

Summer begins hot, dry locally

From Local Wire Reports
Scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected in some areas of the South Plains Tuesday night, but most of the state was to be sunny and dry as summer officially begins. No rain is in the Snyder forecast and a repeat of temperatures in the mid to upper 90s is likely Tuesday. The local temperature topped at 98 degrees on Monday. Any scattered showers or thunderstorms were expected to begin in the late afternoon and continue Tuesday night across the Panhandle. South Plains, the mountains of West Texas, across East Texas and on the coastal plains. For the rest of the state, the forecast calls for clear to partly cloudy skies and warm to hot temperatures through Wednesday. For the Snyder area, Wednesday is to be mostly sunny with a high in the mid 90s. The extended outlook through Saturday for West Texas includes mostly sunny and very warm days with clear warm nights.

S&L losses 'record'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's savings institutions lost a record $3.8 billion in the first three months of this year, more than half the loss for all of 1987, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said today. Big losses in three southwestern states pushed overall industry losses over the previous quarterly record of $3.2 billion, set in the last quarter of 1987, despite a rise in the percentage of profitable institutions from 65 percent to 69 percent. The bank board said the 20 institutions with the worst losses, most of them in Texas, accounted for $3 billion of the losses.

A total of 2,164 institutions out of 3,118 had earnings of $1.3 billion. But that was overwhelmed by the losses of the other savings and loans.

The board reported in May that the industry's capital had declined by $3.3 billion in the January-March period.

Capital represents the amount of money an institution's stockholders or owners have invested in the savings and loan.

Capital declines can be less than the institution's actual losses if investors offset part of the loss by putting up additional money.

Senate race heats up...

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor
The gloves officially came off Monday in what is shaping up to be a fight for the 30th Senatorial District seat sought by Steve Carriker (D Roby) and Bobby Albert (R Wichita Falls).

Albert made a 3 p.m. appearance here one of four scheduled across the district during the day to present his opponent with a "Liberal Left Wing" award.

Albert said the so-called "prize," made of leathers and glue, was presented to call attention to what he called Carriker's affiliation with the "liberal left wing social agenda in this country."

Albert's presentation of the "left wing" had been repeated earlier in the day at Wichita Falls, Sherman and Abilene, and Carriker himself appeared at the Abilene press conference to rebut his opponent.

In fact, Carriker's denial of the accusations against him were telephoned to the SDN before Albert and his entourage had time to arrive locally from Abilene by plane.

Here and at the other four stops, Albert accused Carriker of "being against a ban on state income tax." To bolster his claim, Albert cited two votes made by Carriker during the special session of the Texas Legislature in the summer of 1987.

Albert contended Carriker, as state representative for the 78th District, voted against two constitutional amendments proposed to ban a state income tax.

In his telephoned rebuttal, Carriker said Albert's claim was "at best, a misrepresentation."

Carriker said he voted against the two amendments because they were not presented to the legislature in the proper procedural format.

Referring to one of the amendment proposals he said, "I voted against it when it came up as an amendment to a statutory bill. Attempting to amend the constitution by a bill just doesn't fly."

Attaching such an amendment would have ultimately had "no effect," he said.

"Since I've been in the legislature, a constitutional amendment to ban a state income tax has come up four times, and I've voted for it each time," Carriker said.

Albert's criticism was not limited to the state income tax issue, however, as he called Carriker "a reliable friend of Big Game." See ALBERT page 9.

Dirt work begins for Wal-Mart store

Dirt work began Monday to clear the site for a Wal-Mart discount store at the former location of the Snyder Tiger Drive in Theater.

The clearing is being completed by Price Brothers Construction of Snyder and Big Spring. The work is expected to take two weeks to complete.

Last week, bids to construct the approximately 52,000 sq. ft. building were opened in Beattonville, Ark., where Wal-Mart is headquartered.

The apparent successful bidder for the work was Templeton Construction of San Angelo.

The city building inspector's office was given approval to "destruct and clear off the local site, although no permit for construction can begin until a building permit has been issued.

This is pending the receipt of a report for the area and as of Monday this had not been received at city hall.

With the plan in hand, the city council can proceed with a second reading to approve it. This is currently not expected until the council's next regular meeting set July 11.

Plans for the local Wal-Mart were announced last November, although construction was not expected to get under way until this spring and the opening is not due until the spring of 1989.

The folks on Deep Creek say, "An optimist says no matter how bleak the past, the future is spacious."

On the surface, it doesn't seem excessive to expect some degree of loyalty from employees. We would have suspected that our car manufacturers would have encouraged folks on its payroll to drive their make of car.

A GM plant in Livonia, Mich. has reversed its ban on competitors' cars from its employee parking lot. Employees and labor unions object so strongly that the work environment effort to increase sales of GM cars actually backfired.

