Tonn Seeks Office of Constable In Prec. No. 1

Political interest continued to laim a part of the limelight this week with the entry of another canddate for office, A. Tonn, retired blacksmith and woodworker of this city who has entered the race for Constable of Prec. No. , which takes in the city of Haskell and outlying territory.

Mr. Tonn, a long-time resident of Haskell county is the only candidate to announce in recent weeks, and political observers believe the races for the various posts to be filled in the coming primaries have developed. Howver, rumors are current that several candidates plan to make their bid for support of the vot-ers at an early date.

Senior Spotlight

Laverne Williams

Laverne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Williams. She is one of the few girls who completed the course in three years.

Laverne has been in the Home Ec Club for three years and the Gypsy Rambiers for two years. She was selected as a member of Who's Who of Texas High Schools. | course. Reading is her favorite pastime and hobby. Laverne plans to go to Tyler Commercial College next fall. We know she will be a success at whatever she does because she has that "get-up-and-go" attitude.

The attractive brunette, Margarette Williams, is known to all of us by her sweet personality. All of her school life, she has attended Haskell schools. During her Frehsman and Sophomore years, she was a member of the Future Homemakers. She belonged to the Pep Squad her last three years. While a senior, Margarette has been a Zombie. As a hobby, she collects newspaper clippings for her scrapbook. Immediately after graduation, she is leaving Haskell and going to California, where she has a job waiting for her in Richmond Shipyards. Margarette is the daughter of Mrs. Virgie Williams of Richmond, Calif.

Dope An' Stuff

The Senoirs are really in the mood this week. I suppose it is because everything good has happened. How's about that?

To top it all off, the invitations arrived Monday, therefore starting a mumbling and chattering sound of voices. "But just you wait-someday you'll graduate then you can celebrate too."

Signing annuals seems to be another pastime for the last few days. Well, that opportunity comes only once a year not make the best of it?

Rochester Girl Is Bride In California Ceremony

An early morning bride was Delphine Harrell on April 20th. Miss Dorothy Kate Watson, 1229 She is the daughter of Mr. and Carleton St., who was united with Mrs. L. H. Harrell of El Dorado, Lee Jenkins, sons of Mrs. L. M. Bish of Berkeley, Calif., in the University Christian Church. The Rev. Harold H. Griffis officiated at the morning service.

Following the church ceremony 18 guests gathered in the home of Mrs. Bish for a wedding breakfast. The decorations in the home were of bridal wreath, mixed white blossoms and Easter lillies. The parents of the bride who were unable to be present for the wedding are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Watson of Rochester, Texas.

Given in marriage by Mr. Mervyn Bish, the bride was attired in a modish gown of yellow silk crepe with a deep lace collar and trimming of buttons. Her corsage was of orchids. Jeanette Flow of Berkeley attended her in a light blue two piece frock of silk crepe. She pinned on a corsage of pink blossoms. Mrs. Bish attended her son's wedding in a grey silk gown with a gardenia corsage. The best man was Lamoine

Flow of Richmond. Out of town guests at the wedding were Miss Alta Lee Kenemore, cousin of the bride, and Miss Marjorie Hopkins, both of Merced.

The newly wedded Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins, both of whom are engaged in defense work in the East Bay, will make their home on Dwight Way.

MOTHER

In this critical hour of American history when the Motherhood is sacrificing so much another Mother's Day is drawing near. In view of that we, the American Legion, wish to extend to the Mothers of Haskell County, this tribute. First let us quote you the words of Henry Ward Beecher: "HUMAN NATURE never comes so near the Divine as when a royal woman pours out the full flood of her thoughts, and fancy, and love to the little unheeding, and to her yet useless child. Where else is she so beautiful as when she sits in the center of this mystic circle, as when she sings to her babe or gazes silently as it feeds upon her bosom? The stars have nothing so bright and the heavens scarcely anything more pure and more lovely, than the Heavenly Love service of a mother to her little one, helpless and unfashioned.

