

1-act wins state again

Snyder High School was officially announced Friday in Austin as the "winningest school" in the history of state 111 one-act play competition as the local drama department earned its 11th first place win for its entry "The Corn is Green."

It marked the department's 20th state appearance, 16 of these under the directorship of Jerry P. Worsham, a string which dates back to 1965.

Also Friday, lead actress Kirsten Miller, in the role of Miss Moffat, was chosen for the Class

AAAA Samuel P. French award, presented to the outstanding performer, male or female, of the eight plays presented in Class AAAA.

In every play competition entered this year, to include zone, district and regional, she won "best actress" honors for her performance.

Other individual honors Friday went to Brandon Neeley, in the role of Brian Moffat's assistant, who was chosen for the all-star cast.

Receiving an honorable mention for all-star cast was Ashley Miller, in her role as the teacher's assistant, Miss Romberry.

The second and third place plays named Friday were "The Foreigner," by Gregory Portland ISD; and "And They Dance Real Slow in Jackson," by Granbury ISD.

The tradition of a Snyder High School one-act play advancing to state-level competition dates to the first appearance in 1949. SHS went again in 1965.

Worsham took over the drama department in 1967, and qualified his first play for the state meet in See ONE-ACT, page 14A

Plaintiffs object to some fees

Individuals bringing five lawsuits challenging incentive offers made by the city, county and industrial foundation to secure a Texas Department of Corrections prison in Scurry County have officially protested the amount of "court costs" said owed by them as part of their motion for "non-suit" to end the TDC litigation.

At issue is some $5,400, according to court records filed in 132nd District Court.

As part of stipulations in the granting of a non-suit, plaintiffs are required to pay court costs incurred both by themselves and defendants.

Documents have been filed by attorneys representing local defendants indicated expenses were incurred by their clients totaling some $10,665. Legal fees are not included as court costs and the major expense item now in question relates to the cost of depositions written transcripts of witness testimony taken during the "discovery" portion of the lawsuit.

In a letter filed by plaintiff's attorney Lawson Stiff, it is stated that his clients believe they are liable only for "original deposition costs."

The inference is this means only the expense for the first copy of depositions transcribed from the testimony of three individuals—Jonisue Stiff, J. Kirk Brown and Jeanne Bullard.

Defendant attorneys note they asked for and received copies of these depositions for each of their clients—a total of up to five copies per witness.

As a representative of all defendants in the case, attorney for the city Ernie Armstrong has attached a list of the $10,665 in court costs alleged by them with an order for non-suit sent to District Judge Joe Evins of Edinburg, who was appointed to hear the TDC lawsuits.

In his letter to the court, attorney Stiff contends that the judge does not need to sign an order for non-suit under the law. As part of his letter, plaintiffs provided also a check for the $5,289 in court costs they said they believe they legally owe.

As of Friday, Evins had taken no action regarding either side's requests to end the case.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Have a happy Mother's Day."

A mother, obviously proud of her lot in life, brought in the following which is appropriate for this special day when Americans honor the world's greatest occupation, motherhood.

Best low paying job: motherhood

Best thing about summer: The children are home from school.

Best thing about children being home from school: They go back in September.

Best way to get to work in the yard: Grab a rake, look cheerful and announce that you are going outdoors to be alone and commune with the weeds.

Next best way: Hide quarters under some of the weeds or say you hid quarters under some of the weeds.

Best way to get a bunch of underfoot kids out of the house: Turn off the TV and tell them to read

Best way to get kids out of the summer doldrums: Take them shopping for school supplies.

Best thing to give your children: Your time.

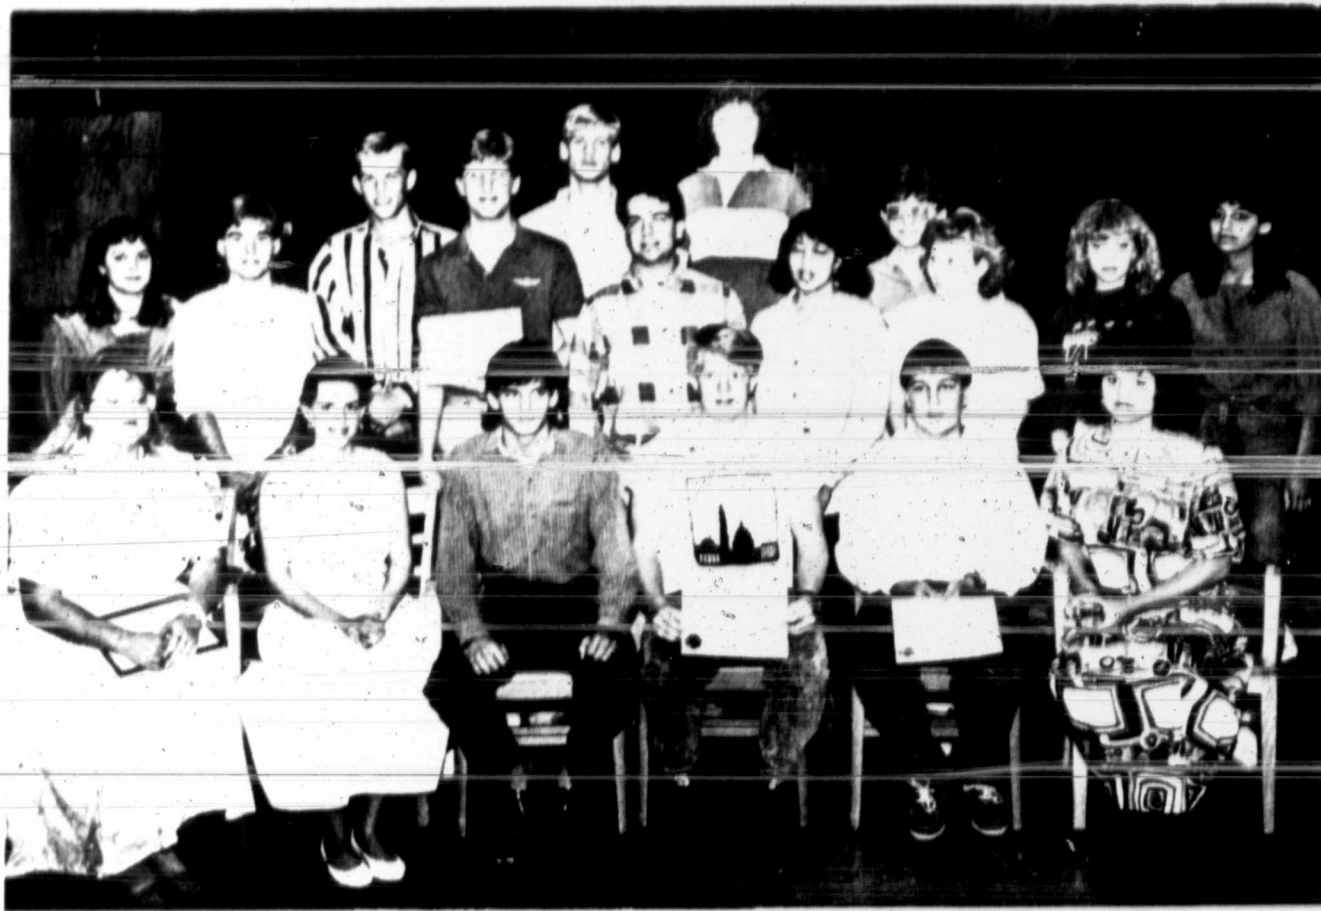

Best thing to do for your marriage: Spend time with your husband, away from the children.

Best time of your life: Now.

Mothers find the silver lining in even dark clouds. One woman was slightly upset about the grades of her fourth grade son. She felt a lot better after reading an essay written concerning his third grade wishes.

"First I wish that there would not be any more wars so no one will get hurt. Second, that everyone believed in God and there will not be any more fights. Third, I wish there was no more guns so no one will get shot."

Sound like mom had done something right, again.

President irritated at former aide Donald Regan's book

WASHINGTON (AP)—Donald T. Regan, often at odds with first lady Nancy Reagan when he was White House chief of staff, now apparently has alienated President Reagan with his forthcoming book.

The book, "For the Record: From Wall Street to Washington," makes assertions about Mrs. Reagan's interest in astrology that the president appears to view as a personal attack on his wife.

During a photo session at the start of a Cabinet meeting Friday, reporters asked Regan whether he felt betrayed or angered by the book.

"Well, I will say this, that I would have preferred it if he'd decided to attack me, and apparently from what we hear he's chosen to attack my wife, and I don't look kindly upon that at all," the president replied.

