

U.S. Engineers Plan Inspection 1st Brazos Dam

Engineers of the Federal Power Commission are preparing to leave Washington for the Brazos River district headquarters at Temple, Texas, to gather first-hand data on the power potentialities of the proposed Possum Kingdom Dam in Palo Pinto County, near Mineral Wells. Engineers preparing to make the inspection which will take them to the damsite include Chief Engineer Roger B. McWhorter, Allison R. Williams, chief of the rates, costs and valuation division and probably one or more power expert of the commission staff.

The Brazos trip was announced by Commission Chairman Frank R. McNich, after a conference with Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas, John D. McCall of Dallas, attorney and John A. Norris of Temple, chief engineer and manager of the Brazos River Construction and Reclamation District. Sheppard and the two Brazos officials discussed with McWhorter and other engineers of the commission plans for disposal of hydroelectric power expected to be generated at the Possum Kingdom Dam. The commission said it will act in an advisory capacity in establishing rates.

named to obtain such a proposal. Norris said the district wanted a rate equivalent to what it would cost to generate power by steam or other means. He pointed out that the amount of power that could be generated at Possum Kingdom was so small due to uneven flow of the river that it would not provide more than 10 per cent of the T. P. & L. requirements in area served by the company. As so little power would be generated, Norris said it could not possibly influence power rates generally in the community.

Norris explained generating of hydroelectric power at the Possum Kingdom Dam was not its primary purpose. He said power was secondary to use of water for irrigation, city supplies and domestic and industrial uses. First of a series of thirteen dams, Possum Kingdom also is intended to provide flood protection for the towns and crops downstream.

Of more immediate concern than power is final approval of the grant allotment of $4,500,000 approved by President Roosevelt several months ago. In approving the grant the President laid down many conditions to be met by the Brazos district. The letting of the contract for erection of the dam is hedged by numerous restrictions which Norris and McCall will discuss Thursday with F. C. Harrington, chief engineer of the WPA. He said if no bids could be obtained under the $4,500,000 Federal grant available the difference would have to be met by the Brazos district.

Work Speeded on $32,400,000 Bonneville Dam

Army engineers are speeding the construction of the $32,400,000 Bonneville dam in the state of Washington. This interesting picture in which sky, water and steel meet shows workers erecting piers that will span the Bonneville river. This PWA project is a huge power, navigation and flood-control undertaking.

Power To Be Sold

The Brazos district does not propose to build transmission lines or distribution systems. Instead, it plans to sell the power a wholesale at or near the generating plant. In approving the grant allotment of $4,500,000 for the Possum Kingdom Dam, President Roosevelt stipulated as he has in all other federally financed projects, that any contract for sale of power must be approved by the Federal Power Commission.

The hydroelectric plant proposed will have, according to tentative plans, installed generating capacity of 20,000 to 25,000 kilowatts, capable of producing annually 50,000,000 kilowatt hours of firm power and 12,000,000 kilowatt hours of secondary power. Cost of the generating plant has been estimated at $600,000 to $700,000.

T. P. & L. Makes Offer

The Texas Power & Light Company, in a preliminary proposal offered to buy power wholesale at the dam at a rate of five mills for firm power and one and a half mills for secondary power. Norris said while those rates were not low by any means, he considered them "pretty good" rates. The T. P. & L. offer was submitted in the form of a proposed contract with the Brazos district and it is being studied by the Federal Power Commission. It was submitted following conferences with a power company of the Brazos district.

Official Expresses Alarm Over Loss of Cotton Markets

J. E. McDonald, Texas agriculture commissioner, expressed alarm in a talk at Dallas Monday over loss of foreign markets by American farmers, and declared as a remedy congress should pass the domestic allotment act, providing parity prices.

"The parity of our farms, gins, oil mills, warehouses, and transportation facilities must inevitably decline in a manner comparable to the loss in our foreign marketings," McDonald said after an hour's conference with Labor Leader William Green.

"This will bring about a comparable increase in unemployment on the farm and in all industries. Nine cent cotton is sufficient evidence of an imperative need for a constructive, permanent agricultural program to replace the emergency programs under which we have been operating the past three years."

"Congress, when it reconvenes, should accept the domestic allotment plan as its sole agricultural measure, providing for parity prices. The resulting adequate purchasing power for the farmer would make him able to pay adequate wages for farm labor and support other American industries."

As an example, McDonald said, the parity price of wheat ought not to be fixed less than $1.50 per bushel for the portion consumed domestically. Cotton, under the same category, ought not to be less than 20 cents a pound.

Devout Immersed in Mass Baptism

By ones, twos, threes—even by entire families—87 believers were baptized in a mass immersion at the non-denominational Immanuel temple at Los Angeles. An elderly convert, wringing wet but happy in her religious fervor, is pictured above. The believers were baptized by Rev. A. Earl Lee (right), pastor of the church.

Free Admission To Grounds of Frontier Fiesta

Record crowds are thronging the Fort Worth Frontier Fiesta grounds tonight now that the 50-cent gate charge has been removed, throwing the turnstiles wide open to the public.

The free gate policy was started Tuesday night on the heels of the huge attendance which marked the Labor Day week-end. Free attractions, notably the Astor House, Silver Dollar dance hall, Gulf studio broadcasts and the West Texas Chamber of Commerce exhibits, continue.

Although the gate charge has been abolished, Director-General Billy Rose is sparing no expense to keep Casa Manana, the Pioneer Palace and the Salic Marionettes constantly fresh and new. Just added to Casa Manana are Cass, Mack and Topsy, comedy team, and Gomez and Winona, America's foremost ballroom dancers. Paul Whiteman and his band, Everett Marshall, Harriet Hootor and other stars remain.

GET CLASS-COATED CANDY

Monticello, Ill.—Two stenographers, Elaine Zeigler and Mrs. Sarah Bean, received packages of class-coated pecans, with a note in each reading, "Hoping you have a happy Thanksgiving." The notes were signed, "A Sunshine Sister." It was discovered that the pecans contained large quantities of powdered glass, and while many persons had tasted the contents of both packages, none had eaten enough to do serious injury.

