GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — A Delta Airlines jetliner carrying 104 people crashed and burned on takeoff today at Dallas Fort Worth Airport, killing at least 15 people, officials said. At least 20 survived.

Witnesses said the plane went down in hazy sunshine, plowed into the dirt at a runway, broke into two and burst into flames. Many of the survivors climbed to safety through a charred hole in the top of the cabin.

The fire was brought under control quickly, but the partially-blackened, split-open fuselage smoldered more than an hour after the 9:03 a.m. accident, which closed the airport.

An unattributed CBS News report at 11 a.m. CDT said at least 15 people perished.

Delta said the Boeing 727 was Flight 1141 en route to Salt Lake City, carrying 97 passengers and seven crew members, said Jim Lundy, a Delta spokesman in Atlanta. The flight originated in Jackson, Miss., Delta said.

In Washington, National Transportation Safety Board spokesman

Michael Benson said at least seven were killed and at least 20 survived.

"There are probably more" survivors, he said. "We don't know for sure."

"We are anticipating receiving some casualties but we have no idea how many," said Bill Fabian, spokesman Tarrant County Medical Examiner's office.

"The plane had slid sideways about the last 100 yards on the ground. It wasn't a violent crash. It wasn't cartwheeling or anything like that," said Jerry Weeks, of Irving, who works for an airline shuttle service, talked to some of the survivors, some of whom were on stretchers.

"They had no idea what happened," Weeks said.

Survivors "weren't terribly distraught," Weeks said. "They just asked us to call their relatives and say they were OK."

Delta said the three pilots survived.

Ben Waugh, an uninjured passenger on the flight, told reporters the plane "never got in the air."

"I heard a noise — I knew something was wrong," Waugh said. Within a minute of hearing the noise, the plane was in flames, he said. The plane tore in two, and passengers began scrambling through the roof, he said.

David Hooker, 28, of Celina, was waiting at a gas station at the south end of the airport when the plane crashed.

"I heard the normal noise of an airplane taking off. I turned to watch and just barely saw the nose clear a building over there," he said pointing to a low-level warehouse type facility about a half-mile away.

"Then there was a cloud of smoke about three stories high and an explosion," Hooker said.

"I was coming over the bridge on I-30 in Arlington, and I saw a big ball of fire going into the air," Greg Isaacs of Dallas told KRLD radio. "I started driving over there and it looked like it was over near DFW, and I thought, 'No way could it be an airplane accident.'"

WTC fulltime holds, part-time drops

As the fall enrollment for Western Texas College takes shape, it appears fulltime student numbers and the semester hour count will be approximately the same as last year, while a drop in part-time students may keep total enrollment figures down from previous falls. Two days of registration ended Tuesday and the official enrollment was 865 for the first day of class Wednesday.

Before the end of the class signup period Sept. 9, the fall count is expected to rise past

1,000 and "hopefully more," said Dean of Student Services Dr. Duane Hood.

The alltime record enrollment at WTC is 1,414, set in the spring of 1984. Last fall's count was 1,164.

The decline in part-time students noted to date can be attributed in part to changes in state mandates for two subject areas, physical education and art classes.

The state will now only recognize enrollment in such classes up to a point since they traditionally attract repeat students.

But Hood noted this was only one factor. "We're enrolling a little early this year, and it may be that our part-time students just aren't out yet," he said.

With the start of classes, the WTC count is 517 fulltime and 348 part-time students.

When the class signup ended last fall, there were 576 fulltime and 588 part-time students.

The number of semester hours taken compare more closely, however. This fall's number now stands at 9,945 and last year's final figure was 10,528.

Thursday begins bird season

Dove season opens at sunrise Thursday, the first of five specified seasons for game in Scurry County. The season will last until Nov. 9.

County Game Warden Mel Reed said signs are mixed for this year's hunt, although the elements are present for a successful year.

"I'm not seeing the big concentrations of dove this year. The birds are scattered mainly because we've got feed for them everywhere."

He said the abundant feed coupled with generally dry conditions should make tank hunting especially successful at the start.

