County Agent Logan Brings Back Fine Jerseys From Ohio

The following item is taken from the Farm and Dairy, published at Salem, Ohio, under date of February 10th, and since that time Mr. Logan has returned home with the fine stock referred to and the farmers of Knox county who are interested in dairying are very enthusiastic over their purchases.

Eastern Ohio was called on last week to furnish Texas, a car load of Jerseys, with which to improve the herds of Knox county. W. O. Logan, of Benjamin, Texas, agricultural agent for Knox county, came to Columbia, Mahoning and Belmont counties and selected 22 head of yearling bulls and heifers, practically all from dams and sires with gold and silver medals for butterfat production back of them.

Among the Mahoning county breeders who furnished stock for the shipment, which was loaded Thursday, February 2, were H. J. Beardsley, Canfield; Frank Buckwalter, T. S. Woodward, and Hugh W. Bonnell, Youngstown; Walter Brown, Hubbard; and R. E. Frederick, Poland.

Wilford Thomas, of Columbia county, near Salem, furnished a yearling bull whose dam has a record of 4,200 lbs. of butterfat and 72,000 pounds of milk in eight lactation periods of one year each.

Four head were secured in Belmont county. Mr. Logan was to accompany the car to Texas, caring for the cattle enroute.

Hefner Items

Cool weather prevails and some local showers are falling.

Mr. W. A. Boggs and family have returned from a visit to Dallas, Texas.

Bro. Hulme filled the pulpit at the M. E. Church last Friday night and Saturday night, also last Sunday. Large congregations were present.

Mr. John Cure was visiting in the Gilliland community.

Bro. Hulme and Editor Kennedy of the Munday Times were present at the Hefner P. T. A. meeting last Friday. Both delivered splendid talks to the association, which were well received, although not many patrons were present. We are expecting larger numbers out next meeting.

Mr. Clyde Warren and family were shopping in Munday last Saturday.

Miss Mattie Atkins visited her sister, Mrs. Frank Cowser of Goree, last Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Bob Condron was shaking hands with old friends of Goree last Saturday.

Mrs. M. H. Stone has returned from San Antonio and Austin, Texas, where she attended the funerals of her father and brother.

John Bates was in Goree last week on business.

Miss Naomi Smith drove over to Goree last Sunday.

Prof. M. H. Stone and wife were visiting in the Hood community last Saturday.

The Hefner school is progressing nicely and the pupils and teachers are preparing the buildings and grounds for state inspection, so that our school can be classed as class "A" school.

Mr. Frank Hill and family attended services at M. E. church of Hefner last Sunday.

The wedding bells shall ring. For further information call on Bruce Colthorp and Chester Mobley of our community.

Mr. Roy Jones is making considerable improvements on his residence and garage this

Earl B. Sams Asks For Second Term As Tax Assessor

We are authorized to announce the candidacy of Earl B. Sams for re-election to the office of Texas Assessor of Knox county, subject to the action of the democratic primaries.

Mr. Sams has served in this capacity for a little more than a year, and is asking that the voters honor him with a second term, which has become an almost universal custom among the democracy of the south, and Mr. Sams promises that if he is again honored with the office he will continue to give the citizens of the county the very best service he possibly can render in his official capacity.

In the firm belief that he has served the county faithfully and efficiently, Mr. Sams respectfully asks that his candidacy for re-election be given due consideration at the polls, and assures each and every one that their vote and influence will be greatly appreciated by him.

DR. D. J. LOWERY IS IN CRITICAL CONDITION AT WEATHERFORD, TEXAS

The Times received a telegram on Wednesday morning from Gus Lowery at Weatherford advising us of the critical illness of Dr. D. J. Lowery, a former citizen of Munday, and who has a large host of friends here who will deeply regret to learn of his illness.

According to the telegram has undergone some four or five operation during the past few months, and on Sunday was stricken with paralysis, and in addition is having trouble with his lungs, and his condition is such that he has a very meagre chance for recovery.

Dr. Lowery is well known in Munday, having for some years practiced his profession here, that of veterinary surgeon, and we learn of his critical illness with great sorrow.

Gasless Motor Inventor

Lester J. Hendershot of Pittsburg who has just invented a "fuelless" motor, a free energy generator which is claimed to get its running power from the air.

"DUST OF THE EARTH" TO BE PRESENTED AT RED TOP FRIDAY NIGHT

A play, "The Dust of the Earth," will be presented at the Red Top School house Friday night, March 9th. The play is a mystery-drama, with plenty of good comedy. Everyone is urged to be present. Admission is 10 and 25c.