Tom Dawson, a Regan spokesman, said Regan "has had and will have no comments regarding his book until it is published." He said the book is expected to be in stores beginning Monday.

But Strobe Talbott, Washington bureau chief of Time magazine, which will publish excerpts of the book, said Friday that Regan's book "paints an absolutely devastating picture of the Reagan administration."

"It characterizes the kind of inside scene there to be a little bit like the court of the Medici ... with a little bit of Lady Macbeth and maybe the Keystone Cops."

Talbott, in comments on the syndicated discussion show "Inside Washington" scheduled for broadcast Saturday, said the book portrays an unidentified San Francisco astrologer friend of Mrs. Reagan as "a kind of absentee presence almost at the Cabinet table or at least right outside the Oval Office, working first through Mrs. Reagan."

An excerpt from Talbott's appearance on the show was aired Friday by WUSA-TV in Washington.

The president in the past has reacted sharply to criticism of his wife or suggestions that she interferes or has too great a role in administration decision-making.

Regan, the president's former top staff aide and treasury secretary, had an uneasy relationship with Mrs. Reagan, whose opposition is widely believed to have been behind his ouster as chief of staff early last year.

The president in the past has praised Regan's contribution to his administration, and the former Wall Street executive was one of the most enthusiastic and loyal defenders of Reagan policies.

During the aftermath of the Iran-Contra scandal, in which money from arms sales to Iran was diverted to the Nicaragua Contra rebels, Regan and the first lady had telephone arguments over how to handle the matter, reportedly ending with her hanging up on him.

In his book, Regan is said to reveal that Mrs. Reagan used astrology to determine the timing of the president's speeches and travel.

Animal testing is essential

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What do you think of using animals for experimentation? Animals are totally different from humans in every respect, and an artificially induced disease in a healthy animal can in no way be the same as the disease in humans.

DEAR READER: In my opinion, the problems of using experimental animals arise from the experimental method itself, not from the fact that animals are used. I believe that medical procedures and treatments should be tried first on animals, since some animals' systems are quite similar to those of humans.

However, these experiments must be carried out in a manner that will yield the least pain and suffering for the animals. Much of the public outcry against animal experimentation has been directed against unethical scientists who have treated their animals in brutal and insensitive ways. For example, there is simply no rational justification for the practice of adding irritating cosmetics to the eyes of living, unanesthetized rabbits or of treating live animals in other inhumane ways.

There are new enforceable restrictions and guidelines to prevent researchers from mistreating animals. Of course, a few scientists ignore or bypass these rules but, for the most part, investigators now treat their animals with more respect.

Certain people still abhor animal experimentation. While I understand and sympathize with their views, such anti-experimentalists often fail to realize that almost every valid medical treatment was perfected in animals before being tried in humans. We enjoy the benefits of today's wonder drugs because of yesterday's animal experimentation. Truly, many of us owe our lives to these animals. Until synthetic experimental systems — for example, computer models — are more widely developed, scientists will continue to use animals. We need to ensure that these animals are not mistreated; each one of us has an obligation in this regard.

I believe that an across-the-board prohibition of animal experimentation would lead to a failure of scientific advances. I say this because some animal tissues usually respond in ways identical to human tissue; animals are not really so different from humans. Perhaps this is why we may feel a kinship to animals — and why animal experimentation is such an emotionally charged, ethical issue.

DEAR DR. GOTT: In 1983 I had a hysterectomy. I take Premarin and Provera. I've developed unsightly dark and blotchy discolorations on my neck. Have these settled in for good?

DEAR READER: I don't know. Ask your gynecologist or request a referral to a dermatologist. Some women develop a benign skin discoloration called chloasma from hormone pills. These patches usually fade once the hormone therapy has been stopped.

However, before choosing this option, check with your doctor.

I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report on MENOPAUSE, which may give you helpful information. Other readers who want a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Menopause.

The problem with doctoring

Dr. Ethan Mergatroyd had, of late, been having headaches. Tension headaches, he presumed, because he was bothered by much in his narrow world. He was especially bothered by his conviction that doctors were misperceived by the public as being callow and materialistic. He knew that he and his colleagues were being unfairly stereotyped as overprivileged and nonchalant practitioners.

Down deep in his marrow, he believed that the problems facing the medical profession were beyond his — and other doctors' — control: people's unrealistic expectations about quality medical care, an increasingly aging population demanding more of that care and a general infatuation with prepaid health plans and health-maintenance organizations. In Dr. Mergatroyd's view, these issues should be decided by... by someone... by some agency... perhaps even by the public itself.

It just wasn't fair that he was prevented from keeping the luminous promises he had made to himself when, as a resident receiving a paltry salary, he had pledged to find the Good Life — one in which he could finally give himself over to well-earned luxury while basking in the adoration of grateful patients who had been snatched from the proverbial jaws of death by his skills.

He angrily lit his 10th late-night cigarette and absent-mindedly poked at the keys of his new personal computer. He liked computers. They were so much more forgiving than patients. The little symbols that flashed on his display terminal were eternally more understandable than people. What's more, they could be manipulated at will, made to come and go, relegated to a byte-sized memory bank or rearranged in ever so pretty patterns. They did what you wanted them to do. This is the way people are supposed to act: You punch in the proper code, the screen goes blank for a moment, then everybody gets printed out according to the doctor's orders. This one gets well, this one has complications, this one you ignore, this one gets retubulated. It's like magic, but better. All the ideal system needs is the right doctor/programmer to press the correct buttons.

The blue light of the display screen bathed Mergatroyd's upstairs room with an eerie luminescence that was visible to passersby on the street. It lent an exciting science-fiction air to his mundane existence. Electronic circuitry and microchips took up all his free time: medicine and computers, computers and medicine. That was it.

His wife had long since retired to the remodeled wing of the new house. Well, at least that had gone as predicted, he mused. The hefty mortgage had been no problem; he had used part of it to purchase the Porsche, a little dalliance to which he was entitled. What the bank didn't know wouldn't hurt them: After all, he was an M.D.; this sort of self-indulgence made his pesky on-call hours more bearable.

He reassured himself that with only 19 cents of every health dollar going to physicians' fees, healers are surely not contributing to escalating medical costs. And Mergatroyd himself certainly wasn't responsible for any escalation; his computer reliably told him that the problem was due to insatiable patients and groveling malpractice attorneys. Nonetheless, he remembered, he'd have to boost his fees a teensy bit, what with his children's private-school tuition due in a few weeks and the car insurance, on top of the mortgage payments, that was awesome.

Yes, Mergatroyd had a lot to be bothered about lately. Things hadn't been going as smoothly as he had hoped. He sometimes fancied himself trapped in the wrong dream. He was tired of dealing with unappreciative patients and the dismal ritual of terminal illness. In his office, he felt as welcome as a squirrel on a bird feeder. His anxious laid-back narcissism was rapidly giving way to a fascination with self-aggrandizement.

"The problem with doctoring is not the doctors!" he proudly typed on the computer keyboard. The message flickered on the screen, but gave little solace as he wearily pushed himself out of his chair.

He turned off the computer and felt a moment of uncertainty. "Suppose we are part of the problem?" he asked the vacant room. "Naaah," he answered himself, "this confusing business is not my concern."

Dr. Mergatroyd, doctor of doctors, vowed to read a book by Christmas, or, at least, to do some serious thinking — if he could only bring himself to find the time.

Fatalities study accused of misleading speed limit facts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley misled the public by asserting a study showed the new 65 mph speed limit had no discernible effect on the traffic death rate, a former Carter administration official said.

"I think that Burnley is just trying to make a political case for doing what he wants to do, and that the statistics in fact contradict his position, and he's trying to maneuver the statistics," said Joan Claybrook, who headed the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration under President Carter.

Ms. Claybrook now is president of Public Citizen, a policy group often critical of the Reagan administration.

"It is totally absurd but expected from Joan Claybrook," said Transportation Department spokesman Ron DeFore. "Joan has consistently been a critic of NHTSA under this administration, and this study, this interim report, does not support her point of view."

The department, in a report presented to Congress on Friday, said raw data showed only a 1 percentage point difference in traffic fatality increases on rural interstate highways having the higher speed limit and those retaining the 55 mph national speed limit adopted in 1974.

"We're just not finding any distinction," Burnley said after a speech this week to the Society of Automotive Engineers.

The study, however, analyzed the traffic data in several ways, and some of the results suggest the higher speed limit results in a higher fatality rate, said the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, an insurance industry organization.

