Half Million Damage

PICTURE AT LEFT shows the remains of the S. O. Owens home at Hart Camp. The Sunday night tornado smashed Hart Camp Co-Op Gin nearby. Mr. Owens, who is manager of the gin, is shown here working on a window from his home. Mr. and Mrs. Owens visited relatives over the week-end and then spent the night in Lubbock. In the panel above is what was left of the C. D. McAteer house. The McAteers barely made it to the cellar. They had been watching the tornado which hit North Spade and were unaware of the second twister until it was upon them. (Enterprise Photos)

Damage Heaviest At Hart Camp; North Spade, Olton Areas Hit

Twin tornadoes spawned by a boiling cloud that mothered at least a half dozen twisters left Hart Camp and North Spade in shambles Sunday night.

There were no reported casualties. Damage was estimated at some $300,000 in the Hart Camp and North Spade areas alone by S. O. Owens, manager of Hart Camp Co-Op Gin which was razed by the holocaust. Most spectacular damage done in this area was at Hart Camp.

There the Co-Op Gin was said to be a total loss. The nearby Owens home and home of C. D. McAteer also were destroyed. Northwest of the gin, the J. W. Wells home was almost levelled.

Here in the Olton community there was less damage to dwelling houses but damage to out buildings and equipment was heavy.

South of Hart Camp the Monroe and Elwood Prentiss homes were destroyed. The J. H. Jordan home was razed at North Spade. One estimate placed the damage figure in the North Spade, Hart Camp and Olton areas combined at near the half million dollar mark.

There was human drama in the events preceding, during and immediately following the storm. The storm struck about 9:30 o'clock Sunday night. At the H. R. Monroe home just north of Hart Camp all the out buildings were destroyed and the roof of the house was heavily damaged.

Mrs. Monroe said she heard the rumbling roar like thunder. She hustled her son Wayne, 8 years old, under the bed and then blacked out. Mr. Monroe also was in the house at the time.

The J. W. Wells family down the road was not so lucky as the Monroes. In the house at the time were Mr. and Mrs. Wells and their daughter, Myra Dell; and Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Neinast and sons, Mark, 9, and David, 7.

"We heard a hissing roar," Mr. Wells remembered. "We had been in the basement about two minutes when it hit with a big crack. We lost about everything."

Mr. Neinast's car glasses were broken. The heavy touring car was picked up and turned about as though it were a child's toy. A dog in the car was unhurt.

It broke the glasses of the Wells pickup truck. It smashed the windshield of the family car and rammed a two by four through one of the headlights.

The C. D. McAteer family had only seconds to spare in getting into a cellar. Mr. and Mrs. McAteer and daughter, Lois Dell, 14, had been watching another tornado approaching North Spade to the west.

They were unaware that a second twister was bearing down on Hart Camp. "I didn't know it was coming," Mrs. McAteer declared.

They heard it hit the nearby gin with a devastating roar and they made for the cellar. Mr. McAteer is employed by the Hart Camp Co-Op Gin.

The S. O. Owens' next door were away from home and spent Sunday night in Lubbock. Mr. Owens described the gin as a total loss. The twister toppled the gin office but left a typewriter sitting on a desk undamaged.

Likewise, a set of dominoes were on an undamaged table inside the demolished office building.

The W. C. Huffs, who operate Hart Camp grocery near the destroyed homes, were in the cellar when the storm struck.

"There was a deafening roar," Mrs. Huff declared as she described the approach of the twister. "It got as still as still and then began roaring."

The Luis Lopez family lives directly in the path taken by the twister about 100 yards from the McAteer home and only a few hundred yards from the Wells house on the other side.

Their family of eight prayed as the storm struck. Their modest home was undamaged except for a broken pane of glass.

"We could hear it roar," Mrs. Lopez declared. "Well, I couldn't describe it but you could feel it sucking at you."

"It was just a miracle that we got out alive, I guess. We've just got the Lord to thank for it."

The bathroom was left intact and the remainder of the house levelled at the J. H. Jordan home in North Spade. Mr. Jordan is manager of the Paymaster Gin at North Spade. The gin also was damaged.

Larry Jordan, 12, one of the Jordans' two sons was under a bed in a bedroom of the house. Harvie, 14, crawled under a chair in the dining room.

"It was over in three seconds," Mr. Jordan said. "We didn't have much time to get scared."

The seed burner at the gin was badly damaged. The twister cut the north end off the Jack Cain home at North Spade. It left a trailer lying in the Cain kitchen.

Mrs. Jordan was treated in Olton by Dr. E. J. Souders for a cut on the leg sustained during the storm.

One of the most freakish aspects of the storm was the pieces of tin wrapped around utility wires and hanging suspended without having broken the wires.

Ralph Glover, manager of Southwestern Public Service Co. here, said there were only minor service interruptions in Olton.

However, two 115,000 volt lines south of town were down. One break was on the Melton property and another blocked traffic for a time between Olton and Hart Camp. They were repaired immediately.

In the meantime, REA was not so lucky. REA officials said more than 100 utility poles were down. See Tornado Inside—

Springlake Group Taking Steps To Get Improved Telephone Service In Area

Prompted by a longstanding dissatisfaction with service provided by the General Telephone Company in the Springlake area, a move to gain adequate service and facilities was spearheaded last week by the Springlake Lions Club, the city commission, and rural residents.

Billy W. Clayton, a leader in the undertaking, stated, "It is difficult to understand why facilities are so inadequate in a progressive area such as ours when less prosperous communities can boast far better service."

Mr. Clayton reported that an area of 60 square miles—10 miles long and 6 miles wide—is without telephone service. In this area, the city of Springlake is equipped with only 40 telephones, with only two circuits going into the town and no exchange. There is an average of nine parties to a line, three of which are business.

"Several people living within a mile of Springlake have tried unsuccessfully for years to obtain service—and some were in emergency situations," emphasized Mr. Clayton.

The Springlake city commission has not granted General

Telephone Company a franchise and will not do so until improved services and facilities are provided in the area, according to Mr. Clayton. Fred Mathis, district manager for General Telephone, maintains that services cannot be extended with existing facilities.

At last Thursday's meeting, the Springlake group decided to canvass the area to determine the number of people desiring phone service. With the survey 90 percent complete, 70 rural residents and 60 in Springlake have expressed desire for phone service, including around 20 private lines to businesses. Results to date point toward a present need of 150 phones.

Mr. Clayton asked that anyone who has not signed up for a phone and would like to do so, to contact either him or J. J. Coker.

At the completion of the survey, the results will be turned over to officials of General Telephone and REA, with whom Mr. Clayton and others have been conferring. Negotiations will begin as soon as possible with these companies regarding type and cost of system to be supplied the area.

Boundaries of the area extend from Circle north to where the Dimmitt exchange has rural lines, west to the Springlake School road, and takes in the territory south of Springlake to the sandhills.