The Times office presented the appearance of a press meeting on Wednesday morning of this week when Frank Dyer, representing Barnhart Bros. & Spindler, type founders, of Dallas, L. F. Bookman, representing the Mergenthaler Linotype Company and W. H. Parker, representing the Olmsted-Kirk Paper Co. of Dallas all stormed this sanstium at about the same time, and in addition to these Editor E. L. Covey of the Goree Advocate was in at the same time, and despite the fact that it was press day we found time to "talk shop" with them and we're glad they came this week.

Mr. Sid Owens was motoring through Hefner community last Sunday.

Famous Aviator Missing

Photo Shows Harry Brooks, famous aviator who plunged into the breakers off Melbourne while on a flight from Tusville to Miami, Florida. The Atlantic Ocean gave up his wrecked plane but the body of the famous aviator has not been found.

W. D. Pedigo, field representative of the Salvation Army, was here the latter part of last week making his annual appeal for funds, and reported that he had received $148.30 of the county's quota of $300.00, with Goree still to canvas. Contributions made by the various towns of the county were as follows: Munday $81.50; Knox City $50.80; Benjamin $16.00.

Burned to Death

Mrs. G. W. Tillinghast and children left on Tuesday for Haskell, where they will make their home, and they carry with them the best wishes of a large host of friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilton Hogan of Rule were here during the week and visiting with relatives and friends.

Tom Anderson of Goree Enters Race For the Office of County Clerk

Mr. Tom Anderson of Goree was in the city on Saturday of last week handing out cards announcing his candidacy for the office of County Clerk of Knox county, subject to the action of the democratic primaries, and authorized this paper to make his announcement.

Mr. Anderson is one of the pioneer citizens of the county, having come here in 1886. At which time there were but a few residents in the county, and he has witnessed the development of the county from the time when there were no fences and the vast area composing the now famous Knox prairie was then inhabited only by prairie dogs, rattlesnakes and antelope.

While Mr. Anderson has always taken an active interest in the development of his community and the county as a whole, he has never before aspired for public office, but has served in almost every official capacity in his community, such as school trustee, alderman, mayor and justice of the peace, and county commissioner, and while his services in these offices gave him little or no remuneration, he gladly gave his time and attention to them in order that his community might make the progress that it has, and he feels that his candidacy should receive the favorable consideration of the voters of the county.

Oliver W. Lee Is In Race For Re-election To Office County Judge

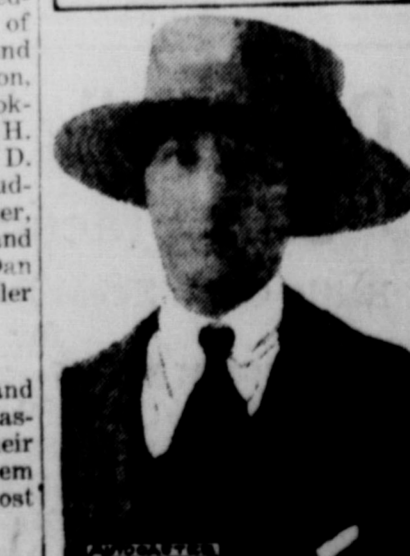

We are authorized to announce the candidacy of Oliver W. Lee for re-election to the office of County Judge of Knox county, subject to the action of the democratic primaries, and at a later date Mr. Lee will present his claims for this office in call.

On Monday evening the Times man accompanied Messrs. Garland Barns, George Spann and W. C. Newsum to Stamford to hear the address of Mr. Guy H. Hulse, national secretary of the Retail Merchants and Credit Men's Association, and it is regrettable that every business man in Munday did not go over to hear this address, for it was of such a nature that they could have been greatly benefited by hearing it. While in Stamford we had the pleasure of meeting with Editor Huston of the Stamford American, which is one of the outstanding weekly newspapers published in this section of West Texas.

One of the attractions at the club exhibit here Wednesday was a two year old steer which tipped the scale beam at 1750 pounds, and which had been fed only about 18 months. The big boy was shipped to Fort Worth and will be sold on the market there during the Fat Stock Show.

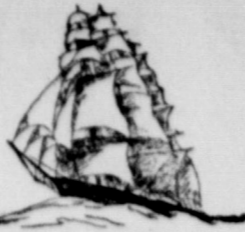

Dorse Rogers returned the latter part of last week from Dallas and Fort Worth, where he spent several days visiting friends, and while away he attended the convention of Rexall dealers at Fort Worth.