Institute President Brian O'Neill said the most reliable finding in the report used a mathematical model to examine traffic fatality data since 1975.

That method concluded that fatalities on rural interstate highways increased by 20 percent in the first four or five full months following adoption of the higher speed limit compared with the fatalities that would otherwise have been expected.

Most of the states raised their speed limits on rural highways in April and May of last year.

"I think there is no question that these numbers are confirming, unfortunately, what all the prior evidence suggested was going to happen, that the higher speed limits would translate into higher speeds," O'Neill said.

Using other methods, the study found:

—During the first nine months of 1987, traffic fatalities on highways with the 65 mph limit rose 18 percent from a year earlier in 37 states that had adopted the higher speed, compared with a 17 percent increase in 11 states that had not.

—From Jan. 1, 1987, to the time of the speed limit change, fatalities had increased 10 percent from the corresponding period a year earlier.

Lady Justice gets a facelift but keeps her eyes open

VIRGINIA CITY, Nev. (AP) — She's a grande dame who came from New York to witness the last days of the historic Comstock Lode gold rush that helped build the West.

The crowned Lady Justice arrived in 1877, barefoot, robed, scales in hand and serene eyes unobscured by the traditional blindfold, to oversee a new $117,000 courthouse where miners came to answer charges of trespassing, claim jumping, thieving and murder.

Now, for the first time in 111 years, the 7-foot symbol of justice has left her second-floor perch overlooking Virginia City, the historic mining town that attracts thousands of tourists each year.

She's getting a face and body lift to restore the golden-bronze color and luster lost after her Nevada arrival, which coincided with the last rich and glorious days of the Comstock Lode.

"We're not going to put a blindfold on her, though; That's the best thing about her," said sculptor Greg Melton, who is doing the restoration. "I think I'm even starting to fall in love with her. I'll have a hard time giving her back to Virginia City."

But Lady Justice wasn't always the object of affection, says Ron James, a state historian.

"Underneath she was made of zinc, which is just about the ugliest of metals," James said recently. "Then she got to looking really bad in the 1940s."

"They painted her with silver skin and a rust-colored robe. Soon it was flaking off and she looked like a leper. One of her scales even fell off. It was a shame because she really is beautiful."

The statue is scheduled to be rededicated on May 15, taking her place once again above the town that Mark Twain helped make famous with his blend of fact and fiction as a reporter for the Territorial Enterprise in the early 1860s.

Melton, whose bronze statue of Comstock mining and engineering pioneer Adolph Sutro stands beside the state capitol in Carson City, will paint the Lady Justice an almost golden bronze color just as she was originally.

"She had a lot of cracks and she'd been beat up because of weather conditions," the 41-year-old sculptor said. "She's in pretty bad shape, but not bad enough that I can't fix her.

"I give the restoration a 100-year guarantee. If after 100 years it collapses I'll come back and fix it. I guarantee all my work."

The Virginia City Justice is one of only about 20 statues in the U.S. without a blindfold, according to James, who is deputy state historic preservation officer.

"She was ordered from a catalog for $203 and she could be picked with or without the blindfold; It was just a matter of taste," James said.

Shultz likely to make third Mideast peace trip in June WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz is plotting a third shuttle trip to the Middle East in June in a fresh attempt to promote Arab-Israeli peace talks.

A U.S. official said Friday a final decision is likely next week. Shultz would make stops in Israel, Egypt, Jordan and Syria, seeking approval for a Mideast conference that would sponsor two stages of negotiations.

The first would aim for three years of self-rule, but not statehood, for Palestinian Arabs in the Israeli-occupied territories. The second would grapple with an overall settlement of the Arab-Israeli dispute.

Shultz would fly to the Middle East at the windup of the Moscow summit meeting June 3 and then attend a meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's foreign ministers in Madrid June 8-10, said the U.S. official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Two trips by Shultz to the Middle East this year failed to produce peace talks. But he refuses to give up. "Who's afraid to struggle against odds?" he said at the end of the last venture in April. "What am I saving myself for, anyway?"

He also suggested that Arabs and Israelis, despite their public lack of enthusiasm for negotiations, had privately urged him to keep trying.

Shultz told a Senate appropriations subcommittee last week that "under the right circumstances" King Hussein of Jordan would be agreeable to the U.S. proposal for a peace conference.

However, Shultz also testified that Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir had made the conference the "centerpiece" of his objections to Shultz's plan.

Shultz also was unsuccessful last month in Moscow in trying to persuade the Soviet Union to accept a limited role in the negotiations.

U.S. defines standards for Afghan guerrilla fighters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has told the Afghan guerrillas they must control territory and create an "effective" administrative structure if they want to establish an internationally recognized provisional government.

In the first public airing of its views on a provisional regime to rival the Soviet-backed government in Kabul, the State Department said Friday the Afghan resistance must meet certain criteria before receiving U.S. recognition as a government.

The possibility of such a provisional government has been heightened since a Soviet agreement last month to withdraw its estimated 115,000 troops from Afghanistan within nine months. The agreement envisions the return of millions of Afghan refugees and the establishment of an independent government.

A provisional regime presumably would give the Afghan resistance forces a head start in their drive to replace the weakened Marxist government in Kabul once the Soviet forces leave the country.

U.S. officials have predicted the Kabul government headed by Afghan leader Najibullah will collapse once the Soviets withdraw.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said the first "essential step" is for the Soviets to pull their forces out, which will "create an environment more conducive to a genuine process of self-determination and establish a more broadly based government."

Zalmay Khalilzad, an adviser to Undersecretary of State Michael Armacost, met with resistance leaders recently and reportedly outlined the criteria under which a provisional government would be acceptable to the United States.

"The resistance is well aware of our views," Redman said. "There are a number of important criteria for any government to have international acceptability."

The test is whether a government "controls territory, has an effective government structure, possesses the capacity to exercise the valid international obligations and enjoys broad support," he said.

Redman cautioned that it would be "premature" to disclose "when or under exactly what conditions we would be prepared to establish relations with any government in Afghanistan." He would not, for example, define how much territory a government must control or how strongly its grip must be.

The United States is "not involved in any efforts to form a provisional government with the resistance or anyone else."

The spokesman belittled the significance of reports by Indian officials that Najibullah expressed an interest during talks in New Delhi in sharing power with the guerrilla groups.

"It's clear that PDPA, Najibullah's party, lacks popular support among the Afghan people," Redman said. "He's made these professions of interest in power-sharing before and his formulations have always lacked credibility and still do. They've never addressed the issue of genuine power-sharing but rather amount to PDPA domination of the government."

Pre-kindergarten summer school for bi-lingual students to begin

An eight week summer school will be held for Snyder ISD pre-kindergarten students who have been identified by a limited English proficiency language test given during the kindergarten round-up.

Students attending kindergarten in the fall, who are bilingual or demonstrate limited English proficiency are eligible to attend these classes. Also, students who have not previously attended public school and will be entering the first grade may attend, if eligible.

The pre-kindergarten summer school will begin June 27 and end Aug. 19. The program will be held at Central Elementary from 8:30 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. Monday through Friday.

L. D. Monroe, principal at Central, will administer the district-wide summer school. Parents of students eligible to attend the school will receive a letter from the district concerning enrollment. It is important that parents sign the letter indicating whether or not the child will attend and return the letter to Monroe.

Students in pre-kindergarten summer school will be involved in a variety of instructional experiences that will increase their language and communication skills. Three certified classroom teachers will be working with the group and will involve the students in both classroom and field trip activities that will provide language enrichment experiences.

Parents of students who have not registered their child for kindergarten during the kindergarten round-up and feel their child would be eligible for summer school should call Mrs. Bobbie Box, student development coordinator for Snyder Schools, at 573-9364 and arrange an appointment for the child to be tested.

Dallas mayor enters second year at helm

DALLAS (AP) — Mayor Annette Strauss, the first woman to hold that job in Dallas, has earned the respect of many as she enters a second term despite a year of turmoil, political observers say.

Hostilities between the Dallas Police Department and the city's blacks and Hispanics were running high because of a string of controversial police shootings when Mrs. Strauss took office on May 4, 1987.

Her performance in the aftermath of the Jan. 23 killing of Dallas police officer John Chase, who was white, by a black transient with a history of mental illness earned her the respect of skeptical minorities as well as some business leaders who had predicted she would buckle under pressure.

"The vast majority of people believe that she is doing all she can for the city of Dallas, and that she has a stake in it," Lawrence Redinger, a University of Texas at Dallas sociologist, said. "It is her strongest suit."