CHURCHES

"Don't Join Church" Advises Minister

The minister of the Church of Christ, J. G. Malphurs, is preaching a series of sermons at the evening services each Lord's day on the church. His text for the second of the series was taken from Acts 2:47, "And the Lord Added to the Church Daily Such as Should be Saved." The text was divided into four sections, and stressed as follows:

1. "And the Lord Added." Ministers preach the gospel, men obey it, and Lord adds them to the church. "Obey the gospel" is a Bible expression. (2 Thes. 1:8; 1 Pet. 4:17). The expressions, "join a church," "join some church" are not Bible terms; they have their origin in denominational membership-getting. The thing for every sinner to do is to obey from the heart (Rom. 6:17) the commands of the Lord to be saved, and the Lord will add him to the church, as a father records the name of his child to the family record. Obey right, and the Lord will make no mistake in his addition.

2. "To the Church." He does not add us to a denomination. If we are in a denomination we are there because of our own actions and vows. The Lord adds us to that church which he promised he would build. (Mat. 16:18). He does not wish us to be denominated, or he would have suggested that we "join" ourselves to one.

3. "Daily." Our text tells when the Lord does the adding. "They then that gladly received his word were baptized; and there were added unto them in that day about three thousand souls." (Acts 2:41). As soon as they were baptized they were added, "the same hour of the night." (Acts 16:33).

4. "Such as Should be Saved." The Lord adds only those who have "gladly received his word" (Acts 2:41), only those who have "obeyed from the heart." Note that the text implies that He does not add to the church irresponsible persons, such as infants and idiots, for they can not "gladly receive his word," neither can they obey from the heart. Neither does the Lord add to the church those who are dipped under the water without first believing and repenting. "The firm foundation of God standeth, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his." (2 Tim. 2:19).

The subject at eight o'clock next Lord's day evening will be, "The Lord's Program for His Church."

The great number of visitors hearing these sermons receive a hearty welcome.

ALLRED INSISTENT ON NEED OF STATE OF NEW TAX LEVY

Can Take Care of Problems After More Cash Is In Treasury, He Says

Plans for an attack on the State's financial problem other than by new taxes encountered the opposition this week of Gov. James V. Allred as he insisted revenue raising must be accomplished first. "Raise some revenue is my plan," he said, commenting on various proposals that have been advanced by legislators and members of the Senate Economy Committee. Allred is not inclined to reopen the question of appropriations, which some members have said should have and could be reduced, he said "because we are liable to wind up with some more."

Also, he said, he does not intend to submit at the outset the question of consolidating governmental activities or changing the old-age pension setup. "When we put some revenue in the treasury, get the horse before the cart, then we will take care of those problems," he said. To the contention of some members that the subject of raising revenue for specific purposes gave the Legislature the right to say how it should be spent, Allred said: "I am willing that the Legislature say how to spend it if it will just raise the money."

The Governor evinced a belief that the Legislature would accomplish little or nothing in an attempted economy drive by re-considering biennial appropriations which became effective Wednesday. Budget bills were increased by approximately $20,000,000 for the biennium, of which about half was in the departmental bill. Senator Albert Stone and others have contended $1,500,000 or $2,000,000 could be cut from it without impairing any department.

Legislators had four months to work out the appropriation bills, the Governor said, and the bills he approved with relatively minor verses, other than one deleting a $750,000 item for the purchase of land for the Big Bend National Park, were passed with few dissenting votes.

Allred said he discussed with Senator John Redditt of Lufkin, chairman of the Finance Committee, his proposal for a luxury tax modeled after one in California. The Governor has approved the luxury tax principle in prior messages to the Legislature but he said he had not decided whether he would renew the recommendation at the special session as he had not completed his study of the financial problem.

Senator Redditt tells me California collects $184,000,000 from its 3 per cent luxury tax," he observed.

Another proposal to meet the fiscal problem without levying new taxes by appropriating to social security delinquent ad valorem taxes also met disapproval. "I do not believe it would bring in much," Allred said. "We could not collect 1 per cent of delinquent taxes on personal property. We have talked about collecting delinquent taxes for six years, with no result."

Gaunt Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Roberts Sr. and son, G. W., visited in Coleman part of last week. Mrs. W. J. Carrigan and children of Throckmorton are visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Fowler.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

The State of the World. SANTA MONICA, CALIF. —Up in Montreal a veteran showman says he talks with chimpanzees in their own language. I wish he'd ask one of his chimpanzee pals what he thinks about the present setup of civilization.

Because I can't find any humans who agree as to where we all are going and what the chances are of getting there. In fact, the only two who appear to be certain about it are young Mr. Corcoran and young Mr. Cohen, and they seem to hesitate at times—not much, but just a teeny-weeny bit—which is disconcerting to the lay mind. We are likely to lose confidence even in a comet, once it starts wobbling on us.

I'm also upset by a statement from England's greatest star-gazer—they call him the astronomer royal, which, by coupling it with the royal family, naturally gives astronomy a great social boost in England and admits it to the best circles. He says the moon is clear off its mathematically prescribed course.

Irvin S. Cobb

Cash Versus I. O. U.'s. ONLY a few weeks ago the front pages were carrying dispatches saying the adjustment of Great Britain's defaulted debt was just around the corner. Economists and financiers had discussed terms of settlement. Figures were quoted—mainly figures calling for big reductions on our part, but never mind that. They were figures anyhow. Lately the papers have been strangely silent on the subject. Perhaps you remember the old story told on the late John Sharp Williams, who frequented a game at Washington where sportive statesmen played poker for heavy stakes—mostly with those quaint little fictional products called I. O. U.'s as mediums of exchange.

Early one morning a fellow senator met the famous Mississippian coming from an all-night session. "I certainly mopped up," he proclaimed. "I won $3,000—and what's more, $8.75 of it was in cash."

Autumn Millinery. JUST as the poor, bewildered males are becoming reconciled to the prevalent styles in women's hats, up bobs a style creator in New York warning us that what we've thus far endured is merely a foretaste of what's coming. In other words, we ain't seen nothin'!

For autumn, he predicts a quaint number with a slanted peak fifteen inches high, which, I take it, will make the wearer look like a refugee trying to escape from under a collapsing pagoda. Another is a turban entirely composed of rooster feathers. A matching coat of rooster feathers goes with this design. But in the old days they used hot tar. A third model features for its top-hammer a series of kalsomine brushes sticking straight up. Naturally, the hat itself will imitate a barrel of whitewash. But the gem of all is a dainty globular structure of Scotch plaid. Can you imagine anything more becoming to your lady wife than an effect suggesting that she's balancing a hot-water bag on her brow?