"A franchise will be given to whichever company can best serve our needs—whether it be General or REA remains to be seen," stated Mr. Clayton.

Calf Pen To Frying Pan Is The Brigance Ranch Motto

By Troy Martin

It may come as a surprise to some folks to learn that cowhorse cowpokes still ride the range less than 10 miles from Olton across country too rough for any other means of travel.

Some folks also may be surprised to learn that ranching still is a very important industry in this community.

Lamb County Sandhills where the ancient Plains Indian stalked his prey is the site of four Olton ranches not the least of which is the sprawling 5,600-acre A. C. Brigance & Son spread. David Tullis, Olton school supervisor who speaks with a more than smattering of archaeological knowledge, says the Sandhills have nurtured both man and beast for centuries.

Mr. Tullis says the buffalo used to congregate there at watering holes during the stone ages before the horse made its advent in America. There the stone age Indian—unable to capture or kill the beast on the open plains—lay in wait for his game.

Indian artifacts still are being found in the Sandhills after they are uncovered by driving sandstorms.

In this setting, tall, lanky (6 feet, 140 pounds) Merrill Brigance and his beautiful and charming wife, DeMetris are operating the ranch which was founded by A. C. Brigance some 15 years ago while Merrill was in the service.

Lots Of Work

The Brigance ranch is now running about 150 head of mother cows, some bulls and the normal calf crop. Merrill said his ranch used to carry about 250 head until the drought hit.

The Brigances started cutting down about 1952. Grass crops have been so short that they have found it necessary to feed all winter.

With the exception of cotton seed cake, they feed only home grown feed mixed with supplement.

Ranching, even on a small scale, is not the snap portrayed by the movies. It's hard work. Merrill Brigance has a name for being one of the hardest workers in the Olton community.

And well he might. He operates a farm store known as Plains Agricultural Service and is associated in farming operations at the old Brigance home place along with his brother-in-law, Elmer Moore.

MRS. A. C. BRIGANCE

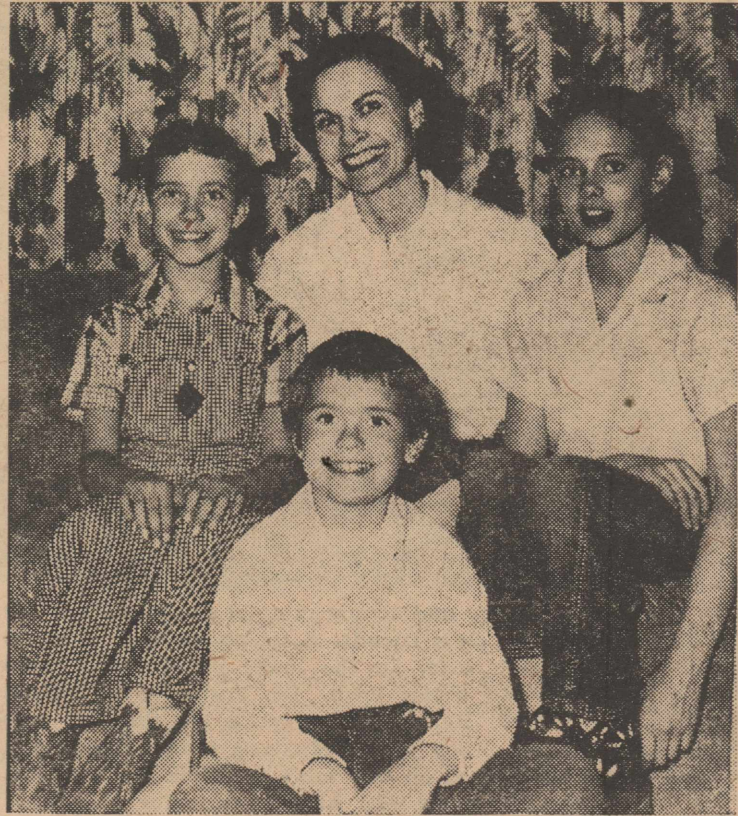

Calving usually starts in November. Branding is done in hitches. One branding is done in January. There is usually another branding job in March and the chore is wound up in May.

Then there is spraying for grubs and lice at almost any time the Lone Ranger's heart feels like a little extra work. He does a great deal of the work himself but normally is assisted by a nephew, Jerry Moore, and his dad, A. C. Brigance.

Ride 'Em Cowboy

The senior member of the ranching partnership is 76 years old and still hale and hearty.

Last Friday morning he leaped on Old Lightning, his faithful cowpony, and cut out two bulls from his herd of cows at the corral. In the process the cowpony was turning on dime with change to spare and Mr. Brigance set him in a manner to skip a beat. Merrill usually rides his fences once or twice a month the year around.

In the winter time riding over the range is not as frequently necessary as in the summer time.

In the winter the young rancher is feeding daily and has an opportunity to inspect his herd when he puts out feed.

"Riding over this ranch can't be done in a pickup," Merrill declared. "It's a job for a horse. You couldn't get across it any other way."

In the summer time the animals must be watched closely for worms. A cut unattended almost certainly means worms to contend with later. And worms unattended usually means the loss of the animal infected.

Coyote Problem

Marauding coyotes present a problem to Olton's ranchers. About three years ago they became a serious threat. The Brigance ranch alone lost some 22 head of calves to the predators.

A government trapper killed about 100 head of the varmints. Merrill says he gets a shot at a coyote now and then about sun-up.

"I seldom see one when I've got a gun, though," he commented.

The Brigance spread runs both Angus and Hereford cattle. The ranch is divided into six pastures and the two breeds are kept separate.

The spread is served by five windmills. Water in vast quantities lies within 70 feet of the surface.

The Brigance brand is a J on the left thigh. The brand is registered and may be used by the Brigance spread alone.