He noted he has not yet assessed the effects of the minor cold front which passed through the area last weekend. "We either brought some northern birds down or ran ours out of the country," he said.

The bird limit again this year is 12 daily and the hunting hours are from sunrise to sunset.

Other designated seasons for Scurry County include:

—White-tailed deer, opening for archery Oct. 1-30 and for general hunting Nov. 5 through Jan. 1.

—Mule deer, opening for archery Oct. 1-30 and for general hunting Nov. 19-Dec. 4.

—Quail, opening here and statewide Oct. 29-Feb. 26.

—Turkey, opening for archery Oct. 1-30 and for general hunting Nov. 5-Jan. 1.

Street widening, TDC lines mulled

City councilmen held a 2½-hour work session Tuesday night in which the proposed widening of 37th St. was discussed with state highway department officials and the extension of water and sewer lines to the new Texas Department of Corrections unit was outlined by a Lubbock engineer.

Highway department district engineer Bill Burnett and design engineer Linda K. Smith of Abilene, along with resident engineer Ed Vernon, said construction could begin by April or May of 1990, with completion about a year later, if the 37th St. widening proceeded without any major delays.

A resolution about the project is scheduled to be considered in the council's Sept. 12 meeting.

Vernon said that although the street would be widened only from College to Crockett Aves., the highway department would seek approval to have 37th "re-shaped," with gutter replacement on the north side of the street, farther east to El Paso Ave.

Burnett said that if the project

As another warning, we were told the story about the guy who continually berated his wife about her domestic endeavors.

When the ungrateful husband left for work, he told her she was the worst wife, the worst cook, the worst housekeeper and the worst lover a man could have.

When the husband returned home from work that evening, the house was a wreck. It was apparent that a big party had taken place. He worked his way to the kitchen to find his wife and another man engaged in a romantic candlelight dinner.

"What are you doing?" demanded the husband. The wife coolly responded, "I'm working on getting a second opinion."

In Brief

Man guilty

DALLAS (AP) — The former dean of educational services at Brookhaven Community College has been convicted by a Dallas County jury on a charge of possession of child pornography.

Larry Wilson was convicted Tuesday on a charge that he had a videotape showing young boys engaging in sex acts. Wilson testified that he got the tape from a Dallas Police officer.

Man charged

AUSTIN (AP) — Police say a "shy, soft-spoken" neighbor of Trisha Ann Worley is accused of leading the 7-year-old into his apartment, strangling her with the belt of a bath robe, sexually molesting her body and dumping it in Town Lake.

Jet crashes

HONG KONG (AP) — A Chinese jetliner with 89 people aboard skidded off a runway while landing in heavy rain today and broke apart in the sea. Officials said six crewmembers trapped in the submerged nose section were killed.

Alligator hunt starts Thursday

CORKSCREW, Fla. (AP) — Drawn by adventure and hopes of big profits, Florida's 238 newly licensed alligator hunters are getting ready to begin the state's first legal gator hunt in 26 years.

More than 5,000 novice and skilled hunters alike scrambled to apply for the permits after game officials announced the hunt, designed to trim an alligator population that was once threatened by poachers but is now an estimated at 1 million.

Wide-eyed amateurs will be stalking freshwater swamps, lakes and streams with hopes of cashing in on their catch, which can bring as much as $1,000 for a 10-foot gator's skin and meat.

But some experts are wondering if the permit holders really know what they're in for.

"You got to laugh when you hear these people say they're going to make money off this hunt," said 37-year-old Dale Dunaway, who operates one of Florida's few alligator processing plants.

"They don't figure in the time, expenses — and don't forget the danger," Dunaway said Tuesday. "I'd like to see some people's faces the first time a gator takes a bite at their airboat."

For 30 days beginning at sunset Thursday, the randomly selected permit holders will be allowed to hunt in designated areas where the gator population is extraordinarily high.

Waterfront residents all over Florida called for a hunt against the carnivorous reptiles after a 10½-foot bull gator killed 4-year-old Erin Glover in the Gulf Coast community of Englewood in June.