"McGuffeyisms." THE lieutenant-governor of Ohio urges a return to "McGuffeyism" for settling modern problems. "I was in a McGuffey reader that I met those prize half-wits of literature—the Spartan boy who let the fox gnaw his vitals; the chuckle-headed youth who stood on the burning deck; the congenial idiot who climbed an alp in midwinter while wearing nothing but a night shirt and carrying a banner labeled "Excelsior" in order to freeze to death; the skipper who, when the ship was sinking, undertook to calm the passengers by—wait, read the immortal lines:

"We are lost!" the captain shouted, "As he staggered down the stair. And then the champion of all—the Dutch lad who discovered a leak in the dyke so he stuck his wrist in the crevice and all night stayed there. In the morning, when an early riser came along and asked what was the general idea, the heroic urchin said—but let me quote the exact language of the book:

"I am hindering the sea from running in," was the simple reply of the child."

Simple? I'll tell the world! Nothing could be simpler except an authority on hydraulics who figures that, when the Atlantic ocean starts boring through a crack in a mud wall, you can hold it back by using one small Dutch boy's arm for a stopper.

FIRST, THERE'S AN IDEA

All good things begin with an idea. Improved motor fuels, better motor oils are no exception to that rule. So Humble's continuous improvement policy puts a premium on ideas. First, a technician gets an idea; he and his fellows elaborate it, theorize about it, satisfy themselves it's sound. Then they test it in the laboratory, that graveyard of many ideas which look good on paper. If the idea passes the laboratory test, the supreme test of all awaits it—the open road. The new product, the improved product, goes through a gruelling grind no ordinary driving would ever give it. Then—if it stands up—it's offered to you.

When, therefore, we invite you to test our Humble products in your car, we're confident you'll like them. We have tested them ourselves and we know they're good!

Retirement Set-Up For Teachers Is Now In Effect

Teachers in Haskell County and throughout the State of Texas automatically become members of the Teachers Retirement System September 1, 1937 and each member will contribute five per cent of his salary to the Teachers Retirement Fund.

Unless teachers sign waivers within ninety days stating that they do not wish to become members of the system they are counted as members and five per cent of their monthly checks is held back and sent to the State Department. However, the money contributed by the teacher bears interest at the rate of three and one-half per cent compounded annually and may be returned to him upon withdrawal.

The State will match the annual contribution made by the teacher and this fund will make up the amount for payment to retiring teachers. Persons who teach thirty years in the state may retire when they reach the age of sixty. Any person who has attained the age of sixty and has taught for thirty years may retire after teaching two more years.

If a teacher should for any reason find it desirable to withdraw from the Retirement System before reaching the age of retirement, he will receive all the money he has contributed plus three and one-half per cent interest compounded annually. This provision makes it safe for a young teacher who is not sure how long he will remain in the teaching profession to become a member and contribute to the fund. If for any reason he should stop teaching after a few years, then the money he has contributed has merely served as a savings fund for him. Of course, any teacher withdrawing before retirement age will not receive any State money that has been set aside to match his contributions.

Each member upon retiring will receive annuity award for Texas service prior to the date the Act becomes effective. The maximum prior-service credit is calculated by taking one per cent of the average annual salary for the ten years immediately preceding July 1, 1937 or if he has less than ten years of such service, then his average compensation shall be computed for his total years of such prior-service in Texas. The average compensation thus derived is multiplied by the number of years of prior-service in Texas. The maximum number of years allowed for prior-service is thirty-six, and the maximum salary is $3,000.

To receive prior-service credit a teacher must file within a stated period on blank data needed for the issuing of a prior-service certificate.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stewart left Sunday for Bonarton where she has accepted a position in the high school as teacher of Spanish for the 1937-38 term.

Mrs. H. C. Cates returned home this week after visiting her sister in Midland and Fort Stockton.

Latest Sound Equipment for Texas Theatre

A new era in the enjoyment of motion pictures is promised to movie goers in this community when the Texas Theatre presents Mirrophonic Sound, the most discussed topic in motion picture circles in the last ten years.

The debut of Western Electric Mirrophonic Sound, set for Thursday September 16 at the Texas will be marked by an elaborate program of film fare. Patrons will be given an opportunity, for the first time, of hearing sound effects so life-like, so true to the original, that they will believe that voices, sounds are actually being delivered in the theatre itself, instead of being reproductions of voices and sounds on the film sound track.

Country-wide tests, recently made by Electrical Research Products whose technical experts will supervise the installation work, show that theatre audiences receive emotional thrills from sound reproduced by Mirrophonic sound equipment far in excess of any heretofore experienced. Theatre patrons of the Texas on September 16, when Mirrophonic is first heard in this town, especially since the picture "The Good Bad Man" with Paul Muni and Lucretia LaRue, will now become realistic to those who have heard the stars for the first time.

Youngest Cottonfields From Airplane Is "Old Game" For Youngest Pilot In The Business

release the poison and is dusted over the fields by the "prop wash" of the plane. Following the cotton dusting season from South Texas to the plains country and in Louisiana, Oklahoma and New Mexico the company also sends ships to Arizona, California and Florida. Lettuce, tomato fields and citrus fruit is dusted in these states. After work in this section Longino will fly to Florida where he will be engaged in large scale dusting of areas of five hundred to one thousand acres where much heavier mixtures are used. Formation flights quickly cover these large fields.

Mr. Schroeder, pioneer in the cotton dusting business, poisoned his first field in Jones County twelve years ago, and he admits that first dose of poison might have not been too effective, knowing no more about poisoning than he did. However, since that time his specially trained men have become preeminent in this work.

To become a dusting pilot one is required to have a transport license and special waiver from the department of commerce, permitting flying under two hundred feet. The licensed ships also require special waivers for the work because of the keen sense of direction and judgement of speed and distance required. In dusting the plane is piloted cross-wind and perfect timing is necessary in releasing the poison. At the start of each season many new pilots have been broken in and there is always a demand for men qualified to do this work. At the end of the season there are two or three pilots who will never fly again—killed or injured on some job.

Although requiring a high degree of skill and involving plenty of danger the work is compensated with liberal salary and few working hours. Salaries of $1,600 a month offered American pilots for fighting in the Spanish revolution with a bonus of $1,000 for each ship brought down has no attraction for Longino. He says he has no desire for stopping a sniper's bullet. After finishing dusting in Florida, Longino will return to Houston, his home, where he will instruct students in flying.

