the Houston Chronicle afterward.

Texas spans more children in school

WACO, Texas (AP) — Texas leads the nation in spankings of school children, and a Baylor University professor says the practice is here to stay although he suggested that it probably is ineffective.

"It's almost a part of Texana — there's apple pie, motherhood and spanking," said Dr. Elden Barrett, an assistant professor of curriculum and instruction at Baylor.

"Texans, both school administrators and the general public, have believed and still do that paddling is the best way to assure some form of discipline." A recent survey by the U.S. Education Department shows that Texas leads the nation in the number of students who were paddled in 1985-86, the most recent findings available. The state had more than 260,000 spankings for disciplinary reasons.

Spanking is illegal in California, Hawaii and seven other states. And 11 more have anti-paddling laws in the works. But Texas is one state that will likely always allow paddlings, Barrett said.

Two factors have helped to keep spanking alive in Texas — a belief that if you "spare the rod you spoil the child," and a deep cultural and social notion that paddling is necessary to maintain discipline, he said.

Barrett, who was a school principal for more than 15 years, said he does not believe spanking serves its purpose.

"I gave spankings for years, and I came to the conclusion it is not effective," he said. "To begin with, if you give a kid the choice between a spanking and say, detention halls or extra class work, nine times out of ten he'll choose the spanking. He knows it's quick and it's over. That proves it doesn't work as a discipline tool."

Barrett also said current studies show that the average Texas teacher has received less than two hours of college work devoted to discipline methods.

"That's just not enough. If you can't manage a classroom, you can't teach," he said.

Legal questions over spankings also have come into play in recent years.

"There probably isn't a principal in Texas who hasn't been threatened with a lawsuit by some angry parent for spanking his or her child," he said.

Sir Thomas More, once King Henry VIII's chief minister, was executed in 1535.

North quits Marines; says he'll subpoena higher ups

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North says he's retiring from the Marine Corps because he may have to subpoena "the highest ranking officials in our government" to defend himself against charges in the Iran-Contra affair.

North, making a brief appearance Friday at the office of attorney Brendan Sullivan, said Sullivan had informed him "that the defense against these charges may require him to issue subpoenas for the testimony and records of the highest ranking officials in our government."

"That strikes me as a course of action incompatible with my continued service as a Marine officer," North said. "Accordingly, with great sadness, I have tendered my request to retire from the Marine Corps."

North, who wore a civilian business suit in place of his usual ribbon-bedecked Marine uniform, refused to answer questions after reading the statement.

But Pentagon sources said North, 44, had submitted his request Thursday, asking that he be allowed to retire effective May 1 when he will have completed 20 years of active military service.

The request already has been approved by Gen. Alfred M. Gray, the commandant of the Marine Corps, and is expected to receive "routine" approval Monday from the office of the Navy secretary, the sources added.

Twenty years is the minimum amount of service required to retire from the military with a pension. With 20 years of service, North is entitled to a pension totaling 50 percent of his base monthly pay, or slightly over $22,000 a year.

The Pentagon sources said North also had requested approval to begin terminal leave, meaning he wants to use accumulated leave benefits to stop working at his military post now instead of waiting until May 1.

"That also should be approved routinely," said one source.

North was reassigned to Marine Corps headquarters on the planning staff in November 1986 after President Reagan fired him as an aide to the National Security Council.

North will become the second major figure in the Iran-Contra scandal to retire from active military duty. Rear Adm. John Poindexter, President Reagan's former national security adviser and North's boss, exercised his right to retire from the Navy late last year.

North, Poindexter and two others were indicted by a federal grand jury Wednesday on charges they conspired to divert Iranian arms sales profits to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The 23-count indictment, which also named retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord and his business partner, Albert Hakim, said the defendants organized, directed and concealed "a program to continue funding of and logistical and other support for military and paramilitary operations in Nicaragua by the Contras" at a time U.S. law barred such action.

After the indictment was returned, North vowed to fight the charges, declaring: "I did not commit any crime."

Middle, low-level managers have increased health risks

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Grocery store managers, construction foremen, mine inspectors and other low-level and middle managers have a greater risk of heart attack than blue-collar workers or other white-collar workers, a study shows.

Previous studies have found that blue-collar workers are more likely to die of heart attacks than white-collar workers. But Robert Brackbill, the author of the new study, said Friday that the managers with increased risk of disability from a heart attack are in some respects more like blue-collar workers than white-collar workers.

"They had the lowest mean level of education compared to other professional groups," said Brackbill, of the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health in Cincinnati.

Brackbill said the group's socioeconomic status and wages were also closer to those of blue-collar workers and, like them, the middle and low-level managers might not have good access to medical care.

Brackbill, who presented his findings at a meeting of the American Heart Association, studied samples from 446,000 social security disability records covering the periods 1969-1973 and 1975-1976.

During the first period, low-level and middle managers had 43 percent more chance of having a heart attack than other white-collar workers and blue-collar workers. The risk was 63 percent higher for them in the second period.

The study also found that educators, lawyers and entertainers had among the lowest risks of professionals while medical professionals — doctors, nurses and technicians — had a slightly higher risk than blue-collar workers.

Brackbill had no information on the smoking and eating habits and alcohol consumption of the workers he studied, so it's possible that the increased risks he identified were due to those factors rather than jobs.

Had that been the case, however, he said it would have been unlikely for a single occupational group to have increased risk. The risk would more likely have been spread among all professionals or all blue-collar workers, rather than be specific to certain subgroups, he said.

The study suggests that occupation is associated with disability, but does not prove it, he said.

The American Heart Association includes stress as one of the risk factors for heart disease, and notes that stress may increase the likelihood of getting heart disease when combined with other risk factors, such as smoking, high blood pressure and elevated levels of cholesterol in the blood.

Third child conceived after first pregnancy

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A woman has astounded her doctors by giving birth to triplets — two of them six weeks older than their brother.

Apparently, 29-year-old Kim Borchardt was pregnant with twins when a third child was conceived, doctors said.

"The amazing thing about this is that they were conceived at two different times," said Dr. Neal Goldberg, director of neonatology at Arlington Memorial Hospital.

Ms. Borchardt, who had not taken any fertility drugs, had a Caesarean section Jan. 9 at Arlington Memorial. The triplets weren't due until March 8.

Billy Joe Jr., the first triplet, and his brother, Max, showed 32 weeks of development at birth. But Ferrel, the third sibling was only 26 weeks along and weighed 1 pound, 13 ounces — less than half as much as his brothers.

"Ferrel was a lot sicker and had more of the premature problems," Goldberg said. "One night he almost died, he was so sick."

All three boys had problems when a fetal blood channel to the lungs failed to clamp off at birth, Goldberg said. Medication helped the two older boys, but Ferrel required surgery within 24 hours.

"He was too sick to move him to the OR (operating room); we had to do it at bedside," Goldberg said. "But that turned him around. It's not only a miracle he made it, but that he's done so well."

Ferrel was released from the neonatal intensive care unit Wednesday. Billy and Max were released three weeks ago to Kim and her husband, Joey Borchardt, who live in Lewisville.

Ferrel was not fazed when his parents, accompanied by his brothers, came by to pick him up. He slept, while Max made faces and Billy delighted nurses with his smile.