But game officials have placed tight restrictions on the hunt. Permit holders will be working at night, when flashlights make the reptiles' eyes glow eerily red. And they are not allowed to use guns, relying on clubs, traps and hooks attached to poles.

The harvest is limited to up to 3,435 gators, with each hunter limited to 15 gators each.

"We expect to be up non-stop from Thursday until about Monday, either skinning or hunting," Dunaway said at his 2-year-old processing operation in this remote southwest Florida town. "We're gonna be looking at a lot of dead gators."

Skinner an average alligator is a full day's work, Dunaway reckons.

First he plunges his hunting knife through the gator's thick hide at the tip of its tail. Then, it's a slow and difficult cut to the snout.

"You got to look at it as an hour a foot to properly skin and gut a gator," said Dunaway. "There's no way around it. It's hard work, you bet."

Some of the experienced hunters will be permitted to use the equipment at the gator house, a cement frame enclosed by screen wire and decorated by deer antlers.

Stay of execution granted

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Confusion over the execution date for a man slated to die by injection for killing a Dallas police officer has resulted in the man being granted a stay of execution.

Ramon Montoya, who had been scheduled to die early today, was granted a stay of execution Tuesday because Texas Department of Corrections officials weren't notified of the pending execution.

"I wasn't even aware there was a (execution) warrant," prison spokesman David Nunnelee said. Executions are carried out by prison officials on orders from state district court.

But the order apparently got lost in the mail.

The warrant for Montoya to receive a lethal injection Wednesday was signed July 21 in state district court and mailed to prison officials, a spokesman for the Dallas County district attorney's office said.

Prison officials, however, never received it.

A stay was issued Tuesday by State District Judge Tom Price of Dallas, postponing Montoya's execution until Dec. 1, Ron Dusek, a spokesman for the state attorney general's office, said.

The stay was issued on the grounds that attorneys for Montoya need more time to prepare motions and the judge wanted to review the case further, Dusek said.

Fur Flies as Newlyweds Battle Over Marriage Bed

DEAR ABBY: Peter and I have been married for less than one year, and I am now faced with a problem that is threatening to break up our marriage. We are not kids. I am 45 and Peter is 47. He absolutely will not allow any of our pets in bed with us. (We have a dog and two cats.) Peter is extremely fastidious and says it's a matter of "cleanliness."

Abby, our pets are well-groomed and they are just as clean as people. I had these pets before I married him, and they were always permitted on my bed, so now they are confused and hurt when they are not allowed on my bed.

Is there a solution? Am I wrong to argue this point? I love my husband, but I think he's being unreasonable. Please help me. My pets are so angry, they won't even look at me.

ANIMAL LOVER

DEAR ANIMAL LOVER: I hope you love your husband more than your pets because you may be forced to make a choice. Although some animals are cleaner than people, a man who is not accustomed to having pets in his bed is not likely to change. Your poor pets are understandably confused to find that a part of their domain is suddenly "off limits." However, the word from here is: Retrain your pets. They may resist at first, but it can be done. Dumb animals are not so dumb.

DEAR ABBY: Recent studies have shown that there is a dramatic decrease in automobile accidents when people drive with their lights on in the daytime.

Drivers have been a little slow to pick up on this. We have just returned from Canada, where we noticed that about 75 percent of the drivers were driving with their lights on during the day. When I

DEAR LARRY: Many others wrote to stress the safety advantage of daytime driving with the lights on. It is the law in Sweden and Denmark. Thankfully, we are beginning to see the light.

DEAR ABBY: I was very much interested in your advice, "Do not transfer medicine from its original container to another." I have to, with Anacin. In their effort to make the bottle child-proof, the makers of Anacin made it "elderly-proof," too. I am in my 80s, and with my arthritic fingers and poor eyesight, I find it very hard to line up the arrows and pry off the lid.

Please let the Anacin people know this. Their product is very good — once you get to it.

Former captain testifies about drug case leaks

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Orange County Sheriff's Department officers knew of a security leak on drug cases in 1987, but an investigation did not include then-sheriff James Wade, the former chief narcotics officer has testified.

