Judge Garland, Mickey Rooney, Ann Rutherford, Lana Turner in "Love Finds Andy Hardy", coming to The Texas Theatre for a Monday, Sept. 11-12.

Typical Town Is Center for "Love Finds Andy Hardy"

Constructing the typical American town without using any particular one was the problem faced during the filming of "Love Finds Andy Hardy", coming Saturday preview, Sunday and Monday, Sept. 11-12 to the Texas Theatre.

A study of small towns, made by art directors, revealed the fact that nine out of ten churches were the same, so the hometown of Judge Hardy and his family was a wooden church, a story and a half in height, with a steeple.

In the case of stores, the art directors took a meat market from one town, a drug store from another and a dry goods store from a third. In this way not one community can claim that "Love Finds Andy Hardy" is a copy of their own town.

The reason for this is two-fold: First, it might leave an open path for a lawsuit, and second, community and civic feeling is so strong in the majority of small American towns that if one particular place were copied none of the townsfolk from the adjoining hamlets would think of patronizing the picture.

It might be interesting to note that practically every studio in Hollywood has its "Typical American Town," yet none are alike.

The new Judge Hardy picture, featuring Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Cecilia Parker and Fay Holden, concerns Andy Hardy and his efforts to raise the last eight dollars for a twenty-dollar used car. George Seitz directed.

School Interesting From The Start

The students and teachers of Weinert feel that this is going to be the most successful year in the history of Weinert.

The very first day was interesting, especially the talk made by the Methodist pastor, Rev. Vernon Henderson.

All the students show a deep interest in all the work, sports and club activities.

Come on pupils and let's make this the most prosperous year that Weinert has ever had.

Basketball and Football Practice Starts

The junior boys started their basketball training this week under their coach, Mr. Perrin. They expect to enter and also win, the Brazos Valley League this year. The material is mostly green, so Mr. Perrin will have a good time coaching the boys. Here's luck to you, Mr. Perrin.

The football boys are also having their good time. They have just gone through two weeks of their training and most of the boys are still limping around but are about to get over most of their soreness. The Bulldogs have had two scrimmages: One against the All-Stars of Weinert and one last Friday against the Munday Mogsuls. The Bulldogs looked good in these scrimmages. We open our schedule against holiday, September 16.

Pep Squad Is Organized For This Year

On August 24, several of the girls met at the home economics cottage to organize a pep squad. At this meeting Elsie Cooper and Eula Newsom were elected leaders and Pauline Riley and Mildred Taylor were elected assistant leaders. Mrs. Foote was elected sponsor of the pep squad. In a later meeting the suits were decided upon and mascots for the pep squad were elected. Wanda Sue Brown and Buford Duff were elected. The pep squad has about twenty five members and they are striving for one of the best pep squads in the county. This is the second pep squad attempted at Weinert High and everyone is really trying to make this one very good.

Seniors Have Watermelon Feast

Members of the senior class and high school faculty met at the roadside park Wednesday evening August thirty-first, for a watermelon feast. As soon as everyone arrived, the melons were served. They were cut in slices, and you should have seen those dignified seniors and faculty members eating that watermelon "Nigger" fashion. After the watermelons were served many games were played. Everyone reported a grand time and confidentially I did not hear of any 'tummy' aches next day.

Junior Class Has Party

Of the intellectual minded members of the class are inclined to be offended at my report of our party of the class and otherwise, it is their personal privilege to do so. Ah, what a party! We had the excitement, we had the "eats" and we had the entertainment. What more could we ask under the circumstances? (As you know it was very impromptu—so impromptu we forgot to tell the sponsor about it). We are still blinking and recovering from the excitement of the arrival of an altogether dignified crimson shirt with Rayphord inside. Even W. T. had to acknowledge the superiority of that shirt to all of those in his collection. But the shirts were put out of mind if not out of sight for the more urgent business of apple-eating. I wish to remind you however that "The Battle of the Apple" occurred before that fruit could be eaten. W. T. was general, everybody's head was a target and the apples were ammunition. I don't have to tell you that we dodged those apples almost as successfully as we dodge the questions that Mrs. Palmer hurls at us. It seems that everybody would have been entertained quite completely had he had "Ten Pretty Girls" but Aleatha was very cruel hearted and would not oblige even after a game of "Pleased and Displeased" in which everybody requested "Ten Pretty Girls" to be put at peace.

We all went home and deamed about "Ten Pretty Girls" with crim on shirts and armfuls of apples.

Yelps—From The Kennel

Wonder what Estella would have done if she had been at the Junior party?

Wonder why Pauline B. chose Weinert Hi in preference to Munday?

Is this leap year? Some of the girls seem to think so.