Snyder Tigers roll past Vernon, 18-5; Levelland, Brownwood vie for crown

Coach Albert Lewis could feel for what the Vernon Lions are going through, but he was happy to see his Tigers gain a convincing victory here Friday.

Snyder defeated Vernon 18-5 in five innings during second-round play of the Snyder Baseball Tournament, and was to play Big Spring in consolation action at 12:30 p.m. Saturday.

In other games Friday, Levelland booked a date to the championship game by defeating Pecos 7-6. The Lobos were to take on Brownwood in the 5 p.m. title match. Brownwood outlasted Lamesa 8-2 Friday. Also, Vernon was to play in Saturday morning's 10 o'clock seventh place game against Brownfield, a 6-1 loser to Big Spring.

In Saturday's other game, Lamesa and Pecos were to meet for third place at 3 p.m.

"We haven't faced great pitching in the tournament, but we have been hitting the ball pretty well and that's encouraging, anyway," said Coach Lewis, whose Tigers, 5-5-1 now, cracked Lion pitching for 18 hits Friday. "Vernon is a little down right now. They have a lot of freshmen.

They'll improve.

Kevin Dollins pitched three innings of three-hit ball to keep Vernon at bay early Friday. A strong offense aided the cause as Snyder managed a 15-0 lead before the Lions got on the scoreboard.

Dollins helped himself by going two-for-three with two walks and a pair of RBI from the plate. Sophomore Randy Morris continued his hot bat, although his consecutive hitting streak was snapped. Morris had recorded a hit in each of his last eight trips to the plate, including junior varsity action. He struck out to open Friday's game, but came back with a single, a double, a triple and a walk to go three-for-four. He also accounted for 3 RBI.

Also bringing in three runners for the Tigers was third-baseman Bert Otto, who slammed a home run, a double and a single. Other top hitters were Brad Gartman, three for four with a walk, Willie Garcia, two for three with a walk, Bert Merritt, three for four with a walk; and Tracy Braziel, two for three with a base on balls.

Matt Knight was Vernon's top threat. He cranked out a fourth-inning home run after Brian Nava had walked, which accounted for the Lions first two runs. Coach Lewis took Dollins out at that point and brought in Shane McCarter.

The Lions touched McCarter for a pair of infield singles before back-to-back outs. Snyder shook free from the inning, but not before Robbie Spence slapped a three-run double for a 15-5 ballgame.

Snyder came up with three more runs in the top of the fifth inning, then brought Garcia to the mound to shut the Lions down.

Snyder had collected six runs in the second inning off of starting pitcher Chris Havis. Merritt, Braziel and Otto slammed consecutive doubles for two Tiger runs. Later, Garcia cracked a two-out single to push Otto in. Gartman reached on an error, and Morris doubled to score Garcia. David Martinez loaded the bases with a walk, and Dollins followed with a single that sent Gartman and Morris home.

In the third, Braziel opened with a triple and Otto backed it up with a home run. Two outs later, Gartman singled and Morris knocked him in with a triple, giving the game a 9-0 look.

Snyder tallied six more runs in the fourth inning. Morris got two of the RBI on a single off of reliever Alex Alaniz.

Big Spring 6, Brownfield 1

Big Spring got two runs in each of the first and second innings, then held on to defeat the Cubs.

Tim Gutierrez was the WP. Mark Gonzales took the loss.

Big Spring got some long-ball hitting from Chris Crownover, who slammed a home run, and from Brent Hatfield, who had a triple.

Brownwood 8, Lamesa 2

Brownwood touched Lamesa starter Cedric Mason for five first-inning runs in this semifinal game of the tournament.

David Riker mastered the Lions' defense with two-hit pitching. He also aided Brownwood's offense with a two-run homer in the first inning. Damon Treadway slapped a double for the Lions. Wes Shook nailed a two-bagger for Lamesa's Tors.

Levelland 7, Pecos 6

Five first-inning runs didn't hold up for the Lobos, but they were able to overcome a Pecos rally and earn a one-point win in this semifinal game.

Levelland's early lead was helped along by doubles from Paxton Peyton and Benny Rodriguez.

Pecos came back in the third with two runs, then added four more in the fourth for a 6-5 advantage. Renee Rayos's double helped the effort.

Rodriguez picked up the win in relief of Israel Diaz. Lance Love was the loser for Pecos.

Peyton had a home run for Levelland.

Stone sets UT record

AUSTIN (AP) - Eric Stone's 19 strikeouts against Southwestern Louisiana have set a University of Texas record.

Texas won the nine-inning game, 2-0, Friday night as the right-handed Stone did not walk a batter and threw a one-hitter, an infield single in the second inning.

"For a dominating game, that's about as good as I've ever seen," said Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson.

Teenage girl buys new baby on the installment plan

HOUSTON (AP) — A 17-year-old girl, driven by her mother's hopes to be a grandmother, bought a baby from a 26-year-old woman on an installment plan of $100 per month, officials say.

The deal was thwarted by the teen-ager's stepfather, who notified authorities, Harris County Sheriff's Detective J.R. Hill said Friday.

No charges have yet been filed, and Hill refused to release the names of those involved. The 10-day-old baby girl was in custody of the Harris County Children's Protective Services, where she has been since Thursday.

Hill said the baby was the seventh child of the alleged seller, who he said was divorced. He said that except for one child who died at birth, the woman "never kept any of them."

"We don't know if (the other children) were adopted legally or if it was a situation like we have here," Hill said.

The teen-ager has been married 1 1/4 years, but the couple has not been able to have a baby, he said. The plan to buy a baby was promoted by the teen's mother because the mother, who is 48, wanted to become a grandmother, Hill said.

The baby's natural mother, who Hill described as "slow," did not become pregnant just to sell her child, Hill said.

"I don't think she was really in a frame of mind to sell it until she was approached," he said.

Although the buyers and the infant's natural mother had agreed on a price of $100 per month for the baby buy, no deal had been made on how long the payments were to continue, Hill said.

Sheriff's Lt. Drew Warren said the baby's mother and the teen-ager arranged for the mother to register in a local hospital under the teen-ager's name. They also filled out an insurance form using the teen-ager's name to pay the bill.

The baby was born March 9, and the teen-ager received the baby after she was released from the hospital five days later. The first of $100 monthly payments then was made, Warren said.

Warren said officials do not have adequate evidence to file charges and added that the case is unusual.

"The one who purchased the baby was young and not the normal age to want to purchase children," he said. "It's also highly unusual that an installment payment plan is used, which greatly enhances the chances of being caught."

"The most serious of charges would be the actual sale of another human being, the sale of human life," he said.

But falsifying names and possible insurance fraud are other charges officials are investigating.

Hospital staff and the primary physician also are being questioned to check whether they were aware or participated in the baby-selling.

"The spectrum is wide open. We have to find out how much the doctor knew and how much the hospital knew," Warren said.

President Franklin Roosevelt signed into law the National Labor Relations Act in 1935.

U.S.-Soviets open new grain talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union are talking about a new long-term grain agreement to replace the one that expires this fall.

Meanwhile, the Soviets were given the nod Friday to buy an additional 1 million metric tons of U.S. wheat at subsidized prices to help tide them over until then.

Acting Undersecretary Thomas O. Kay said that since last April, the subsidized sales of wheat to the Soviets have totaled more than 10.8 million tons under previously announced allocations of the department's Export Enhancement Program, or EEP.

