A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

Greeting calls SWAT team

All someone said was "Hi, Jack!" but at a suburban Detroit airport, that was enough to create a crisis.

A microphone happened to be open Monday when someone greeted the copilot aboard a corporate jet, and the tower heard "hijack," police Lt. Rick Crigger said.

Oakland International Airport tower officials called the Waterford police.

They in turn called in a whole extra shift of police, the Oakland County Sheriff's Department SWAT team, the FBI and other federal authorities, Crigger said.

The plane was told to return to the tower, and the pilot's identification was checked. Once the alarm was over, the law officers could laugh about it.

"They'll probably pass a rule that no one named Jack can ever be hired in aviation again," Waterford Police Capt. Chuck Jehi said.

Police dog's bite costly

Shadow the police dog literally took a bite out of crime when he helped his human partner arrest a suspect. Now a federal jury has taken a bite out of the police department's wallet.

The jury on Tuesday ordered the Yarmouth (Mass.) Police Department to pay $50,000 in attorney's fees to a man bitten by Shadow six years ago, finding that the department has tolerated excessive force in its K-9 unit.

On Dec. 16, 1994, the 90-pound Belgian Malinois and Patrolman Peter McClelland chased Jerome Jarrett when he fled on foot after being pulled over for driving unlicensed and uninsured.

In March, a seven-member jury found that McClelland had used excessive force in capturing Jarrett and awarded Jarrett $1 in damages. McClelland's lawyer said he would appeal.

Board edging toward superintendent decision

JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

Members of the Muleshoe School Board have completed their interviews with three finalists for the position of school superintendent and soon will visit Hamilton, Texas, for a closer look and more information about Gene Sheets, now superintendent at Hamilton.

Sheets, a graduate of Farwell High School and Abilene Christian University, has been superintendent at Hamilton since 1998 and was superintendent of the Hedley Independent School District, near Hamilton, for two years before that.

Other finalists for the Muleshoe job are R. Kent Bowerman, high school principal at Big Spring, and Eddie Dunn, high school principal at Seminole.

Bowerman is a graduate of Texas Tech and has done graduate work at Tech and at East Texas State University. Dunn is a graduate of Lake Forest (Ill.) College and has a master's degree from Texas A&M University and a doctorate from Baylor University.

Sheets explained his educational philosophy on his application by stressing that the board and the superintendent are a "team of eight" who must seek "what will best prepare our children for the future, while we continue to instill in them such character traits as honesty, loyalty, service, hard work and perseverance."

USDA to give wheat to North Korea

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In a move designed to shore up U.S. wheat prices and help provide food for North Koreans, U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman announced June 15 that the U.S. Department of Agriculture will donate 50,000 metric tons of wheat to the World Food Program's emergency feeding operations in North Korea.

"Given the severe food shortages that continue in North Korea, the United States is responding to the World Food Program's latest appeal for emergency humanitarian assistance," Glickman said. "The surplus U.S. wheat will be used to help feed tens of thousands of undernourished children, new mothers, and other people in need."

Parents urged to set ground rules for kids returning home

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

AUSTIN — Thomas Wolfe wrote "you can't go home again," but try telling that to the millions of young adults who have returned to the family nest.

According to the Texas Society of CPAs, more and more parents are facing the financial challenges that surface when adult children come back home.

These temporary arrangements could become a long-term drain on the family finances. The best advice for parents of "boomerang" kids is to establish a clear understanding of financial ground rules.

Parents and children should work together to negotiate a cost-sharing arrangement that takes into account the needs and expectations of both parties.

Determine from the start the approximate length of stay and what contribution — financial and otherwise — the young adult will be expected to make.

Parents should resist the temptation to offer the adult child a "free ride."

The child's contribution can help to build his or her self-esteem, create a sense of responsibility, and develop independence.

There's no such thing as a free breakfast, lunch and dinner.

Most financial experts recommend that charging the adult child at least a nominal amount for room and board.

Establish a figure in proportion to how much the child earns. The parent might agree to later refund a portion to the child to help meet the security deposit or first month's rent on a new place to live.

