Mundayites Will Go To Throckmorton Railroad Celebration

Munday will be represented at the railroad celebration at Throckmorton on May 4th 150 strong according to plans being made by the Munday Chamber of Commerce.

At a meeting of the directors on last Thursday evening it was decided that a large delegation should attend this celebration and a committee composed of John Ed Jones, Tom Haney and J. C. Campbell was appointed to lay plans for the trip and secure a representative attendance, and look after details as to the organization of the trip.

Plans are now under way by the committee whereby they hope to have each member of the Munday delegation dress in such manner as to carry out the Spanish motif. Large broad-brimmed hats of Spanish design will be available at a minimum cost and with very small expense each individual making the trip can procure the other essentials for carrying out this motif, and it is sincerely hoped that a large delegation will comply with the request of this committee in order that Munday may make a creditable showing at this gathering.

Everyone who can and will make this trip is requested to communicate with some member of this committee or with the secretary, J. A. Kennedy, and they will be given full details as to the plans for making the trip.

NELSON-TYREE

Mr. Clyde Tyree of Clarendon and Miss Emma Nelson of this city were quietly married at the Baptist pastor's home on Wednesday morning at eleven o'clock, the Rev. P. D. O'Brien officiating with the simple ceremony.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Nelson, pioneer and highly respected citizens of Munday. She was reared in Munday and numbers her friends by her acquaintances, and they all join this paper in wishing for them a long and happy married life.

Self-Playing Violin Installed By Buritto Cafe Is World Wonder

Howell Burton has just installed a music-making machine in his cafe that is a thing of beauty and a joy forever, and it is too near human to be described by mere words. The machine is a complete five-piece orchestra, with violin, drums, piano and other instruments. The violin is a real violin which is played mechanically in plain view, and so complicated is the mechanism of the machine that it has been declared one of the eight wonders of the world that has been perfected during the past decade, and is well worth a visit of inspection. Mr. Burton has purchased the machine at a cost of more than two thousand dollars, and the marvelous thing about it is that it can be played for only a nickel. Folks, it's some machine.

Mrs. Joe Davis, Mrs. C. M. Hendrix and daughter, Miss Delphine, and Mildred Moore were visitors to Wichita Falls on Thursday of last week.

J. W. DAVY GOES TO TERRELL AS DEALER FOR HUDSON-ESSEX

J. W. Davy will leave the latter part of this week for Terrell, Texas, where he will become dealer for Kaufman county for the Hudson-Essex line of automobiles. Wilson has been associated with the Bauman Motor Company of this city for the past few years and has established an enviable record as salesman for this popular line of automobiles, and we are sure that he will make a success of the new venture, for he has the "pep" and energy to put the job over in good style. Mrs. Davy and the children will join him later to make their home in Terrell.

R. L. Brooks, Wanted In Haskell County Is Arrested at Greenville

R. L. Brooks, under indictment in Haskell county for an attempt to rape, has been arrested at Greenville and brought to Haskell, where he was placed in jail to await trial.

The crime for which Brooks is indicted is alleged to have been committed last fall while he was picking cotton in the Grasshopper community near Munday, and the victim of his attack was a little ten-year-old girl. Brooks succeeded in making his escape at the time and Marshal C. R. Elliott, who worked on the case at the time, has worked without ceasing in his attempt to locate the man and it was through his efforts that he was located at Greenville the latter part of last week and Haskell county officers went to Greenville and brought him to Haskell.

Chamber of Commerce Starts off Year With Enthusiastic Meeting

That the Munday Chamber of Commerce is to have a most successful year was evident by the interest shown by the directors at their first meeting on Thursday evening of last week in the directors rooms of the First National Bank. Most of the officers and directors were present at this meeting and it was evident that they had a desire to make the year's work the most successful in the history of the organization.

The matter of renewing membership with the West Texas Chamber of Commerce was brought before the body and it was decided that the membership in this great organization be carried by the local body and the secretary was instructed to issue a check for $100 for the renewal of the membership.

The matter of again attending the Vera Chautauqua in a body was discussed, and it was the unanimous opinion of those present that we again attend in a body on one evening and a committee was appointed to make plans for this trip, composed of Dr. E. J. Burns, Carl Mahan and F. A. Coxsey.

Many Go To Wichita Falls On Educational Trip on Wednesday

On Wednesday of last week a large delegation of Munday and Knox county people went to Wichita Falls, where they spent the day seeing the several places of interest there. Members of the Home Demonstration clubs of Knox, Baylor, Haskell and Wilbarger counties gathered there on that day, accompanied by the home demonstration agent of the various counties.

According to the program outlined for the day they gathered at the chamber of commerce offices at Wichita Falls in the morning, and the first place to be visited, and the one that was of major interest to the ladies, was the Kraft Cheese factory, where they were shown through and the process of cheese making was explained from the time the milk was unloaded until the finished product was crated and ready for shipment.

In the afternoon they were conducted to the glass factory, where they witnessed the wonderful process of glass manufacture. Also many of the party went to the M. Johnson poultry farm, where they were shown the many sights by Mr. Johnson and his efficient assistants, and we believe that those who made the trip came home feeling that the day had been well spent.

Those who attended from Munday were Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Hobert, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Reneau, Mrs. Webb, Mrs. Elmer Dickerson, Mrs. Dee Cluff, Mrs. C. M. Matlock, Mrs. Lansford, Mrs. Frank Bowley, Mrs. G. W. Redwine, Mrs. J. A. Kennedy, Mrs. A. E. Whittemore, Mr. Ed Whittemore, Mrs. J. R. Burdison and Mrs. Alice Whittemore.