The new line of subsidized wheat was announced after a regularly scheduled meeting here with Moscow representatives to review operations of the five-year agreement calling for annual sales of U.S. grain to the Soviet Union.

An opening round of talks on a new agreement was scheduled here Saturday. The current pact will expire Sept. 30.

Kay told reporters he would not comment on prospects for a new long-term agreement. Deputy U.S. Trade Representative Alan F. Holmer is the U.S. team leader for those negotiations.

More than 6.9 million tons of the 10.8 million tons of subsidized wheat bought by the Soviet Union have gone to fill its commitment under the fifth and final year of the agreement.

The pact calls on Moscow to buy at least 9 million tons of grain annually and specifies that the purchases include a minimum of 4 million tons each of wheat and corn. The Soviets have the option of buying the remaining 1 million tons as wheat, corn or soybeans, with every ton of beans counting as two tons of grain — up to a maximum of 1 million tons of grain equivalent.

If more than 12 million tons are wanted in a year, the Soviets are required to seek U.S. approval.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or soybeans.

If Moscow buys all of the new authorization, that would push wheat sales in the last year of the agreement to more than 7.9 million tons. All of the wheat has been subsidized.

In addition, the Soviets have bought 3.97 million tons of non-subsidized corn, including 500,000 tons announced Friday. Sales also include 813,000 tons of U.S. soybeans and 1.3 million tons of soybean meal.

Kay said official U.S. approval had been given the Soviets to exceed the agreement's limit of 12 million tons in the final year, but he said there was no indication how much more may be bought.

Under EEP, private exporters are given surplus commodities owned by the department's Commodity Credit Corp. so they can sell a foreign buyer wheat or other authorized commodity at competitive world prices.

The subsidies, or bonuses, have run between about $27 to more than $40 per ton, roughly 74 cents to $1.09 per bushel.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spring officially arrives on Sunday, March 20, and so does National Agriculture Day and National Agriculture Week.

It's also the Great American Meatout, which is sponsored annually by the Farm Animal Reform Movement, supported by various activists, vegetarians and animal welfare people.

The idea of the Meatout is to "kick the meat habit" at least for the day, say movement leaders. That notion has not gone over well with the Agriculture Department and farm leaders.

But National Agriculture Week is another matter. Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng is this year's honorary chairman for National Agriculture Day, the 15th year of special recognition for the nation's farmers.

Perhaps you sent a lovely card, or sat quietly in a chair. Perhaps you sent a funeral spray... If so we saw it there. Perhaps you spoke the kindest words, as any friend could say. Perhaps you were not there at all. Just thought of us that day. Whatever you did say to console our hearts, We Thank You so much, whatever the part.

We want to express our deepest gratitude for the love & kindness shown. For all the flowers, food, calls, prayers, money and especially the visits. Thank You from all of us

Total eclipse darkens wide swatch across lands in Asia

GENERAL SANTOS CITY, Philippines (AP) — Millions of Asians prayed, pounded drums, and danced in the streets Friday to greet a total eclipse of the sun that drew a curtain of darkness across land and sea.

Young Filipinos shot rifles and tossed firecrackers at the blackened sky. In northern India, thousands of naked men and women jostled their way into huge, sacred pools to cleanse their souls in a massive Hindu ritual.

"I am at peace today," said Ram Avtar, dripping beads of sacred water in Kurukshetra, India.

The 27-year-old businessman had journeyed 450 miles to the site of the two holiest pools to fulfill his late father's final wish: a dip in sacred waters to seek salvation for his forefathers.

About one million people waded or dived into Kurukshetra's holy water.

The eclipse was the most spectacular along a 108-mile swath that moved from the Indian Ocean across Indonesia and the southern Philippine island of Mindanao during the morning hours.

But a partial eclipse could be seen as far west as India and eastward into parts of Australia, New Guinea and the Pacific islands. Scientists said the eclipse would end at sunset in the Gulf of Alaska.

Along the 108-mile path, the shadow of the moon darkened the sun for up to four minutes. Clouds obscured the view in Jakarta, Indonesia, Hong Kong and in the eastern Mindanao city of Davao, where thousands of tourists and scientists had gathered to observe the eclipse.

Philippines President Corazon Aquino flew to General Davos City, where it was visible for about three minutes.

Wilson Sinambela of Indonesia's National Institute of Aeronautics said a total eclipse was observed in several parts of his country. He said thousands of Indonesians prayed and beat drums to herald the start of the eclipse.

In Hong Kong, hundreds of Chinese went to the space museum to view the eclipse through telescopes. But clouds prevented them from doing so. Instead, the museum showed video tapes of previous eclipses.

In Baguio City, 130 miles north of Manila, pregnant women rinsed their hair with water dripped from burned rice straws.

Local superstition has it that babies conceived during or shortly before an eclipse will be deformed unless their mothers practice the ritual.

In Kurukshetra, amid the chanting of hymns and the blowing of conch shells, 3,000 naked Hindu holy men were the first to enter the pools at 6:30 a.m.

Massive waves of men and women, some clothed, others naked, followed. The bathers pushed and shoved their way into the pools that can accommodate only about 125,000 people at a time. The eclipse lasted only half an hour.

The scene was repeated, in smaller numbers, at rivers and pools across India. But Kurukshetra was the most popular because legend says the Hindu god Lord Krishna once appeared there during an ancient battle.

Prasanni Devi said she came to Kurukshetra against the wishes of her children.

"My children do not believe in the holy dictum," said the 68-year-old widow, who traveled 235 miles to the holy town. "Throughout my life I had wanted to come here in the company of my husband, but he left me alone to get salvation."

Divers and lifeguards in boats kept watch over the bathers, but no trouble was reported.

In Manila, police said four people were injured when a passenger bus collided with a jeep.

"The drivers were probably looking skyward when the accident occurred," said policeman Ricardo Manansala. "It's impossible to gaze at the sky and drive a vehicle at the same time."

Solar eclipses occur when the moon positions itself between the Earth and the sun. The Chinese first recorded a total solar eclipse in 2137 B.C. and regarded it as a battle between the sun and a dragon.

The eclipse Friday was the last one in southern Asia for at least 50 years.

Ultrasonic scan shows heart attack risk

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A study using ultrasonic heart scans called echocardiograms has found that people with an enlarged left side of the heart are two to three times as likely as others to have a heart attack or stroke, researchers said Friday.

The defect, called left ventricular hypertrophy, has previously been associated with congestive heart failure. But this is the first time it has been identified as an independent risk factor for strokes and heart attacks, said Dr. William Castelli, who presented the findings at a meeting of the American Heart Association.

"The size of your left ventricle is going to be the price you pay for high blood pressure and overweight," Castelli said. "That should be recognized now as a powerful risk factor. It's as powerful as cholesterol, blood pressure and smoking, and indeed in the short term it's even slightly more powerful than some of those traditional risk factors."

"It means that person is headed in a big way for heart attack or stroke," he said.

The left ventricle is the main pumping chamber that sends blood through the body's arteries. The mass of the ventricle — representing both its size and the thickness of the muscle — is what is correlated with increased risk.

Castelli is the director of the Framingham Heart Study in Framingham, Mass., one of the nation's longest-running and most influential studies of heart disease. The identification of the risk associated with left ventricle enlargement was made by following Framingham residents for a long period of time while monitoring their heart size with echocardiography.

