A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

Woman sues hypnotist

LONDON — A woman who said a stage hypnotist turned her into a "zombie" and drove her to attempt suicide won her lawsuit Friday.

Lynn Howarth told London's High Court that her problems began when she was hypnotized by Philip Green at a social club in northwestern England in 1994.

"I went to that stage show as a normal, happy, healthy, energetic woman and came out a zombie," she told the court.

Howarth, 40, said an age-regression skit in Green's act reawakened memories of sexual abuse by an uncle when she was eight. She said she later suffered from panic attacks and depression and twice attempted suicide.

Judge Brian Leveson agreed that Green's suggestion caused Howarth "to regress to an age when she was sexually abused and, as a result, suffer depressive illness."

Green agreed to pay $9,000 US in damages.

Convict breaks into prison

SAN JOSE, CA — For Arnold Ancheta, it was out of the oven and into the frying pan.

Ancheta, an inmate at Elmwood Correctional Facility, broke out of a medium-security dorm only to hop the wrong fence and end up next door at the women's jail.

Last week, Ancheta apparently stood atop a bunk bed and punched holes in the wall to use as steps toward a skylight. He then used a bed sheet and a mop handle to pry apart two bars that blocked the roof opening. He squeezed through the bars and broke out the plexiglass-covered skylight.

He jumped down about 20 feet from the roof. However, instead of heading toward the fence that leads to a public road, he jumped a smaller fence and ended up on the women's side of the facility, according to a Corrections spokesman.

Graduate Processional

Muleshoe Class of 2001 Valedictorian Megan Tipps leads the procession of students as graduation ceremonies begin. She is followed closely by Salutatorian Brandon Broyles. Eighty-four MHS seniors crossed the stage Friday at the Bailey County Coliseum.

Class of 2001 leaves its mark on Muleshoe

84 graduates cross stage in Friday ceremonies

Muleshoe High School's Class of 2001 achieved so much success during its run, it was really no surprise that graduation would come off without a hitch.

The weather even cooperated.

With family, friends and well wishers enjoying unusually comfortable temperatures at the Bailey County Coliseum, the 84 members of the Class of 2001 crossed the stage Friday, bringing to an end one of the most successful years in MHS history.

"We've enjoyed an exceptional year, both academically and in extracurricular activities, due in large part to the leadership of this senior class," said MISD Superintendent Gene Sheets, in opening remarks.

Sophomore English instructor Kimberly Beard, who came to MHS for her first year of teaching when the Class of 2001 were sophomores, echoed Sheets' statement.

"Without a doubt, the achievements of this class on behalf of Muleshoe High School have been monumental," said Beard, who was chosen by the seniors to make the graduation address.

Beard pointed to the senior's combination of talent and the ability to stick together as the basis for their achievements.

"When I met you, it was my first year to teach," she said. "By the end of the year, I had learned more from you than you did from me."

Salutatorian Brandon Broyles agreed that unity and camaraderie among class members of the was the key to their successes, but took time to thank teachers, coaches, parents and the community in general.

"Sometimes we forget... we can never repay all you have done for us," said

Tour de Muleshoe to feature stage races, time trials

The sixth annual Tour de Muleshoe Bike Ride is slated for Saturday, June 16, 2001.

Riders who pre-register now will be eligible for a drawing for two Southwest Airline vouchers good for anywhere the Southwest flies. The drawing will be held immediately after the ride.

Pre-registration must be received by June 11 to be eligible for the drawing.

Muleshoe Mayor Victor Leal has challenged all broadcasters, mayors, governors and presidents to a good, clean, fun ride. The Tour begins at 9 a.m. from the Bailey County Coliseum, and riders may register on ride day, beginning at 7 a.m.

Thanks for service

Jesse Leal congratulates Barbara Finney for her service to Muleshoe Schools during a retirement reception May 24. Finney was a 3rd-grade teacher for 14 years, then served six years as principal at Dillman Elementary and 10 years as principal at DeShazo. She plans to remain involved with Muleshoe Schools and education during her retirement.

Armyworms being found in area corn

Significant numbers of beet armyworms are being found in some corn in the Farwell-Muleshoe area, according to a report from the Parmer-Bailey office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Beet armyworms will feed on corn, but are more common in sorghum and cotton. Because little is known about beet armyworm damage to corn, the damage potential is difficult to estimate, said Cherinell Riley, extension agent-IPM. At present, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service expect corn less than eight (8) inches tall to be at risk. Corn less than six (6) inches tall is at higher risk. Damage will include leaf feeding and window-paning, similar to fall armyworm. It is possible that smaller plants may undergo "deadheart," which occurs when the growing point is killed. The risk of deadheart is unknown.