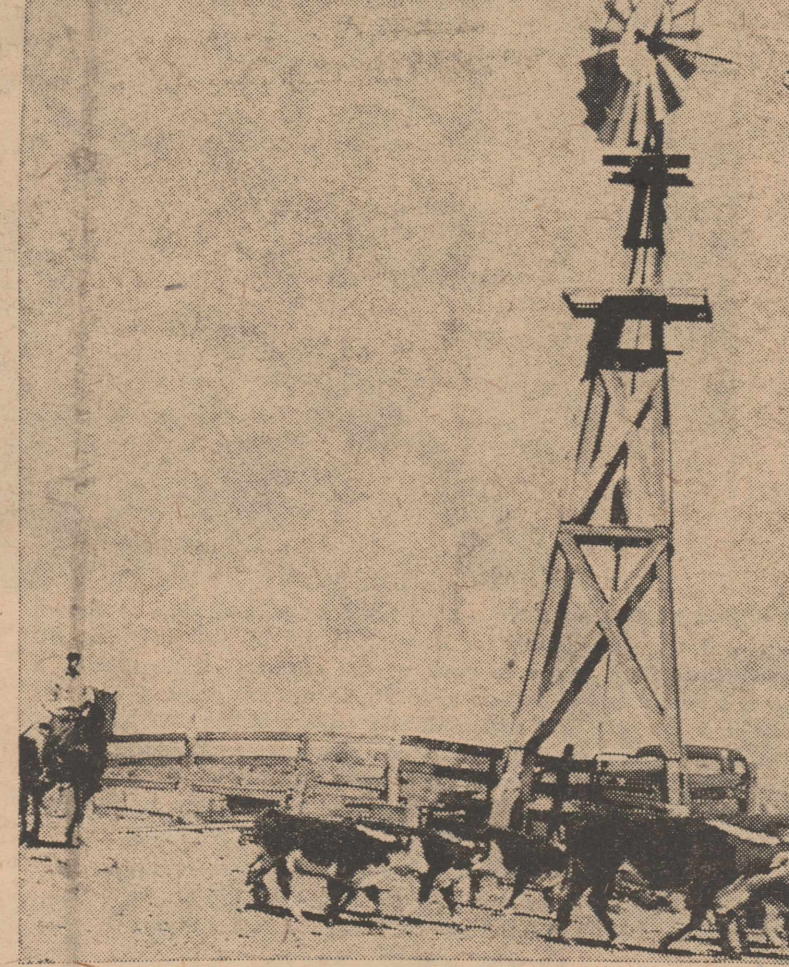

It was typical that mild-mannered, kindly Merrill Brigance would think of something other than the spectacular when he chose a brand. In this instance he was thinking of the welfare of the animal.

"A 'J' won't burn the cattle like a complicated brand would," he explained. "It's just a symbol brand, anyway."

You can trace Brigance beef cattle from the calf pasture to the frying pan. The Brigance ranch feeds out its own cattle in its own feed lots with feed produced on Brigance farm acres.

The ranch sells its finished cattle in Fort Worth to some of the nation's best known packers. Community Service

Like his father before him, Merrill has found time to devote himself to community service. He is immediate past president of the Olton Stock Show board of directors and is still a member of the board.

He is a former A & M College student and was a member of 4-H as a boy.

Merrill was born at Big Spring and then moved to Springlake with his family in 1923 when he was three years old.

He ranches with his father at Friona before entering the service in 1941. He was a radio operator and gunner aboard a B-17 in the Pacific early in World War II.

After a tour of combat as an enlisted man he went through pilot training and then piloted troop transport planes in Europe. He was discharged from the Air Force as a first lieutenant.

Merrill and Mrs. Brigance have three beautiful daughters. They are Sharon 12, Nancy 10, and Charlotte, 8. All three girls are interested in ranching. In fact, Sharon showed the grand champion steer at the Olton Stock Show not long ago.

DeMetris—Dee as she is called by her friends—also is active in community affairs. She served a highly successful stint as president of the Olton Parent-Teachers Association and this year worked around the clock with her husband while he was making preparations for the annual stock show.

Even during the preparations for the stock show for which Merrill, as president of the show board of directors bore the brunt of responsibility, the two found time to assist in the P-TA's annual play production. In fact, Merrill played one of the leading roles.

Helped Organize Bank

Ranches in the community other than the Brigance Ranch are those operated by Charlie Jones, Walter Rose and Frank "Curly" Daugherty.

The senior member of the Brigance partnership has been interested in stock farming most of his life. He was a farmer and she a school teacher when he and Mrs. Brigance were married Feb. 28, 1909 at Bowie.

They farmed at Chillicothe after they were married and then moved to the wilds of Hemphill County and engaged in stock farming at Canadian. The following year they moved to Big Spring.

From Big Spring they moved to Plainview and then to Springlake in 1923.

In 1927 they built the house on the old home place three miles north of Olton.

"That seems like home to us,"

A. C. BRIGANCE, founder of the ranch, still rides Old Lightning, veteran cow pony. Mr. Brigance says Lightning is the most important hand on the ranch. (Enterprise Photo)

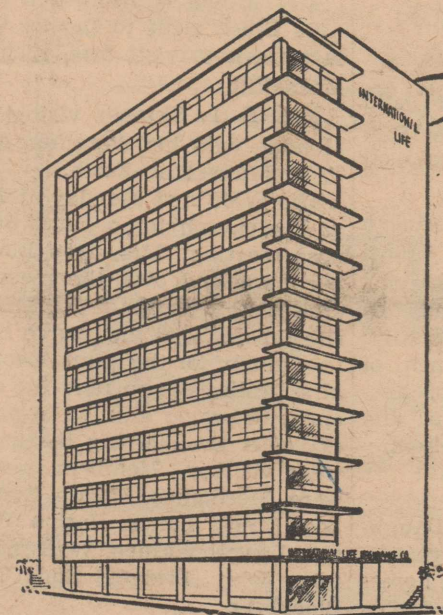

Mr. Brigance has been identified with the development of this country since he moved here. He served several times on the Olton school board and was one of the organizers and a member of the first board of directors of Olton State Bank.

Mrs. Brigance has taught Sunday School at the First Baptist Church here for more than 20 years.

JOE CASTILLO is proud to be associated with the Brigance Ranch and the management of the ranch is just as happy about Joe. Joe's Aberdeen-Angus copped top honors at the Olton Stock Show in February. (Enterprise Photo)

THE JOE TURNERS AT HOME

GWEN TURNER operates a hospitable household. She is known all over the community for keeping a pot of hot coffee on all the time. She is ready to pour at the slightest indication of a java craving on the part of a guest. In the top panel to the left she is doing just that and a thirsty photographer will be slurping it down in a matter of seconds. Many is the Mustang defeat that has been dulled by Gwen's excellent coffee. In the same picture Joe Turner is shown with eldest son, Bobby, on his lap.

Gwen is a bridge fancier and counts most of the women of the community among her close friends. A telephone is an absolute necessity to a coach's wife. In the lower panel Gwen chats amiably with a friend across town. Joe Turner is a football coach the year around. He loves other sports but they are pale beside his first love. Much of the Mustang field strategy you see on the gridiron is born on this table at which Joe is shown in the second panel from the left. At this particular time, however, Joe is working out the schedules for the American Legion volleyball tournament which is now in progress. The Turner's youngest son, David, is oblivious to what is going on around him. He didn't flinch when the burst of light from the photographer's flash unit caught him. It has been a long, hard day and David is logging some good old sack time.

UNDER THE BED

MRS. H. R. Monroe, who lives just north of the area hardest hit at Hart Camp, put her son, Wayne, 8, under the bed when the tornado approached with a roar. Some of the out buildings at the Monroe home were smashed and the home itself was damaged but no one was hurt. Mr. and Mrs. Monroe and Wayne were the only ones in the house at the time. ## Marriage Vows For Miss Lucretia Hardin And Don Jo Dodd Are Read In Plainview

Miss Lucretia Ann Hardin became the bride of Don Jo Dodd in a double ring ceremony read April 13 in the Seth Ward Baptist Church in Plainview. Officiating minister was the Rev. Everett Smalts.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Hardin of Rt. 3, Plainview, and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Dodd of Rt. 1, Olton.