Health workers at the plant objected to what the union inspired and called the "red" offensive. A little loyalty seems a lot less offensive than the one you get because of the living wage.

The CEO jumps off buildings and bridges to demonstrate the reliability of the company's work clothes. To illustrate the sturdiness of a safety vest worn by window washers, the CEO jumped off a bridge 4 feet above the Allegheny River.

A rope attached to the vest and a crane interrupted his fall, leaving him dangling above the water for several minutes. He passed the time and picked up publicity by reading a newspaper while waiting to be hoisted up.

The CEO contends that every chief executive ought to be willing to back his company's products. The stunt expensed a $1 million insurance policy to protect the city and county from any potential liability.

The CEO says he expects bridges to utility towers or skyscrapers because he "prefers water to concrete construction."

It's all in a day's work for the CEO, and he is grateful about one thing: his company doesn't make cars for chiefs.

Blowouts, rollover reported

A double tire blowout and vehicle rollover Monday left a local driver and five passengers uninjured, according to the Department of Public Safety.

The one vehicle accident occurred Monday at 8:30 p.m. in some 22 miles south of Snyder on County Road 400, the DPS reported.

Driver of the vehicle was 24-year-old Saumang Ding of 3801 Muriel Drive.

A DPS trooper said Ding was northbound in a 1987 Toyota pickup when his right front and then right rear tires blew out.

The vehicle skidded the rest on the shoulder and 90 feet across the road before the vehicle turned upside down.

A 14-year-old girl and boys, 13, 11 and 10 who were riding in the vehicle were not injured, the trooper said.

Q Is Monday or Tuesday the first day of summer?
A Summer officially began at five minutes before midnight Monday. Tuesday is the first full day of summer.

Raid is held

GABORONE, Botswana (AP) — Security forces arrested two white South Africans after a shootout in which South African commandos injured three Botswana policemen, the president's office said today.

The shooting occurred late Monday when six unarmed police officers were fired at by five South African commandos who were planning a raid on a target in Gaborone, the capital.

Inflation up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices led by large increases for gasoline and automobiles, climbed a moderate 0.4 percent in May, the government said today.

There was no evidence that effects of the drought reached consumers in May, as grocery prices rose just 0.4 percent, compared with a 0.6 percent increase in April.

Ferret flap

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — A district judge sent a teenager back to jail for failing to reveal the whereabouts of her pet ferret. Four, which authorities fear might be rabid and may have bitten a 5-year-old boy.

Nineteen-year-old Jennifer An, who had her ferret to protect it from decapitation in a rabies test, claims she doesn't know its whereabouts because she arranged to have it picked up by an anonymous person who volunteered safe haven.

One step short of success

By James Jacoby

Although a redouble usually shows about 10 high-card points, North's A-Q-J of spades looked to him like the A-K-Q (the takeout double by West strongly suggested that he held the missing spade king), so we don't quarrel with North's original action. However, having redoubled, perhaps he should have contented himself with raising to only two hearts. Nevertheless, the final game contract had good chances to make, despite the aggressive bidding.

At the first trick East put up the queen of clubs and declarer won the ace. Immediately he took the spade finesse, letting his 10 ride when West played low. He took another spade finesse and cashed dummy's spade ace, shedding a small diamond from his hand. Declarer now attacked the trump suit, leading the nine from dummy and playing low. West won the jack, cashed the ace of diamonds and then played the king of spades. East had not fallen asleep, so he ruffed with the king of hearts. That was down one.

Do you see how declarer misfired? His approach in the spade suit was fine. However, after taking the ace of spades and shedding one diamond, he should continue with the losing queen of spades from dummy and discard his king of diamonds. Then when he gets around to attacking the trump suit, he will no longer be subject to an uppercut from East's trump king. The defense will be held to two trump tricks, and South will make his four-heart contract.

Study shows afternoon naps help the heart

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A recent study claims there is a link between napping and a lower rate of coronary heart disease (CHD).

Health magazine says researchers in Greece say the rate for those who suffered from CHD was much lower in areas where the siesta is part of the daily regimen.

After ruling out other factors such as smoking, diet and personality traits in accounting for the difference, they concluded there was a direct connection between napping and a lower rate of heart disease.

In reality, Quilters is a new business but still specializes in quilting supplies and instruction.

Sounds in the night may signal 'sleep apnea'

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Tired of staying up all night listening to your spouse snore? That snore may signal a condition that's more than just annoying, according to researchers at the National Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine here. He or she may be one of the 2 million Americans suffering from sleep apnea, which often goes unrecognized.

People with this disorder may repeatedly stop breathing during sleep for up to a minute. This interruption of restful sleep results in excessive sleepiness, which could cause a disruption in personal life, loss of a job and can even put the victim at risk of injury. Typical sleep apnea victims are middle-aged, overweight men. However, people of any sex or weight group may be afflicted.