If the child does not have a job and can't afford to help out financially, he or she could substitute with yard work, household help, or repair work

Musician recalls meeting Buddy Holly

By JOLINE FRANKLIN
Journal correspondent

Conard Carter has a lot of musical memories — including his two albums in the 1960s with The Shamrocks, best known for "Some Sweet Day" and "That's All I Want From You," written by band member David Box.

But no experience from that period resonates louder after more than 30 years than the day Carter met teen idol Buddy Holly at the Hi-D-Ho, Lubbock's most famous drive-in of the period.

Carter said he and some friends were parked in front of the Hi-D-Ho on an ordinary night when a brand new pink Thunderbird pulled up, and the night was ordinary no more.

When the Thunderbird's door opened, Carter and his friends saw Holly step out, dressed all in black with a motorcycle cap, jacket and boots.

Carter remembers the pop star as being friendly and outgoing. He said Holly greeted them and came over to the car to talk to them before he went into the Hi-D-Ho.

Both Holly and Carter were in on the Lubbock music scene of the '60s, when many of the top names in early-day rock 'n' roll hung out in the area and often recorded at Norman Petty Studios in Clovis, where Carter said he made nine records.

It's interesting that Carter is getting yet another shot at stardom, with Lubbock radio station KDAV recently playing some songs from The Shamrocks' albums again.

He has been notified that England's Roller Coaster Records is re-issuing the Shamrock albums, which should be out in about a year.

Carter also continues to write songs, with one of his recent compositions being called "Highway 84," referring to the trek up U.S. 84 young musicians were making in those days to record at Petty's studio.

Conard and Holly certainly weren't alone in that. Roy Orbison, Waylon Jennings and Buddy Knox were others during the same period.

The first singer to record at the Petty Studio died last week at the age of 78. Jimmy Self, who went to Clovis from Childress in 1953, wrote and recorded the hit "If I Could Hear My Mother Pray Again" and became a longtime radio personality in Clovis. (He also wrote "Old Christmas Card," which became a hit for Jim Reeves.)

Another early artist was Charlie Phillips of Farwell, whose "Sugartime" became one of the 1950s' biggest songs.

The isolated studio was considered worth seeking out because Petty was not only one of the top promoters in the country at the time but was considered to have quite a nose for recognizing young talent.

Learn Rimes continues that tradition today, having recorded her first megahit, "Blue," at one of the two Clovis Petty studios, the one now operated by Johnny Mulhair.

But highway 84 may never see the likes of Carter's contemporaries again. Holly was one of the hottest recording stars in the world when tragedy ended his career early, and songs such as "Peggy Sue" and "That'll Be the Day" are still discovered by new generations.

But when Carter met him, Holly had been just another kid from Lubbock trying to get out a record.

"He went up and down 'ol 84' to get his songs record at Norman Petty's," Carter mused recently. "He did it, too — he got them recorded there."

The rest is pop music history, and Carter is clearly proud to have been there when that history was being made.

Garden Spot of the Week

The Jennyslippers' selection for Garden Spot of the Week for May 29 through June 3 is this scene in the yard of Phil and Alice Phyllaier at 1715 W. Avenue B. It is a good example of how even a small spot can be made eye-catching by the use of colorful pansies and other spring bedding plants.

in exchange for room and board.

Most health insurance policies discontinue coverage when the dependent is no longer a full-time student or reaches the age of 23 to 25. After that, the adult child may qualify to remain on the parents' policy under COBRA benefits, but the premiums can be costly.

One option may be an individual short-term policy, most of which are renewable for up to a year. As long as the adult child is healthy, he or she can save money by selecting a high deductible of $1,000 or more.

Auto and homeowner insurance are important issues as well. If the adult child will be driving the family car, the policyholder will need to add an extra driver to the coverage. In the event that the child has his or her own car and insurance, joining the policy may result in lower payments.

In terms of homeowner's insurance, check with the carrier to see if extra coverage is needed, especially if the child has expensive computer or stereo equipment.

If the decision is to give the child money, be sure that both parties understand whether it's a loan or a gift. When offering a loan, a parent may want to make it official by drawing up a written agreement that outlines the details.

Credit-card debt is a common problem for recent college grads. However, rather than bailing out an adult child, help him or her set up a budget and work out a repayment plan.