"Look for one single moment upon the power of the cradle, for all this love and outflowing of the most Divine feeling of human nature was not meant to be expended merely as luxury for the maternal bosom-there is meaning in it. It is one of the sources of the greatest power that exists on earth. The power of the cradle is greater than the power of the throne, greater than royalty in its diffusion and in its capacity of usefulness-ten thousand times greater. Make me monarch of the cradles, and I will give to whomsoever will the monarch of the kingdoms and of the thrones".

Some twenty years ago or more you as mothers gave to America a generation of babes, as men. At this time the destiny of Home. America and the world is in the hands of God and them. To you they will give all the credit; those who survive the ordeal will say, "It was Mother's prayers that

The greatest Motherhood recorded in history is that of the Old South during and following the war between the states, but to you, the daughters and granddaughters of that Motherhood, in this your hour of supreme sacrifice we extend to you this our personal tribute: You as Mothers will equal those so Sublime and Divine.

Getting Results

One man who went into government war service and isn't afraid to tell the public his department got results, is William M. Jeffers, president of the Union Pacific Railroad, and former director of the synthetic rubber program.

In a recent statement, Mr. Jeffers said synthetic rubber is now about on schedule; absolutely essential civilian needs are being met; by early autumn more rubber should be going into tires; we can produce enough rubber for any needs, and will be in the position i the future to dictate to producers of natural rubber what the price shall

This is good news for Americans who have become used to a prediction of "shortage" the moment bureaucratic planners take control of any of our basic industries. But that is the bureaucrats' way-they want to keep the people under their thumbs. Jeffers is not a bureaucrat-he is a plain American business man who is used to getting results. He says: "We don't want the government in business. We want business in govern-

Next To Winning the War-

Younger brothers and sisters are in the war, too. At least, they are in the sense that many o their problems are war-projected. For example, with the folks doing a shift in a factory or serving on a voluntary committee or even overseas in the service, home seems a bit blank. Easier to hang around somewhere else, to hunt up the gang, to rustle up something exciting to do.

And pretty soon school will be over for the summer. What then? Camp, perhaps, for the fortunate ones-private camps for some, and warm-hearted organization camps such as Scout. Camp Fire, Boys' Club and Christian Association for others. But for most of these boys and girls camp will not fill an entire summer, nor will crop picking in a junior farm corps. Furthermore, there are always those who don't go away even for a wo. It's easy to get into trouble, sometimes, when you are a live-wire youngster and the long days and weeks are unplanned.

Someone has said that next in importance to winning the war is the job of looking after our at ome. The current National Boys and Girls Week can serve to remind us of their immediate vaca ion needs; a chance for some outdoor life, perhaps at camp; a wholesome comall-summer recreation program in the city; wisely planned opportunities to enable even the littlest scrap collectors to go on helping in the war effort and feeling useful, and some understanding older persons as friends and guides. Big brother in the armed services-with a Dad here and there, too-will thank us for looking after the youngsters as our part in guarding the home he is so loyally defending.

Mother Love

A Mother will enter prisons of shame and kiss a felon's hand thrust through the bars. She will sit beside the accused in courts of law, when the mob jeers and the heartless machinery of justice grinds its grists of agony, and with unwavering faith maintain her child is innocent. She will stand at the foot of the scaffold and when the trap has fallen pillow the condemned and lifeless head upon her breast.

But if the path of life has led her son to the fields of honor, her heart will glow with pride, ineffiable, unspeakable. If he is called to war she will bid him good-bye with dry eyes, although her heart is filled with tears. She will maintain a firm and hopeful mien, that he may gain courage from sublime example. When he sleeps upon the tented field, her spirit will keep watch. Whilst he is slumbering she will pray. In the agony of waiting she will die a thousand deaths, but will choke back her sobs and hide her torture. She will search for him amongest the slain and try with kisses to warm the dead and unresponsive lips to life, She will coffin her heart with the beloved body, and her soul will keep the eternal vigil of a deathless love. This mother love is the golden cord that binds the earth to God.

