

Meeting held Tuesday...

78th District seat eligibility question nearing showdown

A meeting was held in Austin Tuesday at the Secretary of State's office to consider the candidacy of Democratic nominee David Counts of Knox City for the 78th District house of representatives seat formerly held by Steve Carriker.

At noon Wednesday, however, there was no word as to any official decisions reached.

Counts, nominated by Democratic party chairmen for the post, seeks to oppose Republican Rod Waller of Snyder on the November ballot.

Both parties disagree as to Counts' eligibility, however, specifically in the manner in which Carriker withdrew his candidacy in order to run for the 30th District state senatorial seat.

A lawsuit filed by a Democratic Party voting precinct chairman in Taylor County prompted a judge's decision that Carriker was an "ineligible" candidate.

Waller has contested this ruling, however, and the Republican Party contends the lawsuit was politically biased and that Carriker legally withdrew as a candidate.

The difference in the two interpretations is that an ineligible candidate can be replaced on the ballot and a candidate who has withdrawn cannot.

The Secretary of State's office is involved since it officially certifies the names of all candidates for the ballot. Friday is the last See BALLOT, page 9

ISD count 'stabilizing' after declines

Enrollment repeats near last year's count after Labor Day

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

Student enrollment in Snyder public schools seems to have stabilized with the 1988-89 school year after dropping in student numbers the two years previous.

This was the indication Tuesday as students topped the 3,500 mark upon returning from the Labor Day holiday.

As indicated on the first day of school last Thursday, the current enrollment is near the same figure as last year. The total counted Tuesday was 3,514 as compared to 3,549 one year ago, a decline of 35 students or approximately 1 percent.

The enrollment figures at the elementary level declined by less than 1 percent with four of the six elementary campuses posting enrollment increases.

During the 1985-86 school year and prior to that, Snyder's student numbers were often at a high mark of just over 3,700.

This year's figures indicate enrollment seems to have stabilized after a drop of from 200 to 260 students.

The comparison varies somewhat since the district did not have a pre-kindergarten class three years ago. Some 68 students are now enrolled in pre-K.

Tuesday's count also showed an 84 student increase when compared to the first day of school last Thursday. Enrollment traditionally levels off following the end of the school year's first holiday.

With the district's enrollment picture now stabilized, Superintendent Dalton Moseley said it appears the five teachers employed on "substitute status" in August can be hired as regular fulltime teachers.

The five were given contracts with the stipulation that their permanent status was contingent on student enrollment numbers.

At just over 3,500 students, Moseley noted the district also complies with the 22 student per teacher ratio, a new state mandate, at every campus.

"We're got several classrooms where we're at 22, but we're still meeting the requirements," he See COUNT, page 9

CAMPAGNING — 46-year-old Amarillo congressman Beau Boulter discusses his campaign for the United States Senate against Sen. Lloyd Bentsen in a Wednesday morning breakfast at the Willow

Boulter stumps locally

By BOB CAMPBELL
SDN Staff Writer

United States senatorial candidate Beau Boulter said Wednesday that Republican economic policy under George Bush would be more attentive to the Texas agriculture and oil industries than it has been under President Reagan.

Addressing about two dozen local Republicans in a 7 a.m. breakfast at the Willow Park Inn, the Amarillo congressman linked his candidacy with Bush's and said the presidential nominee's background as a Texas oilman should have a strong appeal to Texas voters in the Nov. 1 election.

Discussing his opponent, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who is also running for the vice presidency with Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, Boulter said, "There are two Lloyd Bentsens, but he can't have it both ways. He doesn't want to be your senator anymore, and Beau Boulter does."

He said Dukakis' stand in favor of gun control is particularly repugnant to his constituents in the 13th Congressional District, which he said has the highest percentage of private gun ownership of any congressional district in the state.

He noted that the Texas Conservative Union during Bentsen's 1982 re-election campaign against Dallas Rep. Jim Collins criticized the Bentsen family's method of obtaining large tracts of Rio Grande Valley land in the 1940s, by letting employees pay for the land with federal Land Bank appropriations and then assuming ownership when the land was paid for.

Boulter said those transactions "should be an issue inasmuch as he has never done anything for those people. I don't speak See BOULTER, page 9

Q. — When will Wal-Mart open?

A. — Officials in Bentonville, Ark. note that construction is ahead of schedule and that there is now a possibility the store could open by the end of this year, possibly around Dec. 1. The latest possible opening date now quoted is after Jan. 1. When first announced, the store was to open in the spring of 1989.