Forming the wedding setting were baskets of spring flowers and an archway entwined with greenery. Tiers of candles in candelabra were in the background, and the aisles were marked with white satin bows.

Wedding music was played by Miss Leta Mires, organist, who also accompanied Miss Dove Julian as she sang "Because."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a ballerina gown of white French lace over satin, styled with a fitted bodice and a portrait neckline. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion stemmed from a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a white Bible topped with a white orchid.

Attending the bride as matron of honor was Mrs. Andy Stroebel, sister of the groom. Her ballerina length gown was of aqua crystalline fashioned with a portrait neckline and shirred sleeves. The full skirt fell from a fold around the hipline accented with a bow in the back. Her head-dress was of matching net and flowers.

Jackson Dodd of Olton served his brother as best man. Ushers were Dewey Davenport and Andy Stroebel.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Hardin chose a navy blue dress set off with white accessories and a white carnation corsage. The groom's mother wore a gray silk suit accented with pink accessories and a pink carnation corsage.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the home of the bride's parents. Laid with a lace cloth, the serving table was highlighted with a white tiered cake decorated with pink roses. Pink as the featured color was carried out in the candles and the punch.

Guests were registered at the church by Miss Etta Camille Hardin, sister of the bride.

For a wedding trip to Amarillo, the bride wore a white linen sheath dress complemented by a blue linen duster. Blue accessories and a white corsage completed her costume.

Before her marriage the bride had attended Plainview High School. The bridegroom attended Olton schools prior to serving three years in the armed services.

The couple is at home in Olton.

Attending were Mesdames Bill Collins, Glen Singleterry, Owen Norfleet, Horace Walker, Charlie Jones, Lee Green, J. A. Ragle, Carl Womack, J. C. Brown, Jack Bristol, Russell McAnally, J. B. Williams, Cecil Gallaway, Henry Miller, Jr., and Thurston Tollett.

ironing things out

by korkye martin

The sun warming the sidewalks,
The wind cooling the breath above,
Voices of playing children filling the air
Screaming, fighting, laughing, chattering.
Accompanied by sounds of tricycles, wagons, swings, doll buggies.
Lawns up and down the street dotted with groups of youngsters.
Housewives, ironing, baking, cleaning, sewing,
Hearing the indoor silence.
Thinking, planning.
Mothers, chatting over coffee, each listening for the sounds of her own child.
Absorbing events of the neighborhood.
One child disappearing inside to get a drink of water.
Racing up the steps,
Kicking the door open,
Stopping short, then whirling around.
Dashing back toward his playmates.
Screaming three words.
And then—
... Like a yard full of chickens retreating to the henhouse as a hawk swoops down.
... Like throngs running for shelter when they hear the cry, "Air raid!"
... Like a flock of ducks winging into the blue
When the first shot rings out. These little people
Up and down the street
Drop their toys,
Scatter in all directions,
Vanish into their own houses.
Take positions.
Forget all else.
(Even the drink of water.)
Because—
"IT'S CARTOON TIME!"
I-t-o

These wonderful people who have storm cellars, and are generous enough to share them with us who do NOT have storm cellars! Three cheers for them all!

I shall never forget the bewilderment on the faces of Clarence, Evelyn, Don and Garland Mason Sunday night as the four Thompsons, the four Hardys, the four Martins and the two Stroebels swooped in on them, seeking safety. I think they never did quite get used to either the NUMBER of us or the NOISE of us.

And then when the worst came, and we were all, together with Evelyn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hines, huddled in the cellar, I never heard a peep out of our four hosts about "the time when..." Everyone else was talking at once about other tornadoes and frights.
Maybe they were still flabbergasted.
Anyhow, I sincerely hope there are enough cellars in this community to go around. Some of us had better get busy and put some more in, maybe.
I-t-o

Well, whaddya know!
"Ironing things out" was a year old last week. I'm 'fraid I can't claim 52 editions, because there were a few weeks I goofed. But it's roundly a year, anyhow.
Neither can I lay claim to having ironed things out exactly, but it's been fun poking at it, and I hope not a complete waste of your time, if you ever read it. "Don't aspire to setting the world on fire with these simple lines, but mainly to reflect the things that are pretty commonplace and average, proving there is something unusual in even the most ordinary event."
I do claim to be almost average, and feel that my day runs about like the ordinary day of every other housewife around, and maybe some others. But ordinary or not, no reason for it to be dull. All depends on the way you take it and what you put into it.
So the way things look right now, I'll try it for the second year. Stay with me long as you can, will you?