Mrs. Strauss chastised Police Chief Billy Prince when he said some City Council members shared blame in the killing for their criticism of police.

Council members and Prince publicly reconciled later, but Prince announced his resignation on April 12.

City Manager Richard Knight, Mrs. Strauss, and an attorney for billionaire H. Ross Perot have met privately to discuss police concerns.

With backing from Perot, the Dallas Police Association was threatening a referendum to smash the police review board that Strauss and five of her colleagues had reconstituted with broadened powers.

But Mrs. Strauss has publicly maintained that she will not compromise on the review board.

"I was leery about her, but she stuck her neck way out in a conservative town," said the Rev. Marion Barnett of Oak Cliff. "She'll smile and grin and greet — maybe even give you a kiss — but I'll tell you, she is strong. The woman can play hardball," he told the Dallas Times Herald.

Mrs. Strauss is a Jewish woman in a city that has been run by a line of Protestant white men. In her rise through a series of city boards and committees in the 1970s and two terms on the City Council from 1983 to 1987, she broke with tradition by reaching out of white, affluent North Dallas for support.

Mrs. Strauss spearheaded fund-raising drives for housing the poor and homeless and reached across the city for support to minorities, neighborhood groups, women, gays and an unmatched personal network of contacts.

"There was nothing polarizing about Annette Strauss at a time when there was so much polarization," political consultant Rob Allyn said. "She was known for bringing people together and acting as a salve for wounds rather than inflaming them."

Still, despite her victories, some of Mrs. Strauss' colleagues and even some of her supporters say the mayor spreads herself too thin, with a rigorous public-relations schedule that includes as many as 30 personal appearances a week.

And Mrs. Strauss recently failed to deliver a City Council endorsement of DART, which she has made a personal priority. The endorsement vote was delayed two weeks after a meeting that dissolved in a series of arguments.

To Mrs. Strauss' critics, the meeting signified the mayor's inability to run an orderly meeting and deliver the votes in a pinch.

But others said the meeting showed that Dallas has changed.

"There has been a lot of pressure on Annette to bang the gavel and to get people to shut up, but she hasn't been willing to do that," said Rebecca Bergstresser, a district director of the Texas League of Women Voters. "Her style is more about bringing people into a room and talking things out — and that is something we've never had before."

Gosling is held hostage

AUSTIN (AP) — A group of street people has threatened to kill a gosling named Homer if city officials don't meet a list of demands to improve the condition of the homeless.

They say they are protesting because more money and attention is paid to feeding swans at a city park than for helping Austin's homeless.

"We just want the people of this city to realize that we're human beings and should be treated that way," Roger Swanner, 43, said Friday. "We walk down the street and we're treated like dirt. Sure, I'm a bum. But I'm a human being, too."

The keepers of the baby goose say their list of demands must be met by May 30 to save the bird's life.

The group says people close their eyes to the plight of the homeless, but seem to be in awe over swans costing $300 each that swim on Austin's Town Lake.

Swanner and the group issued a press release and called a press conference Friday at Lou Neff Point, close to where many people feed ducks in Barton Creek.

They also painted a "H" on the bill of a duck feeding near the mouth of Barton Creek. The duck was turned loose to be a reminder to people about the plight of the homeless.

The group says members frequently resort to digging through trash bins and killing ducks and other animals they can catch near Town Lake for food.

Among the demands are a "Street People's Advisory Council" to interact with the Salvation Army and City Council; assistance from the Austin Area Labor Council in organizing a homeless union; and the immediate release of $300,000 in funds by the Housing and Community Services Department.

The group also demands a $1 million city budget allocation for acquisition of affordable rental units for the homeless.

Swanner, who said he has been living on Austin streets for four years, said if the demands are not met, the baby goose will be slain on the steps of the Capitol.

Officer shot with own gun

DALLAS (AP) — A police officer was shot in the face with his own gun during a struggle outside a pawn shop and a prison parolee was arrested in connection with the case, authorities said.

Steven L'Huilier, 28, a six-year Dallas police veteran and 1983 Rookie of the Year, was in fair condition in the intensive care unit of Methodist Medical Center, a spokeswoman said Friday night.

A 20-year-old state prison parolee was arrested near the shop and was being questioned in the shooting.

Acting Police Chief Louis Caudell said he was saddened and shocked by the shooting, the 11th this year involving a Dallas police officer.

"The attempted murder of Officer L'Huilier is an affront to our officers; it is an affront to society," said Caudell.

Town may link Gulf, Pacific Ocean

PRESIDIO, Texas (AP) — A proposed trans-Mexico shipping route through this border city would reduce dependence on the Panama Canal in the wake of unrest in that strife-torn Central American country, financial experts said.

Officials from both sides of the Texas-Mexico border developed the joint plan for a railroad "land bridge" that would extend from the port of Topolobampo on the Gulf of California to a new cargo port at Presidio.

Packed goods from the Far East and elsewhere would be shipped from Presidio by truck and rail to U.S. destinations and to American ports on the Gulf of Mexico, including Corpus Christi.

Government and business officials told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times the plan was prompted by political unrest in Panama, where a U.S.-engineered cash freeze was aimed at ousting Gen. Manuel Noriega from control of defense forces.

The plan would also aid the border economy, hard-hit by Mexican peso devaluation, officials said Thursday.

Senate hopeful's menu includes SDI turnover

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Beau Boulter is dishing up "egg on his face," and "bringing home the bacon" at a power breakfast club that pokes fun at Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's high-dollar Chairman's Council that was disbanded after one meeting.

Bentsen said he had made a "doozy" of a mistake with his $10,000-a-person breakfast club last year and returned the money he had collected from lobbyists who signed up for his monthly strategy sessions.

low-grade beef, and for dessert, partisan pie, half-baked ballots and Democrat's delight.

Bentsen spokesman Jack DeVore found the breakfasts unpalatable.

"Congressman Boulter is going to wind up serving eggs on his face to Texans although he himself will be eating crow with perhaps a little humble pie thrown in," he said.

"His facts are wrong from top to bottom," DeVore said of items on the menu, including those under "a real eye-opener" that call Bentsen an ineffective lawmaker and legislative lightweight.

Under "zero calories," the menu says Bentsen has not sponsored a single bill that has been signed into law in the past two years, and has passed only two in seven years.

DeVore called Boulter's claims "dishonest," "cockamamie," "absolutely false," "preposterous" and "meaningless, utterly meaningless."

He said Bentsen has steered numerous bills through Congress, including an amendment last year that added $2.1 billion in highway funds for Texas and another that restored almost $1.3 million in federal aid to 29 school districts in Texas.

"These are utterly ridiculous claims that Congressman Boulter is making," DeVore said.

"To say that Bentsen has not been effective in enacting legislation beneficial to Texas in the last two years, or even the last six months, it is goofy, it is truly goofy," DeVore said.

On the menu under SDI turnovers, referring to Bentsen votes for and against the Strategic Defense Initiative in 1985 and 1986, DeVore said the senator has always been a consistent backer of SDI but may not have voted every time in favor of the president's proposed spending levels.

"He (Boulter) is down there (in Texas) playing politics with SDI instead of being up here voting on it, instead of doing the job he was elected to do," DeVore said, adding that the House had eight votes this week on defense issues, including two on SDI.

The cost to join Boulter's club is $10, a thousand times less than what Bentsen had asked lobbyists to pay to join his Chairman's Council.

Bentsen, who had recently become the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, sent letters in January 1987 to 200 lobbyists offering to meet with them once a month for strategy sessions if they contributed $10,000 to his re-election campaign, the maximum political action committees are allowed to give under campaign financing laws.

Bentsen said at the time that he was expecting a well-financed Republican opponent.

Boulter, an Amarillo Republican who is challenging the democrat's bid for a fourth term, formally inaugurates his Boulter Breakfast Club in El Paso Monday, said campaign spokesman Greg Graves. He has already held test-run breakfasts in Big Spring and Abilene, and on his invitation invites "Any Texas Resident."

"We're poking a little fun at the senator," Graves said. "He's not quite as in tune with Texas as he used to be. This is a light-hearted way to convey that issue."

Eastern accuses unions of trying to depress its value

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines sued two of its unions for $1.5 billion Friday, accusing pilots and machinists of "Eastern-bashing" to drive down the carrier's value so they could buy it cheaply on the stock market.

In the latest in a series of labor-management battles at the ailing airline, Miami-based Eastern and parent company Texas Air Corp. alleged that the International Association of Machinists and the Air Line Pilots Association "have campaigned to smear" them.