Voting now underway for pork referendum

Voting is scheduled Wednesday and Thursday in the county extension agent's office for the nationwide "pork promotion and research" referendum.

Pork producers across the country will be asked to decide the future of the pork checkoff. The checkoff is currently a nationwide program, but must carry a majority vote of the pork producers during the referendum in order to continue.

The checkoff is at the rate of .25 of one percent of value or 25 cents per $100 on all hogs and pigs, as well as on all import hogs and pork products. The majority of the funds are spent for pork promotion with a small percent going for administrative cost.

The National Pork Board collects and distributes the funds and audits the expenditures. This is an elected producers board which also contracts with existing pork industry organizations to carry out the program.

This national checkoff program includes all producers, large and small, as well as importers of hogs and pork products. Any person may vote who produced or owned two or more hogs or pigs for sale from Nov. 1, 1986 until the referendum date. Importers may also vote. There is no age limit on those eligible to vote.

The issue has been endorsed by U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, chairman of the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Livestock, Dairy and Poultry.

The two-day referendum is scheduled at local county extension offices in all 50 states. Producers will vote in the county where they reside. Partnerships, corporations, and cooperatives will vote in the county where their headquarters is located. The Scurry County Extension office is located at 2605 Avenue M.

The office hours during the referendum will be 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Review board set to hear value protest

The three-member review board for the Scurry County Appraisal District will be in session Thursday to consider assessment protests related to personal property filed by three local business operations.

The board will convene at 9 a.m. and Chief Appraiser Ray Peveler said he expects all business to be completed during the morning.

He said the values in question likely total some $150,000.

The three protests involve personal property assessments for commercial-related vehicles and inventory.

The plan is to place solar-powered backpacks on captured insects. The bee would then be returned to its comrade and the units would transmit infrared signals so that the activity of the bees could be monitored.

Somebody suggested that such a device might just be the thing to supervise persons on probation or parole. The idea might even have expanded market acceptance—for parents of teenagers.

If you and your partner were playing a convention called the Michaels cue-bid, you could bid two diamonds over one diamond, not to force to game but to show 5-5 in the majors without too much in the way of high cards. In the 1942 setting of "Murder at the Bridge Table," East made a takeout double and South arrived in three no-trump.

The opening lead was won in dummy and the king of diamonds was led. Of course East won and proceeded to lead hearts for no reason except that dummy had only the single heart 10 but had the 10-5 of spades. Was there any way for him to know which suit to lead? Yes indeed. Although it's standard practice for a defender with an inconsequential holding in dummy's long suit to give count (low from an odd number of cards, high from even), the situation changes when it is obvious that partner cannot make use of such information. West had the opportunity to make a dramatic "suit-preference" play by playing the diamond 10 when East won the ace. East would then play a spade and the defenders would take five quick tricks in that suit to beat the contract two tricks.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books.

Signal takes on new meaning

How would you bid the East hand? If you were playing standard methods, you would overcall North's one diamond with one spade and hope that you would have an opportunity at a convenient level to mention hearts later.

Man arrested in connection with rifle theft

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Police officers arrested a man in connection with the theft of 11 automatic rifles from Fort Sill, Okla., last week by a bogus non-commissioned officer.

Timothy Scott Boling, 25, of Lawton, Okla., was charged Tuesday with theft of government property in an initial appearance before U.S. Magistrate Robert K. Roach.

INTELLIGENT CHILD BUT LOW ACHIEVER?

There are a large number of children who have average or above average intelligence but do poorly in school. This has confused both parents and school officials for a number of years. Many different explanations have been offered but none have satisfied both groups. More importantly no solutions have been given. Until now!

In a recently released book entitled ATTENTION DEFICIT DISORDER, the author, Glenn Hunsucker, explains this common disorder of children and the reason it is often overlooked. Mr. Hunsucker is Director of ADD Centers in Abilene and Fort Worth, Texas and includes several case studies in his book. This 174 pg. book could be the catalyst for changing the entire outlook of our school system toward the underachieving student. It could also change the attitude and approach of the mental health profession when dealing with troubled children. Four characteristics of ADD:

1. Short attention span
2. Easily distracted
3. Doesn't complete tasks
4. Easily frustrated

As stated earlier, this book provides concrete solutions that may surprise the reader. Parents will appreciate that they are NOT blamed for being the problem. A welcome relief from either being blamed for poor parenting or blaming themselves for the child's shortcomings. This book is currently available at Hasting's Bookstores or ordered from Forrester Publishing, P.O. Box 7046, Abilene, TX. 79608 by sending $14.95 Tax & Postage paid. ISBN: 0-9619650-0-2.