WE PRAYED

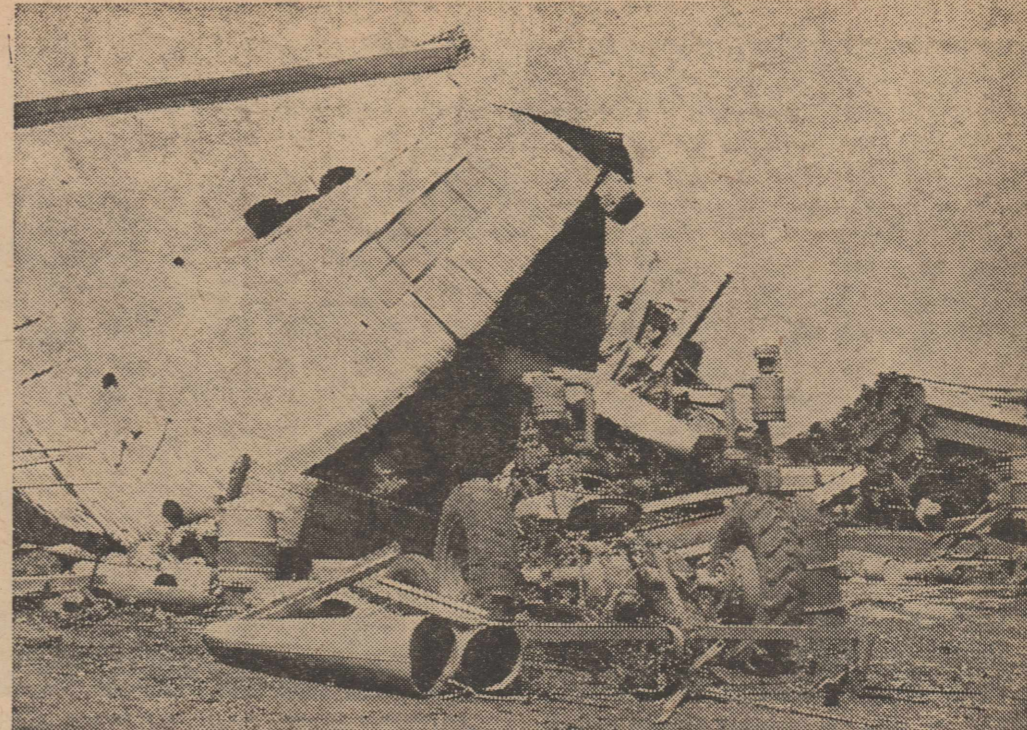

THE LUIS LOPEZ family were inside their small home praying as the tornado destroyed the homes of their nearby neighbors. The Lopez home was in the direct path of the twister about 100 yards from the C. D. McAteer home on one side and only a few hundred yards from the J. W. Wells home on the other. Both these houses were reduced to rubble. A broken pane of glass was the only damage at the Lopez home. Shown here with Mrs. Lopez are from left Eusebio, Luis, Jr., Larry, Lupe and Henry Lee. Ray and Mr. Lopez were away from home at the time the picture was made. (Enterprise Photo) over the county—a number of them in the Olton area.

REA patrons affected moved home freezer loads to the Olton frozen food locker for safe keeping. REA officials said most of the power had been restored by Thursday afternoon.

Here at Olton, alert firemen scanned the skies for approaching tornadoes. Bill Kemp manned the fire truck and blew warning signals across town as the twister neared.

Olton folks congregated at cellars. One Olton man said he went to get into his cellar and could hardly find standing room.

Damage in rural areas around Olton was heavy—mostly to out buildings. Raymon Long was among those who lost all his out buildings.

Bud Grimsley was reported to have lost a barn. Damage was heavy at the Raymond Motley place six miles northwest of Olton.

One major piece of damage not immediately recognized as such is the debris scattered across fields. This must be removed before farming can continue.

The J. D. Livelys, living on the E. L. Fancher farm 3 1/2 miles northwest of Olton, had played safe earlier and gone to their storm cellar around 8 o'clock Sunday night. When the tornado hit at 10:30 they were in the house. The top of their house was blown away, as well as the garage, leaving the automobile intact except for two minor scratches. Only the living room furniture and television were damaged in the house.

Following the storm, the Livelys went to their neighbors, the J. W. Dales, to spend the night. The front porch of the Dale home was scattered over a quarter mile in the fields and the roof torn loose over the living room and front bedroom. The Dales had returned home from a week-end trip earlier in the evening.

Thinking the worst was over Sunday night the Bob Higgs, 4 1/2 miles northwest, recovered from their earlier fears and had gone to bed when the sudden depressive stillness of the night sent them scurrying with their two children, Mike and Karen, to the southwest corner of their home just as the tornado hit. Their garage was splintered into bits, leaving the pickup inside unscratched. The center section of the barn was swooped away with the end sections left standing. The chicken house was scattered but not a chicken was found injured. Also blown away were the windmill and irrigation well house.

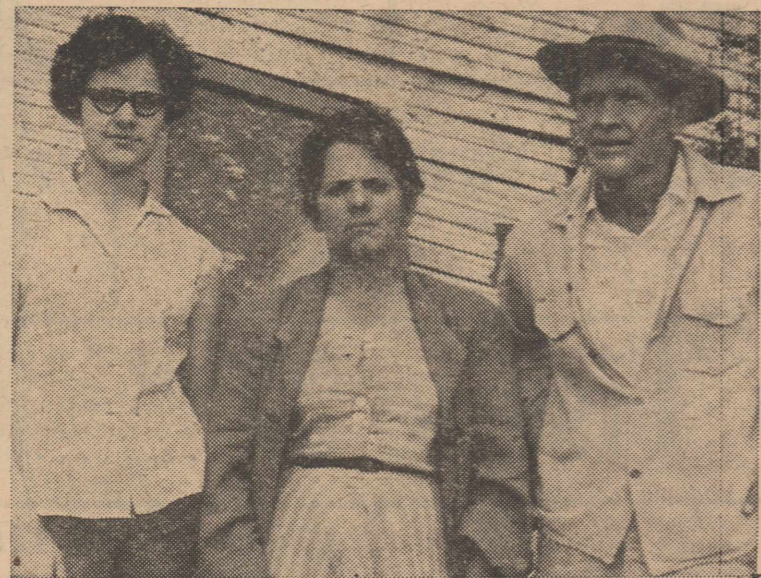

L. B. Cowart, 4 1/2 miles northwest, reported that his garage, hen house, and well house were destroyed. He had a busy Monday, for the Sunday night tornado left his 50 hogs with no sign of a fence around them.

The Paul Burrus' received heavy damage at their place. The roof and walls of a tenant dwelling were blown off the foundation, all the out buildings were destroyed, and irrigation motors turned over.

Two cow sheds and a hog shed were ripped up and scattered at the Jack Edwards place, seven miles northwest. Mrs. Edwards reported that their son's basketball goal pole was snapped off at the base and the iron braces supporting the pole were badly bent.

Numerous places southwest of town were struck by the tornado. Mrs. Lillie McGill reported that she lost the porch off her home, her garage, hen house, brooder house, and windmill. No trace of 100 baby chicks were found and

SECONDS TO SPARE

THE C. D. McATEER family had only seconds to spare as they hustled into the storm cellar when the twister struck Hart Camp Sunday night. They lost most of their belongings in the holocaust. Mr. and Mrs. McAteer are shown here with their daughter, Lois Dell, 14. (Enterprise Photo)

None Injured In Three-Car Collision Sunday

Three cars were involved in an accident two and one-half miles south of Hart Camp late Sunday evening with none of the occupants receiving injuries despite the fact that the automobiles were heavily damaged.

According to Mrs. J. B. Thames of Olton, she was driving behind her husband when she heard the radio report of three tornadoes on the ground out of Hart Camp. She was trying to overtake her husband who was driving a car belonging to a sister-in-law, Mrs. A. A. McElrath, and warn him of the impending danger. Mrs. Thames' car rammed into the back end of the car driven by her husband as he stopped suddenly to avoid a deep water puddle, damaging the front end of her car.

As Mr. Thames was turning around on the road to come to his wife's aid, another car driven by Dale Adair of Olton collided with his, knocking Mr. Thames' automobile into a deep ditch. Both automobiles were damaged.

Willard Loman, whose home was nearby, moved the cars with his tractor and took the occupants to their homes in Olton, going through Littlefield and Springlake because of a high line blown across the highway between Hart Camp and Olton.

Mr. and Mrs. McElrath and sons Norman and Joel, Pampa, were riding in the automobiles with the Thames.

The annual FFA appreciation banquet will be held May 10 in the school cafeteria.

50 to 60 hens were left dead and others injured.

"But we're lucky," said Mrs. McGill. "Most of us got hit along here, but we were all left with our homes."

Extensive damage was reported at the Walter Rose farm. Out buildings were all levelled and scattered and trees uprooted.