Others from Knox county who made the trip were Mrs. Shannon and Mrs. Jack Nix of Gillespie; Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Lowery, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Banks and Mrs. Ethel Ryder of Gilliland; Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mr. and Mrs. D. Peoples Theatre and Rexall Store to Have New Homes Erected

Work will begin about May 1 on tearing down the two-story concrete building, the ground floor of which is occupied by the Rexall Store and the Peoples Theatre, to make room for a new building that will be erected to house these two concerns.

The new buildings will be of the very latest designs and will be modern in every respect. Mr. Williams of the Peoples Theatre states that the new theatre building will have a much larger seating capacity than the present building and will represent the latest ideas in theatre construction and will be a house of amusement of which the citizenship of this community may feel proud.

While the buildings are under construction the Rexall Store will occupy the new building recently completed by A. J. Bunts, while Mr. Williams is planning to have at least two shows each week during the time he is out at some place to be designated later.

SMITH-ACKER

F. L. Caldwell Takes Over Management Munday Produce Co.

A change in the management of the Munday Produce Company has been made this week. F. L. Caldwell, who has been manager for the company here for the past two years, has been transferred to Abilene, and F. L. Caldwell, for the past eight years manager of the company's house at Haskell, has taken over the management of the local house.

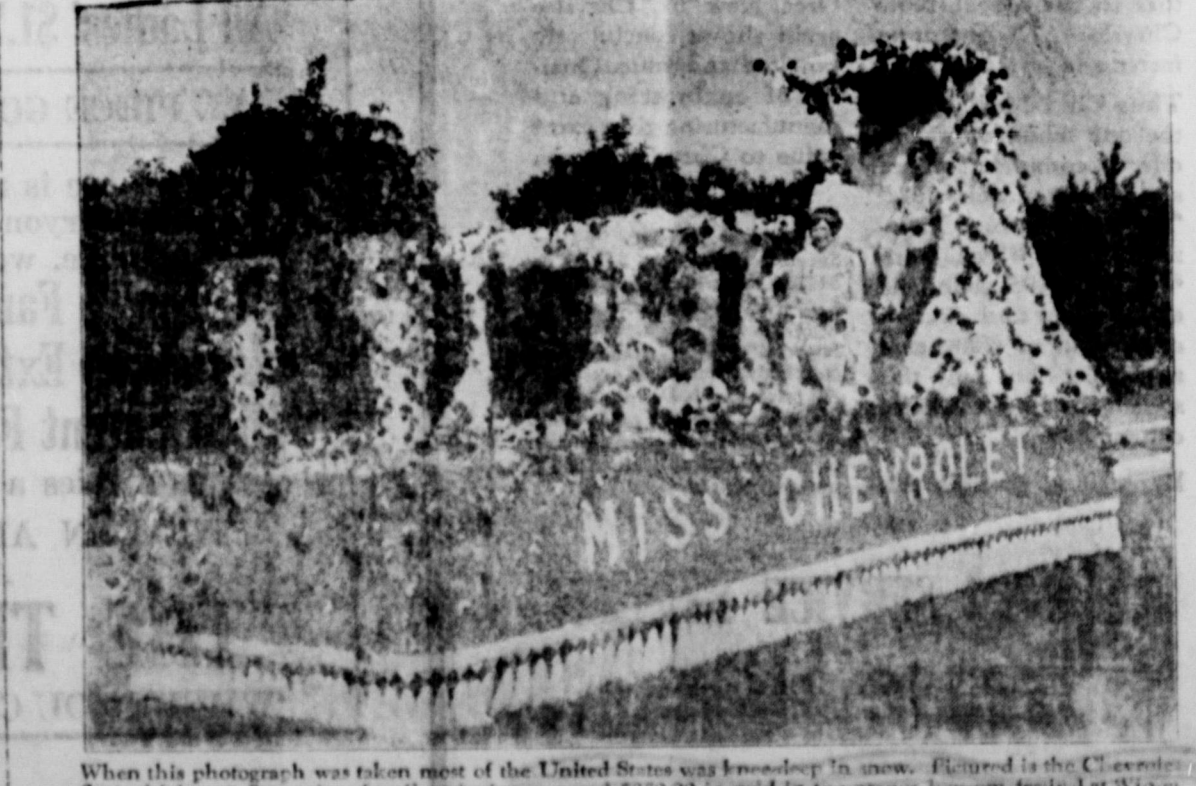

Mr. West has been identified with the produce business in this community for many years, having for a number of years been identified with the company as manager of the house at Goree, and has been manager here for the past two years, and his many friends in this community will regret to know that he is leaving.

Mr. Caldwell will move his family here from Haskell at a later date, but in the meantime he has taken over the duties as manager and is on the job ready to buy produce of all kinds, and we are glad to welcome him to Munday.

Mrs. Grace Greever, daughter of Judge and Mrs. O. W. Lee, who has been critically ill for some weeks, is reported to be very low and her death is expected at any time.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY EVERY THURSDAY

THIRTY YEARS AGO

Thirty years ago this month events were moving rapidly toward that short but spirited struggle known to history as the Spanish-American War, which freed Cuba and the Philippines from Spanish rule.

On April 11, 1898, President McKinley sent a message to Congress saying that "in the name of humanity, in the name of civilization, in behalf of endangered American interests, the war in Cuba must stop." On April 19 Congress by a joint resolution declared that the people of Cuba "are, and of right ought to be, free and independent," demanded that Spain withdraw from the island, and authorized the President to use the land and naval forces of the United States to accomplish that result.

On April 21 this ultimatum was presented to Spain, diplomatic relations were severed, and the American fleet was ordered to blockade Havana. On the 25th Congress formally declared that a state of war had existed since April 21.

Regiments of the Regular Army and National Guard were mobilized at Tampa, Mobile and in other camps in the South, to later constitute the expeditionary force against Santiago de Cuba. Dewey's fleet was ordered from Hong Kong to destroy the Spanish fleet in Manila Bay. Admiral Cervera's Spanish fleet sailed from Cape Verde Islands for the West Indies about the same time, later to meet its doom at Santiago.