Former banker indicted

AUSTIN (AP) — Former United Bank of Texas chairman Ruben Johnson has been named in a 13-count federal indictment charging that he stole or misapplied bank funds in 1983 and 1984.

The indictment, returned Tuesday by a federal grand jury stems from an investigation into more than $700,000 in expense vouchers paid by the bank to George Zapalac, a contractor who did construction for the bank, Assistant U.S. Attorney Helen Eversberg of San Antonio said.

Johnson has admitted accepting what he termed developer fees from Zapalac for finish-out work done on space leased at United Bank Tower at 400 W. 15th St.

Some tenants in the building and some of Johnson's partners have said Johnson's fees amounted to kickbacks, and have filed civil suits to recoup the money.

Each of the 13 counts charge that Johnson, "with intent to defraud, did abstract, purloin, willfully misapply and cause to be misapplied more than $100 of the moneys, funds and credits belonging to the bank and entrusted to its care and custody through the funding of a United Bank of Texas expense voucher."

Johnson and his attorneys said Tuesday that he would plead not guilty to the charges.

"I was authorized to do it, and I did it," Johnson, 58, said of collecting the fees.

The indictment was termed by Johnson as "a reshuffle of the civil lawsuit," in which two former partners and building tenants sued over the fees. A jury in late 1986 awarded the plaintiffs $1.2 million, and Johnson has appealed the verdict.

"They've converted the civil lawsuit to a criminal lawsuit," Johnson said.

His attorneys at the time and the bank's board, had said at the time that he had the right to collect the fees.

"The bank's directors were aware of this," Johnson said.

One of his attorneys, Bill White of Austin, said

The indictment "may be a blessing in disguise" because it will allow Johnson to air his side of the story, attorney Bill White of Austin said. He also said the federal statute under which Johnson was indicted is "vague... sort of a catch-all statute."

"Our position is (the fees were) legitimate developer fees," White said. "The government is going to attempt to call it something else."

United Bank was closed in June 1987.

Johnson remains on the board of directors of Security National Bank, formerly United Bank Oak Hill, and controls a majority of the stock through voting trust agreements. Johnson also does consulting work, according to his lawyers.

Johnson surrendered his passport and was released on a $50,000 appearance bond following a short appearance Tuesday before U.S. Magistrate Stephen Capelle.

The indictment lists 13 payments totaling $731,609 from September 1983 through September 1984, ranging from $21,981.81 to $123,312.47.

Survivors differ on ban of demonstrations at airshows

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An American couple injured during a European air show accident say they will never attend another air demonstration, but disagree on whether such exhibitions should be banned.

Air Force Sgt. Jeffrey McCanch, 23, his wife, Tammy McCanch, 21, and their 28-month-old son, Jeffrey McCanch II, are among a group of Americans being treated at the burn unit of Brooke Army Medical Center.

The McCanches were among several hundred spectators injured Aug. 28 when three Italian jets crashed during a demonstration at Ramstein Air Force Base, West Germany.

McCanch suffered burns over his hands and his face and his wife suffered burns to her hands.

Their son, who had skin graft surgery on Tuesday, suffered burns to his face, neck, back, chest, arms and legs.

The McCanches, who have been in West Germany two years, said they would not view another air show again.

They disagreed however, whether air shows should be banned.

"I don't think there is a purpose for them," Mrs. McCanch said Tuesday.

But her husband, who is assigned to a bomb disposal unit at Kapaun Air Station near Ramstein, said the public is interested in the expensive aircraft.

"It shows the public the capabilities of the aircraft. I know the public would like to find out more (about) the capabilities of an F-16," McCanch said.

"They want to see if they can really do a vertical climb for an X amount of miles and they get can go to the air shows and find out that they can really do some things and it serves a good purpose like that," he said.

McCanch said he and his family were sitting in a group when the crash occurred and that parts of the aircraft landed about 30 feet near them.

McCanch said he was trying to take pictures of the aircraft when he saw them collide.