PAUL IN THESSALONICA

LESSON TEXT: Acts 17:1-4; I Thesalonians 2 1-12 GOLDEN TEXT: Rejuce always, pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks.—I Thessalmians 5/10-18

Strong, active, missionary-minded churches do not just "happen." They are the result of the preaching of a true and powerful massage by a faithful and sacrificial messenger. Other factors enter in, but these are the fundamentals.

Paul's ministry at Thessalonica, which is described in Acts 17 and explained in I Thessalonians 2, reveals what should be preached and what kind of a preacher is needed. Perhaps some dead or unsuccessful church may learn the secret today and come to new life for Christ. I. The Message-Christ the Sav-lour (Acts 17:1-4) Paul had already met the varying lot of both persecution and acceptance, and had now come to Thessalonica, a large and important city in Macedonia, where he had a lengthy ministry and established a strong church. What was the message which so signally succeeded in this great strategic center? Well, it was not (as some modern preachers in large cities would seem to think) a series of social, political, or literary discourses. Paul preached Christ. He reasoned with them and presented the Saviour (v. 3) as One who was-

1. Dead for our sin. These people were like us in that they needed a solution for their sin problem. There were doubtless other questions which Paul might have discussed, but he wisely went to the root of their difficulty and showed them "that Christ must needs have suffered."

Without the death of Christ there is no salvation for any man. Only through the shedding of blood can there be remission of sin (Heb. 9: 22). Paul had no part in the folly of "bloodless gospel"-as though there were any such gospel.

2. Raised for our justification. It was not enough that Jesus died, marvelous as that is in our sight. For many a man has died for his convictions, but none has risen from the dead. Christ could not be holden of the grave. He arose the victorious Redeemer.

3. Declared to be the Christ. He is more than a man, more than a great leader and an earnest teacher. He is God's anointed One. Himself divine-and our Lord.

Thus Paul presented to the Jews their Messiah, "the Man of Sorrows" clared Him to be the Son of God with power (Rom. 1:4), their Redeemer and Lord. Blessed results followed such preaching (v. 4).

II. The Messenger-Approved of God (I Thess, 2:1-12).

Sometimes a man with a true message largely nullifies its value by the manner in which he presents community.

1. He was faithful (vv. 1-6). One of the great temptations facing the one who is a preacher or teacher of God's Word is to let his fear of men make certain that the first neces- of plaintiff and without any reause a bit of flattery, to please men. Paul was "bold in our God" (v.

You Are Hereby Commanded, 2), not trying to deceive or mislead anyone (v. 3), seeking only God's approval (v. 4), not trying to make money for himself or gain (v. 5), and not claiming a high position or authority over men (v. 6).

> 2. He was affectionate (vv. 7-9). How often those who are faithful and bold in preaching the truth ruin the effect of their work by being harsh and unkind. Here is a lesson many of us need to learn.

To be gentle (v. 7) a man must he strong. The cardinal quality of a strong Christian should be that he is a gentleman, or she a gentlewoman. If not, there is not real strongth in the life.

Paul gave not only a message, he gave himself-his very soul (v. 8). The people to whom he ministered were "dear" to him. The pastor who looks down at his congregation with hardness, and perhaps hatred for some individual, needs to read this passage and find Paul's secret of success.

He labored with his hands to support himself (v. 9), lest anyone think he was a burden to them. Let no one think that this means that preacher is not worthy of support. Christ Himself declares that the laborer is worthy of his hire (Luke 10:7). But it does show Paul's fine spirit of devotion and

3. He was unblamable (vv. 10-12). Holy in his life before God, Paul was rendy to live righteously beore men, and thus to stand unblamble before them and before his Lord. This indeed is a life worthy n the sight of God (v. 12).