April was a month of decision and preparation and closed with the stage set for action. On May 1 Commodore Dewey's victory at Manila electrified the nation. On July 1 the assault on Santiago by Shafter's Army began; on July 3 Cervera's fleet was destroyed while trying to escape from Santiago harbor; on July 17 Santiago surrendered.

These are the high points in the brief but dramatic struggle which was ended by the protocol of August 13, followed by the treaty of Paris, whereby Spain acknowledged Cuba's freedom, ceded Porto Rico to the United States and received twenty million dollars for the Philippines.

It was not a great war, but it had far-reaching consequences for many millions of people; consequences which were altogether in the interest of humanity and civilization.

MUSSOLINI'S RULE

In rescuing Italy from the chaotic condition in which it found itself immediately after the World War, Premier Mussolini performed a distinguished patriotic service. But by his increasing arrogance he may yet undo the good which resulted from his earlier efforts.

Lately he has not only ruled Italy with an iron hand, but he has shown a disposition to exert his tremendous energy in directions which seem to threaten international complications. Bitter complaints have been made concerning Italy's treatment of German residents of South Tyrol, brought under Italian jurisdiction as the result of the war.

It is charged that these people have been required to take Italian names, and are forbidden to use their native tongue, sing their native songs or inscribe the German names of their dead on tombstones. A protest from Austria, of which these people were former citizens, was violently denounced by Mussolini.

This is only one of a series of incidents which have caused apprehension for the peace of southern Europe, where an outbreak might easily lead to a new European war.

While Mussolini has exercised absolute control over all Italian domestic and foreign policies since his rise of power in 1922, there are grave doubts that he can maintain either national or international peace if he persists in his domineering attitude.

AN APPEAL TO VANITY

Recently a score or more of Washington's social aspirant's were induced to pay $100 each in order to be included in a "blue book" to contain the names of the capital's elite. For $200 additional the photograph of the subscriber was also to be inserted in the magic volume.

The promoter of this scheme for glorifying the socially ambitious was 65-year-old Joseph Rheinstrom, who lived in style at a leading hotel and called on his prospective customers in a luxurious limousine after making appointments by telephone.

Police investigated his activities, found that he had no connection with any social register, and put him in jail, charged with fraud. His dupes are naturally much embarrassed and are trying to keep their part in the affair quiet.

This is another illustration of the ease with which swindlers trap their victims through appeals to that vanity described by Browning as "an itch for the praise of fools."

EXPERIENCE

By Douglas Malloch

White-haired, stooped-shouldered, bent with age,
 A man who knows by heart the page

That other men must turn to-day,
 Surely the world must love the sage,

Respect the words that old men say.
 But old men learn one lesson more,

After the heart has learned the rest,
 That youth cares little for the lore,

The knowledge, by old men possessed,
 For youth would rather life explore

Than ask the old which way is best.
 For life is not an enterprise

That men can master in a school;
 Man finds the truth because he tires,

And in exceptions finds the rule.
 Perhaps the wisest of the wise

Are those who first have played the fool.
 Although our words are often spurned,

Although the world will listen not,
 A lesson that is quickly learned

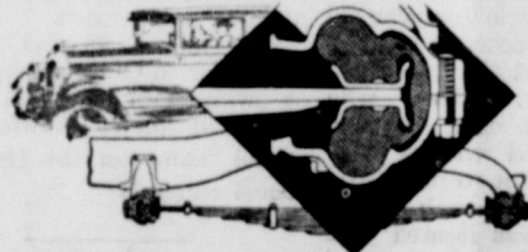

Is just as easily forgot.
 Only the man that fire has burned

Believes that fire is really hot.

About Your Health

Things You Should Know

John Joseph Gaines, M. D.
Your Physician.

Pardon my reminding you of your best friend. Yes, I am writing "about your health," as well as your best aids in maintaining it, your good doctor ranking first.

There is something distinctive that is the family physician's only; the surgeon and the specialist may be expert in their lines of practice; they do things for which the family physician is not even prepared, and should not attempt. But, I would never select either for my family physician. Their fields are too narrow—too limited. I would summon either, only on the advice of my family doctor.

Your physician should be a broad, well-read, general practitioner. If that, he is far better posted in the management of your varied complaints, than the surgeon or the specialist. He has a far more extensive knowledge of the remedies needed for you than either. He will be a more capable diagnostician in systematic disease; and, he will know when you need a surgeon or specialist, better than any one else.

Your family physician is indeed an indispensable man in the community. He looks after sanitation, and other community measures calculated to prevent disease—to lessen his chances for making a living. He is alert in medical investigation and research, knowing that he is working himself out of a job! Show me the faddist, the cultist or the "path" that is even attempting to be a humanitarian like that!

Finally, the family doctor is, to a large extent, what his community makes him; the idle, stupid, non-progressive neighborhood will attract just that sort of a physician. Prompt payment of bills often grows you a more willing and efficient health guardian.

WASHKOWSKY'S OLD SHOE

We call the attention of the American Bankers Association to the case of Mr. Washkowsky of Brooklyn. Mr. Washkowsky is said to be a man of thirty, but like so many of us his education is defective; who is to blame for that we don't know. Mr. Washkowsky has been saving a part of his weekly wages for a long time, but hadn't told Mrs. Washkowsky where he was depositing his nest egg. That was a mistake, apparently, but as he is a man of education, it is probable the bankers association cannot be held to have any concern.