In that technique, ultrasonic sound waves bounced off the heart are used to produce a picture of the heart, much as sonar provides a picture of the sea floor.

Those with an enlarged left ventricle faced double or triple the risk of heart attacks and strokes, depending upon their age and their other risk factors, Castelli said.

"It gives us another guide to treatment, to aggressive management of the patient," said Dr. Jerome Cohen of St. Louis University Medical School. "We can't treat left ventricular mass, but we can be more aggressive about looking for factors that contribute to it."

Castelli said left ventricle enlargement shows up much more commonly in echocardiograms than it does in the more conventional electrocardiograms, which record electrical pulses from the heart and can be used to identify abnormalities.

"There's been very little information out on echocardiography demonstrating risk," said Dr. Philip Liebson of Rush Medical College in Chicago.

Officials seek to remove 70-year-old ship from harbor

AUSTIN (AP) — The City of Austin sailing vessel was christened 70 years ago on the Texas coast during the final days of wooden shipbuilding in the United States.

The years since then have not been kind for the ship.

The City of Austin is among seven historic vessels that have been found submerged in New York Harbor, where they have been moldering for decades and have become a hazard to navigation, according to the Army Corps of Engineers.

Except for a few basic facts, details of the working life and the fate of Austin's namesake remain murky, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

The corps and the Austin Historic Landmark Commission are hoping to learn more about the ship.

Parts of the vessel that might prove salvageable or of value to a museum could end up in Austin if an appropriate repository is found, said Rick Meyer, chairman of the Historic Landmark Commission.

"The discovery is absolutely fascinating and worth looking into," Meyer said. "We need help from anybody who might know anything about the ship. I think people on this end ought to be involved in preserving the ship's history."

Because of the historical importance of the ships, the corps is trying to gather as much information on their history as possible before removing the ships from the harbor as part of a long-term project to clear away sources of driftwood and other obstacles to navigation, said Roselle Henn, who works at the corps' Environmental Analysis Branch in New York.

The historical information and a detailed account of the ships' current condition will be sent to the Library of Congress, she said.

Henn said the City of Austin apparently was abandoned in the late 1920s along with six other merchant sailing ships found by the Corps of Engineers in the Kill van Kull, a channel near Bayonne, N.J., between Upper New York Bay and Newark Bay.

The ships lie about 4½ miles south of the Statue of Liberty.

The site is called Port Johnson, a coal port that went out of business in the 1920s, Henn said.

The City of Austin and three of the other ships are World War I-era Gulf Coast barkentines. The other vessels were built in Maine in the late 19th century. A barkentine is a sailing vessel with three or more masts and a particular type of rigging.

Remains of the ships apparently are not a pretty sight.

Income slightly under projection

Income was less than half a percent under projections for the first two months of 1988 for the Colorado River Municipal Water District, but expenses fell 10.62 percent under budget to maintain the year's good start.

Of the $1,827,306 income, $1,804,139 was in the basic element—water sales, up one percent. Operating expenses amounted to $807,535, or $95,906 under budget for the two months. Most of the difference was in the $408,534 power bill, which fell $56,905 under estimates.

Another significant development was that during the first two months, the CRMWD had to use almost no water from its well fields. The two lakes—J. B. Thomas and E. V. Speer—supplied 1,840,835,000 gallons, or 92 percent of the output. Virtually all the rest was in diverted water for quality purposes. Total production for the two months was 2,020,618,480. Although there was not inflow, lake levels held fairly level.

Judge retains store's 'poison pill' defense

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge dealt a severe blow Friday to Campeau Corp. in the battle for control of Federated Department Stores Inc., ruling that Federated's "poison pill" takeover defense could remain in effect.

At the same time, U.S. District Judge Leonard Sand delayed a decision on when Campeau's $6.2 billion cash tender offer for Federated should be allowed to expire.

Sand denied a request from R.H. Macy & Co. Inc. to force Campeau's offer to remain open until March 30, but he ruled the bid must remain in effect at least until next Friday.

The management of Federated is supporting Macy's cash and securities offer, which analysts have valued at about $6.3 billion.

The poison pill was seen as the key issue before Sand and the issue that could ultimately determine who would win Federated. Campeau contended its offer could not proceed as long as the pill remained in effect.

Such plans make it prohibitively expensive for companies to acquire a target company without the support of the target's management.

Federated's pill would allow current shareholders to buy more of the company's stock at a steep discount unless the board of directors withdrew the provision.

Sand disagreed with Campeau's contention that Federated's board of directors had breached its duty to shareholders in creating the pill in 1986, or in amending it earlier this year, prior to the Toronto-based developer's bid.

Campeau contended the pill prevented shareholders from getting the chance to fully consider its offer, but Sand said the creation of the pill was a valid defense and a reasonable business judgment by the Federated board.

To remove the pill, Sand said, would interfere with the "auction" now going on for Federated.

However, while he denied Campeau's motion for a preliminary injunction, Sand left open the possibility that the developer could raise the issue again.

Campeau said it had no immediate comment on Sand's ruling.

Under the merger agreement with Macy, Federated has the option of rescinding the pill in Macy's case. Federated said Friday it would not decide until next week what it would do about the pill.

Sand, relying on a Securities and Exchange Commission recommendation, ruled against Macy in declaring that Campeau's latest bid, announced March 2, was an amendment to its original proposal, and not a new offer.

Macy had sought the bid to be declared a new offer in hopes of forcing it to remain open for 20 business days, as required by law.

Extending the length of Campeau's offer would put the competing bids on a more equal footing. Macy, whose offer expires April 4, feared Federated shareholders would feel pressured into tendering their shares to the developer because of the earlier deadline.

Campeau's latest offer changed the number of shares it was seeking and the price to be paid for them.

Sand ruled, however, that the Campeau bid must remain open while he awaited a determination from the SEC on whether the developer must file more documents on its financing for the acquisition.

Macy is offering $77.35 a share in cash for 70.43 million Federated shares, for a total of $5.4 billion. Macy would exchange shares in the merged company, Macy's-Federated Inc., and issue convertible debt securities for the remainder of Federated's 89.5 million outstanding shares. Analysts have estimated the total value of the offer at $6.3 billion.

Federated stock rose 50 cents a share to close at $66.25 Friday on the New York Stock Exchange. Trading ended before Sand made the ruling.

Campeau's bid is a two-step, all-cash package that would be worth $68 a share, or $6.18 billion. It is offering $75 each for 70.5 million Federated shares, and proposes to acquire the remaining stock for $44 cash per share in a subsequent merger.

Campeau announced Friday that more than 5.7 million shares had been tendered under its offer so far. Macy has not announced how many shares have been tendered to it.

Federated owns 650 stores, including the Bloomingdale's, Burdine's, Filene's, Foley's, Lazarus and Rich's department store chains; Ralphs supermarkets; Gold Circle discount stores; and Main Street and Children's Place specialty stores.

Macy owns nearly 100 department and specialty stores.

Campeau, which started in real estate development in Canada, moved into the U.S. retail market at the end of 1986 by acquiring Allied Stores Corp.

60 day extension granted to illegals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government on Friday tried to bolster its amnesty program by giving illegal aliens who file in the final month of the plan 60 more days to provide documents to support their applications.

