PAL Program Explained To Rotary Club

Mrs. Alice Liles and Mrs. Lanelle Skaggs, introduced by Tommy Gunstream, gave an introduction to the new PAL program at Muleshoe High School, at the Rotary Club meeting Tuesday.

The PAL program was started by Grant Thomas, and is headquartered in Austin. Bill Moore, superintendent of the Muleshoe schools, influenced by the PAL program formed at the school he had been previously associated with, convinced Al Bishop, principal at MHS, to form a PAL program here at Muleshoe.

Worthy students are nominated by fellow students and faculty for the program. Then, through a very extensive process of elimination, the Selective Committee chooses only 12 students to participate in the PAL program, for the school year, as members.

PAL is an interventionist program, encouraging members to become an influence in a younger students life, and try to help them in any way it is needed. They work with students from Dillman and De Shazo Elementary, and members only participate during school hours. Basically, they become the "Big Brother" and "Big Sister" image, and unconditionally try to be a PAL to those who need it.

David Tipps, president, called the Rotary Club meeting to order at noon Tuesday at the Bailey County Civic Center.

Terry Hutto led the group in singing "Viva La Rotary" and "Home On The Range."

The pledge was led by Tommy Gunstream.

The meeting was adjourned by David Tipps, who was also, by the way, the winner of the Polio Plus Drawing this week.

PAL PROGRAM GIVEN AT ROTARY---Tommy Gunstream introduced Alice Liles, center, and Lanelle Skaggs at the Rotary meeting at noon Tuesday. Mrs. Liles and Mrs. Skaggs presented a program on the PAL program at Muleshoe High School.

Bulimia Caused By Cultural Image

The cultural image that "thin is beautiful" controls the life of a person suffering from the eating disorder bulimia.

"People with bulimia have psychological vulnerabilities that make them buy into the cultural pressures about being thin," said Dr. Mariame Aviles, assistant professor of psychiatry at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Bulimia, which affects 4 to 10 percent of female high school and college students, is characterized by binge eating followed immediately by attempts to prevent weight gain: vomiting, laxative and diuretic abuse, fasting and strenuous exercise.

"The typical bulimic is a female who is average weight or 5 to 10 pounds overweight. They see the purging as a way to eat all they want and still control their weight," Aviles said.

"If a person feels insecure, inadequate and confused and has no sense of self, it is going to be a big challenge to make all of the life choices between age 15 and 25," she said.

Bulimics resort to worrying about eating, weight gain and their bodies as a way to avoid dealing with the developmental changes they are facing, Aviles said.

To be classified as bulimia, the bingeing and purging cycle must occur at least two times a week for at least three months.

"Since there is no dramatic change in appearance, family and friends are often unaware of the problem," Aviles said.

Medical complications follow the disease.

"The parotid glands enlarge giving the face a chipmunk appearance, menstruation usually ceases, digestion gets sluggish and often the person will have alternating bouts of diarrhea and constipation," Aviles said.

Aviles warns that frequent vomiting can lead to an electrolyte imbalance, specifically low potassium in the blood, which can cause cardiac arrhythmias and cardiac arrest. Another acute medical emergency related to bulimia is a ruptured esophagus.

"Some times it is the realization of the danger that brings a bulimic in for treatment," Aviles said.

Treatment includes individual and family therapy to address the causes of the disorder. Nutrition counseling and anti-depressant medication are also showing good results.

"You cannot force people into treatment, but it helps to confront them with your concerns," Aviles said.

Once treatment begins, Aviles cautions family and friends to avoid policing the bulimic's behavior.

"They must develop their own method of controlling their eating," she said.

Alas!

Sam--I got tonsillitis, followed by appendicitis and pneumonia. Then they gave me inoculations.

Harry--Boy, did you have a time.

Sam--I'll say! I thought I'd never get through that spelling test.

Stomach Acids Cause Of Ulcers

Approximately 4.5 million people are diagnosed with ulcers each year in this country. Ulcers are caused by either an excess amount of stomach acid or a breakdown in the stomachs protective lining.

Peptic ulcers found in the stomach are called "gastric" ulcers--those found in the first part of the small intestine are called "duodenal" ulcers.

Ulcers should not be taken lightly," said Justin McCarthy, M.D., gastroenterologist at Methodist Hospital. "Without treatment, they can cause serious complications."

Individuals who experience the following symptoms should seek medical attention, according to Dr. McCarthy.

*A burning pain in the upper or middle abdomen, which may become more pronounced between meals or in the middle of the night.

*Abdominal pain that is relieved by eating but returns shortly afterward.

*Loss of appetite.

*Bloating or gaseousness.

*Loss of weight.

*Nausea

*Vomiting blood which may resemble coffee grounds.