But with Mr. Washkowsky's depositary it has. He chose for that purpose an old shoe. He kept the shoe and its mate in his closet, and up to the other day had tucked away in one of them savings amounting to $350. On that same other day Mrs. Washkowsky, rummaging Mr. Washkowsky's closet like a good housewife, seeking what she could throw away or transfer to another place where Mr. Washkowsky couldn't find it, as is the habit of good housewives, found this same pair of old shoes. We suppose she said to herself, Mr. Washkowsky not being present to have it said to him, "Isn't that just like a man!" and acting thereupon just like a woman she sent the shoes to the cobbler to be repaired. It was either that or the ash barrel for them, and being frugal and Mr. Washkowsky paying the cobbler bills anyway, she sent them to the cobbler.

A distraught man was Mr. Washkowsky when he next went to make a deposit to his old shoe. "What new place," he asked in that martyr tone affected by husbands on similar occasions, "have you found for my old shoes?" Mrs. Washkowsky told him, expecting to be praised for her thoughtfulness. Women—but that's another branch of education.

Mr. Washkowsky went to the cobbler and found his shoes, but not the money, which we cannot but find is not remarkable. We hope he will find it, but he hasn't yet, which again should cause no astonishment.

But what we would like to hear from the American Bankers Association is what steps it is taking to discourage people of magpie habits from keeping their money in stoves, shoes, mantle clocks, behind wall pictures, under floor boards and similar places. We have made no exact calculation, but from casual evidence we are inclined to believe there are enough funds hidden away in such places in this enlightened and progressive country to pay off the national debt. Not that we advise paying it off, because that would leave congress nothing to fuss with Mr. Mellon about; but if deposited in banks our banker might have some to lend when we need it, which he now never has; he says money is very scarce. We hold it is not; it is merely in Mr. Washkowsky's shoe.

Seeing that we have been pursuing education, or something called that, for several centuries, we cannot but feel this is a bad showing and that the bankers association is somehow responsible. It hasn't sufficiently impressed on the people that it has banks and what they are for. Mr. Washkowsky hasn't heard. And there are a lot of him in this country.—Kansas City Star.

CONTROL OF POWER SOURCES. FRANK B. WILLIS. WAR AGAINST RATS. AMERICAN FLYING.

Canada's Government encourages use of electric power, particularly on farms and in small communities. Water power is developed fully to generate the current, and all are assisted in its installation. Farmers are taught to grind feed with it, pump water and do their other work. And, by the way, United States farmers are urgently invited by the Canadian government to settle in Canada.

Our attention here is concentrated on a different problem. We want to make sure that the right people get possession of our power sources, the right people being those that control power and peddle it to the people. As to farmers and others that buy and use power, our Government has not found time to think about them.

Prophecy is usually dangerous, particularly dangerous for farmers when government prophecies go wrong. The Government forecast on potatoes last Fall predicted a crop greater than the real one. Many farmers sold in a hurry at low prices, some were not marketed, many fed to stock. Then the shortage was seen, price went up, a few wise people made the money, NOT the farmers.

The sudden death of Senator Willis, in his battle for Ohio's Presidential delegates, ended tragically one phase of the 1928 campaign. Senator Willis would have preferred to die fighting. Those that know Secretary Hoover know that Senator Willis' death will cause him sincere grief.

A powerful man, never sparing himself, Senator Willis forgot that there are limits to the heart's endurance. A tired heart often succumbs in the most powerful man, wearied by constant strain.

The dead man's widow attributed the Senator's attack to the fumes of smoky fires that he had been inhaling constantly, in the course of a political parade.

A weak heart, fighting against poisoned air, is in danger.

The League of Nations proposes international war against rats, their complete extermination.

Such a war, made to include mosquitoes and flies, would be the best war in history. It would save every year in lives and money as much as the big war cost in any year.

No more rats, no more bubonic plague.
No more mosquitoes, no more yellow fever or malaria.
No more tse-tse flies, no more sleeping sickness.
No more house flies, no more fifth draged over food of young children.

It would be interfering with Nature's plans, perhaps. Darwin says a pair of tropical flies and their maggot offspring can dispose of a lion's carcass in a few hours. Kill all the lions and the flies would not be needed to dispose of the carrion.

George Haldeman and Eddie Stinson, Americans, broke the world's endurance record in the air, flying without stopping fifty-three and one-half hours.

The French Government offers a million francs to any French flier that will win back some flying records formerly held by French fliers.

A little encouragement from our Government would make it impossible for any nation to compete with American flying.

The first flying machine was made here. Lindbergh was born here. This ought to be the flying nation.

This comes from Italy: "Major de Bernardi has established a new world's air record, 3184 miles an hour."

Will solemn naval gentlemen that call flying machines "only an auxiliary" be good enough to tell what chance slow-moving ships on the surface would have against a flock of airplanes with that speed?

On the great mountain called Nashan, in Manchuria, far up where air is pure and clear, Japan, as a monument to the new Emperor, will build the greatest astronomical observatory in Asia.

That observatory, with a sixty-inch reflector and thirty-inch refracting telescope, will be a much nobler monument than any rearing horse of bronze.

Announcement

OF THE "ICYBALL"—THE MECHANICAL ICE MAN
Freezes Ice Cubes, sherbets, salads and keeps Refrigerator cold at Cost of 2 Cents Per Day. Low In Cost!

Last Week we asked that you watch this space for the most important announcement of recent years, and now we believe many will agree with us that the product herein announced is the most sensational development of a decade.

It is something entirely new. An old principle, heretofore employed only in physics laboratories has been applied, developed and perfected by The Crosley Corporation and is known as the Icyball.

The Icyball, entirely new in the realm of household refrigeration is as simple as your tea kettle, utilizing your cook stove to keep a food compartment cold. Sounds impossible but nevertheless is true.

Where ice in an ice box keeps the food compartment at a temperature of about sixty degrees, which results in food decay, the Icyball maintains a lower temperature and preserves the food sweet, pure and wholesome for days where artificial ice keeps it so only for a few hours.