Under the change in the program — which has attracted a lower-than-anticipated number of applications — amnesty seekers will be able to file a skeletal application from April 4 to the May 4 deadline without producing back-up documentation and medical data until sometime after July 5.

The Reagan administration opposes extending the filing deadline, despite sentiment in Congress to do so.

"If any of you have ever filed your income tax on the night of the 14th of April, there's usually one document or one fact you don't get," Attorney General Edwin Meese III told reporters at an immigration office in Arlington, Va. "We want to be sure that doesn't stop anybody from this program."

Just over 1 million amnesty applications have been filed, and although a last-minute surge is anticipated, the volume of requests is likely to fall far below the 2 million estimated as recently as January by Alan Nelson, commission of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"Our goal is not two million," Meese said. "Our goal is for every eligible person to apply." If an eligible alien doesn't apply by May 4, "that's the person's fault, not ours," he added.

Legislation with 60 co-sponsors would extend the filing deadline for another year, but Meese opposed the idea of extending it.

"There's no reason to," he said.

Scurry County Folks...

By Shirley A. Gorman

Heroes are made not born. This old adage was proved all over again last week as the alertness and quick thinking of two Snyder 15-year-olds may have saved two lives.

Last Monday morning, Kenny Ray Gambrell of 407 35th St. and his long time friend, Horace Lee Proctor of 406 35th St. were walking to the Skinny's store on 37th Street to get something for Proctor's mother.

They were out of school due to spring break, thinking and talking of all the usual things 15-year-olds think and talk about.

As they approached their destination, they noticed smoke coming from the house located at 412 36th St. Proctor immediately went to the first house nearest the burning home, but found no one at home. Gambrell met with more success when he tried the home of Henry Dever at 417 36th, located across the street from the burning house.

"I told him what was happening and asked him to call the fire department," Gambrell told the Snyder Daily News.

Both boys then heard a woman scream and immediately ran back across the street to the garage adjacent to the burning house.

"We could hear a woman screaming and we could see her fingers under the garage door but apparently the door was locked because she couldn't open it," Gambrell said.

They tried to open the door from the outside but met with no success. A few seconds later, Gambrell struck one of the narrow windows of the garage door with his bare hand. It shattered and both boys cleared away shards of broken glass. Gambrell suffered a few cuts and a bruise but Proctor was not hurt.

The window was located about five feet off the ground.

In the meantime, the trapped woman, Linda Atilano, who is 7½ months pregnant, lifted her four year old son up to the window and the boys pulled him through.

Atilano then climbed up to the window and the boys pulled her through as well. Also assisting about that time was Dever, the neighbor who had called the fire department. The ambulance and fire department also arrived very shortly after being called.

"When they got there we just sat back and watched the pros do what they do best," Gambrell said.

When asked what they were thinking about during the crisis, Gambrell said, "We both thought we needed to get her out before she suffocated. At first we didn't know her son was also inside. I have never heard anyone scream like that."

Since neither boy has had any life saving training, they said they acted on instinct. But neither feels that they did anything heroic or anything that "any other decent human being wouldn't have done." They said they just did "what had to be done."

"It finally hit me that night when I was lying in bed that we might have saved someone's life," Gambrell said.

Both boys said that their parents have since told them how proud they are of what they did and for "thinking and acting fast."

Both boys are sophomores at Snyder High School. Gambrell likes to golf and he writes for The Tiger's Tale, the school newspaper. He and his family also like to participate in mountain men activities and will attend several rendezvous this summer.

Proctor plays on the football team and takes woodworking classes.

Neither boy knew the Atilanos before the fire incident.

The living room and kitchen were gutted by the fire and the rest of the house had heavy heat and smoke damage, fire officials reported earlier this week.

Squeaking through

By James Jacoby

Although doubling a weak no-trump opening with four aces can be lucrative (East-West's opening no-trump range was 12-14 points), South elected a risky heart overcall. When North invited game, South's four aces made acceptance easy. But West got off to the best defense — a trump. Now the simple way to score a 10th trick, by ruffing a spade in dummy, was not available, since East would be able to cash a third trump.

So declarer went for making all his trump tricks. He ducked the first trump, won the second and cashed his ace of clubs. He then led a diamond to dummy's jack and ruffed a club. He played a diamond to dummy's queen and ruffed another club. He then led another diamond to dummy's king. It would not help East to ruff that trick, since declarer could not then be prevented from trumping a spade in dummy. So East shed a spade. Now declarer ruffed dummy's last club and cashed his ace of diamonds, on which East shed a second spade. Declarer then cashed the ace of spades for his 10th trick.

Lesson: Although, with no opposing bidding, declarer might have tried leading up to the spade queen, the weak one-no-trump opening by East warned declarer that another approach was called for.

Aerobics found to slow aging process

NEW YORK (AP) — A 10-year study has found that regular aerobic exercise will not only protect you from heart disease but will also slow aging, says the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau. The University of Florida's Center of Exercise Science tested 25 exercises with an average age of 62 over a 10 year period. It found their aerobic capacity, a measure of aging, was better than that found in non-exercising 25-year-olds.

POISON ANTIDOTE

'Activated charcoal' is a better antidote for poisoning than syrup of ipecac, and should be kept in every household. Unlike ipecac, which makes the victim vomit up the poison (twice irritating the throat and mouth), charcoal deactivates poisons by binding them to its particles, thus preventing absorption. The charcoal-poison complex is then passed harmlessly down the intestines and evacuated. Adding sorbitol to activated charcoal (trade name CHARO-AID) speeds up the transit time to one hour from mouth to rectum. Always call a poison center first - perhaps there is something else that should be done.

4-H CLUB MEETINGS

DEMOCRACY IN ACTION
4-H club members enjoy their 4-H club meetings. Here boys and girls elect their own officers, plan and conduct their own programs, and hold regular meetings. They take part in community activities and the countywide 4-H program.

Both project work and club activities help 4-H'ers develop desirable personal traits. Greater personal development is one of the finest opportunities boys and girls have as 4-H club members.

The 4-H club meeting is a workshop in democratic citizenship. Most club meetings have four parts — inspiration, business, education and recreation.

The club meeting teaches parliamentary procedure, how to make individual and group decisions, how to use elected officers effectively, and how to plan and carry out group activities. It teaches the duties of citizenship in a democracy. Here boys and girls learn and practice the fundamentals of our form of government.

The educational part of the club meeting centers around individual projects and activities that interest the group. Demonstrations, judging practice, illustrated talks and group discussions are teaching tools.

Some type of recreation is important at club meetings for personal development and to teach the wise use of leisure time. Group singing, folk games and dance, active sports — almost every kind of useful recreation is enjoyed by local clubs throughout the country.

Hotel group assists needy children

NEW YORK (AP) — A New York City hotel has opened its doors to K.I.D.S. (Kids in Distressed Situations), a non-profit charitable organization established to collect and distribute new clothing, toys and other items for children around the world.

Banquet facilities, meeting rooms and other services are being donated by the New York Marriott Marquis to provide the group with a home for planning

From local to national levels, 4-H is carefully planned according to the developing needs of growing young people. Clubs are organized in three main ways:

—All boys and girls in a community or neighborhood may belong to one club, with separate project groups within the club.