Wade is on trial here on charges in a 10-count federal indictment alleging conspiracy to make and sell illegal drugs.

Former Capt. Wayne Dial, who was narcotics division commander, testified Tuesday that he investigated "everybody in the department from captain on down" to find the suspected leaks. But the investigations did not include the chief deputy and sheriff, Dial said, because that didn't occur to him.

He said narcotics officers devised ways to try to prevent leaks, including using codes on citizen band radios instead of assigned police bands that citizens pick up on scanners.

"The last thing that was said before we left was the address and name of perpetrator," Dial said. After that information was revealed, no one was allowed to use the telephone, he said.

"Several times, the sheriff would tell us, 'I'll meet you over there,'" Dial said. Once, when Dial went back into the office as officers were leaving for a drug bust, he saw Wade on the telephone, he said.

Donnie Flowers, 27, has testified that he "cooked" methamphetamine in clandestine laboratories for Wade in a drug operation and that Wade warned him of possible drug busts through telephone pager codes.

Prosecutors have identified Flowers, 27, and Bobby Lee Rogers, 31, as two of three undicted co-conspirators with Wade.

In other testimony Tuesday, former deputy Donald Duhon testified nearly 90 minutes in a closed-door hearing to determine what type of evidence and testimony he will be allowed to give in the trial. Duhon is expected to testify publicly.

Under a judge's order, Wade was removed as sheriff July 11.

His replacement, Sheriff Newton Johnson, testified Monday he was present with Wade when he told the U.S. attorney he was going to pose as a crooked sheriff to catch drug dealers.

A defense attorney has told the jury Wade was pretending to be a "dirty sheriff" to catch drug "kingpins."

Discovery astronauts hold final rehearsal

The 56-hour simulation began

Tuesday and involved about 300 people at Johnson Space Center in preparation for mission STS-26, a four-day flight that will mark the first launch of a NASA space shuttle in more than 2 1/2 years.

NASA spokeswoman Barbara Selby said, "The first thing after launch, when they were going into orbit, the right engine failed so that they had to do what's called 'abort to orbit.'"

"That means the shuttle can still make it into orbit, but lower than planned, so they have to adjust their activities," Ms. Selby said. "They did achieve the ATO, as we call it, and made the necessary adjustments to continue the mission."

The shuttle crew faced another problem later Tuesday when they tried to deploy the $100 million communications satellite.

A tilt table used to deploy the satellite stuck at a 24-degree angle, meaning two crew members will have to go outside the orbiter today to manually adjust the table to the needed 50-degree angle, Ms. Selby said. That simulation will take place in a water facility at JSC, she added.

Officials say Commander Rick Hauck, pilot Richard Covey and mission specialists David Hilmers, Mike Lounge and George "Pinky" Nelson are expected to face about 150 simulated problems during the lengthy test.

But the first problem of the day wasn't simulated. The scheduled 8 a.m. test got off to a late start because of a malfunction in the shuttle simulator, but the problem was corrected and count-down ended at 9:04 a.m., said spokesman Bill Green.

Spokesman Brian Welch said as many as 200 others are taking part in the rehearsal in New Mexico and California, along with flight and ground crews at Johnson Space Center.

"The people who do the simulation, the 'sim' supervisors, sort of wage a mental battle with the flight controllers," Welch said. "They will do everything they can to make it more difficult. They try to throw a problem at each major (flight) system."

Clear thinking guides defense

By James Jacoby

There's no pun intended, but skillful defense of a bridge hand is a tricky business. There's certainly no doubt that West got off to the correct opening lead with the queen of hearts. When declarer won the heart ace and forced out the ace of diamonds, it might look easy to West simply to continue with a second heart. But doing so would represent lazy thinking.

West has the responsibility of analyzing South's bidding. The bid of two no-trump was only invitational and should show 10-12 high-card points. Declarer had the A-K of hearts and probably something in the black suits. If South has as much as the king of spades or the Q-J, there is no defense that will stop three no-trump. But what if declarer has no more than the queen or jack of spades? If that is the case, the defenders have enough spade tricks available to set the contract.

