The reason they're celebrating three years early, friends aren't sure whether Riggan will actually be around when he turns the Big 40

During the AJRA National Finals Rodeo, Riggan was pitched from his horse and landed on his head. The knot-head was easy to find on TV Friends are not sure whether the fall from the horse, his age or both are taking toll on Riggan. Just last week he locked his keys in his office. His wife was out of town, and he had no where to go. On that key ring secure in his office were the of fice keys, car keys and house keys.

Long-term damage isn't likely

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I got a bad electrical shock in 1960, but didn't know how bad until I ran into one of my buddies who was working on the same job then. He said I was unconscious for 10 to 15 minutes. I don't remember being out and received no medical attention. Should I be alert for any problems?

DEAR READER: If you have suffered no ill effects from your electrocution 28 years ago, you needn't worry that problems will develop at this late date. However, your family doctor should be made aware of this information as part of your medical

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR GOTT: Because of a back injury, I saw several doctors. I subsequently obtained copies of my medical records. What a comedy of errors! According to these records, I have bilateral club feet, was born four years before my father and seven years after my son, was injured either two years before or after my actual injury, sought medical care six months before the injury, and had X-rays of my ankle. How can these people continue to practice medicine?

DEAR READER: Sounds like a real hodgepodge to me. Someone desperately needs a lesson in how to take a valid medical history. I can understand a little confusion in anyone's records, but the systematic foul-ups in yours must take first prize.

I suggest that you pack up your medical records, find a doctor you can trust, tell him or her exactly what happened, and let the healer get the right story down on paper. In addition, you might make an official complaint, in writing, to your state medical society. Sooner or later, those original doctors are going to make a gargantuan mistake. The medical society should be able to shape them up. To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report, "Choosing a Physician." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have had severe endometriosis and had a complete hysterectomy. A recent X-ray showed a "bi-lobed cystic mass in the area of the left ovarian fossa." Is it possible the ovary grew back?

DEAR READER: No, the ovary did not grow back. The X-ray showed some kind of tissue in the space where the ovary was. Since, despite some people's assumptions, the ovaries are not usually removed at the time of hysterectomy, I suspect that the Xray picked up the remaining ovary, which — in your case — appears to be irregular and cystic. Of course, I may be wrong; the tissue could be a series of blood clots left over from the surgery, part of a partially removed ova-ry or some other structure. I believe that you can easily solve the mystery by asking your gynecologist about the X-ray findings. Because your gynecologist performed the surgery and knows precisely what was removed (or left in), he or she should be able to answer your question satisfactorily.

Polio victims still suffering

Their childhoods were tragic. They've survived to middle age only to learn that life can get worse.

They are among America's last polio victims: the mostly forgotten sufferers of what may soon be an extinct disease.

"I missed the polio vaccine by a hair," sighs Jim Rager, one of 11 polio patients among the 350 handicapped residents of Inglis House in Wynnefield.

"I got it when I was 5, in 1953," says the soft-spoken Rager. "I was told my name was on the end of the list (for the Salk polio vaccine, then in the experimental stage) ... I just remember playing one day and falling down. I tried to get up and couldn't.'

Across the hall, Jim Culver, 43, says he missed the vaccine by a few years. At age 4, he was brought to a New Jersey lake.

"I went swimming on Sunday On Wednesday I was paralyzed from the neck down," he says. Both men struggled through childhood in wheelchairs. They learned skills to earn a living, but hopes of independence have been dashed. Barring a miracle, they'll live their lives out at Inglis House or some other institution.

It's a matter of controversy, but some experts say there is a post-polio syndrome: 20 to 30 years after contracting poliomyelitis, worsens for many.

Culver may be an extreme example. Soon after contracting the disease, he regained use of his upper body. His fingers were nimble. He learned to repair small appliances and started his own business.

But seven years ago, Culver lost all use of his upper body. He can move only his head now. He must be dressed, fed and moved

"I couldn't find help at home. It was just my Mom. I came here in 1983; there was no choice,' Culver says.