Longino started flying when working for a private flying school to earn money for his own ship but "cracked" after three hours and fifty minutes of instructions he soloed that time has piled up over a hundred and seventy hours of flying time. A year after his first solo flight he purchased his own ship but "cracked" on his third or fourth flight. He has since that time he has had a harrowing experience and power lines many times. It was just last season he had a harrowing experience in an unfamiliar area near Lake Charles, La. he the airport and darkness of him before he could find the place. His fuel supply, low, he was forced to land. Picking out a large tree landmark, barely visible in the dark, he eased his ship down and walked into the nearest town returning next morning found that his ship had rolled over embankment and had landed in a small pasture with grazing cattle. He of how he missed all little and stopped rolling just edge of that ditch still bring shudder to Longino.

Longino is employed by the J. J. Schroeder Co. of Houston, only dusting company in the area. The organization contains ships fitted with special equipment, including hoppers front of the cockpits that

Final Call Issued Youths For CCC Camp

Last call for unemployed youths to enroll in the Civilian Conservation Corps has been issued. Final registration date for young men desiring to join has been set at Saturday noon, Sept. 11. Seven hundred and fifty vacancies exist in this district, composed of seven West Texas counties.

Only forty boys have registered at the local County Welfare office, in charge of Mrs. Kate Perdue. Vacancies still exist for many other boys, including colored youths who are eligible.

Age limitations have been dropped from 17 to 23 and youths entering the CCC will follow an educational program that will include teaching of a trade to those who wish to learn. Thus when discharged into private life they may find employment in the industrial field.

Fire department from Stamford assisted in extinguishing the blaze.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Cures for Communism.
SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Here a certain rich man out here—a rich but indulgent—got a letter from his heir, a sophomore at one of the big eastern colleges.

The lad announced he had been converted to communism and was contributing to the cause. So what about it?

The old man wrote back:

"Son, you have a perfect right to follow the dictates of your conscience. But as a consistent communist you naturally would not continue to live on the ill-gotten gains of a wicked money-grabber. Today I am cutting off your somewhat generous allowance. You will also vacate the luxurious apartment you now occupy because I'm not paying the rent of same any longer. So go ahead, my boy, and commune freely—with my blessings! But from date that'll be about all from this end of the line."

Exactly four hours after the arrival by air mail of this ultimatum, the hard-hearted parent got back a rush telegram stating that the young man had been thinking things over and had decided not to take up the new doctrine.

The Art of Listening.
WE HAD a party at which there appeared what I may call the dumb poets—Sam Hoffenstein and Ogden Nash. At the studios where they're both turning out epics, there's a rule that neither shall burst forth into poetry while he's under contract—no thumbing of the harp, no sounding of the lute. Cinema's gain is creation's loss.

Maybe that explains why they made such good listeners the other night. And isn't a good listener a boon? I don't mind being interrupted, provided the interrupter chooses the right subject. Mute and rapt, I can harken for hours on hours if someone is talking about me, say, or even reading from my published works. But these two minnesingers only broke in to ask that the pickled shrimp be passed or gently to suggest that another little drink or two wouldn't do any harm.

Ogden Nash has attained the highest peak of distinction attainable for a writer. His chief imitator has an imitator who is bringing up his oldest boy to be an imitator.

Resurrecting Old Words.
WHEN a word gets fashionable—especially a new word which some wordsmith thought up right out of his head—it gets too dog-gone fashionable. The same applies to old words which have been interred from their forgotten tombs in the dictionary.

I seem to see grave robbers prowling through the unabridged, starting in at "aard-vark," which is an animal formerly common only to Africa but now frequently found in cross-word puzzles; and working on through to "zythum," a very strong beer drunk by ancient tribes. I guess those old-timers imbibed copiously of the brew and then named it. It doesn't sound like the sort of word a dead sober party deliberately would make up.

Do you remember the run "intrigued" had? I never got so sick of a word in my life. And then along came "provocative," and it turned out to be a pest. People went around just looking for a chance to work "provocative" into the conversation. The only way to lick 'em was to pretend to be deaf and dumb.

And now the reigning favorite is "allergic." Folks spout it everywhere, whether they know what it means or not. I don't mind saying I'm getting awfully allergic to "allergic." There must be many others like me.

Campaign Books.
LET us not cavil too much because high pressure salesmen, working on commission, have been unloading upon the faithful, at fancy prices, the gift book put out by Washington headquarters to pay off campaign debts. In fact, 15 cents' worth would cover practically all the cavil I personally have used up in this connection.

The result tends to prove the gratifying fact that, while more Democrats may not necessarily have learned how to read and write, obviously more of us have got money than formerly was the case when the Republicans were in power.

Besides, think of what the strain would have been upon the poor postman if the national committee had been stuck with all this bulk literature and congressmen had started franking copies out to their constituents with Uncle Sam paying the freight. To give you a further idea about this franking privilege, I may state that it was named for Frank, Jesse's brother—and you'll remember how careless those James boys were with the United States mails!

Cotton Rate Rules Upset By Decision

Interests of cotton concentrators and compressors in the Texas interior are believed to have suffered materially through a decision rendered Saturday in the United States circuit court at New Orleans in the cotton rate battle inaugurated about two years ago, according to local cotton and railway men questioned this week.

The New Orleans court held that shipments of cotton from inland Texas points to Houston for export or trans-shipment to out-of-state points are inter-state shipments, and therefore subject to regulation by the federal interstate commerce commission.

Benefits Houston
The decision supported a similar decision returned some months ago in federal district court at Houston. It has the effect of establishing I. C. C. freight tariffs under which compressors and concentrators at Houston may ship cotton purchased in the interior to Houston for compressing there. The decision immediately was heralded by cotton interests in Houston, and other seaport cities, as a victory giving them a distinct advantage.

The case had been carried to the New Orleans court by the state, on behalf of the Texas Railroad commission, on appeal from the federal district court at Houston. The railroad commission held that shipments of cotton halted in Houston, or other ports, for weighing, reclassification, redistribution, etc., are intra state (within-the-state) shipments rather than interstate shipments. The commission therefore assumed control of freight rates on such movements of upstate cotton to the coast, and promulgated rates for such traffic.

Appeal Expected
The railroad commission held that cotton grown in this section, for instance, should be ginned and compressed here. To that end, freight rates were so adjusted as to require the compression of baled cotton at loading point, in order that maximum weight might be placed in railway cars. The plan, it was explained, was designed to protect payrolls created by ginning and compressing of cotton in the community of its production.

