Blood Drive In Cross Plains Tuesday

First Baptist Church in Cross Plains will host a community blood drive on Tuesday, Aug. 24. The Meek Blood Center Bloodmobile will be parked at the church from 1:00 p.m. until 6:00 p.m. Meek Blood Center is the blood provider for seventeen hospitals and medical facilities in this area.

According to Frances Baker, donor recruiter, only 5% of the population eligible to donate blood actually do so. However, approximately 72% of the population will need a blood or blood product at some time in their lives. Blood and blood products are used on cancer patients, accident or trauma victims, newborn babies, dialysis patients, surgical patients and new mothers following childbirth. "Blood is life to these patients, and blood donors are their lifeline," said Baker. "Blood

BANDERA, Texas -Suzie Knaggs Heywood, trail boss of the upcoming historic trail ride from Bandera, Texas to Dodge City, Kansas, has announced the appointment of J.C. Thompson to the Celebrate the Western Trail staff. Thompson, from San Antonio, Texas, will serve as First Asst. Trail Boss and Head Medic on the 48-day, 679-mile trail ride. He has just recently returned from a tour of duty in Iraq.

On Labor Day, September 6, horses, riders, mules and wagons will embark on a three-state journey through Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas up the historic Western Trail. The trail riders will arrive in Dodge City on October 23, in time for a two-day celebration of the trail ride and the Western Trail.

The trail ride is part of Celebrate Bandera 2004, a time when the city of Bandera returns to its roots as the Cowboy Capital of the World with music, horses, longhorn cattle, gunfights, gospel singing and Cowboy Church on the river.

Celebrate Bandera, which is held every Labor Day Weekend, breaks new ground this year with a recreation of the opening of the Western Trail. This once-ina-lifetime event will begin with a Cowboy Breakfast and move to the County Court House for the Opening Ceremonies that will launch Celebrate the Western Trail. "Celebrate the Western Trail is a charity event organized to raise money for historical markers on the Western Trail and to raise public awareness of its contribution to our history and western heritage," said Dan Wise, chairman of Celebrate Bandera and Celebrate the Western Trail. Bandera Regional Community Foundation sponsors both the trail ride and Celebrate Bandera. In 2003, the foundation started Friends of the Western Trail to encourage local support for the trail ride and to find volu. teers to assist with the massive logistics. Organizers are expecting several thousand riders over the course of the trail ride. Some for a day or two, some for a week or two, and some will go the distance. Riders can join the trail ride at any point on the trail.

According to Wise, "People from all over the country have signed up to make the ride. These are people who are passionate about trail riding, or else they are history buffs who are passionate about the Western Trail."

Trail Carried Most Cattle To Market

Celebrate the Western Trail starts in Bandera because Bandera was a major staging area for cattle drives in the 1870s. The Western Trail was opened in 1876 after the Chisholm Trail was fenced in. Bandera Pass served as the gateway to the Western Trail, the trail that carried more cattle to market – more than six million head – than any other trail in history.

Towns along the trail are planning their own celebrations in honor of the trail ride and the Western Trail. The ride will pass Kerrville, through Fredericksburg, Mason, Brady, Santa Anna, Coleman, Baird, Albany, Throckmorton, Seymour and Vernon in Texas, and about the same number of towns in Oklahoma and Kansas. The Y.O. Ranch in Mountain Home, Texas, will provide longhorns for cattle drives through Bandera and Trail ride Kerrville. organizers will contract with other ranches to take cattle through Vernon and Dodge City.

Logistics Rival Army On The Move

The trail ride is an enormous undertaking, with logistic details rivaling those of an army on the move – from meals, to laundry, to showers, to support vehicles, to water, to feeding the equine and much more Everything is in place for this historic ride: a professional Bandera, Texas. Hundreds of horses, riders and wagons will head out of Bandera on Labor Day. bound for Dodge City Kansas. This 48-day, 679mile trail ride has already attracted riders from all over the United States. Why? What is the attraction? To have fun, certainly. But it is also to be a part of history. This trail ride, with its national publicity, has the ambitious purpose of rewriting the history of the great cattle drives.