Police recapture cop killer

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

Finding help for impotence

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband and I were both widowed from our previous spouses three years ago and are now 70. We have a good marriage. We are not too old to enjoy sex, but my husband cannot get an erection. He weighs 270, and can ejaculate, but it gives me no enjoyment. What can you suggest?

DEAR READER: The symptoms you describe suggest that your husband has a physical cause for his sexual disability. He needs a complete physical examination to rule out the common causes of impotence, such as diabetes, low male-hormone levels, vascular insufficiency, alcohol abuse, genital inflammation and neurological diseases (for example, multiple sclerosis). Once the cause is determined, the doctor can offer help and treatment.

Your husband may be aided by seeing a urologist who is familiar with the variety of penile implants that can be used in this situation. For more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report, "Impotence." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

I think that your husband should be made aware that he can satisfy your sexual needs despite his impotence. In fact, many women have found that penile stimulation is less satisfactory than other methods. Your doctor can give you specific advice. If your husband can still ejaculate and he is willing to stimulate you in other ways, you both can have sexual fulfillment, regardless of whether or not he can achieve erection.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Our daughter, 51, has membranous kidneys, with edema in her legs and chest cavity. What can you tell us about this disease?

DEAR READER: Membranous glomerulonephritis is a chronic kidney ailment marked by abnormal deposits of material within the renal filters. It causes loss of blood protein and an elevation of blood fats, leading to edema (excess tissue fluid), with swollen legs and accumulation of liquid within the chest cavity.

At present, there is no universally accepted treatment for this disease, and its cause is unknown. Cortisone appears to help retard progression of the condition, but its use may be limited by side effects, such as hypertension and cataracts. The use of immunosuppressive drugs (medicine to retard the body's reactions to itself) is still experimental.

Your daughter needs to be under the care of someone who is familiar with the condition and has access to the most up-to-date information regarding treatment.

AUSTIN (AP) — A convicted police killer recaptured one block away from the Austin Police Department headquarters went to great lengths to disguise himself, police said.

"The information we got was that he paid somebody about $1,500 to pull his front teeth and got a set of false teeth," said Sgt. David Borden, one of the officers who helped in the arrest.

"He had also cut his hair in a V-shape, way back on his head," Borden said. "Oh yeah, it was receding real bad. It was also gray, like he had dyed it or something. And he had some round, wire-rimmed granny glasses. I'd say he looked about 70 years old."

Renton, 50, an Arkansas prison escapee convicted of kidnapping and killing a policeman in that state, was caught Tuesday.

Acting on a tip from an informant, police found Renton asleep in a crowded dormitory room. They awakened and arrested him at 3:07 a.m.

Police say they also took several weapons from him, including a sawed-off shotgun, a 12-gauge flare pistol modified to fire shotgun shells and several knives.

"This guy said that he would kill cops. He's killed a cop before. He hates cops," said police spokesman C.F. Adams.

Arkansas authorities "think he is probably one of the most dangerous men we'll ever come in contact with," said senior Sgt.

David Neely, also involved in arresting Renton.

Renton was one of four inmates who escaped July 11 from a maximum security prison at Tucker, Ark. The others were captured that month.

Judge oks marijuana for medical treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Drug Enforcement Administration's chief administrative law judge says marijuana should be legalized as a prescription drug because smoking it helps cancer patients control nausea after chemotherapy.

Francis L. Young recommended reclassifying marijuana as a Schedule II drug so that it could be prescribed by physicians to treat the often severe nausea accompanying chemotherapy as well as muscle spasms caused by multiple sclerosis.

Young, whose findings are not binding on DEA's head, John Lawn, acknowledged that "strong emotions are aroused on both sides of any discussion concerning the use of marijuana."

"Nonetheless it is essential for this agency, and its administrator, calmly and dispassionately to review the evidence of record, correctly to apply the law, and act accordingly," he wrote in an opinion released Tuesday.

Young rejected as "specious" the argument that prescribing marijuana cigarettes as a medicine "will send a signal" that marijuana is OK generally for recreational use.

"The fear of sending such a signal cannot be permitted to override the legitimate need, amply demonstrated in this record, of countless sufferers for the relief marijuana can provide when prescribed by a physician in a legitimate case."

The hearings were ordered in 1980 by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here, which chastised DEA for ignoring its statutory obligation to consider evidence that marijuana might have some medical benefit.

The appellate court had twice previously overruled DEA's rejection of petitions, first filed in 1972, by the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML).

ingdale, Ark., policeman John T. Hussey, 22, in December 1975.