The Icyball not only keeps the food compartment cold, but dry and crisp as well.

The cost of operating the Icyball is practically nothing. It must be heated once a day. This may be done on the cook stove at a cost of about two cents and one heating will keep your ice box cold for twenty-four hours. Ice cream or ice cubes may also be frozen in the Icyball.

No danger—no noise—no odor—fool proof—simple to operate—low cost—efficient. The Icyball is the solution of the refrigeration problem in the home.

We will have an Icyball on display in our store on Saturday and thereafter, and we want you to come in and inspect it. See how simple it is, learn how cheap it is, and how easily operated and we know you'll agree with us that the Icyball is the sensation of the day.

We are exclusive dealers for this territory, and we'll be glad to show you the Icyball.

The Rev. R. B. Freeman, who has been absent for the past two weeks, will return home in time to fill his appointment at the Methodist church Sunday at both the morning and evening hours.

The Rev. J. H. Hamblin, presiding elder of the Stamford district, filled the pulpit at the Methodist church on last Sunday, and delivered forceful sermons to large and appreciative audiences.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Chapman had as their guests the latter part of last week his father, H. L. Chapman, and his brother, C. L. Chapman, of Winters and his sister, Mrs. Ben Guin, of Ballinger. During their visit here they made a trip to Wichita Falls to visit the Johnson poultry farm to gather information on poultry raising, as Mr. H. L. Chapman is contemplating starting a poultry farm at Winters.

Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Bengtson enjoyed a hunting and fishing expedition to one of the game preserves, where he was a guest of the state game warden. While we have no definite proof, we have a suspicion that Tom took a few golf lessons while away also, for he came home with a very bad arm and has been unable to demonstrate the merit of his tutoring, but we're looking for a sensation when he is able to play again.

The Rev. P. D. O'Brien was the chief speaker at the Lions club on a recent visit to Baird, where he was called to conduct the funeral of a former member.

Junior and Senior Classes Thorp S. S. Enjoy Picnic

In a contest between the Junior and Senior classes of the Thorp Sunday school, the Seniors were winners and became guests of the Juniors at a picnic in Grandma Partridge's pasture Monday evening.

After an exciting (?) call game played between the classes which resulted in a tie, a sumptuous picnic lunch was spread, after which games were enjoyed until a late hour. The Juniors may have fallen behind in learning the Golden Texts and may have misplaced some of their books but they deserve a lot of credit for knowing how to entertain.

Health
Things You Should Know

by John Joseph Gaines, M. D.

"HEART DISEASE"
When a man or woman dies suddenly, and without visible cause, the newspapers announce that deceased was "a victim of heart disease." In the majority of cases the cause of death was nothing of the kind, but—it sets the public mind at rest. It is so easy to lay the blame on this most noble, much-abused organ. Still the fact confronts us stubbornly that, among our several vital organs, the heart is easily first. We should therefore render the heart due respect, and take the best possible care of it.

Perhaps overloading is one of the most serious offenses against a normal heart—and it is accomplished by over-feeding. Roughly speaking, the heart lifts eighteen pounds of blood seventy-two times per minute—or 1,296 pounds per hour—and for a single day, multiply by 24, it runs into tons per month! This supposes you weigh 150 pounds; if you are heavier—think of it! The thing is almost bewildering. I may be in error, but horse sense tells me I am thinking along right lines.

The unnecessary food that we are continually shovelling into the stomach, and which is later thrown into the circulation by the absorbents, and more than half of it undigested—is the heart to blame if we die of weakened and over-laden arteries? The heart is often blamed for failure, when the six o'clock dinner is the "bugger in the woodpile." The mince-pie, sausage, and heavily-seasoned dressing, not to say the half raw!

Probably shortness of breath and faintness are first symptoms that lead one to suspect a burdened heart. Pain over the heart is more often due to neuritis of intercostal nerves. Palpitation is a warning signal—heed it! You would fight if you were treated as we insult the heart. Kidneys are responsible for many deaths attributed to the heart—then, bacteria from a diseased throat. Keep on good terms with

CHAPTER X

He divided her maening. He advanced back reassuringly. A moment later he was once more crunched, holding to the lava floor.

For an interval the bubbles came flying up. Then the man followed. He placed the shell in the canoe, lifted himself aboard, scarcely listed the frail craft from an even keel.

The girl, still dizzy with shock, sat and stared at the coconaut bottle that had brought tragedy so near Olive. Amused, present picked it up and offered it. When she did not respond, he raised the shell above his mouth, tilted it until the contents spurted out—and drank.

Palmyra laughed hysterically. He had filled the thing at the bottom of the ocean a hundred feet from land. Yet now he drank.

She took the sphere when he offered it again and tasted experimentally: sweet, fresh water; clear, cool as from a spring.

The girl drank deeply. Then, holding the shell upon her knees, she sat for a long time, looking covertly at this brown being.

He had all but given life itself that she might have the water she craved.

And he would have given life itself had she taken his knife and not granted her own.

He would be—dead?

The brown man pointed to the sand in the canoe—an island. Then he extended his arm; the island was located; there ahead and somewhere, unseen, to starboard. Then he flattened out his palm horizontally, laid his cheek upon it, and closed his eyes and began to snore.

Soon would this nightmare of wood and sea be ended. Soon would she be liberated from this rack of torture. She could throw herself down in never-waking slumber.

Her hand stole toward the opening of her dress and her fingers closed, caressingly, over the handle of the knife hidden there. For Olive had given it back.

The topmasts of the Pigeon of Noah appeared. Olive snatched down sail and mast. He slashed them flat. With a glance he assured himself everything aboard was secure. Then, paddle in hand, he kept the craft to the hollow of the

As on, on came the topmasts, the topsails, raising against the sky. The girl gasped in terror. On came the sails, on and on, nearer and nearer, taller and more definite—more greatly to be dreaded.