Other farm buildings destroyed in the southwest vicinity were those of the Lee Greens, Guy Willis', Raymon Longs, Harvey Maxeys, and Knox's.

Destruction was reported also at the following places: E. S. Huckabee, A. C. Simmons, Cecil Jolly, I. D. Grimsley, Jack Gabehart and Lowell McGill.

Mrs. Provence, 84, died Monday, April 15, in Olton Memorial Hospital. She and her husband had been making their home with Mrs. Baker.

Operation Clean-up

Mrs. Lyle Brandon, with the Lamb County American Red Cross, has suggested that folks in the Olton, North Spade and Hart Camp areas, group together to help their neighbors.

Volunteer groups will be needed some time next week to help remove debris from farm land in tornado-struck areas. She said the Red Cross will provide lunch for the volunteer groups.

She said the Red Cross is taking rehabilitation applications from the tornado areas.

"Some farmers have lost their seed and much of their equipment," Mrs. Brandon noted. There has been a suggestion that farmers who did not suffer losses and have more seed than they need pitch in and help out those crippled by the storm.

A HISSING ROAR

THE J. W. WELLS FAMILY barely got into the basement Sunday night before the tornado which struck Hart Camp reduced their home to a shambles. In the basement when the storm struck were Mr. and Mrs. Wells and daughter, Myra Dell, 12; and Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Neinast and sons, Mark, 9, and David, 7. BY SUE MAY

The other day on TV—"The Tennessee Ernie Show"—Ernie was discussing men wearing mustaches.

He said he'd always heard women say they didn't like to kiss a man who wears a mustache.

But his remark to that was "I always say if you're going to a picnic, you don't mind going through a little brush to get there!"

Washed Husband's T-shirts with a red gown of mine. Now his T-shirts are a lovely shade of pink... Mildred Armstrong had her hair lightened a shade or two and while she was in the beauty shop, she overheard two women discussing it. One asked the other how she liked Mildred's hair, the other replied, "Oh, I just love it. Mildred's hair was always such an ugly mousey color!"

When Mrs. Romie Cannon of Hale Center had her first baby, her husband gave her a dozen red roses.

After her second child, Romie got her a dozen carnations. She was a little blue and disappointed.

Mrs. Ray Johnson, her mother, told her, "You'll do good to get violets next time!"

At club, we had a program on "Family Playtime." It was actually hard for Lance Briggs to find any information on the family playing together.

Has TV replaced the family recreation so that the family is more individuals than one body?

I certainly hope not. Some of my fondest memories are of Don, Mother, Daddy, and I doing things together.

Listen to What Its Silence Says!

Ever hear a motor car tell its own story? Well, just get behind the wheel of a new 1957 Cadillac—head for your favorite stretch of highway—and listen! Of course, the truth of the matter is that you won't actually hear anything. For a 1957 Cadillac in operation is as quiet as human skill and ingenuity can make it.

But imagine, if you will, all the wonderful things the car will be telling you through the voice of its own silence!

First of all, it will speak—and most eloquently so—of the soundness of Cadillac styling. For the car is so scientifically designed that even the onrushing wind is reduced to a gentle whisper.

It will tell you of the genius of Cadillac engineering. For every aspect of the car's brilliant performance goes about its work in soundless harmony. And it will reveal the care and the skill of Cadillac craftsmanship. For even when it travels the most neglected of byways, the car remains wonderfully silent.

If you have yet to sit at the wheel of a 1957 Cadillac and hear this wonderful story for yourself, then we urge you to delay no longer in doing so.

We hope you will visit your Cadillac dealer soon—spend an hour on the highway—and listen to the most eloquent message a motor car ever delivered on its own behalf!

Mrs. Dora Walthall's Code Of Life Entails Work, Worship, Love Of Family And Friends

By Felicia Duncan

Such timeworn phrases as "young in heart" and "76 years young" are given new life when applied to a white-haired little lady who has endeared herself through the years to generations of Oltonites—Mrs. Dora Walthall.

Her friends, church and health are the things for which she is most thankful as she continues her contented and fruitful life alone (except for a roomer) in her neat brown home on Main Street, looking back on 53 years of happiness with her husband Arthur, who passed away six years ago, and the rearing of 12 children to adulthood.

Holds To Independence

A life of independence and self-sufficiency is maintained by Mrs. Walthall, cooking her own borrowed money from Mr. Walthall. They set up housekeeping with a bedstead, springs, a cotton mattress made by Mrs. Walthall from cotton they had picked, a wood cook stove, a wooden churn, a table and three chairs, and some quilts.

"Times were not easy, but we were happy," reminisced Mrs. Walthall. "Our total harvest for that first year was a bale and a half of cotton. We bought a cultivator and lacked $7 paying for it out of our crop money."

To help support his family, Mr. Walthall would rise before dawn, take a lunch packed by his wife, and ride a mule to a farm five miles away where he would pick cotton until dark for 50 cents per hundred.

Cheaper By The Dozen

During the 25 years the Walthalls made their home on their 110-acre farm near Kerens, their most successful crop was a "round dozen" children, 9 boys and 3 girls. The doctor that delivered her second son predicted that she was going to have a houseful of boys. "I had just enough girls sprinkled around to provide me with a dishwasher all the way through," Mrs. Walthall laughingly remarked.

Eight of the Walthall children are still living. Tragedy struck early one of the children. Marvin was afflicted with infantile paralysis when only 18 months old and was permanently crippled. He died at the age of 21. Mrs. Walthall said, living a happy and successful life in spite of his handicap.

Move To Plains

In 1925 a neighbor came back from the South Plains area with tales of the bountiful harvests he had seen. Mr. Walthall made a trip out and liked what he saw, and the couple made their decision to "blaze the trail west." At this time, their youngest child was Dale, 4, and the four oldest children were settled in their own homes.

They bought a new car and truck and chartered a railway car to bring out their household goods, farm implements and livestock, the latter including a pair of horses, two cows, a shepherd dog, and chickens. "I didn't know they'd have chickens in West Texas so I thought we'd stock them." But when they came through the sandhills and heard the coyotes howling, her first thought was a dismayed, "I'll never be able to raise a chicken here."

After two and a half days of travel, the Walthall family arrived in the Olton community, meals and keeping her home neat as the proverbial pin. Occasionally she has to put her foot down to her children who feel that she should use a cleaning woman to relieve her of household chores.

"In the first place," she said with her blue eyes twinkling, "they just don't clean to suit me so I just reclean after they leave. And in the second place, as I tell my children, I'd rather wear out than rust out."

Tinkle's Chapel Is Birthplace
Born near Emhouse, Texas, known then as Tinkle's Chapel, on Oct. 14, 1880, Mrs. Walthall spent her girlhood days in that community with activities centered around three buildings—a Baptist church, a Methodist church, and a school. "You had to be either a Baptist or a Methodist if you wanted to go to church," she mused.