In other words, the preacher was able to say to his listeners, "My life shows you what I mean by my preaching." The true preacher of the gospel will never be satisfied to be a signpost, pointing a way in which he does not walk.

A Good $10 Bill

In these days when money is talked about in astronomical figures, a $10 bill still looks pretty good to most of us. It means something at once in terms of food or clothing or other things we want to buy. But billions are beyond most people; just something super-big that the government deals in.

Did you ever wender how much arger a billion deliars is than a million? It takes just as many millions to make a billion as it does pennies to make a $10 bill. Or figure it this way:

When our government debt becomes 358 billion dollars, as Senator Byrd says it will, we can divide the amount by America's 135 million population and find that the debt exceeds $2,500 for every person living in the United States: $10,000 per family of four. Then we begin to see what this war means in money; why we should work to finish it. Not Impossible

But, big as this debt will be, we can pay it if we can keep business and industry going full blast in peacetime as well as in war time. And this leads us into post-war plan-

If war does not last too long, there will be a short time, right after it closes when we Americans will have more money saved from full employment than there will be things to buy. But this will only make for a post-war boom; an inflation to be followed by depression unless we get ready now to keep factories going and payrolls alive.

But keeping factories running and the country prosperous calls for a lot of things. First of all, the government should do its part. Government has to give private business its chance.

No Simple Recipe Sound post-war prosperity does not depend on any one thing, but on a combination of many things. Some of these are easy to understand and can be controlled, which is good. our free economy-that's an aim we will all approve, I am sure. It means jobs. It means income for sides in Haskell County, Texas, for what farmers grow.

How fast this change-back can be made, and how well, depends almost wholly on the government, on the policy it adopts in terminating war contracts, what it does with government-owned tools and equipment now covering many acres of factory floor-space; how it gets rid of huge stock-piles of war materials, and how it uses the billions of doilars worth of government-owned factory buildings.

when peace comes? Must American farmers expect their selling to cease when firing ceases? Neither is necley may exist to be enforced. . . . Most of us will be glad when we don't have to hear so much about billions but I, for one, hope to remain on hand-shaking terms with an occasional $10 bill. If the right things are done now, we all may.

Again he put his arm across the slanted shoulders and pulled them up. "We'll work it out, Steve. Don't let it hound you any more."

He lay that night in his bedroll smoking a last eigarette-he needn't ride guard now with so many extrahands-and there was a mingled bleakness and relief in what he felt. Something had filled in him that had long been empty. He was back on his old footing again with Steve. And Steve himself was finishing up this trail facing his troubles in a way that Tom Arnold would be proud of. It was one thing the old man had wanted most in his life. That account was settled. But his own failure with Tom's fortune on the hoof was black. He couldn't be blamed for the quarantine, and yet when a man set out to deliver a herd he delivered it, come hell or high water. It was the pride of being a good trail boss. Fifteen thousand dollars, maybe, for the hides and tallow sounded good in talk, but it wasn't much of a pay-off for the years that had gone into the herd.

It wasn't ninety thousand and wouldn't be much for the new ranch. He finished his cigarette and rubbed it out against the ground. It seemed strange then that he didn't feel as low as he might. Over him the stars had never looked so clear and sharp. There was nothing going to spoil his sleep. He turned on his side and dropped off soundly . . . and the next thing a mule's trace chains were clanking and dragging over him and a voice was yelling, "Whoa there! Whoa!" He bolted upright in his blankets and saw Charley Storms in the gray dawn, running and yanking the chains over the row of beds.

Then he saw John Quarternight rise more slowly next to him. Charley Storms came back to yell, Look, you lazy cowboys! Look!" He saw it then-all the prairie lying beyond as white as Quarternight's hair. Frost! The old man turned to him. "Lew," he said, "if that don't make you believe in God, nothing will."

They could move now. Sixty days' time or one good frost would kill the Texas fever. The quarantine wouldn't hold. Dressed, he stepped out of his blankets onto a mat of grass as stiff as nails. In the dawn the prairie looked like snow.

