Auto Part Trade-In Ordered

An order restricting production of spare parts for all types of automobile equipment to the minimum number required to maintain the efficiency of the country's motor transportation system has been issued by WPB. The order requires consumers, after July 15, to turn in to distributors a used part before accepting delivery of a new part, and provides that a new part may not be sold to replace a part which can be reconditioned by the distributor. In the central time zone, distributors will be restricted after August 15 to a 90-day supply of spare parts.

Tin Can Order Amended

Use of tin or terneplate cans now on hand or in process on July 1 for certain products omitted from the permitted categories in Order M-81 is permitted by an amendment to that order issued by WPB.

Canner Compliance Checked

Operations on food canners, to determine their compliance with WPB conservation orders relating to tin and to maintenance and repair or canning machinery, now are being investigated by WPB's Compliance Branch, with the assistance of field operators from the Wage and Hour Division of the Department of Labor.

Fur Prices to Stay Same

Prices for women's fur coats, packets, muffs and other fur wraps are held at the same levels as prices charged last season for the same types of wraps and kinds of fur, under price schedule 178, issued by OPA.

Tires for Barefoot Tractors

OPA has announced procedure under which purchases of new and rebuilt tractors, farm implements and other vehicles sold without tires, or "bare-footed," may get casings and tubes for these machines. The buyers of a new or rebuilt vehicle which is to be put to an eligible use must submit to his local War Price and Ration Board an affidavit from the seller giving a satisfactory reason for delivery without tires and tubes. The Board may then issue an original equipment certificate.

Hat Substitutes Used

With many sources of supply cut off by the war and shipping difficulties, the hat industry is working extensively with substitute materials in order to meet straw and felt shortages. In the past, the rabbit or coney fur of which felt is made came from Europe, Australia and New Zealand. The straw for summer hats came from the Far East. Next year felt hats may be made of fur, reused or reprocessed wool or cesein, the new milk fiber, and straw hats may be woven out of visca, celtafal or cellophane. OPA's Consumer Division recommends that any hats which can be renovated or restyled be taken to the cleaner's or the milliner's.

Careful Tea Brewing Urged

Although only 50 per cent of last year's deliveries of tea will be available to consumers, due to the cut in imports, careful brewing will make up a considerable part of the deficiency. Careful measuring of the ingredients when making tea, and brewing of only as much tea as will be served are two conservation suggestions made by OPA's Consumer Division.

Rug Violators Warned

Rug manufacturers who persist in the practice of selling irregular sizes of wool floor coverings by combining key sizes in a single uncut length, thus obtaining the higher cut-order prices instead of roll prices, may expect immediate action by OPA. This practice, officials said, is a clear violation of OPA's price schedules.

Marketing Analysts Needed

Immediate need for about 100 marketing analysts in Washington, D.C., for positions paying from $2600 to $6500 a year, has been announced by Dr. Karl E. Ashburn, recruiting specialist for the Civil Service Commission. Applicants who can qualify should obtain Civil Service Form 8 from any post office, complete it and mail it to Dr. Ashburn at 319 Fidelity Building, Dallas.

Tire Misuse Checked

In a move to save rubber now being wasted through ignorance of tire care or neglect and abuse, rationing officials in the Dallas OPA region office have distributed to tire inspectors a set of instructions to help them determine when a tire is repairable and recappable and when it has been abused. This action is expected to give force to a provision in tire rationing regulations which authorizes local war price and ration boards to refuse tires to eligible purchasers who have misused those they have or driven them past the point where recapping is practical.

Men's Clothing Price Rolled Back
A "rollback" of manufacturer's and wholesaler's prices for men's and boy's tailored clothing, recently effected by OPA price regulation 177, will enable consumers to buy suits, separate pants, coats and vests at March, 1942 prices. The order establishes ceiling prices for men's and boys' clothing by going back to various base periods earlier than March, 1942, and providing for a percentage markup which is added to the seller's price for the base period.

Birth Certificates Waived
Workers seeking employment in war plants where work on secret or confidential government contracts is being done no longer are required to furnish a birth certificate. War Manpower Commissioner McNutt has announced. Henceforth, the applicant will be required merely to sign in the presence of an Army or Navy district procurement, factory or plant protection representative.