Faye's interest seems to be in Haskell of late.

We wonder whose football hero W. T. is going to be? (It's hard to tell at present).

Can you imagine Mr. Duff's civics class knowing their lesson?

Eula and Ernestine seem to be receiving quite a few letters from Fort Worth and Dallas lately.

Junior and Sid must be quite fond of watermelon. At least, it seemed like it at the Senior watermelon feast.

Why doesn't Leroy play football?

Will the Fire men ever get used to this building and quit running up and down the hall?

Childress Liquor Control Officer to Athens, Tex., Area

Richard Weinert, inspector for state liquor control board who has been stationed in Childress for the past 18 months, has been transferred to Athens, he was notified yesterday.

Weinert and his family will leave immediately for their new home.

The staff of liquor inspectors is being reduced by more than one-third. Weinert was informed, and changes are being made in many districts.

There will be no inspector stationed here under the new setup, but inspectors from the district office in Wichita Falls will work in this county.

Local officers praised Weinert's work since he has been stationed here and expressed regret that he has been transferred. — Childress Index.

Money In The Bank

RICHARDSON, Secretary-Feeder Association of the silo is like money—safe as long as you are and subject to what thousands of users will tell you after their experience. There are about 11,000 of these "bank" ditches in probably that many states, figures are not available. They range in size from capacity down to large enough to feed one