Ulcers are treated with a variety of prescription medications, which usually produce healing in six to eight weeks. Antacids may be recommended as well. Foods which produce discomfort, as well as smoking, caffeine and alcohol should be avoided. Aspirin and non-steroidal, anti-inflammatory drugs (such as ibuprofen) which irritate the stomach lining should be avoided as well.

For more information on ulcers, consult a physician.

Strength Training For Seniors

Many young people today participate in weight lifting and strenght training; however, older people can greatly benefit from this type of exercise as well.

In fact, the elderly need strength training more than young people to prevent their muscles from weakening.

"To keep muscles strong as you age you have to strengthen the muscle fibers," said Cheryl Benoit, wellness coordinator at Methodist Hospital's Lifestyle Centre. "The only way to accomplish that is to exercise with resistance."

The Lifestyle Centre recently introduced a new class called "Circuit Training for Seniors," which meets every Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. The 45-minute class is made up of 20 stations which employ various strength training equipment. Participants spend approximately 30 seconds at each station before moving onto the next.

Stations include both weight lifting and resistance equipment. "The class is done to music, and when the music stops the students move onto the next station," said Benoit. "They use each piece of equipment once during the class."

In addition to circuit training, the center offers several other classes for seniors, including Senior Aerobics, which meets on Monday/Wednesday/Friday from 2 to 2:45 p.m.; Senior Water Aerobics, held on Tuesday/Thursday at 10 a.m.; and Stretch-n-Flex which meets on Monday/Wednesday /Friday from 9 to 9:20 a.m.

According to Benoit, exercise for seniors is important because in addition to strengthening muscles, it also helps:

- * Improve cardiopulmonary condition;
- * Guard against insomnia;
- * Increase energy levels and decrease appetite;
- * Reduce weight and inches by burning fat stores and improving muscle tone;
- * Improve mood - endorphins released during physical activity actually helps relieve stress and promote a good mood.

For more information on senior exercise programs, contact the Lifestyle Centre at (806) 793-4386. One note: before starting any exercise program, consult your physician.

MONEY TALK

Kay Bailey Hutchison
Texas State Treasurer

Editor's Note: Texas State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison addresses various issues related to personal finance and state government. However, these views are not intended to replace the advice of reputable financial advisers or other professional counselors.

Q. Since Hurricane Andrew hit Florida and Louisiana I've been wondering how I could better prepare for a natural disaster. Do you have any advice regarding my home and financial records?

A. Your best defense against any disaster is preparation. If you don't have homeowners insurance buy it as soon as you can. Most policies will cover you and your belongings against wind, fire and other disasters. You should buy additional coverage for natural disasters common to your geographical area. Make sure you read your policy and are aware of exactly what it covers.

You may want to consider purchasing replacement-cost coverage. Although this type of insurance costs approximately 10 percent more than actual or cost-value coverage, it could save you money. For example, if you paid $400 for your washing machine seven years ago and the same model costs $600 today, you would receive the full cost to replace it - $600 - if your washing machine is destroyed.

Keep an inventory of all your household furniture with receipts and photos. This information, along with all other financial records such as insurance policies, titles, deeds, stock certificates and any other important records should be kept in a bank safe deposit box.

The key is to be prepared so you can get your life back together quickly after any disaster.

If you have a question, write Money Talk, Texas State Treasury, Communications Division, P.O. Box 12608, Austin, Texas, 78711.

The Perfect Cup or Glass Of Tea

One of the wonderful things about tea is, that it's almost impossible to make a bad cup or glass. It really all depends on you and your taste. If you make it too strong, all you have to do is add more water, hot or cold; and if it's too weak, brew it a bit longer.

Sound simple? It is, and if you're still not convinced, tea experts suggest you follow these four golden rules for a cup of hot tea:

- * use a teapot.
- * bring fresh, cold tap water to full boil.
- * use one teaspoonful or one tea bag per cup.
- * brew, by the clock, 3 to 5 minutes and serve.

Of course, the rules change slightly for larger crowds, or if you brew in a microwave, but it's still hard to go wrong!

Big Difference
"Pro" means "for" and "con" means "against." This explains the difference between progress and Congress.

A.A.U.W. Names Girl Of The Month

The American Association of University women is a national organization devoted to advancing the status of women and girls in our society. AAUW is dedicated to promoting equity in education and providing informative programs for its members. The local branch of AAUW meets at 7:00 p.m. the first Monday of each month. (during school months) and welcomes any new member who is a graduate of an accredited university. This organization also offers a scholarship to a deserving young college student each year.