Iron-Steels Appeals Set Up
Firms affected by the restrictions of Conservation Order M-126, which banned the use of iron and steel in the production of hundreds of common civilian articles, now may take their appeals for relief to a new Appeals Branch, set up by WPB. Appeals must be made on Form PD-437 and filed with the nearest WPB field office, together with evidence which the manufacturer who considers himself subjected to undue hardship believes would be helpful to his case.

Soy Beans Important
Importance of the soybean in industrial usage and as a substitute for vitally needed chemical products has been pointed out by the Bureau of Industrial Conservation. Oil produced from soybeans is also a valuable asset in offsetting the results of reduced imports from the Far East. An increase of about 50 per cent over last year's oil production from soybeans is expected this year, when approximately a billion pounds of soybean oil will be produced.

Stevenson Has Hope of Freedom For Candidates

Austin, Texas.—To the list of freedoms for which this nation is fighting a cruel war, Coke Stevenson, candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, expressed the hope that another freedom would be added . . . that of the right of public officials and candidates for public office to be free from personal abuse, vilification and slander during political campaigns.

"The Atlantic Charter of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill gave new emphasis to the desire in the hearts of men everywhere for spiritual, intellectual, political and economic freedom," Governor Stevenson commented. "We are now engaged in a grueling contest to determine whether these objectives can be attained.

"Some day in the enlightenment of human conscience another objective will be added to freedom's list, the right of public officials and candidates to be free from personal abuse, vilification and slander."

Asserting that the character of a man is his most precious asset, Governor Stevenson stated that "slander is the foulest whelp of sin. The man in whom this spirit enters is undone."

"It is apparent that the weapon of slander has been used by men who had no merit of their own in an attempt to destroy those who do have character and ability," Stevenson stated. "The tongue of slander has frequently been a convenient implement with which to spread the cankerous slime of falsehood and stain the reputation of an honest man. It is unfortunate that such sentiments exist in the human breast."

In one of his few political addresses of the current campaign, Stevenson pointed out that George Washington was slanderously assailed by ambitious persons who wanted to displace him as commander-in-chief. They succeeded and placed Gates in command and forced Washington to take orders from him. However, when Gates took the field he was overwhelmingly defeated in battle and history records he was found 80 miles away and still retreating.

"During the time, scurrilous publications were circulated against Washington," Stevenson said. "He was accused of being a liquor hound and of gambling and of being a Tory at heart. If there had been oil in the country at that time, they would have charged him with being owned and controlled by the oil companies since he was a large landowner and oil might have been found under his land.

"His traducers and slanderers have been forgotten, while the name of Washington grows in purity, affection and esteem. He went right on with his job of winning the Revolutionary War. If a great man like Washington could not escape abuse and slander, then Coke Stevenson can hardly expect to. I believe, however, Texas people bitterly resent any man trying to win an office by such tactics.

"None of us now can measure up to the stature of Washington, and I make no pretense of being in his class. I can emulate his example, however, and ignore any of my political enemies who are circulating false and unfounded charges against me. I can further emulate his example by continuing to devote my time and efforts to the most important job before us, and that is the winning of the war in which we are now engaged."

The above map of Texas shows the War Bond quotas, by counties, for the month of July, 1942. Total War Bond quota for the state is $33,677,000. With the National quota total placed at a billion dollars, the nation goes into high gear in its support of the War financing and to give our fighting forces adequate implements of war which will bring ultimate Victory. American Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen are on every front. They are giving 100 percent for their country. What are we doing here on the home front? Are we lending at least ten percent of income to help them? It's very little. But to fight this war successfully our country needs a billion dollars in War Bonds every month from us—the People. Care of Child's Teeth is Urged

Austin, Texas.—A child by the time he is two and a half years of age should become acquainted with the atmosphere of a dental office and the ministrations of a dentist is the advice given by Doctor Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer. It is of prime importance, according to Doctor Cox, that children look upon the family dentist as a friendly guardian of their health.

In stressing the importance of early dental care, Doctor Cox quoted the following from a bulletin of the American Dental Association: "Parents should teach the child that the dentist is his friend. They should not allow him to receive the impression that a visit to the dentist means unpleasantness and pain. Such impressions are usually created in a child's mind before he ever sees the dentist.