In the Emhouse community was an orphan boy, Arthur Walthall, who worked on the various farms around. "We got to playing when he could come around, and when Father would go off on a fishing trip, he would get Arthur to spend the night at our house. First thing you knew we were in love."

Married Life Begins

They married in 1898, the beginning of a wedded life destined to last for 53 years and 11 days. In 1901, they moved to Kerens in East Texas with a few household goods obtained from a family whose son had they bought a half section from the late John Cowart and moved into the old Cowart home when he moved to Plainview.

The Walthalls held on to their home back in Kerens "just in case." "Everyone said we'd be back, but we were never sorry we moved," she said. The old homestead was finally sold in 1956.

"Cotton was 6 cents a pound and grain 25 cents per hundred. We didn't do so well, but we made a living," declared Mrs. Walthall. Cotton was often picked in March because no hands were to be had. "It used to rain a lot more than it does now. I can remember only one or two dry years back then."

Olton Sparsely Settled

At the time the Walthalls moved to Olton there were only a few houses scattered around the town section. The business section consisted of a telephone office, a couple of filling stations, the post office, courthouse, and Bley's Mercantile. The Baptist Church, where the Walthalls faithfully attended, was housed in the structure now used by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

"Yes, we saw Olton grow from infancy. And what has made Olton such a wonderful town is that it is made up of wonderful people," she said.

Mr. Walthall's health had begun to fail and they moved to Dallas for 18 months in the hopes of regaining it. The move was not beneficial. In fact, Mrs. Walthall says, "I thought he and Marvin would both die before I could get them back home."

They moved into town in 1946, purchasing the house built originally for a doctor's office in 1929 and used by a Dr. Sparks. It is in this home that Mrs. Walthall still lives—refurbished and redecorated, to be sure.

Goes On Alone

Her husband died on Jan. 13,

1951. Mrs. Walthall's great spiritual strength led her to look forward to the future even without her life companion.

Mrs. Walthall's only regret is that more of her children do not live near her. "With so many children, if each one came by only once a week, I'd never have a chance to get lonely."

Five of the Walthall children live in California. Louise and Jewell teach in Fresno and Anaheim, respectively, although she happily reported that Jewell will return to her former home, Hale Center, when this school term is over. George lives in Inglewood, Elmer in San Bernardino, and Lloyd in Richmond. Her other three sons live in Texas—Dale in Littlefield, Tilden in Odessa, and Johnny in Lake Dallas.

"I wish I could see all of my grandchildren and great-grandchildren together, but don't guess I will as they're scattered from Virginia to Illinois to Oregon," said Mrs. Walthall. And it would be quite a roomful as she boasts 27 grandchildren and 37 great-grandchildren. "Oddly enough, after all my boys, I had 11 granddaughters before getting a grandson."

Has Superlative Health

This sweet-faced little lady is living proof that hard work, a zest for living, love for her fellowman, and healthful habits, usually add up to mental and physical health. Seldom ill, she had never been in a hospital until four years ago when she was in for a two-day check up. None of her 12 children were born in a hospital. "My goodness," she exclaimed, "I'd be afraid they'd shift babies."

Life is never dull for Mrs. Walthall—indeed it is always filled with new and good things because she seeks them. Last winter she was known as the "flying grandmother" as she gaily took off by plane to visit her children in California. On a spring or summer day a passerby might see her putting around in her yard. On the Sabbath one will always find her in the First Baptist Church for worship services. And on any day she is ready with her warm smile to greet any "friend or kin" who has come to visit.

Expressing her love for her community and friends, she said that she feels the same as her son Albert, who died on January 13 of this year, six years to the day of his father's death, who often remarked, "I never want to live where I can't see that Olton water tower."

Ad Wolves Fleecing Tactics Described

(Editor's note: The following article, published in Printers' Ink magazine, the magazine of advertising, selling and marketing, was written by Mike Rhinehart, a Waco advertising man. His exposition of how advertising "wolves" fleece businessmen of millions of dollars with phony schemes is backed by years of experience in the advertising business.)

For every dollar set aside in an advertising budget there's a wolf in a gray flannel suit waiting to gobble it up. Most often these wolves operate within the law, using the good names of churches, civic clubs, labor unions and fraternal organizations as the lever to lift big chunks of advertising money into their own pockets. For these wolves to operate profitably there must be a lot of Little Red Riding Hoods—personified by businessmen who are afraid of losing business or offending some individual or group.

In almost 30 years of experience in newspaper, printing, radio, television and agency business, I have learned a lot about advertising rackets. I must admit that I have created some, and in the past few years I have had a couple of my own brain children presented to me as "the finest advertising media in the world." Because these were my own creations I had good reason to know they were worthless.

Recently the California Federation of Labor appointed a 3-man committee to investigate racketeering practices by some labor papers. The state organization especially condemned solicitation of advertising for labor directories, branding these publications as so limited in circulation as to be of no benefit to the advertiser or the labor unions. This body further stated that solicitations often amount to "little short of extortion."

"Friedly" Persuasion
How true! About the same time the California labor leaders were condemning advertising racketeers, a Texas poultry processor received a long-distance call from the publisher of a labor directory in New York. The solicitor explained that the directory was scheduled to go to press in a few hours and it would be to this processor's advantage to have an ad in the directory. The copy, the solicitor explained, would be captioned: FRIEND OF LABOR. The price? ONLY $150.

When the processor hedged and tried to refuse the fast-talking solicitor, he was told that unless an ad was placed in the directory "the boys in the union wouldn't like it a bit." The solicitor was then referred to the processor's agency.

Four days later came a rough galley proof of an ad two newspaper columns wide and three inches deep. Total copy: THE FRIEND OF LABOR caption and the name and address of the company. With the proof was a statement for $150 and a request that a check be sent immediately.

The agency wrote the publisher, stating that the advertising space had not been authorized and therefore the bill could not be paid. Then followed a long-distance call from the publisher who insisted that it had been authorized and intimated that unless the amount was paid immediately there COULD be labor trouble in the processor's plant.

A check with local labor leaders revealed that none of them knew anything about such a labor directory, and also that labor leaders were alarmed about offbeat labor papers using bucket-shop tactics. As one official said: "Such tactics and practices can tear down more good-will in one day than legitimate labor organizations can build up in a year." A check with the Better Business Bureau also revealed that this same operator had been working automobile dealers in Texas, and in most cases dealers had been paying off rather than run the risk of offending union members.

There is no way of estimating the number of advertising dollars that have gone down the drain in this one racket, because most advertisers who are hooked would prefer to pay rather than admit they were victims of such a scheme.

The Calendar Racket
As ruthless an advertising racket as I have seen in many years involved a church calendar.