Everyone knows about the Chisholm Trail. It has long been the subject of stories, books, movie epics and TV series, most of which are myths. The promotion of the Chisholm Trail myth has been so pervasive that the Chisholm is the only cattle trail that most people can name.

They would be shocked to learn that the Western Trail, now buried in nearobscurity, carried more cattle to market than all the other trails combined! We have this on good authority:

C.F. Doan, who operated Doan's Crossing at the Red River between 1876 and 1895, kept meticulous records. He put the total number of longhorns that waded into the river beyond his store at "more than six million." Some historians say the total was closer to seven million.

In the forward of the new book,

THE WESTERN ~ The Greatest Texas Cattle Trail, by Gary and Margaret Kraisinger, Tom Saunders reports that "The large migration (of longhorns) lasted only some 20 years, but during that period over ten million head of cattle left Texas and brought back some 250 million dollars to the Lone Star StateÖ." Which means that about 70 percent of them were driven up the Western Trail!

It is hard to imagine what that trail meant to Texas-which literally was deliverance from poverty War Civil that Reconstruction visited on every Southern State-until you read the granite monument at Doan's Crossing that honors the riders of the Western Trail: IN HONOR OF THE TRAIL DRIVERS WHO FREED

A Happy school year to all

As school starts, all Texans share the responsibility of making sure students arrive safely. Drivers should remember to slow down in neighborhoods where children are walking and waiting for the bus. They should also follow school zone laws and know when and where to stop for school buses.

School buses are the safest form of transportation for students, but the most dangerous time of the journey is when kids are entering and exiting the bus. When a school bus is loading or unloading students, the law requires that drivers stop on most roadways.

State law requirements State law requires approaching drivers to stop when a school bus is stopped and operating a visual signal (red flashing lights or a stop sign). Drivers should not proceed until the school bus resumes motion; the driver is signaled by the bus driver to proceed; or the visual signal is no longer activated. A driver does not have to stop for a school bus if it is on a highway with roadways separated by an intervening space or physical barrier.

(If a highway is divided only by a left-turning lane, the roadways are not separated, and drivers must stop for school buses.)

of up to $1,000. If a driver is convicted of this offense more than one time, DPS can suspend their license for up to six months. Injuries among passengers and drivers on school buses increased from 826 in 1991 to 1,058 in 2001, marking a slightly more than 28 percent increase.

"For the safety of our children, drivers need to slow down, obey school zone speed limits and stop for school buses," said Col. Thomas A. Davis Jr., director of the DPS. "We have zero tolerance for vehicles that pass stopped school buses."

USDA Revises BSE Test Criteria

I'll start with a brief upda.e regarding BSE testing procedures. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), it has moved to a "two-out-ofthree" standard for announcing inconclusive BSE test results.

This is part of the USDA's and 2004. ongoing effort to tighten and streamline testing of livestock that is likely to be at a higher risk of carrying the BSE virus.

As you may recall, back even hit the 6 million bale on June 1st, the USDA began an enhanced surveillance program to detect BSE. Since then, 28,000 samples, called "rapid tests," have been conducted.

According to John Clifford, the chief veterinarian of the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, these rapid tests are run once, and, if reactive, run once again.

A few days ago, Dr. Clifford announced that from now on, when an inconclusive result is reached on a sample, then two additional tests are to follow at the state laboratory. While these additional tests are occurring, the original sample will be sent to Ames, Iowa, for confirmation.

If the state lab determines the two additional tests are negative, then the original sample sent to Ames will be discarded.

It's no surprise that West Texas comes close to the top of the list in acres planted in wheat too. About 650,000 acres were planted in wheat in 2002.

And with more than 300,000 sheep in the 17th District, West Texas insomniacs should have no trouble finding enough sheep to count.

Agricultural Facts About the 17th District of Texas

Recently the USDA released the 2002 Census of Agriculture Report. In this report each Congressional District is analyzed and agricultural production is compared with other districts around the country.

I'm proud to say the 17th Congressional District neared the top of the list in several significant categories, including cotton, livestock and grain production.

I've represented the 17th District since 1979, and I have been actively involved in my family's farm operation in Jones County all my life, so I certainly understand the importance of agriculture to our West Texas economy.