And then, in this awful moment without word of warning, Olive sprang oberboard. Palmyra uttered a wail. After all he had breaved, to forsake her now? To seek his own safety in flight? No! It was unthinkable!

And scarcely the unworthy thought, then the brown man's hand shot up, seized the outrigger, gave one twist. The next second Palmyra was floundering in the water, the canoe capsized.

With a stroke the savage reached out and caught her by the hair. As a kitten held in its mother's teeth, she ceased to struggle. With another stroke he recaptured the canoe, bottom up. He put his foot on the outrigger, tilted the hull so the imprisoned air escaped. With one arm he bore down upon the canoe, their combined weight, to sink it and control its motion. The other arm held the girl, submerged, so that she choked all fought for breath.

On, on the Lupe-a-Noa indeed had come, nearer and nearer—but not too near. Careening under its spread of sail it had been unbelievable close and then, all unknowing, had flown away. Ponape Burke, with his binoculars, had glared straight over them in his scrutiny of the more distant sea.

He placed the girl's hands on the now buoyant canoe, returned its gear, lifted himself up and in. He had stopped for the more difficult feat of hauling Palmyra aboard when, startingly, he let go his hold with a guttural cry.

or reef-table, which outstretched inland to the beach. The barrier was armored in brown knobs of living coral, with their hooded faces like a giant nutmeg greater against which the sea could grind the canoes into splinters.

And now, as the girl looked, Olive dug his paddle, put all his weight upon it. The craft veered and took a new course—straight for the reef. Palmyra sat stunned. She had hoped against hope that she was wrong, that he still saw a way. But here was surrender. Ever for such a one there could be no further shift.

Scarcely had the canoe chang-

With a stroke the savage reached out and caught her by the hair.

She turned frightened eyes over her shoulder, then screamed. For there, cutting the surface, a little jet of spray rising from its edge, was another sail—the dreadful lateen of a shrak!

The man-eater was almost upon her. Frantic, she turned her eyes to Olive. There he stood, for the first time at fault. His hand, with lightning instinct, had flown to the sheath of his belt, found it empty. The girl saw that, in throwing his knife away, she had made her own death certain.

But, instantly now, the savage rallied. Only for a second did paralyzing discovery unnerve him. The shrak had all but seized its victim. A moment and action would be too late. But in that flash of time the man leaped, landed with his feet upon the shrak's back. The impact threw the monster into brief panic.

She tore at her dress; thrust out the knife. He snatched it, dived.

Just as the man-eater made to seize its prey, Olive dropped below the surface. The heavy fish had no chance to stop. As it swept over his head the savage thrust upward with the knife in a lunge that reached the heart.

Olive did not waste time over the adventure of the shrak. He had killed sharks before.

Throwing the canoe into its course, he sailed on for the island.

For an interval they went on, before it became evident that Ponape Burke had made them out.

Presently the schooner was so close Palmyra could make out Ponape Burke on its deck, covering them with his glasses.

The reef wall was now so immediately at hand she could see that this rim, by reason of the coral broken off and packed down by the trample of the surf, was higher than the surface of the reef behind, the surface he must still think to escape.

Now, as her navigator began to calculate the seas, to hold the canoe back at times, Palmyra saw there was a slight recession shoreward in the line of the reef. It swung in at this point just sufficiently to create a lee. The surf did not burst upon it with the direct drive of the wind and, protected through most of the year from the sweep of the trades, not so much broken coral had been packed down here and the rim was lower.

In a flash she perceived that he must have had this place in mind from the first; that, the tide in their favor, it might be possible, in sufficiently skilled hands, to hurdle the reef.

There was just one phase in the rhythm of the surf when he could succeed. He must catch the moment when the wave had crashed down upon the coral teeth; when the violence of the impact had abated, but not one second of the precious after-trough had been lost. For, if that had not carried him for enough, he would be caught by the recoil to follow, when lows, and they were safe from the ocean. But not as yet from Ponape Burke.

As the brown man carried Palmyra, her face, over his shoulder, was turned toward the Lupe-a-Noa. The girl saw that the schooner, beaten at last, had gone about and was working back out of danger. She saw that the white man had clambered part way up the rigging. And then she gave a warning cry as, from the shrouds, there flashed out a sort of flame.

Instantly, Olive understanding, threw himself flat into the three-foot water. A bullet cutting along the surface almost where they had stood.

Olive, leaping up, sprang with the girl behind another boulder in time to escape a second bullet.

Several shots Ponape Burke fired in his jealous rage, though now he had no target. Then, the Pigeon of Noah gaining way, drew off, and the pursuit, in this phase at any rate, was ended.

DAIRY CATTLE SHOULD CONVERT CHEAP FEED CROP INTO MONEY; FINISHED BEEF CATTLE WILL PAY

Agri. Editor Dallas News
The uncertainty of last fall's cotton prices, the serious declines which resulted in congressional investigation, have had a wholesome effect on Texas farmers who are turning more and more to feeding dairy and beef cattle.

While it may be true that that many farmers have become "cotton-minded" during all the years that cotton farming was encouraged over large areas almost to the exclusion of every other type of farming, there is now a general tendency toward crop diversification, dairy farming and feeding beef cattle.

The best reason for dairy farming is that the dairy cow provides a market for cheap feed which can be grown abundantly on most Texas soils and that there is a steady money return.

In discussing dairy farming with John T. Orr, president of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Association, who for many years was one of the most progressive dairy farmers in Texas, some new light was thrown on the dairy farming problem.

"The farm dairy," said Mr. Orr, "first should be looked upon as a means of supplying a market for such feed crops which Texas farms can grow cheaply and abundantly on the different soil types."