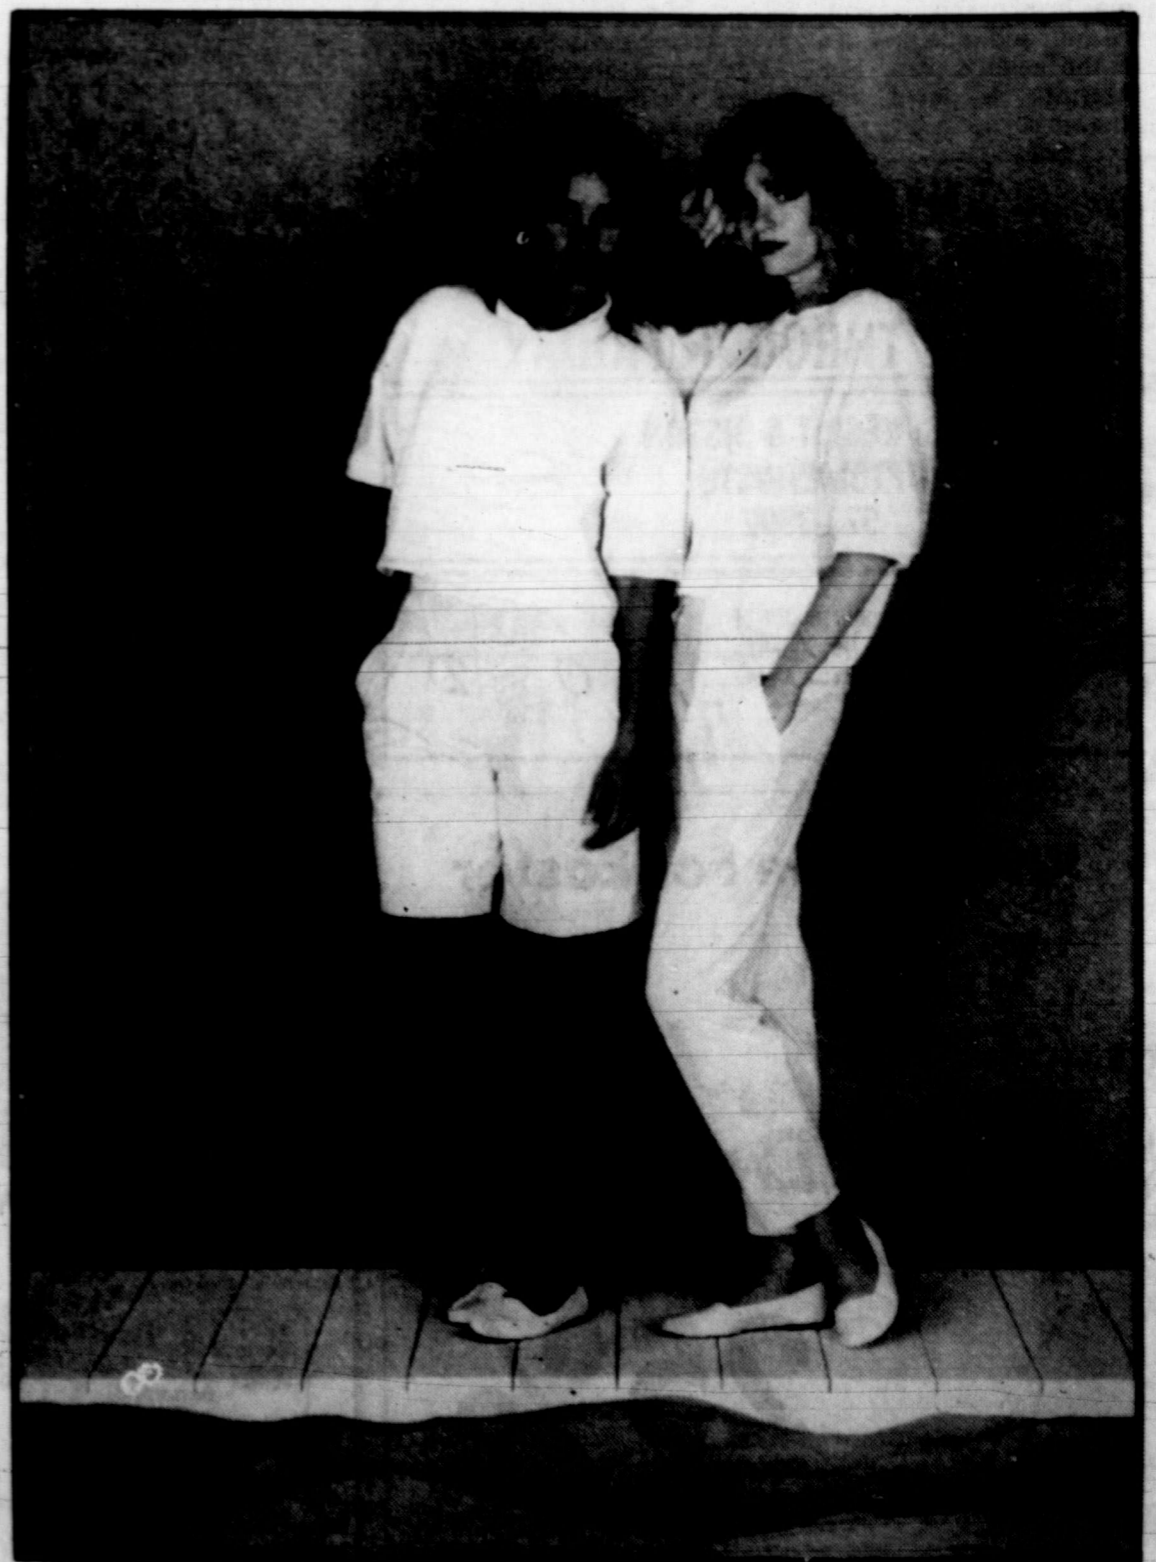

—The club may be centered around one project area.

—It may be a school club in areas with sparse population and where travel is a problem.

Usually, 4-H members hold club meetings in their homes, community centers or schools.

sessions, directors' conferences and executive seminars, said Fred Brown, president of K.I.D.S.

"The organization was formed by top manufacturers and retailers of children's apparel and related industries," he said, "to provide new merchandise for needy youths, and to encourage other industries to bond together to help combat the suffering of those in need in the United States and abroad."

SCS Notes

TAX DEDUCTIONS
The Tax Reform Act made some changes in how farmers and ranchers deduct expenses for installing conservation measures.

Producers who want to claim a deduction for the cost of a conservation practice on their 1987 income tax returns need to make certain that the practice is listed in the county plan or that they have a site specific plan.

They will also need to complete Internal Revenue Service form 8645, "Soil and Water Conservation Plan Certification" to file with their return.

Terry Hefner, District Conservationist for the USDA Soil Conservation Service at Snyder, said management practices such as fencing, brush management, range seeding, and pipelines are listed in the county plan. For such practices, a dated site specific plan is not necessary.

"However, practices that require technical design and layout need to be in a site specific plan," Hefner said. "These include terraces, waterways, and grade stabilization dams."

Hefner said she has copies of the county plan as well as a few of the Form 8645. Producers who use the form certify that soil and water conservation expenses paid or incurred after Dec. 31, 1986 were made according to a plan approved by SCS.