If the adult child is job hunting and has student-loan debt, he or she may be able to request a deferment of payment until becoming gainfully employed.

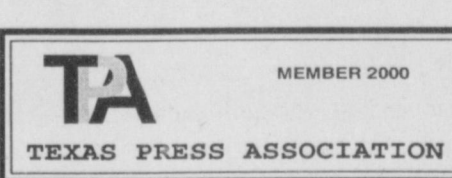

A parent may qualify for a tax deduction for a boomerang kid as long as they provide more than half the child's support and the child earns less than $2,800 (in the year 2000) or is a full-time student under 24.

Shrubs tend to be the yard's unsung heroes

By RONN SMITH
Editor

I think shrubs may be the most under-rated element of the average yard.

People can spend a lot of time deciding which tree to plant and which flowers to set where, but then if they add a shrub they're likely to pick one the height and width they want, and that's it.

Aside from the fact that in our climate, it's easy to pick a shrub that won't make it — or will survive, but won't look good without some coddling.

I remember one of my favorite elderly ladies from years past complaining about the common snowball in her front yard.

This was a beautiful snowball, in fact, but she had selected it strictly based on the flowers. The flowering season for snowballs is fairly short, and the rest of the year she had — as she described it — "a big old ugly green bush."

I have written many times about shrubs that add a second season of color with berries or with fall foliage that turns brilliant colors. These are just two ways of getting more bang from your buck out of the same plant — and, in the case of fruiting shrubs, you also get the benefit of birds attracted to the berries which, in turn, may help you out by eating insect pests.

Some common berry-bearing shrubs are the old standby hush honeysuckles (which is definitely tough enough for our climate and the berries are beautifully translucent, though it seems to me the mockingbirds — or something — eats them very quickly once they ripen); coralberry and snowberry, with hot-pink or white berries that tend to last all winter (birds don't seem to like them); junipers and cedars, which people tend to think of as "just evergreens" but which can produce beautiful crops of blue fruits favored by just about all fruit-eating birds of North America); barberries (the red-leaf types are especially popular), which have varying amounts of thorns depending on the species and can make very effective, sticky hedges; nandina or heavenly bamboo, with its big clusters of waxy red berries so effective as Christmas decorations to replace holly.

But I wouldn't even take a guess at the number of shrubs that produce berries. The fruit can be blue, red, black, pink, yellow, orange, white, purple, amethyst — there's almost no limit. And sometimes it isn't just the fruit that brings color to the yard — how about bright blue berries on red stems, or some combination like that?

In other words, why settle for the common types unless they fit what you want?

Certainly one of the most beautiful families when in fruit would be the callicarpas or beautyberries. The berries are an amethyst color (though white-fruited forms are available) and in some varieties the berries almost hide the stems once the leaves drop. The sight may be as spectacular as any available in the average garden.

Having said that, I have to add that mine apparently freeze back every winter even though both species I have — the American beautyberry (Callicarpa americana) and one of those known as Japanese beautyberry (Callicarpa bodinieri) are reported as hardy to Zone 6 (10 below zero).

It may be that the roots will stand that kind of cold but the stems won't, or it may be some other factor that's causing the dieback. At any rate, callicarpas flower on the old wood, so in my case they haven't flowered at all.

I would be happy to hear if someone else is experimenting with them on the High Plains, and what their results have been. These are definitely worth working with in case you should get berries, and they don't take much care beyond water and an occasional dose of iron.

The cotoneaster family is extremely variable, from dense shrubs (almost subshrubs) only a few inches high and producing massive crops of bright-red berries to the tough but less refined hedge cotoneaster, which tolerates extreme drought and alkaline soils.

I think one of the most valuable and underused plants for our area is a cotoneaster known simply as "Strieb's Findling," an extremely ground-hugging plant that nevertheless produces the red berries scattered across the surface of the garden.

"Strieb's Findling" can be especially attractive planted among the right rocks or other obstacles, since the gnarly stems run right over any small items in their way.

If you want something unusual that is edible, you might try the increasing popular decaisnea (I know; it'll never be popular because people won't know how to pronounce it).