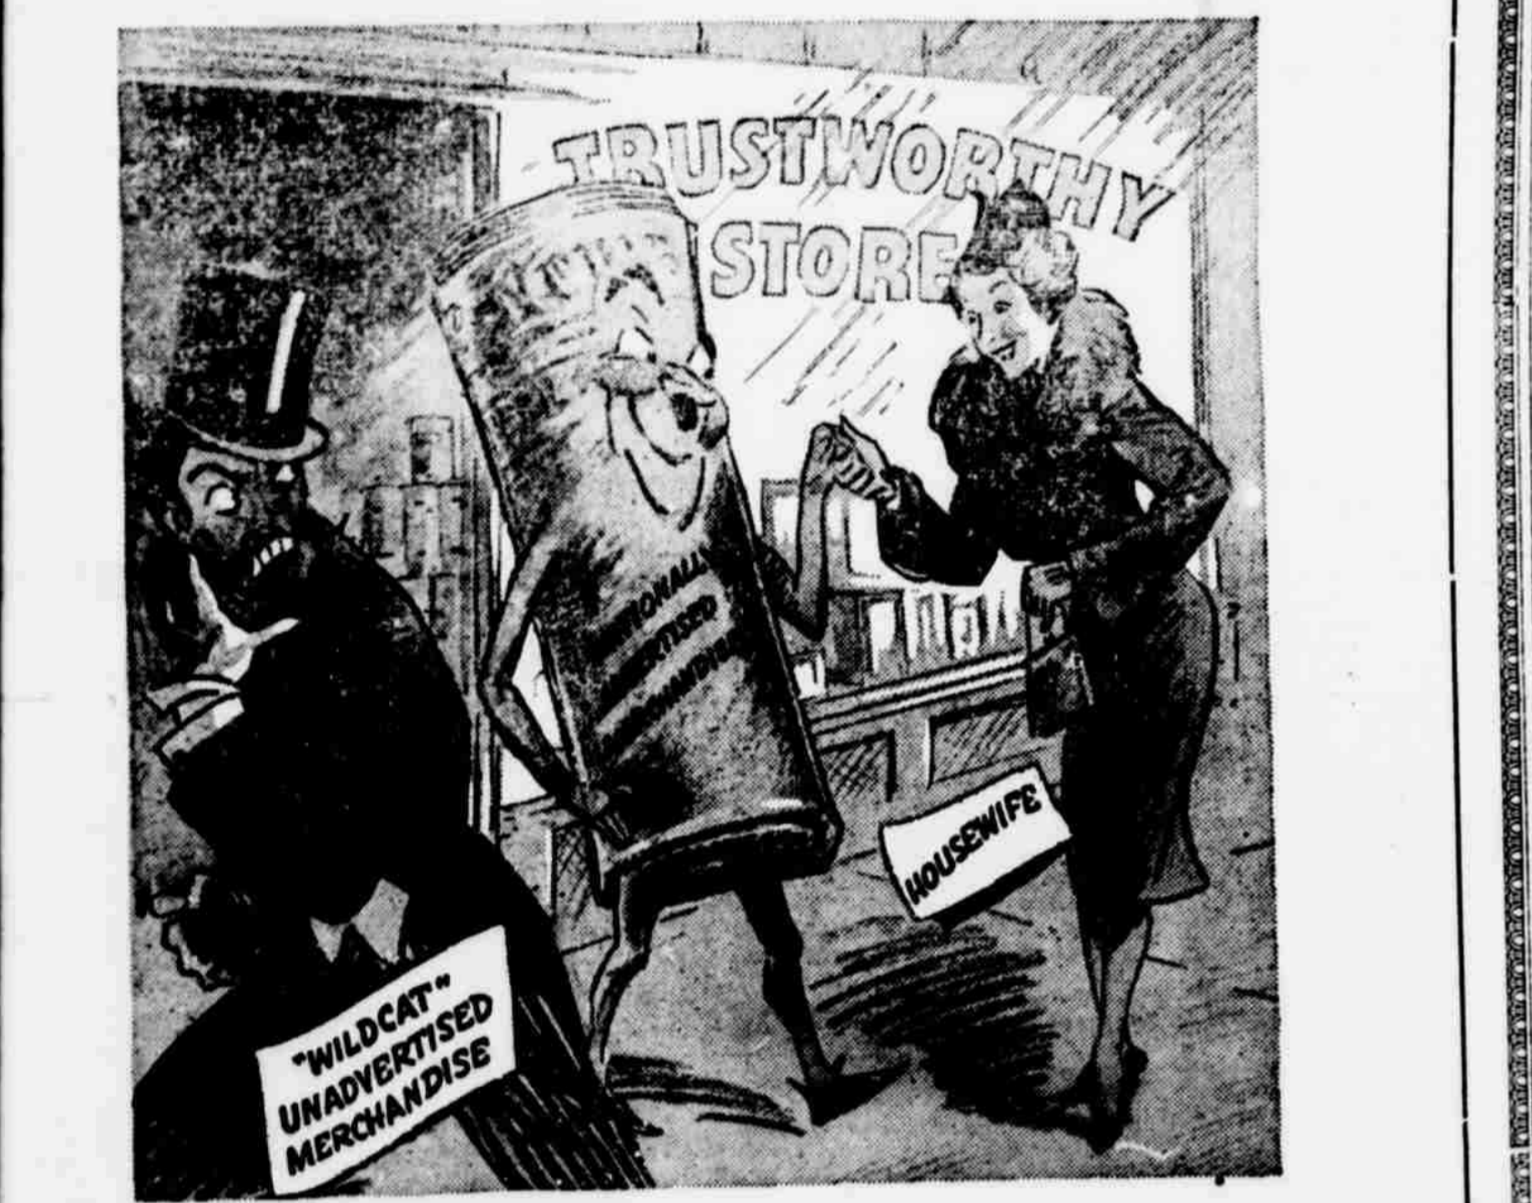

It should be that long before the next drouth or hard winter—as it is a month after filling the silo. The trench silo can be constructed with little or no cash outlay. Any dirt-moving tool from a spade to a drag-line will do the work. It can be dug in a hillside or on the level, any length, depth or width to suit the conditions and the needs of the owner. If rock is too close to the surface or ground water too high for the desired depth, the dirt excavated can be piled up to raise the walls above the ground level, and increase the depth of the trench sufficiently to insure good packing of the ensilage, which is essential to proper curing and keeping of the material. Any crop can be ensiled, even after the grain is mature and the stalks partially dried out. The ideal condition of course is while stalk and foliage are still green and succulent, but if drouth or frost gets in its work before the crop can be ensiled, adding water will supply the deficiency of moisture and make ensilage of dry, or partially dry, material. Corn, sweet sorgho and grain sorghums carry sufficient sugars and easily convertible starches to insure the fermenting process, which turns the material into ensilage. Sudan grass and the legumes require the addition of some fermenting material, and black strap mola ees, a few gallons to the ton of ensilage, will do the job. Crops may be successfully ensiled in whole stalks or an ensilage cutter may be used. In either case success or failure depends on thorough packing in order to exclude air pockets. It is easier to properly pack cut ensilage than stalks, and it is easier to feed out, but the lack of a cutter has not prevented hundreds of farmers from making and using whole-stalk ensilage. Those who have not had previous experience in storing ensilage should consult their neighbor who has, or the county agent, who will supply detailed information in person or by bulletin. Ensilage is more digestible than dry forage, hence an acre of feed in the silo is worth more as feed than the same acre cured dry. There is also less waste, and the acre of feed will go farther in the silo. It furnishes succulent feed when green pastures are not available, and is therefore relished by all live stock. It keeps the digestive apparatus of cattle and sheep functioning better, they get more nourishment from dry grain feed, and therefore produce more milk or weight for each pound of expensive grain they eat. On farms even if it has only a family milk cow and the work stock, can afford to do without a trench silo. One year's use will pay for it, and if not needed this winter, think what it would mean to have "money in the bank" when the next drouth hits!