To the cook he said, "Pull up to the ridge before you stop for breakfast. We're going to get a wiggle on ourselves.'

With the herd shaped and walking fast in the cold air, waiting for the frost to melt before they grazed, he pointed up the ridge at eight o'clock. No one stopped them. On along the crest he could see the Northern cowmen breaking their dead-line camps, and as he passed the military street where the yellowlegs were rolling up their tents Captain Wing rode out. His brown face was polished from an early shave; he was looking pleased. "Well, Texan," he said, you played in luck. The Cheyennes claimed we'd get an early frost this year. I'm going on to the post now, but I've detailed some of my men to escort you in the rest of the way. just in case of trouble."

"That's mighty good of you, Cap," he said. "The cook's up there in front with beefsteaks for breakfast. You'd better stop."

One last night's camp south of Ogallala, a dry one-there was no water here-and they crossed the river the next day at noon. For more than a mile the thirsty herd spread out in the wide bottom. drank and splashed themselves and romped on up the low bluffs beyond. They were fatter and better looking than when they had left the Little Comanche. That was good. He wouldn't need to argue with the agent about condition. All his contract stated anyway was numbers and an average weight of five hundred pounds when this beef was dressed. Even a greenhorn could see the animals would do that. From the flat top of a mesa north of the river, flanking the herd and shaping it again, he looked back and could see the far-off arrowheads of other herds coming down the divide. The Open A must be among them. Let them come.

A yelling commotion turned him. He was up high enough now to see all the mesa toward its rim of hills. Hundreds of canvas tepees dotted it. A swarm of mounted bucks had started a race toward him, riding cream-colored ponies and decked out in gaudy blanket shirts for this special occasion. Women and children were running afoot behind them, the squaws' dresses flapping in a dangerous way for cat-

He called across to Quarternight and they ran their horses forward to turn that danger of a stampede. The bucks veered off at his waving signal. The women stopped. He judged there were a thousand Indians in this camp.

Riding back to the point again, he was thankful he didn't have to see this beef issued. Hunting down wild animals was a different matter, but these longhorns had become almost as tame as pets. Mostly these days the government did its own butchering. Yet they still let the Sioux and some of the Cheyennes make a holiday of it if they had been good, he guessed. The cattle would be held in a stockade, and when each tribe's ration had been counted out that number would be released on open ground. The sweep out on their ponies, using lances and steel-tipped arrows to make the kill. It was the squaws' job after that to strive the hides and trim the meat; we'le in all the camps there would be dances and big doings through the day and night. It was as near as they could come now to their old-time buffalo hunts.

He saw the stockade a little later, a huge square fenced with poles and wire on the flat mesa top. And soon up from the east in the direction of Ogallala. The town was out of sight below the river bluff. An escort of varnished three-seated outfit. They of the troopers came toward him and he recognized Captain Wing.

"There was another telegram in town for you," Wing said, "Thought you might want it."

He nodded, turned the gray enve- tling for brakes. lope in his hand and waited till Wing rode off. He ripped it open. It was like her other. Ten words: "Arriving Ogallala on Cannon Ball nine p. m. August thirty-one. Love." He slapped the settling dust from it and read it again, staring at the last. She might be only filling the allotted space. And yet she never did waste her words. He felt a quick warm stir run through his blood and tried to hold that feeling down. But tonight she would be here. This was August thirty-first.