Banks pursue risky course

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banks that pursue "growth for growth's sake" are embarking on a risky course that makes it more difficult for them to withstand economic downturn, a federal bank regulator says.

Comptroller of the Currency Robert L. Clarke said Monday that banks that lend conservatively more easily pull themselves out of trouble than institutions with "overly aggressive behavior."

"Growth for growth's sake, or growth without the resources to back it up, is a highly risky strategy because it leaves the bank exposed when the economy turns down," Clarke said in a speech Monday night to the American Bankers Association's Stonier Graduate School of Banking in Newark, Del.

"In other words, when the economic tide goes out, you find out who is swimming naked," Clarke said in a text of his speech that was released in Washington.

Clarke's comments came as the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, which regulates 4,500 nationally chartered banks, released a report showing that problem banks that later recover are more than twice as likely to comply with the instructions of bank examiners as are institutions that fail.

The report found that poor policies, planning and management were about as likely to play a significant role in the failure of closed banks as in the decline of banks that later recovered — 90 percent and 88 percent respectively.

However, the "rehabilitated" banks were much more likely to at least partially comply with regulators' orders, 86 percent versus 41 percent, after financial weaknesses are first spotted.

The recovered banks were also more likely to change chief executive officers than failed banks, 90 percent versus 76 percent.

Lee Cross, a spokeswoman for the comptroller's office, said bank examiners have taken note of the study's findings by looking more closely at the management practices of banks, even if they have good earnings.

But she said Clarke believes the comptroller's office does not need additional enforcement power to reduce bank failures. She said the agency prefers to work with bankers to improve their practices rather than adopt a punitive attitude.

The study is being issued as bank and savings institutions failures have hit a post-Depression high. A record 184 commercial banks — half of them in the oil-drilling states of Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma — were shut down by regulators last year. Failures this year are running at about the same rate.

Many S&L failures in particular have been attributed to "high-flyers" who pay high interest rates to attract deposits by mail from all over the country and then sink the money in high-risk real estate deals and oil drilling ventures that later go bust.

In January, Clarke released the first phase of the study, examining 171 nationally chartered banks that failed between 1979 and 1987. It showed that in most cases it took a combination of bad management and a poor economy to cause a bank to fail. Only 7 percent of the failures were attributed to the economy alone.

FBI obtains Mauro's reports on finances

AUSTIN (AP) — An FBI agent has requested copies Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro's campaign finance reports in connection with a federal inquiry into developers' transactions with the Veterans Land Board program.

Byron Sage, agent in charge of the FBI office here, said Monday the records have been requested in connection with the land program investigation. He would not give additional information.

"I can tell you that it is in connection with the same case," Sage told the Dallas Morning News.

Assistant Secretary of State Randy Erben said the FBI agent requested copies of Mauro's campaign finance reports for 1984 through 1988.

The reports show who contributes to a political candidate and how the money is spent and are filed with the secretary of state's office.

Reached at his home Monday night, Mauro said he had not been contacted by FBI officials.

"It doesn't make any sense to me," Mauro said.

Andrew Mangan, a land office spokesman, said Mauro has done nothing wrong and is cooperating with investigators.

"Garry doesn't have any qualms about the investigation and is cooperating 100 percent," Mangan said. "And he doesn't feel that he will have any problems at all."

Last week, Mauro confirmed that federal prosecutors have subpoenaed records from his office involving Veterans Land Board transactions by nine developers, four of whom have contributed to his political campaigns.

The Dallas newspaper identified the four developers who contributed to Mauro's campaign as former state Rep. Buck Florence of Longview; Cecile Russell, president of Ranch Enterprises of Austin; and Perry Austin and Bill "Cowboy" Echols, both of Austin.

Campaign records show that Florence has contributed $18,750 to Mauro since 1986, Madison donated $5,500, Echols gave $5,000 and Ms. Russell contributed $2,000.

Florence, Madison and Echols maintained they have done nothing wrong and Ms. Russell could not be reached for comment, the newspaper reported.

Dr. Gott Examination of kidney cysts

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband was hospitalized for a large amount of blood in the urine. The urologist states that there is no reason to worry, since it's only cysts in the kidneys. Is he right?

DEAR READER: I don't know. Kidney cysts can often bleed. If your husband's urologist has ruled out other causes — the most common being tumor or infection — then he is correct.

I believe I am being fair in stating that doctors, when looking for an abnormality, tend to stop at the first one they find. In other words, if the urologist diagnosed the cysts by X-ray, assumed they caused the bleeding and disdained further investigation that's not good enough. Your husband should have cystoscopy, a procedure by which the specialist examines the lower reproductive tract and the interior of the bladder.