The current 17th district is made up of 36 counties in West Texas, spreading from Stephenville in the east, Lamesa in the west and San Angelo in the south. The northern boundary is a line of counties, stretching from Garza to Wise counties.

The USDA Census reports there are 37,000 farmers and ranchers on 25,400 operations in the 17th District, and approximately half those producers consider farming their primary occupation.

Nine out of ten farms are considered family farms, and 28 percent of the farmers are women.

About 18.7 million acres of the district are covered in farm or ranch land, roughly the same size as the entire

Letters To The Editor

County, School History Editor:

Due to changes in family ownership, we four Cate brothers have sold our interest in our ranch which was on the far west side of Eastland County. There obviously is some sense of nostalgia as some of the ownership vested in my great-great grandfather Ramsey going back to pre-1900.

I wonder if you might remember a little family vignette where I shared with you, I think, that we traced a relationship with Mr. Perkins going back to Pilgrim days in New England.

We relied on Mr. Perkins' machine shop when we chain-saws, brought other mowers, and machinery for maintenance. One further favor which you could do for me would be to give - remind me of the name and mailing address of our commissioner who operated his yard on the west side of Cisco. He had told me of a

Ups and Downs All Around

He was sub-standard by most standards. Yet, like others who grew up poor during depression years on the working end of hoe handles, he considered himself to be, well, average. Crops came first, and schooling second; dreams of finishing high school faded, so he was off to World War II, then back home to start a family. (Looking back, he thinks "broke" might have been a better word than "poor." If you're broke, you can fix it, he reasoned.)

Armed with honesty, a strong work ethic, energy of a tiger and resolve for his kids to have it better than he did, he filed applications with several companies, promising to learn the trade if he could "get on." He "got on" as the elevator operator—a job he would hold for 50 years. It was longer, really, than he was needed. His last 10 years, staffed elevators were relics. Most had become automated. Riders pushed buttons and heard elevator music whether they wanted to or not.

His bosses weren't about to turn him out. They knew that his worth far exceeded his "up and down" duty. Riders looked forward to each new day. He greeted them travagant charges by the syllable.)

Late in his life of "ups and downs," he talked his dentistinto a way early morning appointment, then hurried to work with his mouth wired shut. He scrawled a note on a small chalk board for each rider. It read: "Ben to dennist. No descent joke today anyway."

"Any good ascent jokes?" a rider asked. The elevator crowd laughed; he smiled. Despite being unable to talk, he hummed his way through the day, showing folks his chalk board. He was degreeless, but not humorless. And, though not formally educated, he was not dumb.

In fact, he and educators have much in common. They, too, give jumpstarts daily, and the best ones don't take themselves too seriously. May those who teach in this brand new school year be so committed, so goodhumored and so wise in their daily "ups and downs at the school house ... "

What's wrong with this picture? A Texan, often on the receiving end of law enforcement citations, was weaving his way home in the middle of the night, most of his sorrows drowned. During his lock-up, he was told with smiles, his eyes locked to expect to be confined for

David Noble, high school and college stand-out in track who spent nearly 40 years as one of the nation's most respected coaches (Angelo State Relays now is named in his honor), thinks one of the most tragic mistakes made in his sport came in 1976. That's when the United States and Great Britain "pulled the plug" on the English system of measuring distances. They felt the metric system closing in.

"It wasn't smart," he insists. "Few Americans will take the time to equate metrics to yards, feet and inches." A dozen years ago, Southwest Texas State's Charles Austin was about to try a record high jump in San Angelo. The public address announcer droned that he was attempting a jump of 2.23 meters. The crowd yawned.

"Somebody tell him that he's going for 7 feet, 3 inches," Noble urged, and when the announcer changed it to feet and inches, the fans rushed closer to the jumping pit. (Austin cleared it, and later was a world champion at 7-8. He won Olympic gold in 1996 on his third try at 7-10, or, if you prefer, 2.4 meters. Anyway, it was nearly two feet above his head!)

Meanwhile, metrics are being held at bay in other sports. You might hear a football announcer say, "Third and long, but never third and 1.1 meter."

Oh my! The schools start early these days. It certainly was different the 1920s and 1930s.

I can remember when I started to school in 1921. In those days, and for many years afterward, school began immediately following Labor Day.