CHAPTER III
Enemies—and Friends

Some sixteen days later in Mrs. Crawford's cabin a conference was under way.

"But, my dear, my dear," Palmyra's mother was protesting, "how can you say everything's going right, when Palm spends most of her time listening to that, that miserable stowaway; that—human toad. Her father is beside himself with anxiety."

The man made a deprecatory sound.

"Events," said the hostess impressively, "have only too well shown that I, that we intervened just in time. Your daughter was on the verge of falling in love with John Thurston."

The father uttered a protest. "I don't see we've gained anything."

"But where are your eyes?" demanded the hostess. "As I said in California, Van, with his refined personality, fits into the yacht's cabin like 'The Young King Charles' into a gilded frame. Thurston, on the contrary, is a great, robust being. He looks well enough ashore, but here, in these little compartments, on this narrow deck, his hands and feet seem in the way."

She paused to smile at them reassuringly.

"Surely, with John at his worst, Van at his best—need we fear?"

Meanwhile, Constance Crawford was sailing at the Rainbow's bow, forward through the tropic night upon enchanted waters.

When John Thurston presently joined Constance, she looked up with a frown. "I was just thinking," she explained, "that Palm Tree doesn't at all realize what Burke may be getting in to his mind. I believe the little fraud's quite puffed up over the idea he's made something of a conquest."

Thurston answered rather absently. "Anyhow," he said, "Burke's over the side at Honolulu and gone forever."

She assented.

John was silent for some time. Then: "I'd like to go, too," he burst out. "I've been trying to tell you I've taken your advice; asked her to become my wife."

"Yes," she answered without moving. "I know."

"She told you?" he exclaimed.

"No. You did."

He was chagrined. "suppose I do look like that," he said.

"On the contrary. You've been splendid." She glanced up friendly. "But I still think it was the right thing to do. A week or two hence—absolutely no hope. Oh, why didn't you speak in California? She originally liked you best. I'm sure of it. Does still, if she only knew. Or," Constance added ruefully, "would if they'd let her alone."

He laughed with some bitterness. "Oh, I know what you mean."

He fell into a sudden petulance.

When Thurston spoke again it was apparently in an effort to get into a more cheerful vein.

"Seemingly," he said, "I have another well-wisher aboard."

With a pocket flashlight he made visible for her a small object of woven fibre: a dark cord wound round a packet perhaps two inches square.

"When I came on deck this morning," he explained, "Olive incarnated himself before me. Looked about furtively, jerked my coat-tails up, fastened this round my waist. Then he gave me a friendly grin and vanished."

"But," she puzzled, "what is it?"

"Inside there's a bit of fine mat, seven hairs and a tooth,"—a good luck charm.

"But, why?"

"How should I know?"

She was thoughtful. "At any rate," she said finally, "he seems to be wishing you good luck."

She examined the amulet again with an absent attention. Then, the smile fading from her lips: "John, promise me you will not leave the Rainbow at Honolulu."

The yacht was pushing on at her best pace, setting up such a lively stir at her prow as to achieve the small, private rainbow for which she had been named.

Burke and Palmyra were on deck—Burke was quizzically regarding the pensive Palmyra.

As though defining her very thoughts, he spoke.

"Excuse me, Miss," he said. "Those others—a slightly contemptuous gesture. 'They're tame. That's what—tame. But you? Why, you're different. You're wasn't intended for their little of birdage kind of life. Nature meant you for something lively-like, something up and doing."

"The girl laughed. "Nature," she said, "meant me for a pirate. It's in my blood," she affirmed. "First, a Norseman ravaging the coast of England, then a British admiral ravaging everything else. And lastly, old Captain Bonaparte, with John Paul Jones descended once more upon the coasts of England."

Palmyra grinned in admiration.

The girl turned to go; then paused, laughing back at him over her shoulder. "You, Ponape Burke," she said; "you and I—I'm afraid we were born too late."

At the rate the Rainbow was sailing, it was evident the yacht must soon make a landfall. Indeed, already eyes were peering through powerful glasses seeking for the first shadowy silhouette of the peaks of Oahu.

As the Rainbow raised the panorama of dead craters that stands, rather barren, above the verdant town of Honolulu, none upon her decks was so expectant as Palmyra Tree. For from the chaff of Ponape Burke's narration she had winnowed the clean grain of beauty and romance that is the life of this island world of the palm tree. Her imagination was a-glow.

Through the gateway of Honolulu she was to sail on into this world where Happiness is queen.

She was to sail across the trackless sea as those brown marines of old.