So the right play is for West to switch to a low spade, catering to East holding K-J, K-Q or maybe even five spades headed by the king. The point to this apparently dangerous play is that declarer has nine tricks unless the defenders can quickly take four spade tricks. Even at the possible cost of an overtrick, West should take the chance.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

Work change causes concern

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: It's rumored at work that management is trying to get rid of the chairs. The machines will be raised and we will have to stand up all day. Is there any medical evidence to indicate this is a poor idea?

DEAR READER: For the average healthy adult, standing at work is not harmful. I am not sure in what way chairs are used in your work, but, all things being equal, I can see no particular medical contra-indication to your workplace modifications.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please tell me what you can about the most current treatments for Agent Orange. My husband has skin rash, skin abscesses, night sweats and periodic swelling of the lymph glands.

DEAR READER: Agent Orange is a military code name for two defoliants, 2, 4-D and 2, 4, 5-T. The mixes contained the poisonous chemical dioxin, which has been linked to cancer and birth defects in certain animals. According to an article in Scientific American magazine, no study has yet shown that the compound causes "severe chronic human effects." According to the article, not a single death has been attributed to dioxin. Therefore, to my knowledge, no treatment has been proposed for dioxin exposure because, apparently, no treatment is necessary. The issue of human damage from Agent Orange remains controversial.

I suggest that your husband check with his doctor for alternative explanations for his symptoms. To help him to find treatment, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Medical Specialists." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: You had a letter from a mother who wondered why her 6-month-old woke up screaming at night. I'll bet that baby was hungry. Expecting a child that young to sleep through the night is unrealistic.

DEAR READER: You're probably right. Problems that seem complicated often have simple answers.

Rotan chamber slates seminar on time management

The Rotan Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a time management seminar Saturday, Sept. 24, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The seminar will be conducted at the Rotan High School auditorium and will feature Rita Davenport, internationally known expert on time management and a resident of Phoenix, Ariz.

Registration for the seminar is $40 per person and will include a Daytime Notebook and lunch.

Advance registration must be received by Sept. 15 as limited seating for the seminar is available.

For more information call 735-2469, 735-2215, 735-3115 or 236-6388. The area code is 915.

Registration can be mailed to Rotan Chamber of Commerce, Box 275, Rotan, Tex. 79546.

Scientists studying marine population in Canada have found plenty. Their findings include: seals, fish and polar bears in the Arctic are contaminated by chemicals carried north on ocean currents and blown in the air. White beluga whales are riddled with cancers, lesions and ulcers. Acid rain is wiping out salmon in Nova Scotia, where salmon already have vanished from 13 rivers.

Furor mars battle against 'viruses'

NEW YORK (AP) — Rivals in the fight against computer "viruses" are spending much of their time battling each other instead of their common enemy: the software invaders that can secretly destroy computer data.

The dispute concerns which of two groups has the qualifications and impartiality to evaluate anti-virus software for customers. The competition could slow progress in combating the viruses.

"I personally know most of the people in this industry and I have never seen this kind of animosity," Brian Camenker, head of the PC users group of the Boston Computer Society, said Tuesday.

The battle centers on products — called "vaccines" — that are designed to combat viruses. Viruses are tiny pieces of computer code that pranksters or others slip into normal programs to "infect" computers when used.

Although they are rare and have done limited damage so far, viruses are feared because of their potential to be spread from one computer to another, wiping out millions of dollars' worth of data in minutes.

Publicity about recent viruses — including those dubbed the "Christmas Virus," the "Black Friday Virus" and the "Pakistani Brain" — led to anti-viral software products, but there is no easy or reliable way to know whether they work.

Customers and producers agree on the need for an independent panel of experts to review the software. The question splitting the industry is who should be in charge.

Pitted against each other are the 2-month-old Computer Virus Industry Association, based in Santa Clara, Calif., and a loose collection of other computer experts led by Jon R. David, a consultant in Tappan, and Harold Highland, editor of Computers & Security magazine in Elmont.