"The smear campaign is one of a number of tactics to facilitate a takeover," airline attorney Parker Peles III of Houston said.

ALPA, the IAM and Eastern's Transport Worker Union tried to buy the carrier before Texas Air bought it in 1986 for $676 million, a sale the unions then tried to block. The suit says the two unions still hope to obtain Eastern, which has lost $900 million in the last 10 years.

"They seek this by an all-out effort to injure Eastern's business — to make it a financial millstone for Texas Air — by means of ... mail fraud, wire fraud, extortion. ... Further, they have set out to destroy Eastern's good will and reputation," the suit said.

Also Friday, Texas Air reported a $124.3 million loss for the first three months of 1988 on revenues of $2.1 billion, vs. a loss of $101 million on revenues of $2 billion for the same period a year ago. Eastern had a $31 million loss for the first quarter, compared with net income of $2.1 million in the same period in 1987.

Eastern's ALPA chairman, John Bavis, among those named individually in the federal court suit, brushed it off as a company tactic to divert attention from a U.S. Department of Transportation probe of the carriers' finances and safety.

"This is like the lions suing the Christians for animal abuse. The situation at Eastern today has

Accidents focus attention on industrial safety

By The Associated Press
As the death toll from three industrial disasters rose to six Friday, company and union leaders and government officials debated the safety of the refinery, skyscraper and chemical plant damaged or destroyed by flames or explosions.

An explosion with earthquake force Wednesday flattened the Pacific Engineering Production Co., a maker of ammonium perchlorate for rocket fuel, and neighboring marshmallow plant in Henderson, Nev., killing two people and injuring more than 300 people.

That night, fire broke out at the 62-story First Interstate Bank building in downtown Los Angeles and quickly enveloped four floors of the state's tallest skyscraper. One worker died when he was trapped in an elevator, and 40 people were injured, authorities said.

Early Thursday, explosions set off fires at a Shell Oil Co. refinery in Norco, La. Three people were found dead, and four were still missing Friday, according to Shell. Forty-two people were injured as windows shattered and doors and roofs were torn off throughout Norco.

Relations director, said Pacific Engineering underwent 11 inspections by the state Occupational Safety and Health Division over five years. The inspections resulted in 10 citations, and four fines for incidents he termed serious.

safe." Kerr-McGee spokesman Paul Reed said Friday. "But we've been operating 35 years without any sort of accident. We think our plant safety record is exemplary."

Wright's office fire sparks debate over safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — An overseer of congressional buildings said Friday that the structures exceed federal safety standards, but a fire chief-turned-congressman said a blaze in House Speaker Jim Wright's office demonstrates the need for improvement.

lower figure was more accurate because repairs would be done by congressional employees.

"The federal government should accept no fire standards less than they require of private businesses downtown," said Rep. Curt Weldon, R-Pa., whose office is next to Wright's in the Longworth House Office Building.

Had there been hoses in the hallway, Weldon said, "we could have put the fire out with little damage. I was told that the D.C. Fire Department recommended that the inch-and-a-half hoses be removed because they sometimes deteriorate. That's what inspections are for."

Weldon, a former volunteer fire chief in suburban Philadelphia, said the fire Thursday was able to rage unimpeded for 10 minutes because the building opened in 1933 lacked fire hoses and alarms.

Capt. Ted Holmes, spokesman for the D.C. Fire Department; Ken Butters, president of the International Association of Fire Chiefs, and Carroll said the hoses were removed because fire departments won't use them.

Elliott Carroll, executive assistant to Capitol Architect George C. White, contended that congressional office buildings are "as safe as any place in the world," and that the damage to Wright's office was minor.

"You have to be aware that the D.C. Fire Department does not use any of those hoses because of deterioration and the (water) pressure would splinter them," Holmes said.

Still, Carroll told reporters, a $47.5 million modernization project is under way to make the congressional offices safer. Voice fire alarms and smoke detectors will be put in the buildings, but there will be no new sprinkler systems installed, he said.

Carroll said the Capitol and congressional office buildings are exempt from local fire code laws, not by law but because all federal buildings are exempt from them.

And "the monumental space" — those with extensive historic value — will not be touched, he said.

Butters explained that this was the case because it would be too difficult to write regulations to cover the entire nation. "Just about every local community writes its own code which usually is more stringent than state or county codes," he said. For instance, he said, it is not unusual for state universities to be exempt from local codes.

Carroll said congressional buildings "meet and exceed" the Building Officials' Conference of America code, which is described as the national standard.

Carroll said the Capitol the six congressional office buildings, the three Library of Congress buildings and the Supreme Court "were all in compliance with local laws, and this is important, at the time they were built. There is no requirement to bring them up to higher standards."

"All these buildings are fireproof," said Carroll. "They all are made out of brick and stone. The solidness of the buildings can be shown by the fact that the fire was contained in one room."

Holmes said the District of Columbia uses the building officials' association, but he declined to say whether the buildings are now in compliance with the city's regulations. "That would be speculation on our part because we don't inspect them," he said.

Carroll said the fire started in a copying machine located in a kitchenette in Wright's second-floor office and was confined to that room. Two other rooms received smoke and water damage, he said.

He placed the damage estimate at $10,000. The District of Columbia Fire Department had estimated Thursday night that the fire caused $120,000 in damage, but Carroll said the

The United Steelworkers of America entered the debate in Nevada, releasing a 1982 letter from a union safety and health technician who called Pacific Engineering plant "one of the worst I have ever been into." USW Local 4856 represents workers at the plant.
On Friday, USW President Lynn Williams issued a statement denouncing the company and the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration for not acting on the union's complaints.
But the company's chairman, Fred Gibson, maintained it had a good record, and state officials generally supported him.
Jim Barnes, state Industrial

Relations director, said Pacific Engineering underwent 11 inspections by the state Occupational Safety and Health Division over five years. The inspections resulted in 10 citations, and four fines for incidents he termed serious.
"There have been problems from time to time, mostly minor," he said. "Our opinion is that overall their record has been a good, moderate record."
The disaster raised worries about a Kerr-McGee Corp. plant a mile away which is the only other facility in the United States to manufacture ammonium perchlorate. The plant shut down voluntarily after the blast until more is known about what caused it.

Heart Award recipient LaFon Williams and Boomer Sooner-bound Trey Tippens were chosen as Female and Male Athletes of the Year at the Snyder High School Booster Club All-Sports Banquet, held Friday evening at Scurry County Coliseum.

In a special award, Deedra Tomlin was named as the Bill J. Hood Scholar Athlete for 1987-88. Tomlin, a senior, was also honored as the Tiger Sport Award recipient in girl's basketball.

Williams impressed coaches with her hard work and determination both on the Lady Tiger basketball and volleyball teams. In addition to athlete of the year, she received the volleyball Heart Award, and was named MVP honors along with teammates Sandra Morin and Melody Pickering.

Tippens, who signed a scholarship to play for Oklahoma next year, was also a two-sport participant. An all-South Plains choice in addition to all-district as a linebacker for the Ragin' Tigers, he earned football's Most Valuable Player honors for the second straight season. The 6-5, 215-pound senior also received recognition as the team's top linebacker. In basketball, where he helped Snyder to a regional semifinals berth, he was selected for the Fighting Tiger Award.

Two other students earned recognition in more than one sport. Michelle Candanoza was selected Most Improved in both track and basketball. She also won the Best Free Throw Shooter award in basketball.

Thance Springer copped honors as football's top Offensive Lineman and was chosen as track's "Fighting Tiger".

Among the other football awards were the Fighting Heart Award, presented to Benny Miller; Top Offensive Back, to Vyron Clay; Top Defensive Lineman, to Robert Talamantez; and Top Defensive Back, to second-team, all-district choice Randy Morris.

Becky Becerra was announced as the football sweetheart.

Golf awards went to team season medalists Jamie Leatherwood and Wade Hatter. Hatter was also team medalist in 1987.

Tennis awards were given to Deone Farmer and Kevin Winter, who qualified to region in boy's singles.

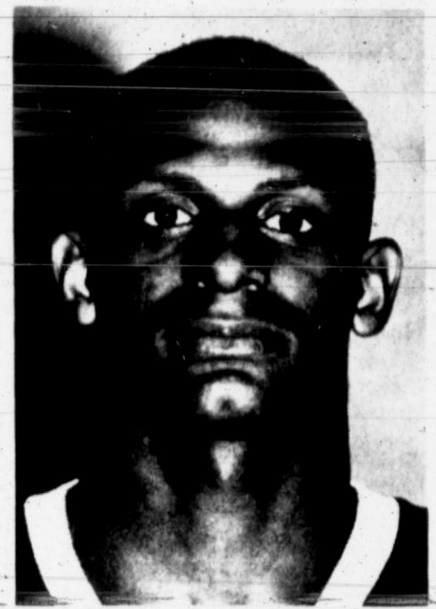

Tiger second baseman Van Echols was chosen as baseball's MVP. Echols was all-district as a junior, and could repeat as a senior. David Martinez was recipient of the Robert Hobbs Memorial Award.