As the girl, thus deep in reverie, stood watching the distant peaks, she became aware of a presence at her side. Turning, she started upon encountering the brown man Olive.

He gave tongue to a few syllables, paused perplexed, then fell back upon pantomime. The hour of departure had come. Soon Burke and he would go over the side and, forever, into oblivion.

Palmyra smiled. She tried to overcome her aversion, to respond to his attempted farewell. As he had done, she moved to speak, found herself helpless, returned the smile.

The brown man, thus countenanced, laid the square finger upon her own breast. Having thus identified the girl as the being of the drama, he raised his hand, with extended arm, straight over his head. She thought he invoked the One above. But she gave this up when she saw that he wagged, fluttered the fingers.

When she shook her head, regretfully, he abandoned the up-raised hand as futile. He brought out a ring. Palmyra Tree had never seen such a ring; tortoise shell inlaid with silver. There were letters on it; seemingly one word, thrice repeated and separated by discs—the word "N-I."

Olive pointed to the letters, then to the girl and once more held aloft the hand with the moving fingers. But again she shook her head.

The brown man stood baffled. Then, grinning anew, he hurried away forward.

The savage, presently returning, thrust into the girl's hand a lithograph, an advertisement of Egyptian cigarettes.

He pointed to the silver letters of the ring and pronounced the word "Ni," then to her with a second "Ni," and to the picture with a third. He dropped the ring into her fingers.

At last the girl who was named Palmtree understood. For there in the advertisement was a palm tree. The upraised hand had symbolized the palm—herself. Olive but sought to give her a ring with her name upon it.

When the hour of leave-taking came, however, he seemed to have re-entered the silence, and the farewells devolved upon Ponape Burke.

As this little stowaway reached her in his round he achieved a simple eloquence of feeling. "You've been kind 't me, miss," he said. "I ain't a-going 't forget it. Nor you."

She shook hands with an unassumed friendliness. "I'm sure," she said, "we shall see you again."

Sharply he glanced at her, as if eager to know whether she really had such a hope. Then he shrugged, island-wise. "It's a large ocean lady. With you and me it's just lights passing in the dark; a hail, and then—nothing."

A minute later Palmyra's pirates were swinging over the side into their boat.

Burke raised his hat jauntily. But it was rather at the lingering the girl looked. Over the white man's shoulder he seemed to be watching her to the end with that strangely expressionless but intent stare.

Palmyra faced abruptly away and snatched the ring from her finger. "Yes," she whispered, "I, I'm certainly glad to have seen the last of him."

One short week ashore and the good ship Rainbow was at sea again. Bound she was now for the heart of Oceania, the Equatorial isles of Micronesia. As the yacht was to put John Thurston aboard a Philippine transport at Guam, only a little southing, said the hostess, would take them in among the Gilberts, the Marshalls, the Carolines, that Milky Way of atolls along the Line, of which Ponape Burke had talked so alluringly.

What Mrs. Crawford did not explain was that the real duty, as she saw it, lay in depriving Thurston's long legs of a chance, in this less cramped sitting of Honolulu, to snap back to perspective.

By rejecting both her lovers—Van shortly after John—Palmyra had gained a reprieve from that question as to whether she were in love with one man or just dandy good pals with two.

The peaks of Oahu sank back into the moana, the deep, deep ocean, whence they had risen. One day, two days, four, six upon a temperamental sea; a whole week of heavy skies and rain and storm seemed to have carried the girl no further.

A second week came and went; a week of summer sea and lustrous trades, and flying yacht. But still no answer.

The third week came and neared its end. Intermittent now the breeze, for they touched the equatorial zone of light and variable airs. A whole day through, perhaps, the Rainbow would scarcely move.

Slowly, unconsciously, Palmyra had been responding to the conditions created by the wily Mrs. Crawford. As the breeze with each knot of westing had been sinking more dangerously into the doldrums, the breath of her own feeling had stirred, risen fresh, fair, constant, until it reached the deep sweep of a maiden's first acknowledged love.

Gladly she was confessing it now, this belated recognition of love for the man of her parents' choice, Van Buren Rutger.

And she must have treated John Thurston abominably. With each moment that she gave herself more convincingly up to love, her pity for Thurston grew.

But when, on the twenty-second evening out from Honolulu—tomorrow they were to sight their first atoll—the hour came for the formal announcement of her betrothal, the girl was radiantly happy.

True, at the moment when Mrs. Crawford spoke, it was upon the face of John Thurston that Palmyra's eyes rested, and she could but wince at the flash of pain there revealed. But no girl in love can, on her betrothal night, long be unhappy over the face of a rejected suitor.