SEE
For Your Furniture & Carpet
PATTERSON CARPET CO.
805 Broadway Plainview

This scheme first came to my attention when two women called on me soliciting advertising to go in spaces around the edge of the calendar. It was a single-color, single-sheet affair with the calendar in the center. Around the edge of the sheet was a double row of small advertising spaces—64 in all. The spaces sold for $5 each and the solicitors explained that their church Sunday School class would get a percentage of the take.

The women filled up the spaces by high-pressureing local businessmen who, naturally, were willing to help out a church. About a month later committees from every church in town descended on the same advertisers, bearing samples of the first calendar. The pitch was the same by every soliciting group: "You advertised on such-and-such church calendar, so you can't afford to miss ours." Harassed advertisers learned a bitter lesson 22 churches later.

This scheme is simple. A specialty salesman sells one church on the calendar idea. The advertising space is sold, but when the calendars are printed there are enough extra copies printed to sample all the other churches in the city. These samples are distributed by direct mail with instructions for selling spaces, the amount of money that can be made for the church and a suggestions that the sample has a ready-made advertising list.

The advertising on these calendars was virtually worthless; every space contained only the name and address of the company. Not a single advertising message on the sheet.

Some of these ad wolves literally employ the law to give authenticity to their shady schemes. Example: Last year a motion picture producing firm came to town and convinced the sheriff's department that a film using local teen-agers for actors and featuring local scenes would be a powerful weapon to combat juvenile delinquency, especially reckless driving. The pitch was to get 10 prominent business concerns to sponsor the $350 cost of the film at $350 each. In return these business firms would receive integrated commercials in the film.

A deputy in the sheriff's department actually went around with the soliciting salesman. The sight of this deputy, a symbol of legality, might very well have been the deciding factor in convincing 10 business firms to sign on the dotted line.

Then the movie company came to town, lined up some high school seniors for actors, had a few rehearsals, and shot the film. The scenario called for six teen-agers to do some fancy driving culminating in a wreck in which one boy would be killed.

The final production was good but gory. A funeral director (one of the 10 sponsors) got to stage the funeral of the boy who was "killed." His total advertising was a 5-second shot of the sign on the front of his chapel. Other participants were rewarded with fleeting shots of their places of business.

A $25,000 Lesson
Operating on a national scale is a group of coupon-book promoters who recently took a Texas drive-in theatre operator for $25,000 worth of free tickets before the coupons were exhausted.

These operators descend on a town, contact business firms and talk them into offering free merchandise, services or products in exchange for a coupon. The pitch is that each coupon will bring in a new customer, and that only a limited number (depending on the size of the city) will be sold in a book of such coupons. Small businessmen generally are the gulls for this scheme.

Once the required number of business firms are obtained, the promoter contracts with a local printing shop to turn out the promised number of coupon books.

Then comes the gimmick. The operator orders (from an out-of-town printer, of course) an extra 20,000 to 30,000 books. Next he installs a battery of telephones in a rented office space and hires a corps of women telephone solicitors who go from page one right on through the telephone directory offering "$50 worth of merchandise for only $2." If a prospect shows any indication of interest, a messenger is dispatched immediately with the book to collect the $2.

When the buyer opens the book and begins to look at her "bargains" she gets a shock. The coupons are good for such items as one flat tire repaired if brought to the shop, $5 on a television service fee—if the set is brought to the shop, free advice on hair styling, a free beauty consultation, 6 dance lessons and other such trips. The Texas drive-in theatre operator who fell for the scheme had free tickets going through his entrance by the carload until the expiration date arrived.

When one of these operators started work in my city some months ago, an advertising agency placed an undercover woman in the headquarters as a telephone solicitor. She quickly determined that the 2,500 books promised the advertisers had grown to 20,000. Confronted with this evidence the operator pulled up stakes and drove his Cadillac to greener pastures.

These coupon-book operators sometimes operate under the sponsorship of reputable national organizations, using them as a front and giving them a percentage of the take. (Naturally, these sponsoring groups are appraised only of the basic, ostensibly legitimate, promotion. They aren't let in on the double shuffle.)

Private Publications
One of the most treacherous media a business concern can use is the privately owned, privately published periodical under the assumed sponsorship or endorsement of churches, fraternities, veterans and military organizations, or labor unions.

There are many of these publications, mostly regional in circulation. In many cases the publisher will claim his organ is the official voice of the organization represented, but generally that is the farthest thing from the truth. Often the publisher's views and editorial slant are vastly different from the majority of the members' in the organization he claims to represent. To advertise in such a periodical would be to offend more potential customers than you would gain.

The P-TA Curtain
Parent-Teacher organization in many parts of the country have unwittingly teamed up with skilled promoters to work the stage-curtain racket until it has become a virtual menace.

This is another version of the ready-made advertising list. The manufacturer of stage curtains goes to a parent-teacher organization of a school in a small town near a large city and explains that a new curtain can be obtained at no cost. He displays a layout of the curtain he can furnish and suggests that the members sell advertising space and turn the money over to him.

The members, anxious to make the auditorium more attractive, go out armed with a layout to talk business firms into buying space at $25 to $75 per slot. The businessman is sympathetic with the public schools, so he selects a space, scribbles down some copy and writes a check.

Very glad to help out—but not for long. Soon every school in his trade territory has a committee calling on him. He sees his first purchase on a picture of a certain manufacturer has made and listens to the subtle suggestion that he can't help one school without helping another.

A Maze of Ads
Most of these advertising rackets have been worked in every town and city in the nation at one time or another. Some come up year after year under the guise of helping some worthy charitable cause. On my desk is a 328-page circus program put out by a leading fraternal organization. The circus was staged in a city of 250,000 population and the proceeds were to go to the Crippled Children's Fund.

The information about the circus acts could have been printed on four pages. But the program this organization finally published contained more than 20 full-color ads and about 200 pages of small card ads with only the name and address of the advertiser. No one, except the advertiser, will ever wade through that maze of printed material.

And what a priceless sucker list that book will be for future advertising racketeers.

So long as weak-spined advertisers allow themselves to be duped, the racket promoters will flourish. Most advertisers do not know how to turn down these approaches, because the promoters and racketeers are well trained. They know how to keep the advertiser on the defensive.

How To Beat The Racket
But one of the surest methods of combating these shady advertising schemes is say you must first contact your Better Business Bureau. The mere mention of the BBB often causes the solicitor to bow out of the picture.

Another method is to employ an advertising agency to handle such solicitations. Large businesses should refer all such solicitations to their agencies. Retailers and small firms can obtain the services of a small agency for a nominal fee for the express purpose of saying "No." The money a business spends now and then on one of these racketeering schemes may seem like a trifle at first, but is only a drop in the bucket to what it may cost later. Every dollar spent with one of these offbeat ad schemes just puts the advertiser on another sucker list and sets him up for future fleecings. In the long run, the best way to stay off sucker lists and to avoid wasting good advertising dollars is to develop the habit of emphatically saying "NO!"