Other boy's basketball awards were Most Improved to Anthony Wortham, and Most Valuable Player, which went to all-South Plains standout Terry Garza, a 6-4 senior.

Western Texas College-bound Teri Sue Henry, another Tiger all-district selection, was named as Best Defensive Player for the girl's basketball team.

In boy's track, regional pole vault qualifier Charles Guynes was chosen MVP of the field events. Hurdler and relay team member Craig Watkins was MVP of the running events. In girl's track, Michelle Pilgrim and Nichole Overman served as co-outstanding athletes.

Oiler camp to boost economy

SAN MARCOS (AP)—Hosting the Houston Oilers' summer football camp should generate San Marcos an income of $1 million per year, team officials say.

The Oilers will move their month-long camp to the campus of Southwest Texas State from San Angelo this year after announcing a two-year agreement with the school Friday.

SWT President Robert Hardesty signed a contract with the team Thursday, ending a 10-year stay in San Angelo, where the Oiler camp contract had expired.

According to Oiler officials, the team looked for another training camp site after becoming dissatisfied with the Angelo State University weight room facilities and dormitory food.

"We're delighted to announce our agreement to hold our training camp at Southwest Texas State," Oiler vice-president Ladd Herzog said.

"The facilities there are first class and San Marcos' proximity to Austin and San Antonio will make things very convenient for us," Herzog added.

Scurry County Folks...

By Shirley A. Gorman

Barbara Gowin of Snyder, Stanfield Elementary School secretary for the past five years, sometimes wonders why God spared her life.

A little more than two years ago, in January of 1986, she was stricken with cancer. But through determination, prayer, competent medical attention and family, friends and children at school, Mrs. Gowin survived the battle and is today a very thankful woman—one who takes time to appreciate the simple joys of life, like sitting in a swing in her backyard and watching the flowers grow.

The experience has brought her and her family closer together and taught her the value of listening to one's own body and seeking second medical opinions.

She is married to Bill Gowin who works for Western Company. They have two daughters, Shae, 15, and Kara, 7.

Mrs. Gowin kept a journal of notes throughout her year long ordeal and recently has written her own account of her struggle with cancer entitled "On Wings of Eagles" which she plans to share with her family and friends. She said her doctor has even asked for a copy.

Mrs. Gowin credits her surviving cancer and the ultimate struggle with two surgeries and chemotherapy to the love and grace of God whom she said gave her the strength to see the ordeal through to the finish.

The following verse taken from the Bible (Isaiah 40:31) became very important to her and she kept a small card with the verse typed on it on her desk at school.

"But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk and not faint."

She has decided to tell her story for two reasons. First, now that some two years have passed since the worst of the ordeal ended, she can talk about it; and second, she hopes it will help someone else.

"I really feel that God has left me here for a reason," Mrs.

Gowin said. "I believe he wants me to do good things for people and to help them all I can."

In the beginning, she remembers feeling so tired that she could hardly get up in the morning. But she had been going to her doctor for two months and since he told her nothing was wrong she thought "it was just

Mrs. Gowin said she tries not to blame anyone, but she feels if her tumor could have been caught sooner then she might have been spared the worst of the ordeal.

She was told that she had uterine fibroids and that a hysterectomy would eventually be necessary. She was also found to be anemic. She was also tested for thyroid problems and wore a heart monitor. Eventually she requested to go to a cardiologist.

"My heart would race so fast, sometimes I was sure it was going to stop."

But every test she underwent came back negative and her heart doctor told her to come back in about 20 years when she would really have a problem.

More tests followed, including a sonogram which is a procedure using high frequency sound waves to make a picture instead of an x-ray.

"I was never the same after that," she said. "I had a pressure inside me that I could not ex-

A second sonogram followed and by then she said she could feel the tumor inside her. The doctor examined her and a large tumor was discovered.

It was then that she decided to go to a gynecologist in Lubbock. Immediate surgery followed during which a malignant tumor was discovered on her left ovary. Although doctors removed her uterus and both ovaries, they were unable to get all the malignancy on the inside wall of her abdominal cavity.

There were four days out of my life that I remember nothing except there were some very nice ladies wearing blue that I really, in my mind, felt were angels," she said.

Mrs. Gowin took the news about her cancer calmly, much too calmly, according to her doctor. On one of his last visits before she went home, he began to tell her how serious everything was, the effects of chemotherapy and the possibility that she might not survive. Then she cried, but later when she saw him again she told him she was going to be all right.

The oncologist handled all arrangements for the chemotherapy Mrs. Gowin was to take for nine months. She and her mother, Jessie Scarbrough of Snyder, traveled to Lubbock every three weeks for chemotherapy.

The only time missed from work during her illness was during the two surgeries she had and one day off every three weeks for the chemotherapy.

Mrs. Gowin and her mother would leave on Friday and spend the night in Lubbock. She said she would sleep all the way home because the treatments would make her very tired. She would then sleep the rest of the weekend, but by Monday she felt better and would return to the job she loved at Stanfield.

For her treatments, a "port a cath" tube was surgically inserted into a large vein in her breast area, with one end left See LOCAL, Page 6B

Who is always close at hand
To give advice when needed
Or to simply understand.*

No matter what you do,
And even when you make mistakes
She still believes in you...*

*A Mother is a cheerful smile,
A word of sympathy,
And everything that makes a home
The nicest place to be.*

up dummy's jack and next played the king of clubs. East won the ace and played the jack of spades. South won the queen, went to dummy with the jack of clubs and played a heart to his jack. West won the king and played another diamond. Declarer cashed both high diamonds and then played two clubs, throwing a spade from dummy. East had thrown a spade and a heart on the two diamonds, but the last club squeezed him. He had to either unguard his queen of hearts or allow dummy's spades to run. So declarer made two overtricks.

So what simple little play could have given East some relief? The answer is that he should not have been in such a rush to win the club ace. Just let him hold off until the third round of clubs. Then, when he wins the third club and leads a spade, declarer is not able to play to his jack of hearts. And what if declarer plays to the jack of hearts earlier, before the club ace is dislodged? Then West can play a spade after winning the heart king, and East can play a second spade after winning the club ace. And that's one way to hold declarer to 10 tricks.

To make it all worthwhile, just imagine that the contract is five no-trump rather than three.

Keeping down overtricks

By James Jacoby

So many bridge stories are just tales of overtricks in undoubted contracts. Not much drama there. But often the overtricks can be held to a minimum with simple little plays.

On the diamond lead, declarer put

LUNG CANCER

Despite filters now on 90% of cigarettes, which reduce the tar and nicotine absorbed, twice as many men died of lung cancer in 1980 as in 1960, and three times as many women. Experts believe it is due to modern tobacco farming with high-phosphate fertilizers which contain traces of radioactive lead, carried into the lungs, which produces a more rapid and pervasive cancer of the lungs. For health's sake, give up smoking.

Agricultural production in Latin America tripled from 1950 to 1980 but the farm labor force increased by less than 30 percent, says the Inter-American Development Bank. In seven countries, the agricultural labor force was smaller in absolute terms in 1980 than it had been in 1950. In four other countries, there was an absolute decline only between 1970 and 1980.

Local recounts her battle with cancer

BACKYARD REST—Barbara Gowin's bout with cancer has taught her never to take anything for granted. She now likes to just relax in her backyard swing and enjoy life. (SDN Staff Photo)

 easily accessible for the infusion of fluids or chemicals or withdrawal of blood.
 Eventually, the nurses started giving her chemotherapy through the veins in her arms, even though it was not the best way to give chemotherapy.
 "When I took my first chemotherapy treatment, the nurses told me that I would feel a burning in my body and veins," Mrs. Gowin said. "Instead, I felt a cool, peaceful, almost contented feeling going through my body. I could always taste the medicine—it tasted like menthol or how you might imagine rubbing alcohol would taste like."

The only thing Mrs. Gowin could eat after her chemotherapy treatments was yogurt. She said that two special people in her life brought her flowers and yogurt every Saturday afternoon during those long nine months of treatment.