So it was, that night, as Palmyra lay asleep in her stateroom, her body gently moving with the lift and fall of the yacht in the mid-Pacific calm, there was a tender smile upon her lips.

And the tender smile was still lingering, in an alluring warmth and sweetness and beauty, when the Rainbow, caught all unaware by a sudden squall, came down with a crash upon the teeth of a reef—that should not have been there.

On a craft such as the Rainbow interest naturally centers about the navigation.

What better then for Mrs. Crawford in her amiable intrigue than to set up Van Buren Rutger as a gentleman navigator? How more pleasantly important than, handsome, graceful, jaunty in his white uniform he poised with sextant to take the sun or bent over the charts with Constance and the Wampolds and Palmyra?

In so featuring Van as a yachtsman—he was no more than a fairly competent amateur—the hostess had meant that Pedersen in the back-ground should unostentatiously check up on his work at every point.

But—

The sailing master was a man vain, self-important, jealous of his prerogatives, touchy as to his dignity.

Not understanding Mrs. Crawford's motive, he chose to regard the arrangement as an imputation upon his seamanship, his fitness—which he himself doubted—longer to command.

Van soon discovered then that this sick and sulky old man was only making an outward show; in reality having nothing whatever to do with the navigation, leaving the fate of the yacht absolutely in Van's own hands.

A certain inability to take a stand in anything unpleasant, difficult, to make up his mind and act in an emergency, kept Van at first from telling the hostess. Later he continued with an object. He knew she did not truly rely on him in this showy fraud of navigation; he suspected Palmyra was not deceived. Knowing his own weakness, he had the weak man's fear of seeing that knowledge reflected in the faces of others. Therefore, he would, without aid, sail the Rainbow to and through the Line island groups. And then, when at last he told the girl, she could not but admire his performance.

On the night of the wreck, Van—really heroic in persisting against a quaking unconfidence that kept him often awake—had stolen on deck in the mid-watch to reassure himself. His first glance told him the clouds were gathering for a squall.

Like most unadventurous persons, Van rebelled at being thought timid. Before rousing the watch he paused to make sure the clouds meant wind. As he studied the sky he gradually became aware of a dow sound as of an express train far away. Startled, he swept the sea; then laughed in self-contempt. More than once lately in dreams of wakening he had sprung up at that fancied sound of surf. The yacht should not have hand aboard until late the next day. To call out there was an island a-lee, if there were none, would be to make himself absurd.

Staring now up at the blackening sky, again off into the gloom of sea, he stood, balanced in suspense between his fear of storm and leeshore, and his dread of ridicule. For this first time Van held life and death in his hands—and could not decide what to do.

The sound of surf being at its minimum after two days' calm, the first breath of the squall was upon the yacht before Van was galvanized into action by discovering, broad on the port bow, a dim low-lying something against the sky—the silhouette of palms.

But even as the doomed Rainbow thus lay between hammer and anvil, she could have been extricated had not Captain Pedersen himself gone to pieces.

In the precious remaining moments a bewildered crew tried to execute incoherent orders, while the yacht was beaten down upon the waiting coral.

Following the crash upon the reef, Thurston picked himself up and scrambled to the deck just as the sea came rearing aboard. Saved by a spring into the rigging he waited a chance to reach Pedersen, whose condition he had sensed. Seizing the sailing master he whirled him round.

"You're drunk," he cried. "Or, or crazy."

After a game of forty-two several musical numbers were given and enjoyed.

Refreshments were served to Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Brazzell and Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Fitzgerald.

TRAMP SOCIAL

On last Monday evening members of the Boomerang Sunday School class met at the Baptist church dressed as tramps.

We then tramped to Baptist homes, where we knocked on the back door, and told them how hungry and penniless we were. The people responded to our needs wonderfully.

After collecting all the cats we could carry we tramped to the home of Lois and Ilene Bowden. Here we spread our lunch, which we enjoyed greatly. After which we were entertained with music by Henry Warren and Raymond Reeves.

Every one departed saying they had spent a most delightful evening, and for this we give the praise to our teacher, Mrs. Elbert Hughes.

MOORE-NORWOOD

On Wednesday, February 29th, Mr. Sammie Norwood and Miss Nannie Moore were united in marriage at Haskell, the pastor of the Methodist church in that city officiating. They were accompanied to Haskell by Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Rogers.

Following the ceremony the newlyweds departed for O'Donnell, Texas, where they will make their home.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen H. Moore of this city, while the groom is a most excellent young man and is engaged in farming in the O'Donnell country, and they carry with them the best wishes of a large host of friends as they go to build their home in the west.