Local cotton men were of the opinion that the state will appeal from the New Orleans court decision to the United States supreme court.

BABSON PREDICT AGAIN
Semi-Weekly Farm News (Dallas)

Roger W. Babson, who for several decades has made a comfortable living by fairly successfully predicting the ups and downs of the business cycle, has contributed an article to the New York Herald Tribune in which he gives his vision of the future. It is not reassuring. Here are some random statements:

Many people feel that Washington, while not able to prevent another depression, can at least shorten its length and severity. I believe exactly the opposite. I feel that the country is going into the next depression with so much debt and so many unseasoned laws that the next panic may be worse than the last one. . . . Washington will be far less prepared to handle this next depression. As we stepped off the precipice in 1930, the Federal debt was only $16,000,000,000 (billions). Today it is more than twice that and growing rapidly. Furthermore at the rate we are growing now it looks as though the relief rolls through the last panic will not be emptied before we set sail on the next depression. . . . The vicious new undivided-profits tax severely penalizes companies in building up reserves in good times to see them through hard times.

Mr. Babson does not lay all of the blame for the situation at the door of the Government. Installation buying has reached a new high, and the speculative spirit is abroad again. The stock market is exceedingly "thin," and "when a real selling wave hits it, prices could break fifty to sixty points."

Just when is all this going to happen? Mr. Babson does not know, but he is soon going to start getting rid of more highly speculative holdings. He rather thinks that the break is not far away unless the Government yields to the temptation to starve off the next panic by a currency inflation program which would "bring the wildest boom we have ever seen" prior to the wildest panic.

The Herald Tribune comments on Mr. Babson's article by stating that he has guessed wrong many times in his life. He has, but he does not guess wrong when he says that the total governmental debt (local and Federal) now amounts to $430 per capita, more than $1,600 for each family, and that a terrific private indebtedness is being piled up through installment by buying and other mortgages against future private incomes. Possibly it is not time to become alarmed, but a conservative putting on of the brakes in both governmental and private finances would not be an unwise policy now, if we take an average view of present-day evidence in the light of what similar evidence has meant in the past.

MEXICAN HORSE TRADING

One danger in dishing out a new deal at home is that a good neighbor may come calling for his borrowed pots and pans before the feast is over. At least that is the impression given by Mexico's threatened retaliation after Boulder Dam blocked water hitherto received by Mexico.

Mexican officials say that soon they will be in position to cut off two lower tributaries of the Rio Grande river, thus drying up the Texas water supply for 100 miles in the region southeast of Brownsville.

So far, Mexico hasn't definitely decided to take this action. It is being held back as a bargaining point, somewhat after the David Harum barter fashion. It's probable that Mexico would withdraw the threat in exchange for some of the Colorado river water withheld by Boulder Dam.

Texas, for one, could hardly appreciate 100 miles of dry border. It seems that Mexico has whitened Uncle Sam down to some pretty sharp horse trading.

JUST BE SIMPLE

A judge in Massachusetts recently looked over a group of jurors and instructed them something like this:

"Just imagine you are an umpire at a baseball game. You're in the best position and if you see the ball come squarely over the plate between the knees and the shoulders, call it a strike. If it's outside or high call it a ball. It must be one or the other. Use common sense and don't favor either side."

If all judges would talk down to the level of jurors and get an idea across instead of filling unwilling ears with high-sounding phraseology, there might be more verdicts and fewer hung cases.

The average juror goes out to deliberate wondering what came after the third "whereas" in the judge's charge and by the time he gives up trying to figure out, he has forgotten half the pertinent testimony.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Devil in the Dark"

By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

TODAY'S pleasant little tale, boys and girls, is about a graveyard and a boy who lay in it waiting for death. It's Harry Denney of New York City who is telling this yarn, and it concerns the time Harry thought he was about to get an exclusive interview with the Devil.

That's something that newspaper men would look forward to. A lot of them would give their shirts to get Old Nick off in a corner and say, "Look here, now, Dev, what do you think of American women?" But Harry wasn't looking forward to it. He didn't give a whoop about meeting Old Nick, and he didn't give a whoop about American women then, either. For this happened in December of 1917, and Harry was just a boy living in Cork county, Ireland. Maybe Harry's dad shouldn't have told him ghost stories. And maybe Harry shouldn't have been prowling around at night when everybody ought to be in bed. Anyway, the facts are these: The Sinn Fein movement was organizing all over Ireland. The Gaelic language had been suppressed in the public schools and the young fellows of the neighborhood were meeting in secret sessions to learn the Irish language as it was spoken in the days of the Irish kings.

Fear of the Devil Was Instilled in Him.

Harry's dad was an old-fashioned man who wanted Harry to be at home early of nights, and he used every method he knew to get results. He told him stories about ghosts he had seen in the neighborhood that fairly made Harry's hair stand on end. He told Harry that the Devil haunted the country of nights, waiting to snatch up young boys who stayed out late, and Harry half believed him. But not even the fear of the Devil could keep him away from those Gaelic classes when all the other young lads of spirit in the neighborhood were going. So, on certain nights, Harry slipped out of the house and off through Owens graveyard to Strelan, where the class was held.

It was all right going—but it was the coming back that worried Harry. Coming back in the dark along about 11 o'clock. Coming back through the graveyard, with its black and white shadows. That's when Harry used to think of the stories his dad would tell him and run fast so that he'd get home all out of breath. And then came the night that the class broke up later than usual, and Harry didn't start his four-mile walk home until half-past 11. He walked with a couple of other lads for the first mile and a half. Then they left him to go off in another direction and Harry was alone. He was more reluctant than usual to go through the graveyard, but it would cut half a mile off his journey, and even if he went the long way he'd have to pass along the edge of that graveyard anyhow. So he started right through.

It Sure Looked and Sounded Like Satan.

It was after he was well in the graveyard that Harry remembered the time. He had left Strelan at 11:30, and now it would be about midnight—the hour when, according to his dad's stories, the Devil was in the habit of appearing on earth. After that every tombstone looked as if it were grinning at him. Every shadow looked like a specter. And Harry began walking faster than ever.

He had just passed the old church that stood in the center of the grounds when suddenly—he heard a sound. It was the clanking rattle of a chain. Harry broke into a dead run and fled for the exit. He says he made it in nothing flat. The gate was locked, but there was a slight of steps leading up over the wall, and in his panic he tried to take them in a flying leap.