"If anyone needs a site specific plan, we will be glad to try to schedule a date to work out one," Hefner said. "However, we will not be permitted to back-date a plan just to help someone claim a deduction."

The deductible amount is limited to 25 percent of the gross income from the agricultural activity during the tax year.

For more information, producers should talk to their tax consultant.

DOUBLY DELICIOUS — Here's a gem of a recipe that chocolate lovers will treasure. Chocolate Gem Pie has a chocolate crust with a filling made with chocolate and whipped cream. (AP Photo)

Chocolate crust for chocolate gem pie

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

A Florida reader, Sandra Husen, created a chocolate pastry crust for her favorite chocolate-silk filling. The result is one of the most luscious desserts I've ever tasted. Be sure to use only butter — not a margarine or spread — for this pie. Some margarines and spreads give the filling a sticky texture.

CHOCOLATE GEM PIE

1 cup all-purpose flour
2/3 cup ground pecans
1/4 cup packed brown sugar
3/4 tablespoons shortening
1 square (1 ounce) unsweetened chocolate
2 tablespoons water
1 teaspoon vanilla

FILLING

2 squares (2 ounces) unsweetened chocolate
1 cup sifted powdered sugar
3/4 cup butter, softened
1/2 to 1 teaspoon instant coffee crystals
1 teaspoon warm water
2 eggs
1 cup whipping cream
1 tablespoon powdered sugar

2 tablespoons chocolate-flavored syrup

For crust, stir together flour, pecans and brown sugar. In small heavy saucepan melt shortening and 1 square chocolate over low heat; stir constantly. Stir into flour mixture. Combine water and vanilla; sprinkle over chocolate mixture, tossing well. Form into a ball. Roll into a 12-inch circle between sheets of wax paper. Remove one sheet of wax paper. Invert pastry, wax paper side up, and fit into 9-inch pie plate; remove wax paper. Flute edge. Prick well. Bake in 350-degree oven 15 to 20 minutes or until surface appears dry. Cool.

For filling, melt 2 squares chocolate; cool. In large mixer bowl beat 1 cup powdered sugar and butter until combined. Add chocolate. Dissolve coffee in warm water; add to butter mixture. Add eggs, one at a time, beating on medium speed 30 seconds after each or until light and fluffy. Spread in crust. Cover; chill 2 hours or until firm. To serve, beat whipping cream, 1 tablespoon powdered sugar and syrup until stiff peaks form. Spread on pie. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

"Pass the Plate," the cookbook from Christ Episcopal Church in New Bern, N.C., had its beginning around the church dining table. After one of the church's very successful potluck dinners, church women shared a last cup of coffee and discussed their favorite dishes from the meal. From that first discussion came a decision, a committee, and eventually, the book.

More than 900 recipes were selected for the 518-page book. The committee made a list of dishes that were especially popular with church members and asked for those recipes. Others are favorites of good cooks and their families.

CHOCOLATE CHESS PIE

One 8- or 9-inch unbaked pastry shell
1/2 cup butter

1 square (1-ounce) unsweetened chocolate
1 cup sugar
2 beaten eggs
Dash salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
Whipped cream
1/2 cup chopped nuts

Pre-bake crust in 450-degree oven about 5 minutes. Remove crust and reduce heat to 350 degrees. Melt butter and chocolate in top of double boiler. In a bowl, stir together sugar, eggs, salt and vanilla; stir in chocolate mixture. Pour into pastry shell and bake 25 to 30 minutes. Cool. Top with whipped cream and nuts. Makes 8 servings.

(For information about obtaining the book write: "Pass the Plate," P.O. Box 836, New Bern, NC 28560.)

Realtor uses personal touch to sell homes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Sarah Simpson happened to be driving about when she caught a glimpse of the "For Sale by Owner" sign in front of an imposing brick house in "an absolutely perfect setting," as she describes it.

"I almost drove my Jaguar over the lawn," Ms. Simpson says, recounting her dash to the front door to persuade the owner to list the house with her agency, Sarah Simpson Inc.

"There are certain houses that I really want to represent," Ms. Simpson said in a recent interview. "There's some houses I feel I have to represent."

But not many. In a metropolitan area where the average sale price for a house is a bit more than $81,000, Ms. Simpson deals almost exclusively in houses that go for $200,000 or more. And not any old quarter-million-dollar house will do.

"I don't work in subdivisions," she says, "and I only list houses that I like."

And she does it all with a style that defies traditional methods of real-estate advertising. The house that one company might advertise as "4 BR, WBF, neutral colors," becomes "an architectural treasure with four sleeping rooms, a fireplace to warm the face after a day of riding, and sugar-white walls" in a Sarah Simpson ad.

"And if I sound like a snob, I am," she says proudly.

She has come by her snobbery quite naturally. The 47-year-old daughter of Lancaster, Ohio, bankers, Ms. Simpson has enjoyed a life of relative financial comfort, "except for supporting two ex-husbands." But her silver-spoon beginnings did not make her content to spend her days planning garden lunches.

Ms. Simpson entered the real estate business in 1965 and set up her own company six years later. "In 1971, when I opened the business, I decided to specialize in unusual houses, period," she said. "I thought there was an interest, a need for some sort of exclusive agent."

At the time, when perfectly good houses in central Ohio were selling for $50,000, she refused to list anything worth less than $100,000. She refused to list houses she didn't like, and occasionally it cost her.

"I've been now through three recessions," she said. "At one time, I closed my office." But business these days is good for Ms. Simpson and one assistant.

"This summer, I carried more than 20 (listings) at a time," she said. And the $200,000-$350,000 house — "my bread and butter," she explains — has proven to be a popular commodity in the current market.

She prides herself on her ability to offer competent appraisals, based more on legwork than instinct. She keeps a file of the per-square-foot prices of each house in the Columbus market that sells for more than $200,000, explaining, "I can't guess what something's going to sell for."

Her banking background has also served her well among the rich and sometimes famous, who benefit from her healthy skepticism. Ms. Simpson rarely holds open houses, believing they provide an open invitation to would-be burglars to familiarize themselves with the layout; and she won't even talk to potential buyers until she's talked to their bankers.

"I want to make sure that's a real person," she said. "I used to get letters from Lucasville penitentiary," Ohio's maximum-security prison.

Amid the Sunday real estate ads, it is her prose that sets Ms. Simpson apart.

She described an $800,000 home in Delaware County as "a family respite brimming with character ... an urbane, gifted blend between the 4 acres and the wooded structure ... softly yet powerfully contemporary ... it looks without to trees and lake and within to the stone fireplaces and joyful family spaces."

A half-million-dollar "adult hideaway" offers "a bold dash of architectural excellence ... the undulating lines were created of brick and softened by decking ... a natural paradise of trees, ravines and waterfalls ..."

Between the house ads, readers can take a side trip to visit with Ethel Power Biggs and her husband, W.E. Biggs, characters Ms. Simpson has created to introduce a bit of levity to the classifieds. The Biggesses, for example, have weathered the recent stock market tumult and "feel dreadfully superior divesting in July."

Ms. Simpson says the ads satisfy a creative urge. She will often spend an evening with friends tossing around ideas for next week's ads. She considers it time well spent.

"That's just happy time," she said. "My hobby is writing. What I'm writing for fun is poetry."