AAUW in the Muleshoe area began a tradition several years ago of honoring deserving young senior girls for their achievements in academia and service. Each month, an outstanding young lady is chosen from the Muleshoe High School Senior Class as "Girl of the Month", and twice a year, a Senior girl from the Lazbuddie Senior Class is chosen as either the "Fall" or "Spring" outstanding young girl. These young ladies are chosen for their contributions to school, church, and community as well as for academic excellence. The members of AAUW are very proud to be able to recognize these wonderful girls and further honor them with a dinner party in the month of May.

The Muleshoe branch of the American Association of University Women is pleased to announce this year's third girl of the month, Miss Kristen Chitwood.

Kristen is the daughter of R.D. and Sandi Chitwood of Muleshoe. She has been a cheerleader for her four high school years, and held a class office three of those four; Freshman, Secretary; Sophomore, Secretary; Junior Vice President. She has been a member of SCAC her Junior and Senior years. She played basketball and was Class favorite, as a Freshman, Student Council her Junior year, a member of UMY all four years, FCA as Freshman, Sophomore, and Junior, and the honor roll all four years. She was also an Honor Usherette for the 1992 Senior Class, and has received two American Achievement Awards in Math.

Kristen plans to attend Southwest Texas State University at San Marcos, majoring in Physical Therapy.

Brockman added more scores to the scoreboard when he made it into the endzone. The kick was good and Dell City led 49-41 over the Longhorns.

With 1:18 left in the half, Dell City fumbled the ball and Lazbuddie recovered on their own 38 yard line, but with :53 left on the clock, Lazbuddie turned the ball over on downs. With :39 left in the half Cozby recovered a Dell City fumble. Shortly after the fumble recovery, the time ran out on the clock.

At halftime Dell City led 49-41 over the Longhorns.

After trailing in the game from the beginning the Longhorns tamed the Cougars in the second half, holding them scoreless.

Getting the second half underway, Dell City kicked to Lazbuddie and they put the ball into play on their own 39 yard line. A few plays later, Lazbuddie Longhorn Brockman made it into the endzone. Brockman kicked the extra point and the score stood Dell City 49-Lazbuddie 47.

The Longhorns kicked the ball to the Cougars and they returned it to their own 22 yard line. The Cougars moved the ball down to the Longhorn's three yard line before turning it over on downs. Before the Longhorns could reach the endzone, Dell City intercepted a pass and made it into the endzone on a fourth and 18 yard play. The touchdown was called back due to a penalty and the Longhorns took possession of the ball.

The Longhorns turned the ball back over to Dell City, on Dell City's 32 yard line, on downs.

At the end of the third quarter, Lazbuddie trailed the Cougars 49-47.

With 9:38 left in the game, Dell City turned the ball over to Lazbuddie on downs, and with 7:49 left in the game Lazbuddie made it into the endzone. The large crowd of Longhorn supporters went wild as the Longhorns took the lead for the first time. The score stood Lazbuddie 53-Dell City 49.

Dell City was forced to punt the ball away with 6:54 left on the clock. The Longhorns made it into the endzone again, bringing the score to Lazbuddie 59-Dell City 49. The kick was no good.

With 5:17 left in the game, Lazbuddie kicked to Dell City and they put the ball into play on their own 33 yard line. With 3:39 left in the game Lazbuddie took possession of the ball on downs. Adding more points to the scoreboard Miller ran into the endzone one more time and the score stood Lazbuddie 65-Dell City 49.

When the time ran out, the Longhorns had possession of the ball.

Lazbuddie stands 13-0 for the season and Dell City 10-3.

Next week the Longhorns will take on the winner of the game between Chillicothe and Fort Hancock, which was played Saturday.

Compromise Reached On Burning Issue

In a meeting held in Plainview recently, the issue of burning has been resolved, at least for this year. Texas Air Control Board (TACB) officials, Texas Corn Producers Board (TCPB) staff, and other area officials were on hand at a meeting to give their opinions.

"All in all, this meeting was a good beginning. We now have a revised set of guidelines that must be followed before the burning of crop residue," stated Carl King, Executive Director of the Texas Corn Producers Board.

Until such time as a definitive policy is set for the future, the position of the TACB is that the farmer must send a written notification to the TACB regional office which certifies that there is no practical alternative, guarantees compliance with seven conditions of Regulation I (listed below), and contains a map of the site including uses of adjacent lands. The notification must also indicate when the burn will occur.

Such written notification must be received by the Regional Office at least five (5) days prior to the burn, and telephone verification of the continued intent to burn must be made to the Regional Office 24 hours prior to the burn.

When it appears that several tracts of land are to be burned in the same area at the same time, it may be necessary for the TACB to require the scheduling of burn times over several consecutive days to avoid cumulative nuisance and traffic safety problems.