Labor Day weekend was the time I usually returned to Cisco from my Uncle's farm where I had been working since school recessed in the latter part of May.

I was always anxious to start back to school, to study, and to be with my friends; however, I was reluctant ti leave the farm. I enjoyed doing all the things on a farm that a farmer does, but I was always a little saddened to leave my pony that carried me to Church every Sunday. On weekends that little pony and I visited folks for miles around.

We had several children enrolled in our school that lived on farms and could not start back to school each autumn until they had harvested their cotton. They were usually in school by mid-October.

Some of Dad's relatives lived on a farm near Dothan. We often spent our Saturdays helping them pick their cotton so the children could start to school a little sooner.

I have had a lot of jobs in my day, and have done a lot of things, but I believe pick- to pay attention in school and ing cotton was the hardest job I ever had. I hated to wear inventor of the Cotton Picking Machine when I needed him?

I did my share of picking cotton, but I could never pick more than 200 pounds in a day, which was not a very good average.

Sometimes, when I was only visiting the farm during cotton picking season, my uncles would let me ride with them when they took the cotton to the gin. I would pretend I was riding a roller coaster as I sat high atop the wagon with its oversized sideboards. That was really the only thing I enjoyed about cotton farming.

We did not have "tax free" days where the stores were overflowing with parents buying clothes and school supplies.

We did not have a school supply list. We were only expected to have a tablet and pencil.

In the first place, we did not have the taxes we have today, and secondly, we did not have the money to purchase a lot of new clothes. We had more than one family whose children came to school barefooted because they did not have money to buy shoes.

Inoculations were not required, and we didn't have a dress code. If there had been a code forbidding overalls, most of us could not have attended school.

Oh yes, we were expected behave like our parents had taught us.

Thursday, August 19, 2004 Be Safe: Thunderstorm Safety Precautions

With the most severe thunderstorm activity typically impacting Texas August through October, WTU Retail Energy L.P. offers the following information and electricity-related precautions to help customers stay safe during a thunderstorm.

Lightning and Thunderstorm Facts:

On average, lightning annually causes 93 deaths and 300 injuries nationwide. Texas is second only to Florida in the number of lightning-caused casualties. You are not only in danger when the storm is overhead; any time you can hear thunder you are in danger of injury or damage by lightning.

A person who has been struck by lightning does not carry an electrical charge that can shock other people. Provide assistance immediately and call 9-1-1.

Thunderstorms always include lightning and can also bring heavy rains, flash floods, strong winds, hail and tornadoes.

Safety Tips

Install surge protectors on all major appliances--If lightning strikes your home, the charge can destroy appliances that are plugged into wall outlets, including TVs and computers. Proper surge protectors are inexpensive, easy to install and stop the charge before it reaches valuable equipment.

Check for hazards on your property--Remove dead or rotting trees and trical equipment and do not use the telephone except for an emergency -- An electric charge from lightning could be transmitted through the wires. Television sets are particularly dangerous during a lightning storm.

Do not take a bath or shower and avoid water faucets--Water and metal pipes can conduct electricity. Stay away from damaged or downed power lines--Report power outages and downed or damaged power lines by calling 1-866-223-8508.

About WTU Retail Energy

For more than 75 years, WTU Retail Energy and its predecessors have provided electricity to residential and small business customers in West Texas, including Abilene, Alpine and San Angelo. WTU Retail Energy is part of the Centrica group of companies, a leading provider of retail energy and other essential services worldwide.

Father George Foley

Sometimes there are movers and shakers that move among us, largely unnoticed. Our area recently lost one. He is most commonly known as Father George. The majority of us live every day in individual worlds with schedules, appointments, and destinations, moving through each day driven by these forces, bumping into the lives of others as we go. Those fortunate enough to have shared time with this man, found themselves moved and shaken by his contagious love for Jesus Christ and the Lord God, as he worked tirelessly and non stop to keep Them in our daily lives. At 70 years of age, he conducted regular services at six different churchs, Eastland, Cisco, Ranger, Breckenridge, Albany, and Dodson Prairie, working hard, caring for the needs of parishioners in each area. All of that will be changing now, as he will be moving to the metro area to serve a single parish of several thousand. This was not his choice, but rather an assignment from his superiors, which he dutifully accepted. He has referred to this assignment as a move to the East. He came to America from South Africa, and struggled with periods of loneliness, longing for the comfortable surroundings of the world he left behind, as he worked hard to understand and accept the many cultural differences between the continents. His devotion to his faith helped him conquer barriers and challenges of these changes. Father George captured and shares some of these experiences in this poem. God Bless you, Father George.