It is not impossible to formulate firm treatment thresholds. If beet armyworm damage is similar to that from fall armyworms, infestation of 50% or more will be tolerable in taller plants. Smaller plants are at greater risk, however, so the treatment threshold is probably lower. Transgenic (B-) corn is not very toxic to beet armyworm, so field planted in these hybrids are also at risk.

If treatment is required,

Cotton season predicted to be "buggy"

By DR. JAMES F. LESER
Extension Entomologist
Texas A&M University

Predicting insect problems is an art, with a little science mixed in. The trouble is, whether insects become a problem in a given season is dependent upon many things, with weather one of the dominant factors.

And we all know how difficult it is to predict weather accurately in this part of the world. With that said, let's get down to the business of "crystalballing" future cotton pest problems. The predicted problem with thrips has materialized with clouds of thrips moving out of maturing wheat and other host plants into emerging stands of seedling cotton. Pressure from adult thrips has been so great that even Temik-treated cotton has some feeding damage. Remember that thrips must feed on treated plants to get a lethal

Combest says remember needs of veterans

Opinion By REP. LARRY COMBEST
(R) - Texas

Memorial Day is a time when we reflect upon the sacrifices our veterans have made to defend our country's freedom. Our veterans deserve the utmost respect and recognition. It is important to ensure that they receive just compensation for their dedicated service. As a Member of Congress, I am proud to support legislation that makes certain our American veterans are honored not only on Memorial Day, but every day of the year.

This year, the U.S. House of Representatives passed a budget plan for fiscal year 2002 that set aside $52.2 billion— up from $5.6 billion in 2001— that will address the urgent needs of our veterans. These funds will improve medical and mental health care, long-term care, rising pharmacy costs and emergency care. Adstep ground application is preferred. If treatments are applied by air, a minimum of five gallons of water per acre should be applied, and more is better.

The beet armyworm larvae are light green to dark green in color with four pairs of abdominal prolegs and a dark head. There are many fine, white, wavy lines along the back and a broader stripe along each side. There is usually a distinctive dark spot on each side just above the second pair of true legs. Eggs are laid in masses and some plants can have many small larvae on them. These will spread out as they get older.

Application deadline near for deficiency payments

The signup deadline for 2000 crop year loan deficiency payments (LDPs) on farms without a production flexibility contract (PFC) is approaching for many crops, says Bailey County Farm Service Agency executive director Kim Hanlin.

Loan deficiency payments to operators of non-contract farms were authorized in an amendment to the Federal Agriculture Improvement and Reform Act of 1996. The amendment applies to farms that were not initially signed up for a production flexibility contract in 1996 and covers contract commodities only (wheat, corn, barley, rye, oats, sorghum and cotton). The amendment applies only to the 2000 crop year.

Producers are eligible for a beneficial interest exemption on contract commodities produced on farms without production flexibility contract if the commodity was harvested and marketed by November 29, 2000.

Contact the Bailey County Farm Service Agency office at 111 E Ave D in Muleshoe for more payment eligibility information. The office can be reached at 272-4538.

Valedictorian Megan Tipps told her classmates she had learned much in her 12 years in school, saying "Life is how you look it. Eagles may soar, but gophers never get sucked into jet engines."

Tipps said the members of the Class of 2001 should be the best they can be at what they can be and to take all they have learned and use it to improve the world around them.

Retiring speech and drama instructor and coach Kerry Moore was also honored during the event. Principal Dave Jenkins announced that the MHS auditorium had been renamed "Kerry Moore Auditorium" after action by the MISD Board of Trustees.

During the presentation, Jenkins estimated that in Moore's 41 years at MHS, he had taught approximately 5,000 students in his classes and influenced "thousands more".

As a matter of perspective, Jenkins told the crowd that when Moore began his teaching career, the principal was a sophomore in high school.

"When you look at us, it looks like it should be the other way around," joked Jenkins.

Moore coached 27 UIL state champions in his tenure at MHS, which began in 1960.

Muleshoe counselor Gayla Gear announced the graduates, stating honors and scholarships earned by each. Due to the success of the Muleshoe Opportunity Scholarship Trust fund, every MHS graduate received at least $250 in scholarship funds to further their education. The community donated $24,000 to the fund this year, with $10,000 being reserved for an endowment fund for future graduates.

towards addressing this inequity by giving a monthly allowance to military retirees with severe service-connected disabilities at 70 percent or higher. While this is a step in the right direction, we must enact H.R. 303 to fully correct this injustice.

I have also cosponsored H.R. 179, the "Keep Our Promise to America's Military Retirees Act," which restores full health care coverage to retired members of the uniformed services. The bill fulfills the pledge of health care promised to and earned by all military retirees by allowing participation in the federal retirement program.

Our nation has not been involved in a major war in several years. However, we currently have American troops deployed all over the world, in various types of missions. We must not forget about the men and women who are dedicated to protecting our nation. At this time, it is especially important that we show our servicemen and women respect by providing them with the tools and compensation to complete their mission.