Compliance with the conditions specified in Section 111.103 will be required, and they are as follows:

1. Burning shall be commenced only when the wind will carry the smoke away from any city, town, residential, recreational, commercial, or industrial area, navigable water, public road, or landing strip, and shall not be conducted when a shift of wind is predicted;
2. Burning must be at least 300 feet from any adjacent properties which have residential, recreational, commercial, or industrial use;
3. Burning shall commence after 9 a.m. and be completed on the same day as soon as is reasonably practical prior to 5 p.m.
4. Burning shall not commence when wind speed is predicted to be less than 6 m.p.h. or greater than 23 m.p.h.
5. Burning shall not be conducted during periods of actual or predicted low-level atmospheric temperature inversions;

6. Burning must be outside the corporate limits of a city or town; and,

7. Heavy oils, asphaltic materials, items containing natural or synthetic rubber, or any material which may produce unreasonable amounts of smoke must not be burned.

"The farmer is responsible for smoke that travels across non-public roads used for school bus routes or mail carriers, and the farmer must have flaggers on such roads," said Tamra-Shae Oatman, Small Business Ombudsman, TACB. Additionally, the Texas Corn Producers Board agrees that it is the responsibility of each farmer to notify adjacent neighbors of proposed burning, and limit the size of the burn so that wholesale burning will not be conducted.

The Texas Corn Producers Board stresses that failure to comply with the Regulation I conditions above, or the creation of a nuisance or traffic hazard will result in an agreed Texas Air Control Board order (ABO) with administrative penalties up to $10,000 for each day or incident of violation. An ABO is a legally binding document agreed to by the violator and issued by the TACB.

The address of the Regional Office for the 40 counties of the South Plains and Panhandle is TACB, 4630 50th Street, Suite 600, Lubbock, Texas 79414, or call Lubbock (806) 796-3494. The phone number for the TACB Ombudsman's office is 1-800-824-7247.

Ask the Vet

Dr. John Paul

Dear Dr. Paul, What causes dark cutters in fed cattle? I have a running debate with our veterinarian about the causes and would like your opinion.

You have raised an interesting question regarding dark cutters. Dark cutting beef carcasses is a condition that can occur wherein the color of the muscle varies from darker than the usual red to a dark purplish-black. Although the nutritional value of affected meat is not impaired, the off-color makes the product less acceptable and it has a lower market value. The actual cause of dark cutting carcasses is believed to be due to periods of stress prior to slaughter. Sources of automortem stress include severe weather conditions, prolonged transportation to slaughter, holding overnight at the packing plant for slaughter the next day, excessive excitement or restlessness of cattle prior to slaughter or rough handling of cattle. As a result of the stressful condition, physiological changes occur in the animal characterized by a reduction of glycogen (muscle sugar) and a corresponding reduction of lactic acid in the muscle; consequently, the meat turns dark. Proper management and handling of cattle to reduce stress prior to slaughter is the best method to prevent dark cutters.

Dear Dr. Paul, We recently bought a stud dog for our small kennel and found out after-the-purchase that he's a "shy" breeder. Is there anything we can do about this?

This condition could be caused by a lack of experience, traumatic breeding experience, or physical problem. I suggest you take your stud dog to a veterinarian for a thorough physical exam and semen evaluation. Try to learn, if possible, if the dog had a previous traumatic or negative breeding experience. You may want to consult an experienced dog breeder to obtain information on how to handle your specific problem if lack of experience is the cause. If you are unable to overcome the shyness, you should talk to the seller of the dog regarding a replacement or refund.

Dear Dr. Paul, Our cattle were recently diagnosed with an inhibited worm problem, which I'd never heard of before. What is that exactly, and how can we keep it from reoccurring?

Although cattle parasitic worms are rather primitive organisms, some of them have evolved with mechanisms to enhance their survival. The brown stomach worm, ostertagia ostertagi, has the ability to somehow sense that adverse weather conditions are on the horizon. These conditions, either very hot, dry periods in the south or extreme cold in the north, are not compatible with the survival of this parasite on pasture. Consequently, when these conditioned larva are consumed by grazing cattle, they enter the gastric glands of the abomasum and enter an inhibited or arrested state of development. When environmental conditions improve, these inhibited larvae receive some kind of signal and resume development to adult worms. The use of dewormers that are labeled for control of inhibited larvae can be used for treatment. A better approach is to use a strategic deworming program designed to reduce the number of larvae on the pasture. This approach is effective to prevent the inhibited problem but also allows cattle to more effectively gain weight during the grazing season.

Dear Dr. Paul, Even though we feed our outside cat every day, he continues to catch mice and birds to eat. Do you think that is all right, or could eating them give him worms or make him sick?