It's a big shrub (to 15 feet tall) but very ornamental, with compound leaves up to 15 inches long and 6-inch clusters of beautiful powder-blue fruit.

The fruit is seedy but tasty enough. (Daniel Hinkley of Heronswood Nursery brought back some of these plants — Decaisneafargesii — describes the fruit as "a rather slimy, seed-filled membrane." I doubt that his phrase makes you want to rush right out and eat a batch.) But if you don't even try eating them, it's a beautiful shrub when in fruit.

Happy planting!

98 percent of Texas students pass exit-level TAAS

AUSTIN — Ninety-eight percent of Texas' class of 2000 passed all sections of the mandatory Texas Assessment of Academic Skills before the end of the school year.

The 98 percent passing rate is a record for the exit-level test, Texas Commissioner of Education Jim Nelson said last week.

"I'm pleased to see that these seniors stuck with it and passed the exit-level TAAS," Nelson said. "I congratulate them on their success, and I thank them for giving us another reason that we can be proud of our educational system here in Texas."

Nelson also thanked teachers, administrators, parents and tutors who worked with students to pass the test and get a diploma.

The exit-level TAAS tests students in reading, writing and mathematics. Students begin taking the test in the spring of their sophomore year and have eight opportunities to pass it while they are still in school. Most students pass the exit-level exam in 10th grade, when it is first given.

There is no limit on the number of times students who do not receive diplomas can re-take the test, and students can continue retaking it even if they are no longer in school.

TAAS results for individual school districts can be obtained by contacting local districts directly.

Lawyers return overcharges

Trial lawyers have returned $6.8 million in overcharges for expenses in the state's 1996 lawsuit against tobacco companies. Attorney General John Cornyn announced earlier the month.

Cornyn said the return of the overcharges raises questions about how the case was handled and "underscores the importance of continuing my investigation until the people of Texas receive the answers they deserve."

In November 1999, Cornyn forced the team of trial lawyers to drop a $2.3 billion attorneys' fee claim. The lawyers were hired by Cornyn's predecessor, Dan Morales, to represent the state in the action against the tobacco companies.

Other highlights

- The state last week asked the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals to overturn the court's own 1996 ruling outlawing a University of Texas law school policy of using race as a factor for accepting students. If the court were to undo the ruling, affirmative action policies designed to compensate for past discrimination could be reinstated.

- Five counties on the Texas-Mexico border last week announced they will refuse to try federal drug cases beginning July 1. El Paso, Hidalgo, Cameron, Starr and Hudspeth counties said they won't handle cases until the federal government reimburse them for local prosecution costs.

- The Texas Democratic Party held its convention June 9-10 in Fort Worth. Party leaders said Democrats will focus on holding the six-seat majority they have in the 150-seat Texas House of Representatives and regaining seats in the 31-seat state Senate, where Republicans hold a four-seat advantage. The Republican Party of Texas was to convene June 15-17 in Houston.

- Civil rights advocates gathered at the state Capitol on June 7 to urge Gov. George W. Bush to support tougher hate-crime laws. June 7 was the second anniversary of the death of James Byrd Jr., a 49-year-old black man who was killed by three white men who chained him to the back of a pickup and dragged him to death near Jasper.

- The Texas Department of Agriculture has a toll-free Hay and Grazing Hotline, (877) 429-1998, to help provide farmers and ranchers with some relief from drought conditions blanketing most of the state. Callers will be given a list of pastures for lease, hay suppliers or hay available.

- A new study by the Center for Research on Electronic Commerce at the University of Texas at Austin says 2.5 million people were working in Internet-related jobs last year — twice the number estimated in 1998. Research indicates the Internet economy could top $1 trillion in 2001.

- The Texas Department of Health and the Texas Chapter of the American Cancer Society have a new toll-free hotline for Texans who want to quit smoking and need help. Callers can dial (877) 937-7848 to speak with counselor.

This is the mom, Joann Davis. I realize that you only wanted a picture and only one line or sentence stating why he should be chosen as "Father of the Year," but I'd like you to consider our story.