As citizens of this great nation, we owe our veterans more than we can ever repay. At the very least, we have a sacred duty to honor their service, sacrifice, and unabashed patriotism by supporting them in their time of need. Congress has shown overwhelmingly bipartisan support for veterans issues. Fortunately, our President and Vice President also have a deep understanding and a genuine appreciation for the connection between veterans programs and the ability to improve our national defense.

This Memorial Day, as we honor our veterans, I hope we will recognize the selfless acts of courage they endured so that all Americans can be free. It is my honor and privilege to do all that I can to fully provide for our American heroes.

Those at-planting seed treatments or in-furrow systemic insecticides are still working as long as you don't have any reproduction as evidenced by very small wingless thrips. Once immatures show up, it is time to spray if average thrips numbers equal or exceed the number of true leaves present per plant.

Producers who opted to save money this year by foregoing their routine Temik applications are probably having second thoughts. I would expect that many of these farmers will need to treat at least twice to pull their cotton through the thrips vulnerability period. Address, Orthene, Bidrin and dimethoate are all good choices when spraying for thrips. I've heard of producers in the Southeast using pyrethroids for thrips control. While these may work for some species, they are relatively ineffective against our dominant species, western flower thrips. Also, I would not recommend using pyrethroids this early in the season. Our resistance management strategies have us hold off their use until August.

The beet armyworm scare is on! With several kinds of looper, armyworm, cutworm and army cutworm moths flying about, cotton producers are very nervous about a repeat of the 2000 season when heavy yield losses and astronomical spray bills were the rule. We've had the rains to green up the landscape and produce abundant host plants for beet armyworms. And now we have confirmed reports that beet armyworms are infesting some fields of corn.

The Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation trapping program has collected large numbers of beet armyworm moths in west Texas. In fact, moth trap catches are up 177% in west Texas traps compared to last year but down 42% in Foundation traps run in the South Texas/Winter Garden area. This area did not have problems with beet armyworms like we did last year. With high infestation levels late last year, it is to be expected that we would overwinter a large population of beet armyworms in the area.

My only hope is that these early beet armyworm numbers do not translate into later headaches for cotton farmers. We've already had reports of one or two cotton fields sprayed in the Gaines County area. Producers need to be on the lookout for this pest. We do have very effective materials available to control beet armyworms in the form of Tracer, Steward and Intrepid labeled this year for beet armyworm control and also have Denim cleared for use through a Section 18. But these are not cheap insecticides and with the depressed economic climate surrounding cotton, producers can ill afford to wage battle again with this pest.

This could also be another plant bug and fleahopper year. Remember 1999, when the combined onslaught of fleahoppers and western tarnished plant bugs caused considerable fruit loss, especially from Lubbock north to the Hereford area? Well we may be looking at another year just like that one. With abundant winter and spring rains, these pests have found alternate weed hosts to be very abundant and are building numbers at alarming rates in these weeds according to recent surveys.

Don't let these pests sneak in and steal your early squares before you know it. Scout fields beginning at the 5th true leaf stage. Several effective insecticides exist for fleahopper control and include Address and Orthene, Bidrin, dimethoate, Provado, Steward, Lannate, and Vydate.

Plant bugs also are also controlled by these same insecticides but often at higher rates. Our best materials in 2000 tests were Orthene and Bidrin. Pyrethroids also fit the bill for later plant bug problems, especially where large numbers continuously migrate out of adjacent host plants.

While 2001 needs to be a inexpensive year for cotton producers, potential insect problems could spoil this scenario.

To My Son Upon His Graduation

As I write this, son, I'm very much aware that tonight I'll be the school board member standing up on the stage handing you your high school diploma. I'm also aware that you'd far rather be triple-teamed by an offensive line in Texas Stadium and even bleed a little (just 25 or so stitches worth) than get openly gushy in front of a thousand people at graduation. I understand, but I'll warn you ahead of time: I'm probably going to hug you, so you might as well prepare to be embarrassed. It's only fair, you know. I might have been just a tad embarrassed myself if I'd dissolved into a weeping heap up on the stage last Sunday evening at the baccalaureate service. I was about to sing myself, but the words and the music of the song you and the choir sang, and, clearly discernable to me at least, the voices of two of my sons in the choir, mingled with my emotions. And it was even harder because—you'll probably think this is really weird—as I had earlier looked out into the audience from my seat on the stage, I had seen a younger boy, just visible from the nose up, whose straight blonde hair and blue eyes combined to make him look, well, an awful lot like you did not that long ago. Almost uncannily like you still do and always will in my mind, no matter how big you become. But there you were, bigger than life (we long ago got over thinking you might be the little guy in the family!) wearing a black cap and gown, and just a heartbeat or two away from graduation. Sitting there, I could look, it seemed, both at the boy you'd been and the man you are so quickly becoming.