According to Mrs. Gowin, one of the hardest conditions to cope with was losing her hair. "The doctor told me that two weeks after my first treatment to expect my hair to come out. In exactly two weeks my hair started shedding a little at a time. So I wouldn't have to see it or feel it all day, I started wearing a wig."

Her father, Bud Scarbrough, went with her to the wig shop in Lubbock to pick out a wig. She said she tried on a few blonde wigs but her father "didn't go for that."

"My hair had always been my crowning glory and I liked it just the way it was," she said. "But people told me that it might come back thicker, better and possibly a different color. When my hair came back I will never forget the first time I felt the wind blow through my hair," she said.

Her hair is darker now and as time passes it is becoming more like the hair she remembers before the chemotherapy treatments started.

Mrs. Gowin said she was helped tremendously by the "I Can Cope" meetings which were then held at Cogdell Memorial Hospital. "Until I attended my first meeting I had not really cried about the dilemma. But when I heard the doctor say so many things that I had been feeling, but could not express to anyone, I came face to face with the reality that I might die. I knew then that I would have to be the one to take charge of the situation," she said.

She said she had read an article about how self-induced healing, positive reinforcements and stress reduction could stimulate the immune system and allow healing to take place. Laughter became a positive gift which she could share with friends and family. People laughed with her and that helped her a lot, she said.

Even though her doctor tried to talk her out of it, Mrs. Gowin said she knew that she had to return to work as soon as possible following the first surgery. He was concerned that because chemotherapy diminishes the effectiveness of the body's immune system that she might contract a serious infection from the sick children who comprised one of the responsibilities of her job at school.

"But when I went back to work, everyone really helped me take care of the sick children and, by God's grace, I was rarely sick," Mrs. Gowin said.

Since they tried to live as normal a life as possible, she said she and her family never really talked about her cancer. But now, two years later, they have begun to share their thoughts and feelings.

"We never talked about it then because we wanted to forget that I had cancer," she explained.

Her husband Bill underwent changes too. For instance, he began to do chores around their home which he had never done before. And now he spends more times with the girls.

"I had to depend on people to do things for me and I just wasn't used to it," Mrs. Gowin said.

She says the cancer also caused a more positive outlook from her entire family. During her illness, she remembers, her husband would tell her that someday she could tell her grandchildren about her experience.

"Because I worked hard on my attitude I think it carried over on to my family and they tried to be positive also," she said.

Following the chemotherapy, Mrs. Gowin underwent a second surgery in December of 1986 to enable doctors to see how well her treatment had progressed. She was told that the area in question was "amazingly clean."

For the present she is "cured" of the cancer which had such a dramatic effect on her life, but she knows that it has the potential to reoccur in the future. To safeguard against that, she must have regular checkups with both her gynecologist and her oncologist. Every three months she visits one or the other for a checkup. She said that someday she hopes to be told that the frequent checkups won't be necessary.

Regarding her bout with cancer, Mrs. Gowin wanted to include a statement of "thanks."

"There were two people that bought my first wig when my hair came out; those that helped take care of my children, including my dad who always kept them when I went for treatments so my husband could work; the bosses who had to put up with two secretaries a lot of the time and never complained; the people who always kept my spirits up no matter how low they sometimes got; but especially those who prayed for me. Even the children at school prayed daily for my recovery. To my mom, whom I sometimes told, 'I don't want to take chemo this time.' She always said 'You don't have a choice.' To my dad, for just being there to make things right; to my older daughter who never let me see her cry and was always strong and brave; to my younger daughter who just wanted me to hold her and to be able to smell my hair again; to my husband who not only helped me survive but our marriage as well; to my oncologist who told me God gave him about two patients a year that he could cure and this was my year."

For the present, Mrs. Gowin is just happy and grateful to be alive. She is grateful for the miracle of her cure and is contented to live just one day at a time, wanting never again to take anything or anyone for granted.

When someone in the family is allergic to the wheat in bread, cookies, cakes, pastas and other foods, home baking becomes a must.

The substitutes for wheat flour include rice, soybean, oat, rye and barley flours, or potato starch. Knowing how to make the best use of these flours can add variety to the allergy diet.

The strong gluten in wheat flour helps to form the structure of breads and cakes.

Since nonwheat flours or starches contain weak gluten, or no gluten at all, baked products made with these flours tend to be heavier and more crumbly than the same foods made with wheat flour.

Oat, rye, barley and buckwheat flours contain small amounts of gluten and should be avoided by people with a severe intolerance. Commercially baked rye and oatmeal breads will also usually contain some wheat flour.

The non-wheat flours have distinctive characteristics:

—Soy flour is light yellow and has a strong nutty flavor, so it's best mixed with other nonwheat flours. Nuts, spices, or chocolate will also help mask the flavor.

—Rice flour is less strong in flavor and has a slightly grainy texture. Since rice flour takes on other flavors well, it can be used in a variety of baked products.

—Corn flour is similar to cornmeal, but ground much finer. It's not available in all areas.

—Rye flour has a dark color, distinctive flavor and a slight amount of gluten. It's often sold in combination with wheat flour, so check the label carefully.

—Oat flour has a mild flavor. It's available commercially or you can make your own by grinding dry-rolled oats in a blender or food processor.

—Potato starch is a bland, white starch made from raw potatoes. It works best in baked products that have eggs to provide needed structure, such as sponge cake.

You get best results baking with a nonwheat flour if you stir it thoroughly before measuring. Nonwheat cookies or cupcakes will have less of a crumbling problem than layer or sheet cakes.

Cover nonwheat backed products tightly and store at room temperature for a short time or freeze for longer storage. These foods tend to become dry and pick up odors when stored in the refrigerator.

If you're having trouble finding nonwheat products, contact the County Extension Office at 573-5423 for information on ordering products for special food needs.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Let Our Prayers Go Out To Mothers Everywhere!

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago, during a routine eye examination, my eye doctor of eight years told me that he no longer wanted me as a patient because I bought my extended-wear contact lenses from an optician, and not from him! Although I have never had any problems with my eyes, he said he was afraid if I did, due to these contact lenses, I would sue him for malpractice.

Have you ever heard of anything like this before? Every time I think of it, I get angry, so I decided to write to you and find out if my eye doctor had the right to drop me as a patient for that reason.

Also, is there someone I can complain to about what I consider terribly rude behavior?

SEEKING RED
IN JACKSON, MISS.

DEAR SEEKING RED: After eight years of his giving you care, I can understand why your eye doctor would expect you to come to him for your contact lenses — and also why he was miffed to learn that you went elsewhere. It's your privilege to go wherever you choose for eye care and lenses, but it's his right to refuse to keep you as a patient for reasons of his own. If you think that your eye doctor has acted unprofessionally, you can complain to your local branch of the American Medical Association. It's listed in your phone book.

DEAR ABBY: Every time my wife and I go to pick out wallpaper, we end up in a big argument. This time, I told her to go to the store and pick out the three patterns she liked the best, and I would make the final decision from one of the three.

Well, she picked out three patterns from which I selected one. We hired a professional wallpaper hanger because my wife says I don't know how to hang wallpaper. After spending a lot of money for wallpaper and having it installed, my wife decided she hated the wallpaper. I have to agree; it doesn't look as good on the wall as I thought it would, and now my wife says wallpaper should be the wife's choice entirely because the wife has to look at it all day.

What do you say? We agreed to abide by your decision because we are going to replace it, although it's only been up for two weeks.

WONDERING IN CAPE CORAL, FLA.

DEAR WONDERING: Wallpaper should be a joint decision, but since your wife selected the three patterns she preferred, and agreed to let you make the final decision, she should have no complaints.

P.S. Next time, consult a decorator, and let him or her take the heat.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "No Boss Office," who complains because they (the three underpaid female employees) do all the work while their boss is in the back room playing with the new computer.

I work alone in an office, and without the computer my job would be almost impossible to do by myself. The office complainers in the "No Boss Office" are probably the reason the boss bought a computer in the first place. The boss is probably looking to replace one, or maybe even two, of them with the computer.

Employees are not there to judge their bosses; they are there to do whatever the boss asks them to do. If I had employees like the above trio, I'd be replacing them with computers, too. Computers don't talk back.

DISGUSTED IN OCALA, FLA.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Talk back? Communication and honest dialogue between employee and employer are essential if both are to prosper in a productive atmosphere.

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing a column you did a few years ago for Mother's Day. I thought it was the most beautiful tribute I had ever seen. Please run it again.

EMILY (MRS. PAUL B.)
KELLEY, CORTLAND, N.Y.