Rager, from the Johnstown area, has limited use of his twisted arms and hands. His legs are weak and stunted. Every other day he straps on heavy steel leg braces and attempts to walk a bit.

"I worked at a rehab center for five years," Rager says. "Assembly work — putting ink pens together, mailing brochures, putting cardboard boxes together. I made a salary, and I had something to look forward to.

'But my condition got worse. It was difficult to get up in the mor-Others in attendance included ning and get dressed. It took longer and longer. I couldn't Coahoma; Alfred and Nelda make the bus. And my parents were getting older ... I came here

In the past two years, Rotary International has raised $120 million to battle the disease overseas. The massive assault leads experts to believe polio can be eradicated worldwide by the end of this century.

Great news - but small comfort to victims such as Rager and Culver, who must fight the battle

'Still, I do want to keep going. I don't want to lie in bed and give up. I've gone a long way.

Culver takes a more resigned approach to his paralysis.

'I had dreams ... I've had to lower my expectations," he says. "You have to adjust, or life will

After the takeout double of one spade, though South had only six highcard points, the six-card heart suit was worth extra, so he was justified in jumping to three hearts as a game invitation. North was happy to go to game, but the contract foundered when East-West employed a traditional defensive understanding. When the king of spades was led, East played the queen. That announced possession of the jack and commanded West to underlead the ace. So East won the second trick with the spade jack so that he could switch to a club. When that happened, West took the A-Q of clubs to set the contract.

What if East had Q-10-5 of spades or Q-5 doubleton? In an honest game, there is no way to communicate such a holding. With the Q-10-5, East might try playing the 10 in the hope that West would know to underlead the ace to his queen, but he should not be surprised if West continues with ace and MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - Bill Musselman, who achieved success at the University of Minnesota in the early 1970s but may be best remembered for an oncourt brawl and off-court NCAA violations, reportedly will be named coach of the NBA expansion Minnesota Timberwolves.

NFL's all-time scoring leaders, The San Francisco 49ers won't was granted an unconditional release Monday at his own request along with running back Joe Cribbs. They were among dozens of players released as NFL teams moved to meet the league's requirement of a 60-man roster by today. Among the others released was Dave Rimington, the Cincinnati Bengals' veteran center who failed to pass his physical after a long holdout. "Ray asked for his release and we acceded," 49ers Coach Bill Walsh said of Wersching. "He met with me Sunday and asked for an appraisal of the situation, and I told him that it was extremely competitive. I said he would have to judge for himself whether or not he would make the team.

Like Wersching, Cribbs also asked to be released.

"Today was important for both Wersching and Cribbs because it gives the rest of the NFL an opportunity to see who available," Walsh said.

Wersching, who turned 38 on Sunday, apparently decided that 24-year-old Mike Cofer, who joined the 49ers this summer as a free agent, is in line to take over the job Wersching held for 11 seasons Wersching holds most of the team's placekicking records. He broke into the NFL in 1973 with San Diego and has a 15-season total of 1,122 points in regularseason games. Cribbs, 30, an eight-year pro, rushed for 690 yards during his two seasons with the 49ers. "He felt that he needed a decision from us as much as Ray did, and told us that he wanted to continue playing," Walsh said. "He said he needed to have some kind of commitment from us.' During his years with the 49ers, Wersching scored 979 points, surpassing Tommy Davis' club record of 738. He also was the leading active scorer in the NFL. Wersching also set 49er records with 190 field goals and 409 extra points. Cribbs was acquired in a trade with the Buffalo Bills before the 1986 season, started in the 49ers' backfield most of that season and was used mostly as a backup last year. Neither player was available for comment Monday, but veteran guard Randy Cross said Wersching's departure didn't surprise him.

"You become fairly perceptive about what's going on," Cross, a 49er since 1976. "The higher you get on that seniority list, the sooner it's going to happen to you."