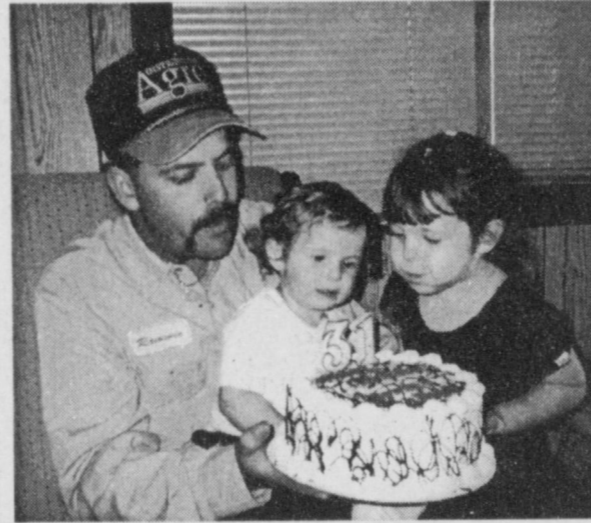

This year, I had a small incident that turned into a large ordeal. I have spent over 40 days in the hospital and had 9 surgeries on my foot with various complications and such. But through all this, Murray had to care for the four kids. We have Kasey, who was a senior this year, 18 years; Tiffany, 4th grade, 10 years; Rowdy, kindergarten, age 6; and Misty, age 5 and starts school this year.

The kids all have numerous interests. The three youngest take tumbling in Levelland and are on the Acrosports competition team. Tiffany played Little Dribblers Basketball at Morton. Rowdy played Little Dribblers Basketball at Three Way.

Can you imagine all the running-getting each to all the practices and games, etc...with me in the hospital or at home and homebound. Murray did not interrupt or make the kids miss out on any games or practices. He did not pawn them off on grandparents or friends for rides and errands. Misty helped her daddy farm during the day, or she came to see about me. And the rest of the kids came on weekends after their games or practices. Also, during this time in January and February, we had all the stock shows and our oldest son's high school sports. Murray set up a birthday party for Tiffany on March 22 which will be remembered always. What I would like you to know and what I told my husband is that many people might say, "We just can't go here or there or do this or that." He did not let my circumstances interrupt the lives and interests of his kids. I love Murray and truly feel he deserves this after this year. In the pictures, each of the kids had a turn to work on dad's hair after he had cut Rowdy's hair.

Sincerely,
Joann Davis

Thanks to everyone for entering this year's contest!

My name is Terry Alexander and my Dad is Terry Graves, and I believe he deserves to be father of the year.

This is my dad's first Father's Day, and he has done a great job of taking care of me. I was a very sick little boy right after I was born, and my Dad has prayed and helped me pull through my ordeal. He's the best! He read books, played music and sang to me while I was in the hospital. Just when he thought I was leaving him, he said an extra prayer for me and I began to take a miraculous turn to survive.

My dad took two weeks of paternity leave to take care of me after I was at home. During that time, his tennis team was qualifying for the Arizona State tennis tournament. When I was seven weeks old, dad took me to the state tennis tournament all by myself. He fed me, changed my diapers and coached his team and did a great job!

I'm a lucky little boy to have Terry Graves as my dad, and I love him very much! And when I grow up, I want to be just like my dad and my Pappy Bob.

Dad,

What can I say other than you're the Best. This world would be a better place if everyone had a father like you! I hope when I am a father, I can show my kids the correct morals and life's beauties as you have shown me.

Thanks for everything and Happy Father's Day.

Tonsil disease can impact quality of child's life

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL
HOUSTON — Some children never have tonsil problems. Others have minor tonsil problems. But children with chronic infections fight an ongoing battle with sleep disruptions, loss of appetite, poor concentration and poor overall health.

"Children with tonsil and adenoid disease suffer more than previously believed," said Dr. Michael Stewart, an associate professor of otolaryngology and assistant dean of clinical affairs at Baylor College of Medicine.

"Most of the literature is based on objective measures of the disease, such as number of infections, but it is likely that the impact of a chronic infection has been underestimated," he said.

In a recent study published in the Archives of Otolaryngology-Head and Neck Surgery, Stewart surveyed parents of 154 children between the ages of 2 and 16.