"Many farmers make a mistake by expecting a dairy herd to bring a profit on feeds purchased from the retail dealer, to which cost of production already has been added besides the profits of the wholesaler, broker and retailer to a total of probably 40 per cent. It should be borne in mind that this kind of dairy farming, if it pays at all, pays mostly the feed dealers. It is imperative that all the rough feed, as nearly as possible, be raised on the farm—hay, silage, straw for bedding, permanent pasture, temporary pasture (oats, barley, Sudan grass, wheat) and soiling crops. If this were done most farms would show a profit from milking dairy cows of the right type."

Mr. Orr finds that the cost of distribution for the man who keeps a few cows is prohibitive in most instances. The simplest marketing plan, he says, is one which provides the es to the system of beef cattle management. On the Western ranges steers are run for three or four years, only being fed cotton seed meal or cake in times of emergency when grass is scarce. Just why these steers should have to be shipped to Missouri, Iowa or Kansas to be finished for markets can not be explained satisfactorily, except that the system started back in the days when range was cheap and land was apparently limitless.

The time has come when there is a great opportunity for Texans to finish their own beefs on homegrown grain and cottonseed meal and cake raised in Texas and shipped to market finished animals.

West Texas has the grain sorghums, which have been shown in numerous feeding tests by both State and Federal experiment stations to be as nutritious and profitable as Iowa or Kansas corn.

Texas is losing a bet if farmers continue to ship out grass steers and import corn from the North and alfalfa from the irrigated sections of the West.

Keep the money at home by finishing beef cattle on the farm feedlots and by growing all the roughage possible to make dairying pay!

Every farmer should have a few acres of Sudan grass, clover or sorghum, from which there will be a steady income, rain or shine, Sundays, holidays during most of the year. Mr. Orr does not believe if this program were carried out 100 per cent in Texas it would result in overproduction of milk. If more cows were concentrated on Texas farms where farmers are willing to raise their feed, it would only mean a reapportioning of the number of cows now being milked by many farmers, few of which can make a profit from two or three cows.

In other words it takes at least a small dairy herd (five or ten cows) to make dairy farming pay. However, that does not mean that every farm should not have one or two cows to supply the needed milk, cream and butter for proper feeding of the children and adults.

Mr. Orr states that a dairy and a dairy farm are two different things. A dairy is operated altogether by hired labor and the feed, corn, oats, barley, alfalfa, which are fed have been raised perhaps in Iowa, Illinois, Kansas or Nebraska instead of on Texas dairy farms by members of the family. Under this system much money leaves Texas which should remain at home.

What is said of the present dairying in Texas almost applipleasant service for all concerned.

When the Pans "Stick"

Never scrape a scorched pan. Just sprinkle baking soda over the spots and set aside for a while. The food will soon loosen up and the pan may be easily cleaned.

For Sparkling Windows

A few drops of vinegar added to the water when washing windows gives a fine brilliance to the glass.

Pictures Invade the Kitchen!

Since kitchen and cooking equipment have become so colorful, pictures have come into the kitchen, too. Cheery scenes they are—a sunny road winding over country hills; a glimpse of an old-fashioned garden; a holiday at the beach, perhaps. They help—wonderfully—during working hours.

Does Your Oven Scorch Cakes?

If bread, cakes and biscuits have a habit of scorching in your oven, set a small pan of salt under the tins and note the improved baking.

Hints for the Home

Two serving secrets that are time-savers for the home-maker may be summed up in these few words:

Prepare foods beforehand whenever possible, so all the fussy work is done during the "clean-up" part of the day. Then when ready to serve, one need only lift the dishes out of the oven or refrigerator and place them on the table.

Escalloped and casserole recipes, meat, loaf, custards and tapioca desserts lend themselves well to this scheme. Another short-cut is offered by the compartment plate. Meat, potatoes, a green vegetable and a salad can be artistically arranged on the plate. Then when dessert is in order there is but one dish to remove from each place. This adds tremendously to the efficiency of a meal, and makes easy,

Be Sure Before You Buy

Hardly a week passes that some house-to-house salesman does not appear in Munday. Sometimes he travels in a group, working the town street by street and house by house.

He sells hosiery, blankets, groceries, home remedies, and household conveniences. Usually he knocks the home merchant and tells the lady of the house that she is being robbed by the local retailers.

By such tactics he frequently convinces his prospective customer that he can offer a much higher quality at a much lower price than the Munday merchant.

But can he?

We venture to say that there is not a merchant in Munday who would not be glad to compare merchandise and prices with the transcendent bell-ringer.

If he tells the truth, the salesman at your door will have to admit that house-to-house canvassing is the most expensive form of distribution, and that high pressure methods in salesmanship must be employed to obtain profitable volume.

Is it better to be "high pressured" into buying an article from a stranger, or is it safer to buy from your local merchant, whose reliability is recognized?

We leave the answer to you.

REV. P. D. O'BRIEN TO FILL PULPIT AT BOTH HOURS SUNDAY, APRIL 22ND

The pastor has been in a ten day revival with the Rochester church, which closed on last Monday night, and expects to meet his Bible class, and fill the pulpit at both hours next Sunday. As much as we enjoy revival work, and appreciate the opportunity to labor in a new community, the best part of it all is getting back home and working with the people whom we love best and appreciate most.

The Rochester meeting was very successful, and we were never more royally entertained in any community.

P. D. O'BRIEN.

Mrs. W. A. Baker underwent a serious operation last week at Floydada, and for a time her condition was very critical, but we are pleased to report that reports from there during the past few days are to the effect that her condition is greatly improved.