The controversy heated up Monday with the publication of a front-page article on the debate in MIS Week, a trade newspaper.

Each side accuses the other of using sloppy techniques and manipulating the testing process for its own purposes. The intensity of the debate has left some software developers disgusted with the whole business.

An independent testing panel is essential because most computer users have never seen a virus. If they had a useless defense, they would not know it until a virus caused problems.

"This kind of testing needs to be done professionally and carefully, particularly if other people are going to place reliance on it," said Robert V. Jacobson, president of New York-based International Security Technology Inc.

Jacobson has cautiously thrown his support behind the Computer Virus Industry Association, which was formed in June by a group led by John McAfee, president of InterPath Corp. of Santa Clara.

The association is assembling an independent university testing panel composed of people from three New York-area colleges: Pace University, Adelphi University and Sarah Lawrence College. The panel is headed by John Cordani, who teaches computer science at Adelphi and Pace.

David and Highland say Cordani and the three schools don't have the necessary credentials. They also say McAfee's InterPath products will have an advantage in the testing because McAfee invented a virus simulator that will be used as a testing mechanism.

Highland is getting money from his magazine's British-based publisher, Elsevier Advanced Technology Publications, for his own review of anti-viral software. But Highland said he is not interested in operating an ongoing software review board.

For all the controversy over anti-viral products, computer security experts agree that the best protection is prevention. That means being extremely careful about dangerous practices — such as using software that is offered free on computer bulletin boards.

In December, a virus containing a phantom Christmas message took only two hours to spread throughout a network used by International Business Machines Corp. and universities worldwide.

Native buffalo are weathering drought

HAYES, S.D. (AP) — Seemingly unaffected, buffalo roam the parched South Dakota prairie on America's largest bison ranch while crops wither and domestic livestock suffer and even die because of the drought.

"Nature sure gave them about everything it takes to survive ... except the bullet," said Roy Houck, who with his late wife, Nellie, started the Houck Buffalo Ranch nearly three decades ago.

The hardy bison, native to North America, were hunted to near extinction in the late 1800s for their skins and meat.

Houck's buffalo forage on brown grass and linger near water holes. The ranch has more than 200 ponds, all of which have been drawn down by the drought, and some are almost dry.

Depending on the season, 3,000 to 4,500 buffalo inhabit the 50,000-acre ranch that's fenced into 35 pastures.

After the various herds are allowed to graze in one pasture for a few weeks, the gate to the next pasture is opened, and the huge beasts move into the area to resume foraging.

"The main breeding herd, we don't feed them anything but grass," said the 83-year-old

Houck. "We try to supplement the calves a little the first year to give them a boost."

Although the drought seems not to have affected the herd, its impact may show up next spring in a smaller calf crop, Houck said, explaining that this is the mating season.

"These cows won't conceive if they're not in good shape," Houck said, glancing over at the rummaging animals about 30 yards away. "But so far these cows look pretty good. They're holding their meat pretty well."

The ranch hasn't had a decent rain in more than a year, and 100-plus-degree temperatures have been common all summer.

But the drought of 1988 is no match yet for the Dust Bowl days of the 1930s, Houck said.

"The dry dust storms of the '30s still haunt me," he said. "It was so dry in the spring of 1934 the grass never even sprouted."

Not that Houck isn't concerned now.

"If we're forced into another year of drought, we'll probably have to graze our pastures a lot longer than we'd like to," he said. "After going through those dry '30s, you wonder how long it's going to last."

Note of Thanks,

To our many friends for their concern and their thoughtfulness during my illness; their gifts of food, flowers, cards and prayers, We thank you.

We believe that prayers have been answered and I am doing well and am on my way to recovery.

Currently I plan to be in my office part time, September 1, and full time in the near future.

Again, thank you all.