In all probability, the urologist performed all the necessary tests, so I suspect that the doctor's advice was sound. For more information, I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report on "Kidney Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: You stated that using high-pressure guns for vaccines was inappropriate in a pediatric clinic.

Schools fight flagging enrollment

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Flagging enrollment at nursing schools around the country is drying up the supply of recruits at hospitals, but area officials say they're fighting the trend.

"The prediction is that it's going to get worse before it gets better," said Myrna Pickard, dean of nursing at the University of Texas at Arlington.

"I don't agree with that. All the University of Texas schools are experiencing increases in enrollment because of the extra effort in recruiting."

Still, recent enrollment figures seem to reflect the national ic. Why? If they are only good for mass inoculations, couldn't a clinic have "inoculation day" and do all DPT or MMR, etc., shots at once?

DEAR READER: For low-volume inoculation programs, the safest procedure is still, in my opinion, the needle and syringe. This technique has less potential for complications. I am sure that in some busy pediatric practices, the vaccine gun would be appropriate. Ask the doctors in your community to explain the reasons for their preferences.

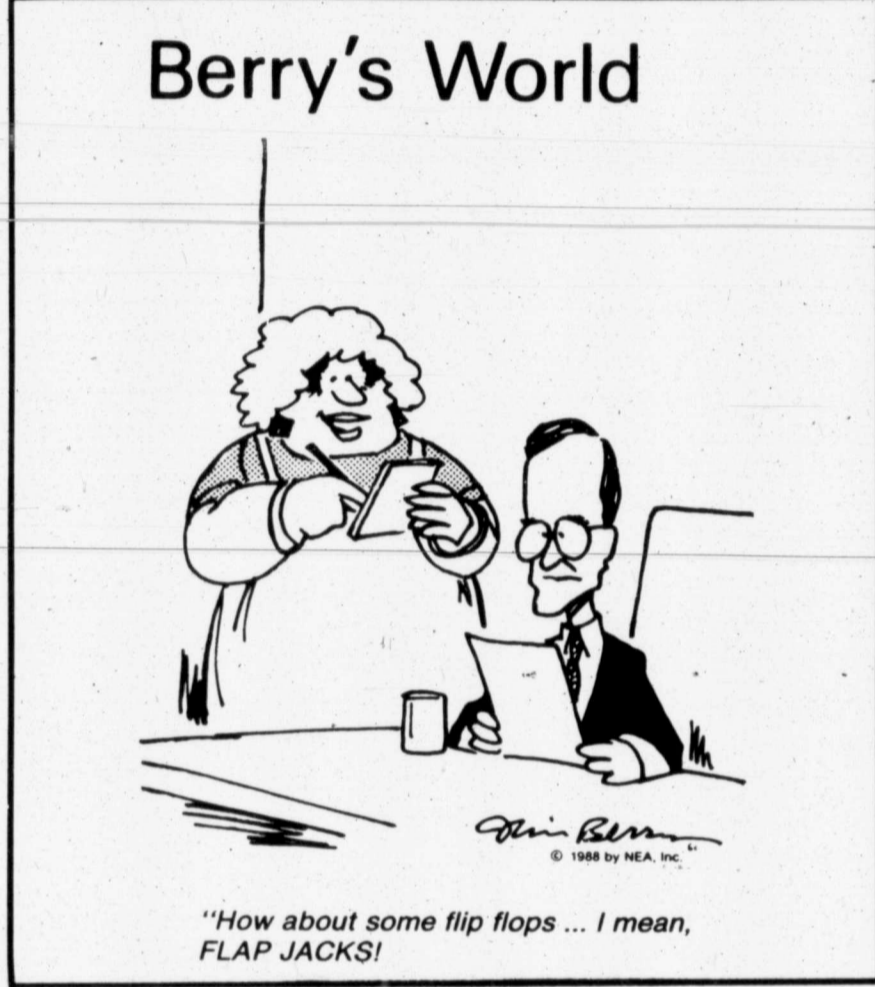

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband had a quadruple bypass several months ago. His blood pressure is low: 92/52 standing, 122/72 sitting. His pulse is 50. He gets dizzy some days, and the doctors don't quite know what to do about it.

DEAR READER: Your husband's low blood pressure may be causing his dizziness. Most bypass patients are given medicine to improve circulation. These drugs can lower blood pressure to unacceptable levels. If your husband is taking routine "heart" medicine, the treatment may be producing his problem. Ask his doctor about this.

After my father's bypass surgery, he felt so awful that he insisted his doctor stop most of his medicines. Thereafter, he felt fine.

If your husband is not taking prescription drugs, his dizziness and low blood pressure may be due to inefficient heart action. In this case, a stress test and other examinations would be in order.