Mrs. A. J. Glasgow has returned from a visit to Stamford, Rising Star and Cisco. At Stamford she visited her daughter, Mrs. Edgar Lattrell, and at Rising Star she visited another daughter, Mrs. E. F. Sparks, while at Cisco she visited a niece, Mrs. Frank Wilson. She was accompanied on her trip by her daughter, Mrs. Dan H. Smith of Portales, N. M., who spent some days visiting her here.

A good friend of our—a business man here in Munday—handed us a bill recently that was printed up in Detroit or some place up north of the Mason and Dixon line. We paid the bill without comment, however, we can't print here what we thought—Uncle Sam won't permit us to send that kind of stuff through the mails, and besides it probably wouldn't have done any good. We just contented ourselves with the thought that our friend was inconsistent, for if we should order the goods that he sells he would think that I was a disloyal citizen—disloyal to him and disloyal to Munday.

We dismissed the incident with the thought that everybody has their share of the troubles. One of our furniture dealers was telling us how he was peeved a while back when a dry goods merchant ordered furniture from an out-of-town concern. The furniture man stated that he was somewhat peeved by the incident and refrained from buying some merchandise that he had planned to buy from his prospective customer, and as a result they both lost business—and money.

Consistency is a great thing. More, folks should try it out!

How to Play BRIDGE
Series 1927-28 by Wynne Ferguson
Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright 1927, by Hoyle, Jr. ARTICLE No. 17

There are still many players who prefer a no-trump to a suit bid, but this kind of bidding gets them in a trouble so often that sooner or later they are bound to reform. In the following example hand both A and B were at fault, and as a result they lost a big game and rubber:

Hearts—5
Clubs—K, J, 10, 9, 4
Diamonds—K, J, 6, 2
Spades—A, Q, 10

Hearts—A, K, 10, 7, 3
Clubs—2
Diamonds—A, 10, 7, 4, 3
Spades—K, 9

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and passed. A has a good all round hand, sufficiently strong to justify a no-trump bid, but he is a danger heart to a danger spot. A clever opponent with a strong heart suit and the opening bid would pass a no-trump bid and proceed to make his hand suit. A's best bid with this hand is one club, but being one of those players who always bid no-trump in preference to a suit bid, he bid no-trump. Y now had two aces in his hand and a chance to make a take.

It's hand is very strong but contains only one stopper in spades. On the other hand, B has a very strong heart suit, one that will sell justly a three heart bid. This bid is much stronger than the two-ace heart bid. However, B was another player who had no use for the suit bid, so he bid two no-trump. Z and A passed back Y bid three spades. At this point, B began to realize that perhaps Y had a pretty good hand and that a single stopper in spades wasn't enough to insure game at no-trump, and for that reason it would be better to try for game in hearts. So B bid four hearts. Z passed and A now had a pretty puzzle to solve. With only a singleton heart he was practically certain that he and his partner couldn't go game in hearts. He now for the first time noticed his long club suit, so he decided to try for a game in clubs, bidding five. Of course, A should have bid four no-trump, but he lost his courage. Y passed and B was now in a hopeless position. With only a singleton club, he knew that he and his partner were lost, but he had no way to get out. All passed and A-B lost their contract by three tricks—all because they bid no-trump in preference to their much sounder suit bids.

The proper bidding of these two hands is as follows: Z pass, A one club, Y one spade, B two hearts, Z pass, A two no-trump, Y three spades, and B three no-trump. All pass. With this bidding A-B would have scored game and rubber easily. Study this example hand very carefully and try to prefer the suit bid to the no-trump, especially if the hand contains a singleton or void suit. This preference of the suit bid to the no-trump will give you a much better opportunity to show up your opponent's hands and thus enable you

Problem No. 19
Hearts—none
Clubs—A
Diamonds—7, 5, 4, 3
Spades—K, J, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1

A Z

Hearts—10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 4
Clubs—none
Diamonds—A, Q, J, 10, 8, 5, 6
Spades—none

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one heart. A bid three spades, Y four clubs and B four diamonds. Z now bid five clubs. A five diamonds, Y six clubs and B six diamonds. Z doubled and all passed. Z opened the king of hearts which B trumped in A's hand with the ace of diamonds. Y, playing the five of hearts, B now led the deuce of spades from A's hand, trumping in his own and your partner to arrive at the best bid of twenty-six cards rather than of thirty—this is the object of all sound bidding. Such bids are termed Introductory or Approaching bids.

The following examples were given as problems in the preceding article:

Answer to Problem No. 17
Hearts—10, 8, 6, 2
Clubs—Q, 10, 9, 4
Diamonds—7, 5, 2
Spades—J, 8

Z

No score, rubber game. If Z dealt, bid one club and A passed, what should Y do with the foregoing hand? Y should pass. There is no obligation to bid immediately upon the partner of the original bidder unless he has a justifiable bid, and Y's hand is too weak for any such action in this case.

Answer to Problem No. 13
Hearts—10
Clubs—J, 10, 2
Diamonds—K, Q, 4, 3
Spades—Q, 10, 9, 6, 4

No score, rubber game. If Z dealt, bid one club and A passed, what should Y do with the foregoing hand? In this hand, Y should bid one spade. If Z has a sound club bid, Y-Z should easily make one or more spades; thus Y's spade bid is more than justified.

The lesson to be learned from these hands is that no bid is justifiable which is based entirely upon partner's bid. There must be some cards in one's own hand as a basis for the bid; otherwise there could be no such thing as informative bidding. Each bid should give information as to the bidding and not simply repeat or follow partner's bid without any justification in one's own cards.

It is not often that a fresh hand offers much of a problem in the play but here is one from England that is the exception:

hand with the six of diamonds. On this trick, Y played the seven and Z the ace of spades. What deduction should B make from the bidding and the cards played on the first two tricks and then how should he plan the play so as to make six odd?

The solution of this interesting problem and the hands of Y-Z will be given in the next article.