It is possible that your cat could become infected with Taenia tapeworms from eating mice. Mice are the intermediate hosts for this parasite and cats can pick up tapeworms in this manner. I do want to point out the Taenia tapeworms are quite easy to remove by proper treatment. There are no specific worms that birds transmit to cats but there are a few infectious diseases that could be spread from birds to cats. These situations are not common and should not raise undue concern on your part. Bear in mind that it is natural for cats to prey on small rodents and birds, and in nature this is more conducive to their survival than to their demise.

News From U.S. Representative Larry Combest

President-elect Bill Clinton's telegrams from Little Rock to members of Congress have expressed his hope for getting off to a strong start of working with Congress for the good of the country. As each president, I cast legislative votes based on the fiscally-conservative philosophy of the people of our region. When Clinton proposals are good for West Texas, I will vote in favor of that legislation. The president-elect's telegram correctly states that the American people expect results.

Meanwhile, as the Clinton telegrams went out, the same congressional leaders who presided over the House Bank and business-as-usual have told new freshmen members they will expect their favorable votes in exchange for handing out good committee assignments. Sadly, many of these new members will have come to Washington promising reform, and instead could be strong-armed by their leadership to fall into step.

In January, the legislative floodgates will open. House Speaker Tom Foley, expected to be chosen by his fellow Democrats to again control the agenda in the House of Representatives, predicts Bush-vetoed legislation will be among the first to be passed and sent to the new president. Keeping his promises, Bill Clinton will raise taxes, repeal the ban on homosexuals in the military, and begin work on a costly national health care plan. Expect Clinton to support making Washington, D.C. the 51st state of New Columbia, with two Senators and one House Representative in Congress. Also, government will impose regulations under a Clinton-supported plan of mandated family leave for all but the smallest of small businesses. A Clinton Government will also use taxpayer money to finance congressional elections under the Democrat's campaign reform plans.

The people of the 19th District do not widely support those programs of mandates and increased federal spending. However, I believe we will have some areas of agreement with the new president, which I will support on your behalf. People of our region support health care reform, economic stimulus and creation of jobs; we agree on the goals, but we will have differences with a Clinton Administration's means of more government spending and taxing to achieve those goals.

On his Inauguration Day, Clinton promises to introduce a jobs program. However, he plans to fund that new government bureaucracy with a new one-and-a-half percent payroll tax on businesses. That trend of in-efficiently transferring taxpayer money is based on the misguided theory that the government knows how to better spend your money. Under a Clinton Administration, small business will continue to feel the weight of added government regulation.

It remains to be seen to what extent the Clinton Administration will impose its own brand of centralized planning by government. Also uncertain is the degree costly and ineffective environmental regulation will blossom under the green thumb of Vice President Al Gore.

On November 3, the American people demanded change. But as the Chinese proverb says, be careful what you wish for; you may get it.

Legislation Discontinuing VA Compensation

The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) has announced that temporary legislation requiring VA to suspend disability compensation to certain mentally incompetent veterans expired September 30, 1992.

As part of a deficit-reduction package, Congress passed in 1990 a temporary measure requiring that VA suspend disability compensation to certain mentally incompetent veterans, with no dependents, who have estates (excluding home) valued at $25,000 or more. Under the law, payment of benefits was to resume once the value of the estate dropped to less than $10,000.

Some fiduciaries or guardians, acting on behalf of veterans whose compensation was suspended, elected to switch back to military retirement pay which had been waived in order for them to qualify for the VA benefits.

VA is advising those fiduciaries that, effective September 30, 1992, the temporary legislation expired, and it may be to the veteran's advantage to once again receive VA disability compensation in lieu of military retirement pay. Fiduciaries wishing to re-elect VA compensation should send a statement to that effect to the appropriate VA regional office.

Oil Filter Recycling Eliminates Hazards

Pro-M-Cycle Recycling Plant, the nation's first facility to totally recycle oil filters without any hazardous by-products or toxic air emissions began full operations October 27, simultaneously revolutionizing the fledgling industry and protecting the environment.

Owned by ProCycle Metals, the new plant utilizes the patented eight-step, Pro-M-Cycle Oil Filter Recycling Process. This closed loop system turns spent oil filters into reusable fuel and clean steel. In addition, the inert ash from paper, rubber gaskets, plastics and epoxy is used by ProCycle Metals on-site in the manufacturing of concrete products for the landscaping and patio industries.

"We turn environmentally nasty old oil filters into clean, attractive concrete bird baths," explains Jeff Singleton, chief executive officer of ProCycle Metals. "Nothing goes to the landfill and unlike with other processes such as steel mill smelting, there are no potentially harmful emissions or hazardous waste-by-products."

The opening of the plant coincides with the enactment of new state legislation governing spent oil filters and achieves the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's goal to recycle complete components and eliminate hazardous by-products.