W. M. S. NOTES

The W. M. S. met Monday afternoon in the Mission study. Mrs. Dick Ford, the leader, made the lesson very interesting, the subject being, Christian Missions and America's Racial Attitudes.

THRILLING CLIMAX IN "PEAKS OF DESTINY"

Ufa, the company in Germany which has given us on this side such pictures as "Variety," "Metropolis," "The Last Laugh" and "Passion," made "Peaks of Destiny" which will be at the Peoples Theatre for one day beginning Saturday.

Against a background of the beautiful Alps in their pristine glories of winter, a popular danseuse becomes engaged to a man in whose blood the glories of the mountains are installed. A youth, friend of the husband-to-be, becomes enamored of the same girl. The girl not realizing that her betrothed is jealous is quite friendly to the boy and he thinking that her friendliness is more, waxes ardent.

The older man in a fit of rage decides to take the boy to the highest peak and do away with him. When they reach the top they are caught in a tremendous storm. Instead of going through with the plan of pushing the boy off the cliff, the older man relents and saves the boy from quick destruction.

In the raging storm the two men are trying to hold their own on the face of a sheer cliff for many hours. In the meanwhile the girl who feels herself responsible, rushes out into the storm and gets help. In this search for the two men there are some of the best bits of photography that we have witnessed in years. "PEAKS OF DESTINY" SHOULD NOT BE MISSED.

On Friday evening of last week the Times man accompanied by W. C. Bevers went over to Vera, where we met with a number of farmers and business men of that community, and at which time County Agent W. O. Logan exhibited stereoscopic views of a number of fine Jersey cattle secured on his recent trip to Iowa, and Mr. Bevers presented some facts relative to the recently organized Central West Texas Marketing association. We found the citizens of that community greatly interested in poultry and dairying and it is safe to predict that their interest in these things will reflect in the way of much added prosperity in the years to come.

A GUARANTEE FOR HAPPY HOMES

How to Get Married to Live
Happy Thous.

By R. B.

Text: "And they called Rebecca and said unto her, wilt thou go with this man, and she said, I will go." Genesis 24:58.

So much of life's joy or sorrow is determined by a well advised or ill advised choice in courtship, that the question of unhappiness and final sorrow cannot be approached with a serious and sympathetic attitude, and bringing heartache and sadness to the parents as well.

First: There should always be manifested a friendly interest by parents in the love affairs of their young people. Nothing is more delightful to a parent than to see their child being courted by a worthy young man. The parent should be interested in the progress of the courtship, and should be ready to give advice when needed. The parent should be a blessing to the young people, and should be a help to them in their choice of a life partner.

Second: The necessity of a Christian woman for a husband is a fact that should be recognized. A woman who is not a Christian will find it difficult to live a happy life with a Christian man. The parents should be sure that their daughter is a Christian before she is married.

Third: Confidence in Divine Providence is a great factor in the happiness of wedded life. Modesty and virtue are the pearls of greatest price in the life of any woman. When her social and moral life is such that she loses modesty, she has lost that which makes her attractive. When she has lost virtue, she has lost that which makes her worth while.

Fourth: Qualities which Abraham's servant met in Rebecca are the qualities which a woman should have. She should be a woman of high character, and should be a woman who is willing to give up her own desires for the sake of her husband. She should be a woman who is willing to be a help to her husband, and who is willing to be a blessing to him.

Fifth: He loved her. No qualities, however good or noble can take the place of true love. The love of this ancient pair, Isaac and Rebecca, is still an essential guarantee to a happy married life today. We may have money to build a house of the finest material, and decorated with the finest of tapestries; but if there is no love there will be no happiness. Let us take time to think and time to pray before entering into such a high and sacred relation. That we may have the direction of Almighty God, that our lives may be ordered according to His plan, that the boys and girls coming from such homes may look out upon life with greater vision, and by so doing may be able to make for themselves a choice of such companions that will bring to the coming homes of America, happiness, peace and contentment.

The spirit of genial courtesy possessed her. A sweet, kind, generous spirit is a great factor in the happiness of wedded life. Modesty and virtue are the pearls of greatest price in the life of any woman. When her social and moral life is such that she loses modesty, she has lost that which makes her attractive. When she has lost virtue, she has lost that which makes her worth while.

Third: She was graced with filial devotion. She loved her home and parents. So did Isaac. She was a devoted daughter, and he a devoted son. It is noticeable that such daughters make good wives, and such sons who are afterward devoted and affectionate husbands. One of the noticeable things in the life of President Harding, was that for years as long as his mother lived, every Sunday he sent her a bouquet of flowers.