From April 1976 until his arrest in May 1977, Renton was on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted list, and he recently was placed on the 15 Most Wanted List of the U.S. Marshal Service.

Arkansas prison spokesman David White said extradition proceedings were beginning immediately to have Renton returned to that state.

Neely said a recent segment about Renton was aired on the "America's Most Wanted" television program. Although he had changed his appearance by shaving off a mustache, getting a burr haircut and trying to make it appear as though he were balding, an informant recognized Renton at the Salvation Army shelter and contacted police, Neely said.

Renton "said he had seen himself on 'America's Most Wanted' and he needed to change his appearance," Neely said. He said the informant, whose identity wasn't revealed, may have recognized Renton by several "very noticeable" tattoos.

After receiving the tip, officers went to the Salvation Army shelter, one block west of police headquarters. Four sealed off the building's exits while five went inside.

After learning from the desk clerk that a man named William Hall, an alias Renton used, had registered, the officers moved quietly through the men's dormitory room which Neely said had between 120 and 130 beds, most full.

Ways to waste waste are explored

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — For years, consumers have demanded stronger trash bags and disposable diapers.

But now that "new, improved" products litter beaches everywhere, there is a movement to "waste" waste.

Environmentalists want plastic that rots in the sun and disappears naturally much sooner and chemical companies are exploring ways to make containers a little less indestructible.

"Right now, there is a big call for biodegradable medical products and food packaging," Doug Draper, a spokesman for Dow Chemical U.S.A. in Midland, Mich, told the Beaumont Enterprise.

Chemical companies such as Dow, Mobil and Chevron have spent fortunes trying to make plastic last longer, but now they are going back to the lab to make milk jugs, soda bottles, garbage bags and diapers that disintegrate.

On East Coast beaches, plastic syringes and other plastic debris have washed ashore, causing a public outcry for a disposal system including plastics that disintegrate.

"But there is a real problem with this stuff breaking down before its time," Draper said.

People don't want their trash bags to decay along with their garbage in their kitchens, and scientists aren't sure if they can develop biodegradable plastic containers that won't infect food with bacteria.

And although most of the major chemical companies are researching biodegradable plastics, they are reluctant to market the products because large-scale production might endanger the market for conventional plastics.

And, biodegradable plastic typically costs about 15 percent more than conventional plastic, which sells for an average of 65 cents a pound.

Dow Chemical Co. in Freeport, Texas, developed photodegradable plastic in 1985 for plastic six-pack canned drink connectors because animals, birds, turtles and fish were getting caught in or eating the original plastic rings and dyes. Photodegradable plastic disintegrates when exposed to the sun for long periods.

Upon request from some manufacturers, Dow has also developed a biodegradable plastic, but it is not ready for marketing, Draper said. With biodegradable plastic, bacteria eat the plastic and cause it to fall apart.

An additive such as cornstarch is used to make the plastic appealing to bugs. Exxon Chemical, a unit of Exxon Corp., also is testing a plastic to which iron and nickel compounds have been added. The compounds eventually cause the plastic to break down.

Every American produces about a ton of garbage a year and most of that waste is thrown into landfills where it will remain intact for decades, said Allen Gray, Mobil Chemical Co. spokesman in New York.

Boulter charges Bentsen disloyal to energy industry

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter says he believes he can close the sizable margin a recent poll says exists between him and U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen before Nov. 8.

A poll conducted by the Houston Chronicle and the Dallas Morning News showed 58 percent of voters preferring Bentsen, while 28 percent supported Boulter, R-Amarillo, for Senate.

Boulter said Tuesday during a campaign stop here that the poll was good news and showed him gaining ground in the past six weeks.

"If I gain another 20 points over the next month and a half, let me tell you, we'll be in great shape," he said.

Continuing his campaign theme that attempts to paint Bentsen as two-faced for running dual races for the Senate and the vice presidency, Boulter said Bentsen's alliance with Dukakis proves he's no friend to the energy industry.

FUNDAY

What is Funday?

It's a down home, old-fashioned political picnic sponsored by The Friends for Charlie. It's the Stenholm for Congress Committee's largest fundraising event.

It's a special time set aside for Charlie and Cindy and their children to visit old friends.

Funday is a picnic with all the fixin's and field-fresh sliced watermelon too. It's live entertainment. It's a chance for Stenholm supporters to meet and greet. Charlie likes to bring colleagues to see the 17th District that he's so proud to represent.