As of August of this year, the state prohibits spent oil filter generators in Dallas, Tarrant, Bexar and Harris Counties from disposing of spent oil filters in landfills. The other counties will be phased-in on a size and location basis through October 1993.

"An important aspect of the Pro-M-Cycle process for our customers is our ability to 100 percent recycle all of the parts of the spent oil filter," said its inventor John Barber III, president of ProCycle Metals. "Our process guarantees that they will have no future environmental liability for any of their spent oil filters. In addition, we have an exclusive WasteTrace Computer Tracking System which documents the status of the filters from collection through recycling."

The Pro-M-Cycle plant, an 8,000 square foot, $1 million facility, will be a major employer in Parker County, supplying 28-40 jobs within four months. ProCycle Metals' sister company ProCycle Oil, is one of the largest employers in neighboring Wise County.

ProCycle Metals is already picking up spent oil filters from commercial and industrial locations in over 125 cities in Texas, and parts of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Louisiana. The plant is currently capable of handling about 12 millions of oil filters per year. Every kind of oil filter regardless of its materials or size is completely recyclable through the patented process.

Filters range from steel covered car filters which weigh about one pound, to exposed element, refinery and manufacturing filters which range up to eight-foot long.

"The collection system for commercial and industrial filters is already running smoothly," said Mr. Singleton. "In another year and a half, state law will prohibit do-it-yourselfers from discarding old filters in landfills. We are already developing a plan to have many of our collection sites accept do-it-yourselfer's use filters and oil, free of charge. For instance, the largest lube store franchiser in Dallas/Fort Worth has already agreed to participate. We recognize however, that hundred of towns and neighborhoods don't have lube stores, so we are working on a network that would give do-it-yourselfers in these areas a convenient opportunity to comply with the law, and help protect our environment."

With the Pro-M-Cycle Oil Filter Recycling Process, millions of potentially hazardous spent oil filters can be 100 percent recycled in an environmentally safe manner which previously was not available to the industry.

Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry Says:

Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said that U.S. trade sanctions against certain European products could benefit the Texas wine industry, as well as cotton, soybean and other oilseed farmers.

"The tariffs on wine will cause the prices of most white wines imported into the United States to skyrocket," Perry said. "Obviously, Texas vintages will be a viable, economic alternative for wine lovers."

Last month, Perry launched "Vintage Texas," a comprehensive statewide marketing campaign aimed at promoting the state's wine industry.

"Now is a great time to make the switch from European wines to the wines we all have been waiting for -- Texas wines," Perry said.

The strong U.S. action also would benefit oilseed farmers if it is successful in opening up the European Community market to U.S. oilseeds, the commissioner said.

"Full-scale trade wars help no one, especially farmers," Perry said. "However, the European Community's insistence on oilseeds subsidies is not only unfair to U.S. farmers, but it also inhibits what until now has been a movement toward freer trade that will help consumers worldwide."

Because of subsidies, European Community soybean farmers receive about three times as much as U.S. farmers for their beans. On two separate occasions, resolution panels of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade have found the EC soybean subsidies to be improper. U.S. oilseed producers are estimated to lose about $1 billion each year in sales to the EC because of these subsidies.

If a resolution is not reached, 200 percent on $300 million worth of EC wine, canola oil and wheat gluten are scheduled to be levied on Dec. 5.

This fall, pilots in the High Plains are relying on a satellite system to tell them where to target insecticide applications in their battle against boll weevils.

The SATLOC Inc. technology, based on a Global Positioning System, helps pilots align their spraying to maximize coverage in cotton fields and minimize boll weevil migration into the High Plains. A computer on board each of the program's four airplanes also allows officials to keep record on fields being sprayed. The technology is being used by the Texas High Plains Boll Weevil Diapause Control Program. The program, administered by Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., was established in 1964 in a 15-county area around Lubbock to prevent boll weevils from migrating westward from the Rolling Plains into the High Plains.

"This is an excellent example of agriculture embracing technology to make sure pesticide applications are precise and accurate," Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said. "And this type of technology could be a useful tool once a statewide boll weevil program is in place."

From late September until the first frost, about 150,000 cotton acres are treated out of the 500,000 cotton acres scattered throughout the program's 8,500-square-mile area.

Before using the SATLOC system, the program's pilots relied on ground crews with flags and a radio system to help them line up in 150-foot-wide spray swaths in cotton fields. Correct alignments ensures that a field is not treated too much or too little, which can occur if a pilot or line up too close or too far from the last swath treated. Cotton fields are not treated individually, but instead, planes fly in a straight line, turning the sprayer on and off, to treat as many as six to seven different fields in one pass.