That leap was nothing short of disaster. Harry missed his footing. His toe stubbed on one step—his knee cracked against the edge of another. Down in a heap he went, and then, for an instant, he lost consciousness. When he came to again he was lying on the steps, still inside the cemetery, with a sharp pain stabbing through his knee.

The pain was so intense that Harry just lay there, unable to move. Then he thought of that chain-clanking specter, and in a fit of terror he tried to drag himself up the steps. Suddenly he heard that clanking of chains again—and the sound was COMING TOWARD HIM!

"I guess," says he, "that you know how a rabbit feels when he's looking into the eye of a snake that is hypnotizing him. Well, that's just how I felt then. I couldn't stir an inch. I could hear slow, rhythmic footfalls on the gravel and the sound of the chain, keeping time with every step. It seemed an eternity that I lay there powerless to help myself—waiting for what I was certain must be the end. And just then the moon came up!"

The light should have reassured Harry—but it didn't. Straight ahead of him he could see a dark form coming straight toward him. It was a short, squat form, moving steadily to the clank of its chains, and Harry could see the horns sticking up from the top of its head!

Just a Stray, Friendly Donkey.

Old Nick! Coming to get him! Harry lay there quivering with terror as the Devil came forward with slow, steady steps. He wanted to scream, but he couldn't find his voice. And then, all at once, the figure moved right into a beam of moonlight, and Harry let out a low, hysterical laugh instead.

The figure came up to him and began rubbing against his leg. But Harry had forgotten his fear now—had even forgotten the pain in his knee. For what Harry had seen in that stray beam of moonlight was, not the Devil, but a DONKEY—a donkey with ears—not horns—sticking up from his head, and with a length of broken chain clanking on one of his hind legs.

Harry says that's the first time in his life that he ever felt like kissing a jackass. He scrambled up those steps and limped on homeward to nurse a sore knee for a week thereafter. And after that he could listen to his dad's ghost stories without turning a hair, for he had a pretty good idea of how such tales get started. In fact, he'd have started one himself—if it hadn't been for that stray, revealing ray of moonlight.

Millions of Matches in Daily Use Through World

If all the matches used in the world in one day were placed end to end, they would reach to the moon and 10,000 miles beyond. Think how important these baby explosive bombs are in the everyday business of the world, writes a correspondent in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. American kitchen matches are usually made of pine wood cut in a round shape. In Europe they are made of aspen and are cut square. Sheets of aspen wood can be dried artificially in a couple of hours and made into matches within the next hour. Thus three hours may see a change from an aspen log to a few hundred or more boxes of matches. But pine has to be allowed to stand for a couple of years before it is sufficiently seasoned to be made up.

There is more than one might suppose involved in the matter of dipping match sticks into the fire-producing solution that makes the head. Match heads are really the product of much chemical research. For instance, people like their matches a cheerful color, so the chemical has to be dyed a pleasing blue or red. They must be double tip, capable of being lit on any surface—a wall, a stove, your shoe. They must not leave a streak or scorch after them. They must not be noisy and pop up at the person using them.

The matches must be made so they will not flash up too soon. They must have no sharp edges, but must be smooth and oval so the heads will not rub against one another in people's pockets and light on each other. They must be fairly waterproof and windproof, and must burn without smoke or odor.

Roof of the World

The Pamir mountain region in Central Asia is called "the roof of the world" because of its great altitude. In India the Pamirs are called the "Bam-i-dunya," literally meaning the top of or roof of the world. The word Pamir itself, according to the most logical theory, is derived from the Persian "pai-mit," signifying "the foot of the mountain peaks." The region around the North pole also is sometimes called the "roof top of the world."

"Sixty-Four Shares"

The expression, "sixty-four shares," representing full ownership in a marine vessel, goes back to the merchant shipping act of 1834, by which every British ship was divided into 64 parts and every owner of such a part was registered as a part owner of the vessel. These parts could not be subdivided, but any number of them from 1 to 64, could be registered in a single name.

'WAY BACK WHEN by Jeanne

JOAN CRAWFORD WAS A TELEPHONE OPERATOR

JOAN CRAWFORD'S life is an example of a girl who had talent, ambition and enthusiasm, but who might never have risen beyond an ordinary occupation without the necessary confidence to keep trying.

Joan Crawford was born about 1907 in San Antonio, Texas, daughter of a theater manager. Most of her play hours were spent playing "show," and she danced her way through many struggling years before a real opportunity came her way. At fourteen, Joan went to work as a telephone operator in Lawton, Okla. Then, she was sent to a convent in Kansas City, where she had to earn her way by acting as a kitchen maid and waiting on tables. After leaving college, Joan Crawford found a job in a Kansas City department store as a stock girl at $10 per week, working during the day and practicing dancing at night.

Finally a theatrical agent found a job for Joan in a show which failed a month later, leaving her stranded 300 miles from home. Courageously, she found job after job in cabarets and night clubs in Chicago, Detroit, and New York. She was working in a Shubert street, "Innocent Eyes," when a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executive saw her and signed her for pictures.

Think of the troubles this girl had, the disappointments and struggles. Born in the atmosphere of show business, she was inspired from the time she could first toddle to find a place for herself in that glamorous life. Then, circumstances took a hand and forced her into occupations that were far more on the side of drudgery than glamour. She plugged lines into a switchboard, washed dishes, swept floors, carried heavy trunks, wrapped packages. But through it all, she kept her confidence in herself.

L. Robertson. A premium was made up of $36.25, which was given the grower.

Necessary funds have been raised for the purchase of a chemical fire engine for Haskell, and the equipment has been ordered. It is also planned to organize a volunteer fire department of two companies, with twelve men in each company.

Congress Will Pass Farm Bill, Mahon Believes

Congressman George Mahon returned from Washington Friday and opened his Colorado office Saturday. His secretary, Lloyd Croslin, will remain in the Washington office in order to maintain direct contact with the Government Departments. Mahon stated that after ten days in his Colorado office he would spend much time in various portions of the district conferring with the people.

In referring to the past session of Congress, Mahon stated that his chief concern had been farm legislation. He said that Congress would no doubt enact a substitute law for the present AAA. He pointed out that this year Congress appropriated $500,000,000 for AAA payments to farmers who cooperate in this year's program. This will tend to counteract the injury done agriculture by the tariff which for many years has accorded special privileges to industry and raised the prices to the consumers. This will be in addition to the subsidy payments on cotton, provided in the closing days of the session, which will tend to guarantee the farmer a total of about 12c per pound for cotton.