Answering for their children, parents filled out a detailed questionnaire that covered 12 areas including bodily pain, physical functioning, self-esteem, parental emotional impact and family cohesion.

Stewart and his colleagues found the impact of tonsil and adenoid disease on overall health to be quite significant and that many children suffer a reduced quality of life as a result of these infections.

"The survey showed that children with tonsil and adenoid disease scored significantly lower than healthy children. The impact appears to be as severe as conditions considered more serious such as asthma and arthritis," Stewart said.

The data revealed that the mean scores for children tonsil and adenoid disease were especially low in areas related to emotional impact, behavior and parental impact.

Tonsils, which have no known function, are two groups of fleshy tissue on either side of the throat. Tonsillitis occurs when the tonsils become inflamed. Symptoms include throat pain, difficulty swallowing and fever. Lymph glands in the neck tend to swell and become tender. In some cases, children can suffer from a headache or a middle ear or sinus infection.

There is an ongoing debate on whether to treat tonsil and adenoid disease medically or surgically. Controversy exists over the guidelines that determine the need for surgery.

"Tonsil and adenoid disease can be more than a childhood inconvenience that will go away in time. Quality of life issues need to be considered when planning the child's treatment," Stewart said.

When We Buried My Father . . .

On January 12, 2000, my family gathered at the little Paint Creek Cemetery near Robert Lee, Texas, a country cemetery whose land was donated by my great-grandfather. We'd planned to gather at Houston for my father's 87th birthday. We were in Robert Lee instead. On this Father's Day weekend, I'll share some thoughts written by my brother Gene.

When we buried my mother in the winter of 1992, it was a cold, from distant places.

"We only have 30 minutes of light left," the undertaker whispered to me urgently. "I don't like to cover a grave while folks are still here."

"What choice do we have?" I countered.

So the funeral home people quickly lowered Dad's casket while my brothers and I retrieved the shovels we'd brought along for the occasion.

Clouds of fine, chalky dust hovered over the grave as we pitched in shovelful of drouth-parched soil. Even 6 feet down it was dry as powder. Soon our shoes and dark suits took on the hue of the ashen dust.

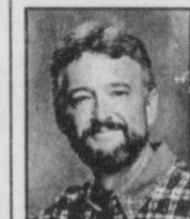

As my brothers and I paused to catch a breath, our sons asked if they could help. Before long, close family friends—many of them church leaders today because our father encouraged and trained them—asked if we minded if they also took a turn.

So our intimate ritual of honor to our dad unexpectedly became a public expression of gratitude and love by a host of people he had blessed. We felt good about that.

"Honor your father and mother," God commands, "that it may be well with you."

That day my brothers and I claimed God's promise. By the sun's last rays we raked and dressed the mound of earth that marked our father's resting place. As darkness fell, we slowly drove out of that country cemetery, each of us bolstered by a deep sense of satisfaction that outweighed our grief. We had done everything a son can do for a dad.

blustery day at the graveside. Friends and well-wishers vanished after the final amen, scurrying to warm cars to escape the raw wind.

Thus my brothers and I enjoyed a quiet, private hour when we performed our final service to the grand woman who bore us. We covered her grave.

A few months ago when it came time for us to lay our father beside her, we brothers envisioned a repeat performance. Somehow this seemed the right way to say goodbye to the man who had given us life and then led all four of us into deeply satisfying Christian ministries.

But we failed to calculate one small factor. On the mid-January day when we buried Dad, we had shirt-sleeve 75-degree weather. So our friends tarried in the cemetery, enjoying the chance to visit with rarely seen friends