Historic Hoaxes
By Elmo Scott Watson
"Exaltation," see "Yes, We Have No Bananas"
When Mrs. Sara Smith exhibited one of her paintings at Claremont, Calif., and the art critic dismissed it from consideration as being "distinctly of the old school," her husband, Paul Jordan Smith, an author and minister who considered his wife an accomplished painter, resolved to get back at those supercilious "experts." Several months later an art exhibit in Boston included four paintings by "Pavel Jerdanovitch," who was called the "supreme master of the disubrationist school of painting." They were named "Aspiration," "Adoration," "Exaltation" and "Illumination." The ultra-modernist critics looked at his paintings, nodded sagely and uttered many laudatory comments on "the rise of a new star in the art armament." Critics in New York and Chicago, where the paintings were later exhibited, agreed with them, until "Pavel Jerdanovitch" was revealed as Paul Jordan Smith of California who said that he had borrowed some of his wife's canvases and "just stopped on a bit of paint." For instance, "Exaltation," the most famous of the four, had been called "Yes, We Have No Bananas," and had been used as a fire screen in his home. Smith had produced these ultra-impressionistic pictures, he said, "without the slightest knowledge of painting, just to prove that most art critics don't know what they're talking about."

You'd have a hard time finding even one! For NATIONAL ADVERTISING has made these brand names and hundreds like them almost as familiar as the days of the week. We play guessing games with the advertising slogans. We recognize their trademarks everywhere. In a "bull market" we usually rush to buy their stocks first on the exchange. To millions, each of these nationally advertised brands is "An Old Friend You Can Trust." Why is this so? What gives these hundreds of brands that mysterious, marvelous thing called "acceptance"? Just the bare fact that you see them advertised? Or, some deeper, more important reason? Almost any housewife knows the answer! Dependability! Nationally advertised brands are bought everywhere and used everywhere. Each article that you see advertised from coast to coast is competing for favor of dozens of similar articles in millions of households from New England to the Pacific Ocean. Such "national acceptance"—the favor of millions upon millions of buying Americans—is nothing to trifle with. Nationally advertised merchandise has got to be good—OR ELSE!

Again—the national advertiser has at his disposal the greatest "proving ground" in the world! He plans, prepares, perfects AND IMPROVES his merchandise according to the wants and preferences of millions of Americans—the "choosiest" market on earth! Hence nationally advertised American merchandise is better, safer merchandise, a better value and without peer anywhere. It finds ready buyers in every land and clime. Finally—you'll find that nationally advertised brands have "acceptance" in Haskell because almost EVERY really important national advertiser at some time in this NEWSPAPER! Why? Because the newspaper is the ONLY "advertising medium" that tells not only what to buy, but where to buy it, thus giving the manufacturer quicker, less costly distribution. Because this newspaper has already built up a goodwill and an "acceptance" for the retail merchant—himself an advertiser—who must finally sell the national advertiser's goods. AND LAST BUT NOT LEAST, because this newspaper itself is "An Old Friend You Can Trust," earning and commanding the confidence that both the manufacturer and his dealer must themselves have if they are to sell you a dollar's worth of their merchandise!

We Believe in the Farmer--we believe that the future of this nation lies in the land!

WE BELIEVE that the state of the country's prosperity is in direct ratio to the thickness of the farmer's purse . . . that the purchasing power of America's millions in great cities and in little villages, The Purchasing Power of The Dollar Itself, rests, in the final analysis, on farm income.

WE BELIEVE that as farming is this nation's largest single industry, so should the welfare of the farmer be this nation's largest single concern.

WE BELIEVE that no national policy can succeed unless it has the farmer's sympathy and interest, that no candidate for high office can be elected without the farmer's support. We believe that the farmer is the most important and the most powerful man in America today. In spite of the phenomenal growth of industry, in spite of the mass movement of population to the great cities, the nation's gross farm income is over eight billion dollars—roughly, one-seventh of the total national income! No other industry, no other group of industries, neither steel nor motors nor railroads nor building nor oil even approaches it.

WE BELIEVE that the farmer is America's largest single market. No product that is made and sold can achieve truly national distribution unless the farmer uses it. Millions of people are working in automobile, radio, clothing, furniture and electrical appliance factories today because the farmer has been convinced that the things made in those factories are essential to the scheme of life.

WE BELIEVE that American democracy is secure only as long as the farmer is secure, that national prosperity is possible only if the farmer is prosperous. We believe that the farmer's interests are the interests of every advertiser and business man, the interests of every American. We believe that on the maintenance of farm purchasing power depends the fulfillment of the American dream. And we believe that the advertising to the farmer is a wise investment.