And the people told me of that which is good

With a people not my own I was loney many times And the people comforted me for all I missed

In the cultures not my own I worked tirelessly with time

And the cultures taught me patience and calmness

In the cultures not my own I walked hurriedly to the finish of the day

And the cultures slowed me to find the way

In the cultures not my own I spoke a language sometimes strange And the cultures taught me acceptance of what is

In West Texas, the land not my own I will always remember to call it my home

For so it is, so it was, so it always will be

In a land not my own God sends me East, to another place May He in His grace let me too, love that place.

staff, support from the State of Texas and the participation of Texas Parks and Wildlife. In addition, several hundred WesternTrail enthusiasts from San Antonio to Dodge City are helping with the logistics of feeding, bedding and entertaining the trail riders.

An outstanding Ride Staff has been assembled to handle the logistics of a trail ride on the move. Riders will hit the trail at about 9 a.m. each morning, average 12-16 miles a day at a pace of four miles an hour and have a one-day layover each week. The staff includes a Trail Boss, Assistant Trail Boss, Wagon Master, Assistant Wagon Master, Advance Man, Camp Boss, Head Scout, Assistant Scout, three Scouts, Communications Coordinator, Western Trail Coordinator, Registrar, two Emergency Medical Techs and a Camp Helper.

Trail Boss Is Grandma Driver And Trail Descendent

from Bandera. Born into a Texas ranching family, Heywood learned to ride horses before she could walk. For her, the trail ride is "what I have been living every day of my life getting ready for and just didn't know it." She is the granddaughter of one of the legendary trail drivers who took three herds of longhorns up the Western Trail in 1876, 1881, and 1886.

Heywood will celebrate her 66th birthday while on the trail ride and might just have a birthday party at the trail's end in Dodge City. Says Heywood, "My kids and grandkids are going to be there waiting for Grandma to bring the herd in. It will be my legacy to them."

THEIR TRAILS TO CATTLE THE MARKETS OF THE FAR WE NORTH; DEDICATE THIS STONE, SYMBOL OF THEIR COURAGE AND FORTITUDE, AT THE SITE OF THE OLD DOANS STORE. OCTOBER 21-22, 1931.

By the mid-1870s, the fabled Chisholm Trail was no longer passable. Its open range had been fenced in. Farms dotted the landscape. A new trail, to the west, had to be opened between the railheads in Kansas and the herds of longhorn in South Texas and Mexico. Bandera played a unique role in the development of that trail.

When it was founded in 1853, Bandera lay just inside the Comanche Barrier, which was a string of forts built by the U.S. Army on the western frontier to protect settlers from the marauding Comanche, but the raids continued to be a common and deadly occurrence.

With the outbreak of Civil War in 1861, the Army withdrew, and life on the frontier became unsustainable. Men left their Thursday, August 19, 2004 farms and ranches to serve in the military. Their wives and children moved back to live with families in San Antonio or further east, abandoning crops and livestock. Out of that tragedy, more than a decade later, came a new industry for Bandera County: open-range cattle round-ups.

Earl Hardin writes about this new industry in his History of Jose Policarpio Rodriguez, Leopold Haby remembered his first openrange roundup beginning at the ranch of August and Celeste Pingenot in Bandera County, August Pingenot joined the party and they hunted and rounded up cattle throughout the country around Bandera, penning at the ranch of Polly Rodriguez, at the Jack ranch, at the Bandy ranch, and at Bladen Mitchell s.

Returning after the war, Bandera families discovered that their abandoned cattle had escaped to the hills, breeding unfettered for nearly a decade. Tens of thousands of head of cattle were rounded up and driven through Bandera Pass to market on the new Western Trail, which opened in 1876. For the next 19 years, Bandera Pass served as the gateway to the Western Trail, and to the rebirth of Texas prosperity.