Have I told you that I like what you're becoming?

I love to see you unafraid to face even the biggest opponent on an offensive line, but I'm also thrilled to see you unafraid to be gentle and to laugh with the littlest "gigglingest" child at church or to put your big arm around the smallest elderly sister in Christ.

I know the way you set up on the line in a game, and where you place your hands, and how you rock just a bit before you erupt into action, and just how you run, spin, engage, and tackle. I've never played a single down of football, but I've experienced Joy (and what I'm trying to describe, well, it completely deserves the capital J, and you know it when you feel it). It's the deep Joy that comes from doing what God has uniquely gifted you to do, and what you've had the commitment to work hard to hone (still by His power) so you can present the gift back to Him, and then trusting Him and absolutely forgetting yourself as you play, sing, write, fly, run, act, dive, perform, teach—it could be any of a thousand things, and sometimes it's just living, just breathing—for Him, by His power, thanking Him with every breath for the gift He's given and feeling the wellspring of Joy wash over you when by using the gift for His glory, you give it back, and God gives it again.

Jeffrey, my son, you are one of God's very best gifts to me, and watching you and loving you, has always brought me Joy.

Curtis Shelburne is minister of the 16th & D Church of Christ in Muleshoe.

Mandatory livestock price reporting procedures reviewed

WASHINGTON — A hearing was held by the Agriculture Committee this week to review the implementation of mandatory livestock price reporting and to examine recent problems associated with misreported data.

"Our goal should be the return of credibility for the Agriculture Marketing Service's (AMS) reporting function and the assurance of an orderly livestock market benefitting producers, packers, retailers, and consumers," said Chairman Larry Combest (R-TX).

Since the implementation of mandatory price reporting April 3, many AMS reports have had data missing as a result of the so-called 3/60 rule. The rule is designed to ensure proprietary data is not released to the public.

Livestock markets were recently shocked by revelations that AMS reporting errors, allegedly caused by a computer program error, had understated prices of boxed beef since the beginning of April. Ken Clayton, acting administrator of the AMS, testified that in response to the reporting errors, Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman ordered a "top to bottom review" of the mandatory price reporting system.

An independent review team, led by USDA Chief Economist Keith Collins, was appointed to carry out the review. The charge of the review team is to examine the mandatory reporting system process and procedures, review the performance of the system to date, assess the consequences of the misreporting of the boxed beef cutout values, and recommend to the Secretary actions that can be taken to enhance the integrity of the system as well as ensure accurate reporting in the future.

HERITAGE FOUNDATION

The Muleshoe Heritage Foundation board met at the old Muleshoe House, with president Wells Hall presiding.

Minutes were read and approved, and a financial report was given by treasurer Kristy Price. Vivian White gave an update on the Heritage Thrift shop, which pays the day-to-day expenses of the Heritage Center.

Plans for the Tour de Muleshoe bike ride were the main order of business. The Tour de Muleshoe Bike Ride will be held June 16 beginning at 9 a.m. at the Bailey County Coliseum. This ride is sponsored by the Muleshoe Heritage Foundation, with a number of merchant sponsors: Leal's, 1st Bank, Muleshoe State Bank, United Supermarket, Five Area Telephone Cooperative and Bamert Seed Company.

Kristy Price is in charge of collecting merchant prizes to be drawn for after the race. Dan Throckmorton reported on rest stops he will be coordinating. The stops will be manned by the Jennyslippers, the Hawkins and Angeley families, Student - Community Action Club students and a church youth group.

White volunteered to contact Jack Henderson and group to ask them to again play at the Civic Center during the spaghetti dinner and door prizes drawing.

Members voted to buy a large number of unique Muleshoe post cards to pass out to those who visit the Heritage Center. Members decided to have an old tractor in the annual July 4 parade. A tractor donated earlier and now being repaired will be used if possible. If not, a 1953 John Deere model 60 was offered by Charles Flowers.

The condition of the Heritage grounds was discussed, and Keith Hawkins volunteered to fertilize the grass if needed. Hawkins volunteered to check on a flag which flew over the capitol to be used for the building.

Jean Allison offered Bill Moore as a possible board member to fill a recent vacancy. The Board voted unanimously to ask the former Muleshoe ISD superintendent to fill the position. Plaques for outdoor donations being made by Moore and Jim Allison, were shown. Members were pleased.

The next meeting of the Heritage board will be June 11, and all members were urged to be present, as final plans for the Tour de Muleshoe will be made. Board members present were Dan Throckmorton, Hall, Hawkins, White, Flowers, Jean Allison, Ladene Spears, Lonnie Adrian, Kristy Price and Heritage Hostess Peggie Bruton.