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI
THE LAND OF REPHIDIM!
 REPHIDIM WAS A CAMPING GROUND OF THE ISRAELITES IN THE WILDERNESS. (EX.17:1) IT WAS LOCATED BETWEEN THE WILDERNESS OF SIN AND MOUNT SINAI. THERE WAS NO WATER OBTAINABLE UNTIL MOSES SMOTE A ROCK, FROM WHICH WATER FLOWED, BY DIVINE COMMAND! THE WATER TRAVELED DOWN THE BED OF A WADI TO THE CAMP OF THE ISRAELITES, SUPPLYING THEM ALL DURING THEIR STAY AT MOUNT SINAI. REPHIDIM ALSO WAS THE SCENE OF THE BATTLE WITH THE AMALEKITES AND THE FIRST TIME JOSHUA WAS PICKED BY MOSES TO LEAD THE ISRAELITES IN COMBAT! THE SITE OF THE BATTLE CANNOT BE EXACTLY DETERMINED, BUT PROBABLY IS LOCATED ON WADI REFAID, WHICH IS NORTHWEST OF JEBEL MUSA AND TO THIS DAY, STILL HAS A STREAM OF COLD WATER WHICH RUNS DOWN TO JOIN WADI REFAID AND SUPPLIES AN OASIS AT THE FOOT OF JEBEL REFAID.

...AND SLOWLY THE FLOW OF BATTLE SWINGS WITH THE ISRAELITES! STEP BY STEP, THE AMALEKITES ARE DRIVEN BACK BY THE SLASHING SWORD WORK OF JOSHUA AND HIS MEN, BACK AND BACK, UNTIL, NOW, THEY ARE FORCED UP THE HILLSIDE FROM WHENCE THEY HAD SO FIERCELY RUSHED!

Later teal season, crane zone changes await approval

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL
AUSTIN — Changes to Texas migratory game bird regulations adopted June 1 by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission could mean better hunting for teal and more opportunity for hunting sandhill crane.

Included in the 2000-2001 Migratory Game Bird Proclamation is a 16-day teal season Sept. 15-30, which biologists say could dramatically increase hunter success.

As with all migratory game bird regulation changes, the teal season dates are tentative until the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service finalizes the standards for the Central Flyway this summer.

"Because we have to set the entire teal season within the month of September, we felt that opening the season as late in the month as possible would be the best option for hunter success," said Vernon Beville, director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife migratory game bird program.

Sept. 15 means opening teal season on a Friday and closing it on a Saturday, Sept. 30.

By delaying the teal season opener until Sept. 15 rather than the second Saturday (Sept. 9), hunters probably will see more birds migrating into Texas, predicts Beville.

Teal harvest data collected by the department show that hunters average fewer than two birds a day before Sept. 14 and more than two per day after Sept. 14.

In another move aimed at hunter opportunity, Parks and Wildlife adopted options for extending sandhill crane hunting in two areas along the middle and lower coast.

The agency left some flexibility in its final rule-making decision, to allow for direction from the federal level later this month and will seek the most liberal option.

Parks and Wildlife's preferred option would extend the Zone C sandhill crane hunting area along the mid and lower coast with a three-bird daily bag limit. If the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service restricts bag limits on sandhills to fewer than three birds daily in the extended areas of Zone C, Texas would opt to create a Zone D to include only the new coastal areas, with a two- or one-bird daily bag and leave the other three zones intact with a three-bird bag.

Another alternative should Fish and Wildlife not approve the extended areas of Zone C would be to revert to last year's crane boundaries with a statewide three-bird daily bag.

The season dates for migratory game bird hunting seasons in Texas for 2000-2001 as recommended by Parks and Wildlife:

• Dove — Sept. 1-Oct. 30 in the North Zone; Sept. 1-Oct. 17 and Dec. 26-Jan. 7 in the Central Zone; and Sept. 22-Nov. 5 and Dec. 26-Jan. 9 in the South Zone.

The proposed white-winged dove season is Sept. 2, 3, 9 and 10 in the Special White-winged Dove Area of South Texas.

• Teal — Sept. 15-30.
• Sandhill crane — Nov. 11-Feb. 11 in Zone A; Dec. 2-Feb. 11 in Zone B; and Dec. 30-Feb. 4 in Zone C.

• Rail and gallinule — Sept. 15-30 and Oct. 28-Dec. 20.

TOPS NEWS

The June 15 meeting of TOPS No. 34 was held at the regular site, the fellowship room of the Muleshoe Church of Christ. Twenty members attended.

Leader Laverne James opened the meeting, presided over it and led the prayer and pledge. Janie Hughes read the previous week's minutes, which were approved.

Lucille Harp was the best loser and Paula Cantrell and Betty Jo Davis tied for the first runner-up position. Jewel Peeler was the second runner-up.