If we are to have real happiness in marriage relations we are to seek for the qualities in the lives of those to be companions, that will produce congeniality, and conserve the highest principles and ideals of home making. No man or woman need expect to be happy in the marriage relation, when their ideals of life are opposite one to the other. It is God's ordained plan that we should marry and replenish the earth. The foundation of all material life is the home, but this home must be a place of happiness. Young ladies, young gentlemen, beware of the street loafer and gagger, that never see anything to do at home. Who call their father and mother, the old man and old woman.

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1927-28 by Wynne Ferguson
Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"
Copyright 1927, by Herb J.

ARTICLE No. 12

In the preceding article it was pointed out that in many hands where partner, as dealer, has bid a suit and second hand has passed or made an uninformative double, it is extremely important to jump partner's bid at once to shut out, if possible, a bid by fourth hand. Here are two more hands, similar to those given in the preceding article, in which the jump bid was a big winner.

Hand No. 1
Hearts—5, 6
Clubs—9, 2
Diamonds—10, 7, 3
Spades—K, J, 10, 9, 7, 5

Y : A B Z
A : B : Z :

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one spade and A passed. Y should now bid three spades in the hope of shutting out a possible game bid by B. In this particular hand, A-B had an easy game in clubs but Y's three spade bid prevented B from showing his suit. Y failed to make their contract by one trick but Y's jump bid had saved the game.

Hand No. 2
Hearts—K, 10, 7, 3, 2
Clubs—K, 9, 8, 5, 4
Diamonds—Q, 9, 5
Spades—none

Y : A B Z
A : B : Z :

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one heart and A passed. Y hasn't a spade in his hand so should realize that there is a strong possibility B has a big spade hand. It is his duty, therefore, to prevent B from bidding spades, if possible, and the only way he can do so is to bid four hearts. B had the following hand:

Hearts—6
Clubs—Q, 10, 7, 3
Diamonds—A, K, 8, 6
Spades—A, K, 9, 7

This is a very strong hand but when Y bid four hearts, B didn't feel strong enough to bid four spades. He could make an uninformative double for the double of a bid of four hearts regarded as a business double and he didn't think he could defeat the four heart bid.

Answer to Problem No. 14
Hearts—none
Clubs—4, 3
Diamonds—3, 2
Spades—9, 4, 3, 2

Hearts—K
Clubs—Q, J, 8, 6
Diamonds—Q, J, 5
Spades—none

Hearts—Q, 10, 7, 5
Clubs—10, 9
Diamonds—10, 8
Spades—none

A Y B :
Z

Hearts—A, J, 9, 6
Clubs—K, 3
Diamonds—A, 4

should now lead the suit which B discarded in this case, the clubs. Z was the trick with the king. Z should now play the ace of hearts. A should discard a club. Y should discard a diamond and B follows suit. Z should now lead the king of hearts. A can safely discard the jack of clubs and B should trump with the ace of spades. B following suit, Z should now lead the four of spades. B should discard the jack of hearts or Z a jack of hearts will be good, so he is limited to discard the eight of diamonds. Z should discard the jack of hearts. A is now in a difficult position. He has left the queen of clubs and the queen jack of diamonds and must discard one of those cards. If he discards the club, Y's remaining club is good and Z's ace of diamonds. If A discards the jack of diamonds, Y will lead the ten of diamonds and Z's ace and four of diamonds are good. In either event, therefore, Y must win all the tricks against one discard. It is a very tricky little problem and illustrates perfectly how to face discards from your opponents to their disadvantage.

Democratic Candidates?

The four presidential possibilities for the Democratic nomination. Governor Al Reed of Missouri, Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland.

Any of the Four Outstanding Candidate Would Flood Pres. Mansion With Color
By Robert Fuller

If any one of the four outstanding Democratic candidates for the highest office in the land is elected, the country will be assured of a colorful President.

Governor Al Smith of New York, Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, or Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland—take your choice, any of them will fill the bill for personality.

Governor Smith seems to hold the whip hand just now, but the backers of the other three point out that many things can happen before the Houston convention in June. Governor Smith's wet leanings and the fact that he is a Catholic may militate against him when the time comes to choose a candidate, at least the Republicans believe so.

Meanwhile, friends of Governor Smith are hoping that the always plain-spoken Senator Reed will say something out in Missouri or on one of his speaking tours that will get him read out of the party as he was once before. Just now though Senator Reed stands strong with the party leaders in his home state and some of the others. Senator Reed is likewise not a believer in national prohibition.