West German tragedy not likely to affect state shows

by The Associated Press
The crash of three Italian jets that killed and injured spectators at a West German flight demonstration probably will not affect upcoming Texas air shows, organizers said.
Air performances in the United States already follow strict Federal Aviation Administration guidelines that ensure the safety of spectators, show coordinators said.
Forty-nine spectators were killed and 500 others were injured Sunday in the crash at Ramstein Air Base in West Germany.
Injuries to so many spectators could not happen at a Confederate Air Force show, or at any air show in the United States, according to Col. Archie Donahue, CAF director of flight operations, and Ralph Royce, CAF executive director.

When the CAF performs its World War II airpower demonstrations — complete with simulated bombs, fireballs and machine gun fire — it does so only under FAA control, authorities said.
"We operate here under a waiver, with very rigid rules, promulgated by the FAA," Donahue said. "So, anytime those high-speed aircraft are operating in front of a crowd in the United States, they're going parallel to the crowd line."
Although the West German tragedy wasn't expected to hurt attendance at the Confederate Air Force's Airshow '88 in Harlingen on Oct. 6-9, the disaster will not go unnoticed, CAF leaders said.
Officials said no changes will be made in the Wings Over Houston air show Oct. 1-2 at Ellington Field, and sponsors of the Fort Worth International Airfest planned for Oct. 15-16 at Meacham Field said that show also is likely to be unaffected by the tragedy.

The program and safety measures for Wings Over Houston have been inspected and approved by the FAA, said Lou Lewis, spokesperson for the show. That includes the flight maneuvers the U.S. Navy Blue Angels will perform.
The Blue Angels performance in Houston is expected to draw an even larger crowd than the estimated 100,000 people who saw the show last year, Lewis said.

Nixon was reluctant to tape sessions at White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon's former top aide says the 37th president not only was reluctant to install an extensive taping system in the White House, but that he quickly lost awareness that his every conversation was being recorded.
"The historiography of the Nixon administration will eventually be much the richer as a result of Richard Nixon's decision to tape-record his meetings and telephone conversations," writes H.R. Haldeman, Nixon's onetime chief of staff. "Nixon was not thinking of historians when he made this decision, but they will be the ultimate beneficiaries."

Haldeman discusses the origin of the taping system, which provided the evidence that eventually drove Nixon from office in the Watergate scandal, in the summer issue of Prologue, the quarterly publication of the National Archives.

There is no reference to that in the Prologue article.
The former aide said he chose to write about the taping system because the archives next year will release 60 hours of the recordings for public listening.
"Nixon abhorred the idea of taping the president's meetings and telephone conversations," Haldeman writes. He said he and Nixon discovered the taping system of his predecessor, Lyndon B. Johnson, on inauguration day and that the new president ordered it removed.

The major reason for the system, Haldeman says now as before, was Nixon's failed attempt to halt inaccurate reports that came out of his meetings with various people. Other reasons, he said, were that Nixon wanted records for his memoirs and an accurate account of what foreign leaders said to him.

Office or Mail to
Snyder Daily News
P.O. Box 949
Snyder, TX.

In each advertisement on this page you will find the contestants in a prominent football game being played around the country this weekend. On the entry blank at the bottom of the page, fill in your selection of the WINNING TEAM only...opposite the name of the business firm on the entry blank. Then clip out the entry blank and send it to FOOTBALL CONTEST EDITOR, SNYDER DAILY NEWS, BOX 949, or bring it by the News Office at 3600 College Avenue. Entries must be in the hands of the editor by 5:00 p.m., Friday. Games ending in a tie must be specified as a tie or else it will be considered a miss. To avoid splitting the prize money a TIE-BREAKER slot will be provided on each entry blank. Pick the total points of the score for that game and in case of a tie the one who picks the winner and the nearest number of total points will receive the prize money. The same formula will apply to second prize winners. In the case of a perfect score, the formula would apply for the cash prize, and all submitting a perfect score will receive a free one-year subscription to the Snyder Daily News. (Only one subscription per family) There will be fun for the entire family. Only one entry blank will be permitted for any one person. More than one will disqualify all the person's entries. Scores listed on the entry blank will have no bearing except in the case of the tie-breaker. Sign your entry blank and list your address and phone number and watch for the winner's story in next Tuesday's SDN. Employees of the SDN and their families are not eligible to enter.