Along with increasing efficiency, the system reduces the diapause program's cost by minimizing the amounts of pesticides used and by requiring fewer employees. As many as 200 employees have been needed in the past, but with the computer and satellite technology just 80 workers were needed for the 1992 program.

The program monitors cotton fields for pests and only sprays those fields that have more than 200 boll weevils per acre with 25 percent of these weevils showing signs of entering hibernation or diapause.

Seventy percent of the $1.4 million High Plains Boll Weevil Diapause Control program is funded by growers, with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service and Plant Protection and Quarantine shouldering the remaining 30 percent of the costs. For the 1992 year, the Texas Department of Agriculture awarded the program a $2,295 grant.

A new pork processing plant to be opened here by a Mexico City-based company is just the first of many free trade opportunities expected to benefit the state's farmers and ranchers, Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said.

The pork plant is one of three facilities to be established in the Alamo City by Hemco Packing Inc. The company's President Jose Hernandez Estrella, announced this month that his company would open two slaughtering plants and one meat processing operation.

During a recent conference at one of the company's new facilities, Perry said, "For the past year, I, and many others, have said that value-added processing and free trade are good economic answers for Texas."

"Today, thanks to Hemco Packing Inc. and the Hernandez family, these aren't just empty words -- instead they're pressing plants; they're jobs; they're new markets, new opportunities and hard, cold cash for Texas."

Hemco's first plant, to be opened in about two months, will be at the former Apache Packing plant at 1717 S. Brazos St. The plant will slaughter up to 2-250 Texas hogs a day and have the capacity to process 3,000 head a day by the end of its first year. A second slaughtering plant, the former San Antonio Packing company at 2000 S. Laredo St., will process cattle. The third facility, the former Decker Plant at 2450 Roosevelt St., will process hog and cattle carcasses into cold cuts, smoked meat and other products.

Most Texas hog farmers must ship their animals out-of-state to be slaughtered because Texas has no large-scale pork processing plants, but the Hemco plant will change that, Perry said.

"If the average price paid is $82 a head, that means almost one quarter of a million dollars per day will be going back to Texas pork producers," Perry said. "Of course, that's raw price for raw product. Just think what this will mean when we include processed products, such as retail cuts or smoked meats."

At least 600 people are expected to be employed by all three plants. Hemco, through its parent company, Industrias Sucarne, employs 400 at its Mexico City pork processing plant and additional people work at 16 distribution points throughout Mexico. The company is the sixth largest operation of its type in Mexico.

"I've been touting free trade and today, I think people can understand why," Perry said. "On Oct. 7, President Bush came to this city to initialize the North American Free Trade Agreement and less than one month later we are here looking at the first of what I believe will be many success stories -- success stories built on exports."

"I've said that a strong economic alliance with our neighbors to the south will create jobs. Other haves disagreed. But today, the proof is here. San Antonio is looking at 600 new jobs."

"Free trade creates opportunities. Statistics bear that out. During the last six years, U.S. agricultural exports to Mexico have doubled to $2.9 billion. And agriculture specialists at the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City expect that figure to jump to $4 billion by the end of this year. Clearly, through NAFTA the promise is bright for even greater progress."

LBB Sets First Spending Limit In Eight Years

Under the leadership of Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, the Legislative Budget Board adopted a spending limit for the first time in eight years.

This meeting marked Bullock's first opportunity to set the limit.

"The Constitution requires the Legislature to set a spending limit and stick to it," Bullock said. "But the economic realities of Texas demand we limit government spending and stay within our existing resources when considering a state budget. The spending limit will help us do just that."

A 1978 constitutional amendment requires the Legislature to limit the growth in state spending from revenues not dedicated by the Constitution to the growth of the Texas economy.

Under law, the LBB is required to set the limit prior to the start of the Legislature's biannual Regular Session. The LBB uses the growth in personal income in Texas to estimate the growth of the Texas economy.

Bullock said the LBB considered three estimates of personal income growth during the next two-year budget period and chose the most conservative--13.4 percent or an average of 6.7 percent for each of the two years covered by the 1994-95 state budget. The limit covers increases due to inflation and economic and population growth.

Bullock, who became a member and Chairman of the LBB when he was elected Lieutenant Governor, said this was his first opportunity to enact a spending limit. Bullock was not a member of the Board when they failed to agree to a limit in December 1990.

"For the past eight years, the LBB has failed to agree to a limit in December 1990."

"For the past eight years, the LBB has failed to set a spending limit," said Bullock, who assumed office in 1991. "Therefore, in my first year as Lieutenant Governor, I was left in the impossible position of enforcing a nonexistent spending limit."

"Last year, we enacted legislation to ensure that never happens again," Bullock explained. "If the LBB fails to adopt a limit, it is automatically set at zero."

The limit is next considered by a four-member committee consisting of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Speaker and State Comptroller. They have 10 days to accept or reject the LBB's limit.