There were those afternoon hours to pass, the dusty job of parting out the ranch stuff from the herd and after that feeding the beef longhorns in a thin line through the stockade gate. He sat his horse on one side, counting, while the post commandant and the Indian agent watched from the other. He could see their eyes sweat and knew they lost their count early. In the end they took his word. And all the time, shouting out his tally at each hundred head to Joe Wheat who wrote the numbers down, he was only half seeing the cattle streaming past.

pacing the loose cinders of the depot yard. He needn't have come so early. The Cannon Ball was late. But he hadn't wanted to join the drinking and the blow-off going on in . later, maybe, but not town yet. The Black Elephant and the Dew-Drop Inn and the Lone Star would have a rush tonight. Off in the dark he could hear riders pounding across the bridge as they came from late-arriving herds. There would be fights aplenty before morning. His men could take care of themselves now though; the only trouble he worried about was the one around Steve. And so, as in

It wasn't a smell he was used to and he took off his hat to let it evaporate. He had put on a black suit coat and under it a white shirt and red tie. At the end of the depot yard the track ran through a grove of ash edging up from the river. He reached a lane there and, turning back, saw a brighter path of light flood out from the station office. A door opened and the baggage truck clattered. He hurried. Ahead of him a man walked out to the semaphore post and pulled a lever. The flat signal arm rose, its bull's-eye changing from green to red. "She's coming now," the man said and stood there waiting.

He could hear it himself, like an echo rumbling up the river. He felt his heart pump fast inside of him and then slow down until there was a suffocation in his chest. A pale glow swept through the river trees, to stab suddenly out of the dark, growing bright along the glistening rails. Then the engineer was w

This was the Cannon Ball going through to Salt Lake City. The polished brass plates and bands of its engine slid past him, slowly now. A messenger in gray overalls grinned from the express car. Most of the velvet curtains were drawn across the diner's windows, but a few were parted, with faces peering out in that detached and faintly superior way of travelers looking down upon another earth.

He had halted near the station, back in its shadow, and even when he saw her he didn't move. He hardly knew her. She was standing in a sleeper's vestibule behind the conductor. Everything she had on was new: a small hat like twisted ropes of dark velvet wound around her head and a light brown Blue Bonnet Club Meets suit, buttoned and small at the waist and reaching below her shoe tops. It turned her into a woman more than ever. He remembered they had come through Kansas City and Omaha. They would have had long stops.

She was looking out past the conductor's shoulder and came down like that, her eyes searching the depot where a little group of men had gathered now. Even then he waited, until the conductor handed out her bag and she stood there holding it herself, and he knew she was alone.

a way that nothing had ever shaken a visitor. him before. She saw him, and all of her face seemed to catch the Woman's Society of Christian station's light, glowing and warm before a shadow fell. He couldn't speak in that moment until he managed, "I'll take your bag. Here."

There were men watching, expecting something they didn't see. Beyond the depot he avoided the town's street and walked into the dim lane. In a moment the Cannon Ball snorted behind them and after that sliding light of car windows he saw Davis, Rex Murry. her face turned up to him, strained him quietly. "We forgot one strong ler. thing about Clay. His pride. We both did." A rail fence ran along the track's right of way. She leaned against it. "There's so much to tell. Is Steve all right?"

out of town." "You needn't. I know all about it now." She pulled the little hat off and held it, looking down at it in her hand. "You remember there was an Open A rider wounded in the hospital with Clay and Ed Splann? I nursed them all the best I could." Her voice dropped. "He died. But I'd made things easy for him, and when he found I was Steve's sister he told me. Steve didn't kill Sheriff Rayburn. That man did. The doctor wrote a confession for him and witnessed it. I've got it here."

Out of the dark the calls and sounds of Ogallala's night life rose and died away. She seemed to listen. In the silence again she said, "A girl can't marry a man who won't have her, can she? That was it. Clay knew what had happened. He could have gone on with half of me and wouldn't. It was his pride but more than that, I think. There were a lot of fine things in Clay after all."

"There were," he said. "I know that now.

She had been looking off past him. She brought her eyes up with a smile growing in them and her lips turned soft. "Do you see I have a new suit? I bought it in Omaha. I thought it would be nice to wear . before we went on."

Before they went on. In those words all of the future opened ahead of him, the little trail that was left to Wyoming and all of the years they would have. "You'll wear it." he said, "tomorrow," and brought her close in his hard arms. A wild fire was rising in him, burning clean away a loneliness he would never know again.