Nutrition, vitamins and minerals were topics of the discussion presented by James.

James emphasized that we should try to get as much calcium as we can through our diet or take a calcium supplement. The dosage in supplements can vary from 1,000 to 1,200 milligrams.

It has recently been determined that sugar is not as harmful for us as it was once thought to be; it now is beginning to be thought of as a simple carbohydrate.

Certain people in industrial areas have thought in the past that sugar contains empty calories.

The next meeting will be at 5:30 p.m. June 22 at the same site. Visitors are welcome.

Trees for the park

Members of the Rotary Club of Muleshoe help with the club's June 10 kickoff of its city park improvement project. They planted 24 trees, donated by local citizens, around the park's new fountain. Club members provided the labor, the club provided the materials, and Five Area Telephone and Bailey County Electric provided the heavy equipment necessary to plant the trees and to install a drip irrigation system needed to provide water. The goal is to plant as many as a thousand trees throughout the park over the next several years. Trees can be donated by contacting Phil Kent at First Bank of Muleshoe or Jay Messenger at Muleshoe State Bank. The cost is $100 if the species is selected by the club; donations of specific species is encouraged, but the cost may vary with the club's cost to obtain the tree. The donation covers the cost of a stone marker to be placed at the base of the tree, honoring the donor or designating the tree as a living memorial to a deceased friend or relative.

For the U.S., the buck stops in the Balkans

Fifty-six years ago this month, 176,000 Allied soldiers landed on the beaches of Normandy in what was the largest invasion in history. The operation was officially known as Operation Overlord, but we all know it by one name: D-Day.

While there have been hundreds of other D-Days in other historic locations such as Okinawa and Iwo Jima, when we hear the term "D-Day," we reflect on that awful and incredible day in June 1944 with reverence for what was accomplished and for all that was lost at Normandy Beach.

More than half a century later, American military forces still serve in Europe. Today the grandchildren of some of the very soldiers who participated in D-Day are serving in Italy, Belgium and Germany. But recently we have seen a gradual shift toward less traditional U.S. missions in Europe, particularly in Bosnia and Kosovo.

When the Cold War ended, the wall came down and the Warsaw Pact disbanded. Military strategists began to talk of the need for our European military alliance to change its mission from simple mutual defense against a common threat. They warned that unless NATO could find a new reason to exist after the end of the Cold War, there might be no reason for its to exist at all.

That new mission began to come into focus in the Balkans five years ago when the United States committed peacekeeping forces to Bosnia to enforce the provisions of the Dayton Peace

CAPITOL COMMENT

U.S. SENATOR
KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON

Accords.

What was conceived by the administration as a one-year mission to accomplish specific military objectives is now in its fifth year — with greatly expanded civilian nation-building objectives and no end in sight to the deployment.

The General Accounting Office estimates that the cost of our Balkan peacekeeping missions in Bosnia and Kosovo now tops $23 billion.

But there are non-monetary costs as well. Recruiting and retention problems in the U.S. military services have been exacerbated by endless peacekeeping missions. Our armed services are not up to their congressionally mandated troop strength, and America's peacekeeping burden has resulted in two of our Army divisions reporting as unfit for combat.

As the world's only superpower, we have a responsibility to lead. American led when we first brought the parties together in Dayton. The accords stopped the fighting, and we should be respectful of the achievement, but we did not create effective economic and political structures necessary for lasting peace.

As one American military peacekeeper said to me on a recent visit, "Everyone's job in Bosnia is to work on the problems we face, but no one seems to have the responsibility for actually solving those problems."

It is time to stop drifting and establish a policy aiming at solutions. That is why I have introduced legislation to authorize the Balkan Stabilization Conference. It would reconvene the parties to the Dayton Peace Accords that ended the Bosnia conflict, those who were involved in the peace agreement after the bombing of Kosovo, and other regional entities. We must review our progress to date and seek a long-term settlement. If we cannot do that, how can we call ourselves leaders?

Self-determination is critical. The current policy is based on a mirage of multi-cultural democracy in the Balkans. We are trying to create governments that ignore history.

Elections have been held in which refugees were bused into disputed regions to vote for elected officials who cannot serve because they are unable to return
