IMPROVING COTTON

A generation ago, Texas cotton commanded a emium in the markets of the World and among American spinners.

Today, many foreign buyers specify, "no Texas Cotton", in their purchase orders. Much of the staple which moves to domestic and foreign markets from Texas must be sold at a discount.

That, briefly, is the story of deterioration in quality of Texas Cotton, sketched for Houston business men at a luncheon last week honoring Directors of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Burris C. Jackson, a Director of the Chamber and Vice President of the Texas Cotton Association, was the speaker. He pointed out that lowered quality and shorter staple are responsible in part at least, for the loss of foreign markets for Texas Cotton.

Mr. Jackson was not overdrawing a tragic pic-

Everything he said is true, especially his earnest contention that an intensive, intelligenity direct State-wide program to improve cotton quality should be the first step in a campaign to regain lost foreign outlets.

Rich soil, abundantly supplied with vital chemical elements, is necessary for production of high grade, long staple cotton. Fifty years ago, Texas produced the finest in the World. The quality was excellent and the yield per acre high.

But farmers by planting cotton year after year without replenishing the fertility of the soil, extracted from it chemicals needed for proper growth. The process has amounted to mining out of the earth for sale on the open market, nitrogen and other chemiscals.

Impoverishment of the soil and failure to plant good seed have brought progressive deterioration in cotton quality that now brands the Texas staple as undesirable for manufacturing the best quality testiles. Yield per acre has drifted gradually down-

That is a situation Houston as a great cotton port dependent upon cotton for maintenance of foreign trade must farce.

And that is why this City should give enthusiastic support to the cotton improvement of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce.

That organization is sponsoring throughout the seventy-two countries it serves a cotton improvement contest that already has brought most grati-

Houston should give enthusiastic backing to that venture and cooperate in efforts to convince the State and Federal Governments that a State-wide program of the same kind should be launched .-

A CHEERING NOTE FOR BUSINESS

No doubt when Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, speaks of fiscal policies of the Government, he speaks with authority. Mr. Morgenthau is not noted for "much speaking." He is a man of action rather than words. Consequently when he says with deliberation that the federal budget is to be balanced by the paring of expenses he is giving substantial support to statement of this kind previously made by the President.

Morgenthau spoke after days of conferences with the President, and others high in the Administration. Therefore when he speaks against further priming of the pump, or artificial efforts to increase employment and boost business through government expenditures, we may be sure that Mr Roosevelt believes that the time has come when private capital should begin to assume some of the burden that the Government has been bearing. And when he intimates rather broadly that business is to be relieved of some of the excessive taxes under which it has been handicapped and often discouraged, and private capital is to be given more incentive to seek profits through new investments we may feel assured that legislation is to be proposed which will attempt to cut loose some of the billions hoarded in the banks and turn them into industrial channels, where they will afford employment for labor, and create a greater buying power for pro- son. duest of farm and factory.

The New Deal found business and industry prostrate. It has put them on their feet, and now r is about to encourage them to walk out and do things.

UNDERMINING CANCER

The pressing need for continued research into nate Family", a comedy. The cast the mystery of cancer is amply stated by Dr. Henry D. Chadwick, director of the Massachusetts Department of Health, in his assertion that the death rate from this dreadful malady will continue to go higher unless research yields a cure.

The cancer death rate has been going up steadily for years. Eighty years ago, cancer was not one of this play was Edward Havran, Wel- Annie Lee and Dicking who were the 10 leading causes of death in the United States; today it ranks second only to heart disease.

Much of this, to be sure, is due to the increase in the average life span. More people die of cancer nowadays because more people live to the age at which cancer is likely to strike. Nevertheless, the rising cancer death rate is dismaying enough to indicate that research programs deserve all the support the public can give them.

THE FIRST STEP

The census which the Federal Government started to take of the unemployed and partially unemployed ought to meet with ready response from all who come under either of these classifications. Efforts of the Government to aid unemployed are embarassed now by lack of exact information of how many are out of work.

Prompt return of cards distributed this week will tell the President and Congress how many need help and enable them to approach the problem with better understanding.