Rural Nurses Sought For Degree Program

The family doctor is a familiar image in most people's conceptions of small-town America, but the reality in the late 20th century is that fewer and fewer small communities can count a medical doctor as a local resident. The doctors in many small towns are gone now, and most likely -- to paraphrase Bruce Springsteen -- they're never coming back.

However, nurse practitioners could meet the primary health care needs of many such small towns, as well as the needs of the inner cities, which are also seriously and chronically underrepresented by doctors. To increase the number of nurse practitioners in the state, The University of Texas at Austin School of Nursing has begun a program that will aid in the World Health Organization's goal of providing affordable, accessible health care for everyone.

According to Dr. Janet Allan, a member of the nursing faculty who is a licensed adult nurse practitioner, the program has as one of its major goals the recruitment and retention of rural nurses. Also, the Community-Based Family Primary Health Care program will provide advanced training for registered nurses that will lead to a master's degree in nursing and eligibility for American Nurses' Association certification as a family nurse practitioner.

Allan, who is director of the program, says that a nurse practitioner is defined as someone who provides "care across the health-care continuum, with emphasis on the promotion of health, the prevention of disease, and the early detection and treatment of disease." All applicants for the program must be RNs and possess a baccalaureate degree before applying to the master's program, and once trained, all will be able to provide primary health care for a number of routine illnesses afflicting people of all ages.

"The nurse practitioner is analogous to the family physician, the general practitioner, the pediatrician, and more and more these days, the internist," says Allan. "Most people don't have complex, exotic illnesses, so most of the health care needs -- particularly health promotion and prevention of illness -- can be really addressed by nurse practitioners.

"If you come to me with an allergy problem or skin problem, I can provide certain routine treatments, and if the problem doesn't seem to get better with the things that I've suggested, then I'd send you to a specialist, she explains. "But you'd come back to me because I would be your primary health care provider.

Allan says that the focus of nursing is to "thread together the pieces of a person's health," and for that reason, the work of the nurse practitioner is holistic in approach.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

©Coleman Adv.

America in its early days depended on the "GOOD BOOK" for its guide in ethics, worship, and pursuit of freedom. These early gains are now in danger of falling and we need to turn all America once again to God and His word. America can be strong only when each individual looks to God for strength.

Carbon Monoxide Mistaken For Flu

Carbon monoxide poisoning, the leading cause of death by poisoning in the United States, is often confused with another killer--the flu.

"Its symptoms are similar since victims may experience headaches, dizziness and nausea," said Dr. Joseph Varon, a clinical fellow in pulmonary and critical care medicine at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. "It is sometimes confused with viral illnesses, food poisoning, depression and heart problems. But the most common misdiagnosis is a 'flu-like' syndrome."

Carbon monoxide is an odorless, colorless and highly poisonous gas that can cause permanent brain damage and death.

It replaces oxygen in the blood with a deadly compound that results from the gas mixing with the blood. This reduces the oxygen level in the arteries, essentially "smothering" its victims. Pure oxygen is given to patients to boost the oxygen content of the blood.

"Carboxyhemoglobin, the compound that 'suffocates' the blood oxygen, can cause varied symptoms," Varon said.

Lower levels of carboxyhemoglobin may result in headaches, dizziness, nausea or labored breathing. More severe symptoms include visual problems, confusion, seizures and coma. At high levels, heart failure and death may occur.

Smoke inhalation from fires accounts for most carbon monoxide poisoning says Veron.

Other common sources include:

- * Furnaces, water heaters, space heaters
- * Gas-powered engines, vehicular exhaust

- * Paint removers containing methylene chloride

- * Wood stoves and Sterna fuel

Veron urges caution since more than one-third of all cases go undiagnosed.

"There are certain precautions you can take," he said. "For example, make sure that the pilot lights or flames in furnaces or heaters are properly adjusted. The gas company or an appliance repairman should check them."

Other preventive measures include:

- * Do not leave the car running in the garage, if waiting on your spouse or children, particularly if the garage is attached to the house. Also, carbon monoxide that builds up can kill a pet, even after you've left.

- * If you work in an underground garage or area where there is heavy traffic in a confined area, pay attention to the first "signs,"--headaches and dizziness.

- * Buildings where emergency generators may be used can be sites for carbon monoxide build up.

- * Carbon monoxide rises. In case of fire, stay low to the ground and get out of the building immediately. Smoke inhalation and its main culprit, carbon monoxide, kills quickly.

- * In case of severe carbon monoxide poisoning, seek emergency help immediately. Get the victim to fresh air and give artificial respiration if necessary. "Carbon monoxide is deceptive," warns Veron. "It is a dangerous poison that deserves respect."