While Senator Walsh is a Catholic, he is dry. Senator Walsh has been in the public eye recently through his activities as leader of some important Congressional investigations. His request for a probe into the doings of the "power trust" was turned down a few days ago.

Governor Ritchie is another candidate with pronounced wet views, who will get the votes of a number of delegates at the Houston convention, according to present indications.

But any of the four will furnish color, plenty of it.

NINETEENTH DIVISION TO HOLD REUNION AT SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS

San Antonio, Texas, March 5.—Members of the famous Nineteenth Division, made up of Texas and Oklahoma men, will hold a reunion at San Antonio during the national convention of the American Legion here October 8 to 12.

Preliminary arrangements for holding the reunion were made here recently by Arthur J. Reinhart, street commissioner. This one feature alone in order to maintain its standard of quality in the low priced field.

The other quailed under the steady light in Thurston's eye. "I'll take charge," Thurston announced.

The pumps showed that the wreck was taking water badly. Such boats, as could be launched were got ready.

The men obeyed unquestioningly. They liked, respected Thurston. He knew little of ships but they recognized in his voice the quality of command.

During the hours which followed it might well have seemed to Palmyra that the wreck had been arranged for the sole purpose of bringing out the difference between John Thurston and Van Buren Rutger.

Where Van was sunk in self-accusing misery, Thurston's spirits were buoyant. The man was serene, methodical, busy. And he had action at last; intense, vital. In fighting to save the woman he loved he could forget, for the moment, that he had lost her forever.

Where Van was soon sodden with fatigue, John seemed fresher with every hour.

It had been decided to leave the women in the cabin where they had been penned, rather than risk the ugly surf that broke about the after companionway.

But Van, in his self-accusing frenzy, was conscious only that he had placed his betrothed in the hands of death, that he must save her.

He rushed toward the cabin companionway. Before anyone noticed, he had thrown it open in the face of another sea. A second later he was swept down its steps by the flooding water. Catching up Palmyra he struggled back and out again on the deck. Only then, at a warning cry, did he seem consciously to receive what he was that delivered these blows. Stopping short, he looked back. A crest reared above the wreck, gathering itself like some animal bent for the spring. Van, horror-stricken, started one way, another; stood frozen in his tracks.

"In an instant the sea would have been upon him. From that strength of John Thurston, the girl noted none. On the night of her betrothal she would scarcely have been like, under any circumstances, to draw comparisons. And here darkness and groping confusion and the noise of waters conspired with Thurston himself to hide the truth.

Palmyra's love weathered the storm, unquestioning, serene.

"A Good Place To Trade"

WHAT IS AN INVAR STRUT PISTON

Detroit, Mich., March 5.—Nearly 10,000 automobile showrooms throughout the country have echoed the question, "What is an Invar strut piston?" The new type introduced in the Bigger and Better Chevrolet on January 1, O. E. Hunt, chief engineer of the Chevrolet Motor Company, attempted here today to answer this question for the thousands of people who have seen the new car and asked about this outstanding feature.

Invar, according to Mr. Hunt, is a contraction of the word invariable. It is the name coined to describe the metal used in making the piston "strut," which is cast as an integral part of the piston just above the pin hole and has its ends firmly embedded in the metal forming the piston face.

"Invar," Mr. Hunt explained, is less responsive to heat or cold than any other metal known. It is a special nickel steel alloy of extreme toughness and rigidity, and is practically the same as that used by the United States Bureau of Standards to construct its gauges, and in the manufacture of precision instruments.

"A light alloy piston expands when heated, which means that unless this expansion is properly controlled, excessive clearance must be allowed between the piston and cylinder walls to prevent sticking and scoring, resulting in piston 'slaps' and oil 'pumping.' This control is effected in the Chevrolet piston by use of the strut, which permits a clearance of only .0025 inches between the piston and the cylinder wall as compared to .004 and .005 in clearance with a piston that has no controlled expansion.

"A practical demonstration of the controlling properties of invar strut pistons was held recently. All the water was drained from the radiator of a test car, a blanket was thrown over the hood, and the engine was run at high speed for an extended period without a single piston scoring or seizing the walls of the cylinder block.

"Invar strut pistons have been used for a long time on some of America's costliest cars. They have been thoroughly tested and proven entirely satisfactory.

"Inclusive of them on the 1928 Chevrolet involves a considerable outlay. They cost three times as much as the ordinary piston. The Chevrolet Motor Company will spend $3,500,000 additional this year on