Device may help patients

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A San Antonio man has developed a tiny cylinder of metal mesh that is to be tested to determine if it could extend life by holding open previously clogged arteries that supply the heart with blood, officials at the University of Texas Health Science Center say.

The device, developed by Dr. Julio Palmaz, chief of special blood vessel procedures for the UT Health Science Center, has been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for human testing.

It is an expandable tube of stainless steel mesh and was first tested in a heart artery in the U.S. last month at the Arizona Heart Institute in Phoenix, where the stent was implanted in the right coronary artery of a 72-year-old Scottsdale man.

Twenty-two patients have had the stent placed in other major arteries in the pelvis and legs. In all but one patient, the stent kept previously blocked arteries open.

Giving blood is safe

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is it safe to sell blood? I've heard that the parts not needed — the red cells, I think — are returned to you. Is there any danger that the extraction methods could contaminate your own blood?

DEAR READER: Selling blood is safe but, to paraphrase the Golden Rule: It's better to give than to sell.

When blood is obtained from a paid or volunteer donor, it is tested and banked. In short, the blood is typed, tested for certain infections (such as AIDS) and stored. If it is found to be safe, it is released for transfusion. In some instances, the blood products are separated — for example, proteins, platelets and red blood cells — and administered for specific diseases. Ordinarily, when you donate blood, it is given to someone else, not part of it is returned to you.

Reactions to whole blood and to blood components are a serious health problem.

Some people react badly to blood donated by another person and, as you know, hepatitis and AIDS have been transmitted by transfusion. Therefore, the safest transfusion is called autologous transfusion: You donate your own blood well in advance of surgery and it is transfused back into you at the appropriate time. No one reacts badly to his or her own blood and this type of donation is gaining wide popularity because of its safety. However, it is more expensive than the traditional method, so not all hospitals offer the service.

The blood from paid donors shows a higher incidence of contamination with hepatitis and AIDS. For this reason, I advise all patients to avoid being transfused with paid-donor blood, if possible.

I also advise people to donate blood, rather than to sell it. If more healthy people regularly donated blood, there would be no need for hospitals to buy blood. Much of the risk of transfusion would then be eliminated. To give you more information I'm sending you my new Health Report, BLOOD. Other readers who want this report should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to ask for the report by name.

In summary, there is absolutely no risk in donating blood, either for others or for autologous transfusion.

Stress depends on the stresse

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

As a culture, we seem to be preoccupied with something called stress. It's a lot like bad breath: Other people have it, we hope we don't, but it may be inescapable. Medical scientists have trouble defining stress. They can identify certain clear-cut forms of it, such as destitution, starvation, wife abuse and loss of a loved one. But other more subtle forms do not lend themselves to scientific scrutiny. For example, many folks appear to thrive on marital discord, work pressures, decision-making and deadlines. Some investigators shrug their shoulders and conclude that stress is more a state of mind than a physical condition. Nonetheless, there's genuine interest today in whether stress (by any definition) affects health — and if it does, how?

The most well-documented relation between the brain and body function is probably the neuroendocrine pathway, a collection of pituitary hormones and neuropeptide chemicals that are manufactured by the central nervous system and produce effects on cells elsewhere in the body. In stressful circumstances, parts of the brain secrete corticotropin-releasing factor, which, in turn, stimulates the pituitary gland to release adrenocorticotropic hormone (ACTH) that causes the adrenal glands to squirt glyco-corticoids (cortisone-like compounds) into the bloodstream. Cortisone reduces the body's immunologic response by suppressing the function of the disease-fighting blood cells called lymphocytes.

However, the pituitary/adrenal relation isn't sufficient to explain the effects of stress on the complex stew of chemicals that makes up our immune systems. In addition to lymphocytes, we have a veritable vegetable soup of macrophage killer cells, lymphokines, interleukines, cytokines and immune transmitters. As yet, scientists don't have a handle on the precise physiological mechanisms of modulated immunity. However, there are clues.

For instance, studies of medical and dental students under examination-stress showed a decline in lymphocyte efficiency, cell division and the production of gamma globulin, a protein that protects against disease. U.S. researchers have confirmed the results of an Australian study that showed immunological impairment in men whose wives had recently died of cancer. Further, scientists in New York discovered that depressed patients showed more stress-induced immune changes than did age-matched control patients without depression.

Researchers have also documented that stress can affect the levels of growth hormone and thyroid hormone; some stressed patients show alterations in the brain's production of opioid peptides, natural narcotics. Occasionally, people are even able to change their immune reactions by meditation and biofeedback.

Although some doctors poo-poo the relation between stress and disease, an increasing number of skeptics are beginning to realize that complicated biochemical reactions — involving the bone marrow, the thy-mus gland and the blood cells — may be triggered by extreme emotional discomfort.

Stress is not new to the human race; it comes with the territory. The threat of losing one's job in a factory is no more intense than the ancient threat of arbitrarily losing a patch of ground to the lord of the manor. People have lived with stress since The Fall. However, we are now paying more attention to it than ever before.

Scientists are eager to discover why seemingly identical situations cause different reactions in similar people. Truly, what is stress to one man or woman may be simply invigorating to another. Perhaps this lack of consistency is what makes the whole subject seem so "soft," so unscientific.

Were I to have written this column 10 years ago and based it on information available then, I'd have labeled the topic "folklore." Today, the real question is less likely to be "Is there a relation between stress and disease?" than "How does stress cause disease?"

We're moving ahead onto new ground, traveling the overgrown and unexplored pathways of feedback regulation and neuroendocrinology. Clearly, future studies will blaze trails into the wilderness of mind over matter: how we can think our way to health and the physiologic basis of prayer, meditation and a positive attitude. Our control over ourselves and our destinies, through our immune systems, may, in fact, lie in our minds — as the greatest world thinkers have repeatedly emphasized.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Movie overlooks school lunch program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department thinks its 40-year-old National School Lunch Program should have had at least a walk-on role in a forthcoming NBC television movie about hunger among children.

As it is, the network's hour-long movie, "A Place at the Table," will be broadcast the night of March 20 without mention of the school lunch program. Department officials are giving the movie less than rave reviews.

Curt Block, NBC vice president for media relations, said the purpose of the film's producers "was to take a broader focus of the problem of hunger" among children and to "get across to the public how pervasive the problem is."

Block said the intent was also to show that "there are a number of ways we can get food to children."

Assistant Secretary John W. Bode, who oversees school lunch and food stamp programs, said in a statement that "despite the laudable public service aspects of the movie, it contains serious inaccuracies" about hunger.

"In the movie, children are encouraged to donate their brown bag lunches to classmates who are so hungry they attend a soup kitchen after school," Bode said.

"The film does not acknowledge the existence of the National School Lunch Program, which provides free school lunches to children of low-income families."

Further, he said, preschool breakfasts are also provided in schools which participate in the USDA program.

"School lunch is only one of a number of federal food assistance programs, including food stamps, which provide more than $20 billion worth of help a year to needy Americans," Bode said. "That figure translates into $56 million a day in food help."

Further, he said, the school lunch program is one of the largest food service providers in the country, serving more than 24 million children daily, nearly half of whom receive lunches free of charge. Since 1980, the federal budget for school lunches has increased 21 percent to the current annual level of $3.4 billion, Bode said. According to USDA budget officials, about $3 billion in cash subsidies will go to schools.