In adopting a substitute for the present farm program, Mahon said that great care would have to be exercised in order to prevent discrimination against West Texas because the problem here is different from that of the old South.

Mahon said that the farm tenancy program which was adopted would be of little effect for some time, but he praised the expansion of the vocational education program in the schools which was made possible this session.

In commenting on the probabilities of the United States becoming involved in war, he said, "I join others in deploring the treatment accorded American citizens in Shanghai and other parts of the Orient, but I have no fear that we are going to rush into war. The cost is too great for us to go to war to protect the Shanghai dollars of American investors. We learned something from the last war. I am confident that the President, the Congress, and above all, the people are determined to keep out of war."

North China Victory By Japan Would Hurt Texas Cotton Grower

Victory by Japan in its conquest of North China may have an important effect upon the smallest cotton grower in Texas and the South.

Department of Agriculture experts at Washington are watching the conflict with intense interest for they realize that the outcome may result in a material drop in American cotton exports to Japan, for the past several years the largest buyer of this nation's surplus cotton.

Japan, now the second largest cotton textile manufacturing country in the world has long wanted its own raw supply. Japanese officials are now looking forward to the time when they can get a major part of their supply from the comparatively new cotton fields of North China, in the opinion of department experts here.

Fostered By Japan

The growth and fiber development of cotton in North China during recent years has been almost entirely fostered by Japan. But the Japanese have been handicapped by lack of complete control secure, they envision a far greater growth of cotton with an equivalent improvement in the grade and staple.

Even with victory, this will admittedly take time. But each year as the crop increases and the quality improves, the amount of cotton imported into Japan from the United States will drop. Department officials doubt if Japan will ever be able to produce enough cotton in China to supply its entire demand, but admit that it is no impossible.

Japan is already the major consumer of Chinese cotton, most of which is manufactured in Japanese textile mills in North China. Department officials say that they have reports that once Japan has complete control of that territory, it plans to immediately double the number of its spindles and then increase the number regularly as the crop grows.

Serious Competition

Not only will the improved Chinese cotton compete with Japanese imports of American cotton of the same grade, but the Japanese ability to blend an inferior grade and good grade of cotton in such a manner as to be usable in place of the higher grade may enable them to use improved and native Chinese cotton almost to the exclusion of American imports.

Today Japan imports almost all her cotton from the United States and British India, the United States and British India, the United States cotton of 7-8 inch and longer staple for fine cotton goods and the Indian cotton which is mostly under 7-8 inch in staple for weaving coarse fabrics. The largest part of the Chinese cotton imported is used in Japan for padding.

Years ago imports of Chinese cotton were larger than either American or Indian. As China's cotton spinning industry was developed, more and more of the crop was used locally now almost the entire crop is handled in that country.

Turned to India

Japan then turned to British India for staple equal to that of China. Japan's cotton industry also experienced great expansion especially in fine fabric manufacture with a great need for longer fiber. This the United States could furnish with the result that for the last six years the American cotton imported into Japan has been greater than imports from India.

Exports of American cotton to Japan during the crop season, August 1, 1936 to July 31, 1937, totaled 1,550,000 bales compared with exports to the United Kingdom of 1,144,000 bales, to France of 655,000 bales, and to Germany of 650,000 bales. However, exports of cotton from the United States to Japan dropped from the peak of 2,294,000 bales in the 1931-32 season to 1,743,000 bales in 1932-33, 1,146,000 in 1933-34, 1,524,000 bales in 1934-35, 1,479,000 in 1935-36 and to 1,550,000 this year. Imports of Chinese cotton into Japan reached their peak in the calendar year 1927 when 288,177 bales were received. These dropped off until 1934 when the low point of 87,000 bales was reached, then rose to 113,000 bales in 1925 and to 128,000 last year.

Chinese Crop Larger

The Chinese cotton crop to be gathered this fall is estimated at 4,200,000 bales, the largest cotton crop ever produced in China, of which mills in China can use 3,600,000 bales. This leaves approximately 600,000 bales which must be exported.

Much of this bumper crop is of improved staple developed under the supervision of Japanese experimental stations in North China. Besides experimental stations, the Japanese in North China are using propaganda, urging the farmers to raise better cotton and get a share of the money now going to American growers.

These tactics worked so well in Manchuria in improving rice raising that in a few years an oversupply of this commodity was glutting the market, forcing the government to buy up the surplus.

The effect of Japanese conquest in North China not only is likely to be adverse to Texas cotton planters, but also to Texas shipping interests. In recent years approximately 60 per cent of American cotton shipped to Japan has been exported from Texas ports and other 20 per cent from New Orleans.

Hillsboro, Ore.—A brush fire caused two poles carrying a 25,000-volt power line to fall in a pasture. Six valuable registered Holstein cows, belonging to Arthur Connell, were unable to control their curiosity. They went over to investigate, smelled it and were electrocuted.

Wheatley's Shoe Shop Announces Anniversary Sale

To celebrate their twelfth anniversary in Haskell, Wheatley's Shoe Shop announce the opening of their annual Anniversary Sale this week, featuring special prices on their large stock of Shoes and men's wear. The sale will continue through next week.

The proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. Claud Wheatley, joined Haskell's business circles in 1923 when they came here from Knox City and established a small shoe shop, harness and top shop. Substantial patronage accorded the shop from the start soon made larger quarters necessary, and the establishment has subsequently made four "moves" each time to a larger building, and they now occupy the Pierson building on the north side of the square.

Floyd Gibbons' ADVENTURERS' CLUB

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"What's in a Name?"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

YOU know, boys and girls, when old Bill Shakespeare asked, "What's in a name?" he didn't seem to think that names made very much difference. But I guess Bill could find plenty of people to give him an argument on that subject. One of them is John T. Smith of Ozone Park, N. Y.

John Smith isn't such an unusual name, when you come to think of it. Nor was John such an unusual sort of fellow. At the time this story opens—around April 1, 1935—he was working as a plumber's helper for a large concern.

One day, while threading a piece of pipe, John cut his finger. That isn't an unusual occurrence, either. But add those things all up together, and they'll give you the strangest doggone predicament that ever a man got into.

John paid no attention to his cut finger, but two or three days later it had begun to swell up a bit. His foreman took a look at it and told him he'd better report it to the company doctor.