Shuttle astronauts said ready to go boldly

Americans to space flight are threatening. overshadowed by the rewards, says one of five astronauts scheduled to fly on the first shuttle mission since the Challenger

"There are certain things in life that the importance really transcends any danger that's involved or risk that's involved," Marine Lt. Col. Dave Hilmers said Monday at the last news conference he and fellow Discovery crew members will hold before their flight.

"The sense of privilege that I have in being a part of this and the purpose very much overshadows any fear that I have."

The launch of Discovery, scheduled for late September or early October, will mark the nation's return to manned space flight. On Jan. 28, 1986, Challenger exploded 73 seconds after liftoff, killing its crew of Navy Capt. Rick Hauck, who will command the veteran crew on Discovery's four-day mission, said the flight is important to establish confidence in the space program.

Although safety is important, Hauck said he was concerned about people who believe all risks should be avoided.

If the United States becomes afraid to take any risks then "we and a launch date this week. need to find out who's going to lead the world and follow them," he said.

The mission will be a test flight, Hauck said, noting that the shuttle has undergone 210 happen. In the last year and a half, I've seen how we've modified that machine and how we've done business. So I feel very comfortable with the flight.'

Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration have been hesitant to set a date for the often postponed launch because engineers still are grappling with two problems that developed during a test firing of Discovery's engines on the launch pad at Cape Canaveral on Aug. 10, Hauck said.

One is a small leak of hydrogen gas detected in an area where the orbiter is joined to the external fuel tank. The other is the apparent sluggishness of three gaseous oxygen valves in the fueling system.

Although NASA officials have said they don't think either problem is serious, they still wanted to test both systems. They hope they can announce resolutions

First big choice causes Bush trouble one vote, one vice presidential agenda. candidate, and George Bush has chosen himself a problem - a distraction from the themes of his Republican campaign for the White House.

It may be unfair. It may be, as Bush supporters contend, a creation of the news media. But the Dan Quayle issue is undeniably a campaign detour just when the Republicans wanted to build on the sendoff of their national convention pageantry.

That's a problem for Bush and his strategists, and for Sen. Quayle, who can hardly be enjoying his new line of work very much. It has brought him denunciations and ridicule. He is in fact an intelligent man who works diligently, if selectively, on his legislative issues. He got less than a day to celebrate his sudden leap from junior senator to vice presidential nominee. and Quayle find themselves snarled in a damage control operation. The question is whether and when it will end.

According to a friend of the vice president, one who watched him make his vice presidential selection, Bush chose Quayle on his own, with minimal input from his advisers.

James A. Baker III, who resigned as secretary of the treasury to run the Bush campaign, was said to have been opposed to the selection of Quayle before it was announced. He has since been a loyal supporter, although hardly a cheerleader.

Quayle, 41, was supposed to be the fresh face, the man who for some basic training on na-parison to the Democratic clear, blue sky," Bush said. nominee, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, 67, who has his own political scars, notably the admitted blunder of setting up a Finance Committee. Bentsen called that off after his fundraising plan was disclosed.

His refunds and apology quashed the issue. By the time Gov. Michael Dukakis, Democratic presidential nominee, picked him for the ticket, it was history.

Not so with Quayle, who was fresh, new business in New Orleans when he began by fumbling early questions about the way he got into the Indiana National Guard in 1969.

After a weekend of campaigning — defensively — with Bush, Quayle went back to Washington

That's part of the problem. A system that subjects presidential candidates to almost inhumane scrutiny doesn't do a high-priced breakfast club at thing to check out the vice which lobbyist-donors would dine presidential nominees. One man, with the chairman of the Senate the nominee, gets to pick the vice presidential half of the ticket, by fiat.

Bush has known since late last winter, when his presidential nomination was assured, that he would need a running mate. He even knew the deadline: Aug. 18.

There was time for a careful, thorough search of the field and for close scrutiny of the people in that field. That kind of search might have led Bush to the same conclusion — Dan Quayle. But he would have known the man and the record. The time and the resources were there to avoid unpleasant surprises, for Bush and for Quayle, who obviously didn't see anything like this in his other four campaigns.
