KC Now Has Driving Range

Knox City's newest recreation facility is the driving range that KC businessman Tommy Kent is developing west of the Knox City Country Club golf course and north of Custom Farm Services, Inc.

Kent, who owns and operates White Auto Store here, has just completed running concrete for the rubber mats and is now in the process of purchasing an automatic ball dispenser. Two sizes of buckets are available, the smaller size with approximately 35 balls and the larger size with 70.

The facility is managed this summer by the Kents' 15-year-old daughter Kary, who will be a sophomore next year at KCHS. It is open to the public from about 8:30 o'clock each morning until dark and not only offers relaxation and good exercise for a person but is an excellent way for one to improve his or her skill and golfing ability.