DEAR EMILY: I've run it many times, and here it is again:

DEAR ABBY: My beloved mother passed away recently, so I called my minister and asked him for the wording of a prayer I could say for my mother. He said, "I'm too busy — and a lot of good prayer will do her now!"

You see, Mama went to church long ago, but my father never liked to go, so Mama quit going. Abby, I can't believe that heaven is open only to church members.

I've called all the bookstores in town, and they say there aren't any prayers for the dead in any of the books they have. I've heard there are places where you can send a few dollars and they will pray for the dead, but I don't know their addresses.

Abby, I'd be so grateful if you'd print a short prayer I could say for my mother before I go to sleep at night. Any faith is acceptable. I can't let you send it to my home because my father looks over the mail first and I'm sure I'd never get it. It means the world to me. Thank you, and God bless you. Sign me...
A PRAYER FOR MAMA

DEAR PRAYER: I found this prayer in my Union Prayer Book. It's the prayer Jews recite on Yom Kippur (the Day of Atonement) to honor the memory of a deceased mother:

IN MEMORY OF A MOTHER
"I remember thee in this solemn hour, my dear mother. I remember the days when thou didst dwell on earth, and thy tender love watched over me like a guardian angel. Thou hast gone from me, but the bond which unites our souls can never be severed; thine image lives within my heart. May the merciful Father reward thee for the faithfulness and kindness thou hast ever shown me; may he lift up the light of his countenance upon thee and grant thee eternal peace! Amen."

CONFIDENTIAL TO ANYONE FOR WHOM IT IS NOT YET TOO LATE: The gestation period of a mother's advice is anywhere from one week to 50 years. Losing one's mother before having thanked her for the many precious things she taught you is one of life's greatest tragedies.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." Postage and handling are included.

Firemen charged with setting blazes

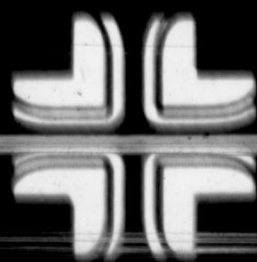

MANOR, Texas (AP) — Police jury will hear evidence linking have arrested a volunteer Perkins to six fires set over a fireman and charged him with arson after he allegedly set his own fires to look like a hero when he fought them.

Michael DeWayne Perkins, 20, was charged with one count of arson Thursday, and Manor Police Chief Albert Olguin said a grand jury will hear evidence linking Perkins to six fires set over a two-month period ending in February.

"He'd always be out there battling the fires (when volunteers were called)," Olguin said. "He was in a way trying to paint a picture of a hero. All the firefighters thought of him as being a good firefighter."

Brutal treatment reported

PARIS (AP) — Former hostage Jean-Paul Kauffmann told his family that American hostages in Lebanon were treated brutally because they tried to escape, the French news agency Agence France-Presse reported today.
 Kauffmann and diplomats Marcel Carton and Marcel Fontaine arrived in Paris Thursday after being freed Wednesday from three years of captivity. They were the last French hostages to be released from Lebanon.
 Premier Jacques Chirac hinted that France might restore diplomatic ties with Tehran, which he said helped secure the hostages' freedom. The government denied reports that it had paid a ransom.
 AFP quoted Kauffmann's sister Marie-Genevieve Dagain as saying he shared a cell recently with Frank Herbert Reed, who was "mistreated to the point of being left prostrate." Reed was kidnapped Sept. 9, 1986 and is one of nine American hostages in Lebanon.
 Kauffmann, 44, Carton, 62, and Fontaine, 45, were in the Val-de-Grace military hospital for two days of examinations.
 In a statement issued after the AFP dispatch quoting his sister, Kauffmann said he intended to speak fully at a news conference next week and did not want anyone speaking for him or relaying his impressions until then.
 Mrs. Dagain's telephone in Rennes was constantly busy this afternoon when The Associated Press tried to call.
 She was quoted by AFP as saying her brother told her the American hostages held by the pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem group Islamic Jihad were "the object of brutality because they tried to escape."
 The dispatch did not make clear whether Kauffmann specified which were mistreated for attempting to get away.

Partnership arrangements for non-commercial purposes will produce benefits in the year ahead. Alliances for business reasons may not work out as well.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could be a trifle careless with the possessions of others today. Keep this in mind if you feel a need to borrow something from a friend that he/she cherishes.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though it may be the line of least resistance today, it could prove unwise if you let others make decisions for you. Make up your own mind.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Guard against tendencies today to jump to conclusions, especially in your involvements with co-workers. Get the facts before making hasty judgments.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't count on others today if you get involved in a chancy venture. Their help might not be forthcoming, and you could find yourself scolded on a limb alone.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) An issue about which you feel strongly might be vehemently opposed by your mate today. To avoid a clash, both will have to compromise.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your effectiveness today will substantially diminish if you spread yourself too thin. Your production goal should be quality, not quantity.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to keep a tighter rein on your expenditures at this time. It could prove wise to pay off past obligations before assuming any new ones.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In your involvements with companions today, you must be very careful that actions designed to serve your own interests aren't offensive to others.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your greatest adversaries today are likely to be your own self-doubts. Don't use your imagination to envision negative results. Think positive.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you don't manage your resources prudently today, you may later wonder what happened. By the time you figure things out, it could be too late.

May 9, 1988
 Broader interests will be developed in the year ahead through a new friend to whom you'll become quite attached. Some organizational or club involvements are also likely.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today's happenings could sweep you up in their wake, and there's a possibility that you might forget to take care of an important matter that needs handling. Major changes are ahead for Taurus in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today, if you keep in mind today the target for which you are aiming, you will have a good chance of hitting the bulls-eye.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take ample time today in formulating an important decision. If you do, you won't have to ask yourself later why you overlooked some obvious aspects.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you should need adequate patience and stick-to-it-iveness to handle an annoying assignment that you recently left unfinished. Go get 'em.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Friends you know through different circumstances will be orbiting around you at this time. You'll be the catalyst that will draw them all together.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A matter that has so far seemed unmanageable can be concluded to your satisfaction today. The elusive solution will become very obvious.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today, if you use a little humor in your approach when dealing with associates, you will find them to be much more cooperative than usual. Get out the joke book.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is a good day to focus your primary efforts on business or financial matters. Your thinking will be both ingenious and practical.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Even though you may be a trifle more talkative than usual today, it won't bore your listeners. What you'll have to say will be constructive and interesting.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You might be in for a rather pleasant surprise today when something you felt could never pay off produces a dividend. Be hopeful.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Good things could happen for you at this time through people you know socially. They can help open doors for you to which you have no keys.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) You won't have to keep pals posted on your recent accomplishments; you'll have a booster today who will be handling the publicity for you.

Boy held in bathroom for as long as 4 years

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston couple was arrested and charged with injury to a child by omission after their 7-year-old malnourished and abused son escaped from a bathroom where authorities say he may have been virtually imprisoned for as long as four years.
 Charlotte Anne Bishop, 42, and her husband, Alexander Lizcano Jimenez, 38, were jailed Thursday night and held under $2,000 bond each.
 The child, Bannoy Jimenez, told authorities he climbed through the bathroom window and wandered to a service station where the attendant fed him and then called police, Houston Police Department juvenile officer A.G. DeWoody said.
 "This is the worst case of child neglect that I have run across," said DeWoody, who has handled such cases for five years. "What you have here is a boy who has been deprived of a childhood. No television, no toys, no love. And I'm guessing, but he probably didn't even play with his sisters and brother."
 DeWoody described the boy as resembling a child from a famine-stricken country in Africa. He had shoulder-length hair and his stomach was bloated from malnutrition, the officer said.
 Three other children, a 10-year-old sister and 9-year-old twins — a boy and a girl, were in good shape but placed in the custody of Harris County child welfare officials.

 "Physically, the other kids looked fine," spokeswoman Judy Hay said. "The house was neat and clean. The family's poor but there was food in the house."
 She said the three older children, who apparently were treated relatively normally, were upset and would not talk to caseworkers.
 "I would imagine that all of them at some time experienced some form of neglect, but over the years he appears to have been singled out," Ms. Hay said.

 Donnie Lawler, without your expertise we never would have completed the job. I hope every group had such good leaders and at the end of the day they left feeling that the job was well done and worth the effort.
 Many thanks to all those who furnished the food and drinks, goods and services and a special thanks to the clubs that organized this project and showed us they cared.
 So next year, when someone asks you to give up a few hours of your time, please stop and think. Someday you might need a helping hand and if you don't care now, who will care then?