The doctor was pretty busy. He looked at John's finger, asked him his name, and told him to get the necessary papers from his boss and report at the hospital. "I'll notify the hospital you're coming," he told John. "Be there at eleven o'clock."

John got the necessary papers from his boss and showed up at the hospital on the dot of eleven. He had an infected finger before, and knew pretty well what was done about it. They froze the finger, slit it open with a lance, banded it and sent you home. But it seemed to John that this hospital took a lot more trouble over a sore finger.

A nurse took John's name and said, "Oh yes, we're expecting you." She told him to take a seat in the waiting room, and there John waited for an hour. Then the nurse came back and took him upstairs, opened a door and led him into a room. A few minutes later another nurse came in with a bed jacket. "Take your clothes off and get into bed," she told him.

"Well sir, it began to look to John as if someone had made a mistake. "Do you know what's the matter with me?" he asked the nurse. "Of course we do," the nurse replied. "Well then what's all this fuss about?" John wanted to know. "Oh, we do things right in this hospital," she said. And with that she left the room.

John was ready to agree with the nurse. Here was a big, luxurious, private room, a swell looking nurse, and all kinds of service, over nothing but a sore finger. Do things right in that hospital? You're doggone foolish if you did. John undressed and got into bed. By that time it was three o'clock, and the boss would be wondering where he was. When the nurse came in again he asked her how long he'd be kept there. "Why," said the nurse, "YOU'RE GOING TO STAY HERE OVER NIGHT!"

They Wouldn't Listen to John.

"I thought she was kidding me," says John, "but I found out different. In a few minutes in came a doctor with a third nurse. The nurse jabbed a needle into one of John's fingers, but it wasn't the sore finger. John tried to tell her she had the wrong one, but she snapped, "I know what I'm doing," and John shut up. After a while he said, "Say, do you know what's the matter with me?" The doctor said yes. The nurse paid no attention at all. She thrust another needle into his arm and shot in some sort of drug. The drug made John feel tired. He wanted to go to sleep, but by that time he was pretty sure something was wrong. He was beginning to get scared.

The drug dulled John's brain, but he fought off the drowsiness that was coming over him. Two more nurses came in with an orderly who was pushing a table on wheels. They put John on the table and wheeled him off to an operating room. John roused himself from the stupor the drug had put him and once more he asked, "Are you sure you know what's the matter with me?"

"But my voice was weak," John says, "and they paid no attention to me. I began to feel sick as well as weak. I could see all sorts of instruments laid out on the tables around me. The orderly wheeled my table under a big flood light. The nurses began getting ready a lot of bandages. Then I knew something was wrong. They were going to perform some sort of a BIG OPERATION."

And Did the Doctor Laugh Then?

"I looked for the doctors. There were three of them, talking together in a corner. That was where I made my last desperate effort. I was almost passing out from the effect of the drugs I had been given, but I managed to raise one arm and motion one of the doctors over.

"That doctor was the only one who would listen to me, and thank God he did, for another nurse was coming over with the ether and in another minute I would have been unconscious. I said, "Doctor, are you sure you know what's the matter with me? Are you sure you've got the right man? What's all this fuss about anyway? All I've got is an infected finger."

Well sir, the doctor lifted the sheet that they'd thrown over John and took a good look at him. Then he started to laugh. But it wasn't any laughing matter to John. He had almost gone through an operation he didn't need!

John never did find out what they were going to do to him. Maybe they were only going to take an arm or a leg off. Then, on the other hand, they might have been going to do something really serious. But what he does know is that his name got him into that jam. There are just too doggone many John Smiths in the world, and our John Smith had almost got himself cut open on account of another John Smith's ailment.

When the doctors got through laughing they told one of the nurses to dress John's finger. Then they put him back to bed. They told him he'd have to stay there all night because of the drug they'd shot into his arm. But as soon as the nurse was out of the room, John put on his clothes and beat it out of the hospital.

There were too many John Smiths in the world to take any chances. Any minute they might bring another one in, and then they were liable to have John down in the operating room again, sharpening up the knives and breaking out the ether.

Wallace Says That Food Costs Are Declining

United States Secretary of agriculture Wallace said Wednesday food costs already are beginning to decline because of the larger crops farmers are harvesting this year.

This trend should continue, the Cabinet member said in an interview, "if we have a series of normal crop yields."

Wallace said wholesale food prices turned downward in August and that large crops of corn and other livestock feeds indicated meat prices would follow in 1938.

"Of course the city resident must remember," he said, "that it takes even the best farmers several months to convert corn into pork chops and beef steaks. The city man must remember, too, that fair prices for farm products are one of the best guarantees of continuing city prosperity."

Wallace keeps a close check on prices of farm products. On his desk are several volumes of price charts which Agricultural Department economists keep up to date.

These charts show wholesale pork prices declined considerably in August.

The cabinet member emphasized that "ample consumer protection" is included in Administration farm measures. He said this was written into the new sugar legislation and was included in the general farm legislation embodying his ever-normal granary plan which was introduced in Congress by Chairman Jones of the House Agriculture Committee.

Wallace said that if an ample quantity of food is available there is little need for protection against high cost to consumers. He explained that by "ample" he meant a quantity which would, under ordinary circumstances, yield a fair return to the grower without penalizing the consumer.

The Secretary said the recent jump in retail prices of choice cuts of meat resulted from a combination of drought and business recovery.

Gas Franchise at Throckmorton Given Extension

The City Council of Throckmorton voided an order to terminate the natural gas supply in a called meeting Saturday night. The gas supply was to have been shut off at that time because of termination of the franchise but the last minute meeting allowed continuation of the flow of gas through meters.

No definite announcement has been made as to a possible adequate supply for future use. The local gas company will continue service to patrons for an undetermined period.

Mrs. Ben Hess of Sagerton was in Haskell Wednesday transacting business.

Warning Given To Violators Traffic Rules

Twenty-seven tickets have been issued the last three days to traffic violators by City Marshal Sebz Britton in an effort to enforce unneeded traffic regulations on the main streets of Haskell. First offense tickets are being filed and second offense violators will be fined.

Motorists are reminded to keep to the right of the white lines when making turns on the streets around the square. A complete stop should be made before turning to the right on a red light. The hand should be placed out when making a left turn.

Speed limit within the school zones has been closely observed and officers appreciate this cooperation by motorists.