"Parents can prevent fear in the child's mind by taking him to the dentist before the teeth are decayed. Thus, the first visit will consist of an examination only. Subsequent visits will consist of a simple cleaning or, at the most, the painless filling of a small cavity. It is a grave mistake to neglect a child's teeth so that his first visit to the dentist must be associated with pain."

Doctor Cox said that the importance of good dental health and been called to national attention by recent selective service examinations and added that a great percentage of physical rejections for military service could have been avoided by dental care in the first few years of life.

Maxine and Neta Jean West are visiting relatives in Altus, Okla., this week.

Joe Spann, son of John Spann of Munday, underwent a tonsillectomy at the Stamford hospital last Friday morning.

Statistics Put Finger On Private Car Driver

Everybody knows that there are a great many more passenger cars on the highways than commercial cars but that fact does not make the one-sided ratio of accidents responsibility inconclusive. Most commercial drivers are on the road for prolonged periods, under heavy strain. Despite this, they have established many safe driving records throughout the country.

It's a venerable joke of radio and vaudeville comedians that taxi drivers are wild and reckless. The average motorist has come to believe it. He also thinks bus drivers are a menace and truck drivers are devoid of sense and sensibilities.

Maybe some of them are, but when it comes to facts and figures, as revealed in "The Wreckard," published by The Travelers Insurance Company, the passenger car driver finds more than three-quarters of the year's fatal accidents chalked up to him. The booklet reveals that 76.9 per cent of the fatalities occurring in automobile accidents during 1941 involved passenger cars, 18.5 per cent commercial cars, and only 4.5 per cent were caused by taxis, buses, motorcycles and other vehicles.

"Thoroughbreds"

By BETTYE CRENSHAW

Two nights later found Lucky, the jockey, turning into the final lap of a run on the practice track. When he crossed the finish line, Clem snapped his finger on the stop-watch.

"Linda," he said, "Exaggeration made that run in one minute and 48 seconds better than Hammerstein did in his last race."

Linda's face was radiant with joy. "Oh, Clem, Dad will be so happy."

"Oh, so, my dear," Clem said, "We aren't going to tell the Colonel about this. He thinks the sun rises and sets in Patton, but we'll show him that Patton doesn't know everything. We'll train this horse secretly, with Lucky's help, enter him in the Derby, and surprise everyone concerned."

It sounded like a very good idea to Linda, who was always interested in the unusual, so for two months the three worked at night training Exaggeration, and ignoring Patch Patton's gloom and grumbles that Exaggeration's jumping was getting worse instead of better.

During those close days with Clem, Linda knew that she had made no mistake in breaking her engagement with Tom Danfield. She has even ceased to be sorry that it would not be time for graduation at Lexington, and that she would not be there. Julia wrote often, her letters filled with accounts of the exciting parties she had attended. But Linda no longer cared. A hike in the woods, re-planting with their spring leaves, with Clem at her side, a swift swim in the lake, or supper on the terrace gave Linda far more happiness than school had ever given her. Nicest of all were the nights when they slipped away with Exaggeration and Lucky and stood beneath the stars watching this fine horse improve at the date for the Derby grew near.

Finally the day for the Kentucky Derby dawned warm and bright. Linda was radiant with suppressed excitement as, with her mother and father, she drove away from the Fisher mansion. She had watched her eyes dancing, as Patch Patton and Naptha, the stable boy, lead Viking to take him to the race. Linda knew that the Colonel was now too proud of the time Viking had made during the practice races, but for generations there had never been a Kentucky Derby in which there was not entered some horse from the Fisher stables. Linda also knew that her father deeply regretted the loss of Hammerstein, although he had artfully kept his feelings to himself. Patch Patton, however, was not so considerate. He was resentful toward both Linda and Clem, and made no effort to conceal his contempt. He had been in a particularly bad humor that morning when Lucky, the jockey, had announced that he was sick and unable to ride Viking in the Derby.

Linda smiled to herself as she remembered how Clem, the day before, had said, "Lucky, you be darn sure, after you tell Patton you're sick, that something don't happen to keep you from riding Exaggeration."

Glancing at her watch as they rode along in silence, Linda noticed that it was about time that Clem and Lucky were getting Exaggeration loaded. Almost in echo to her thoughts Colonel Fisher turned to her.

"Why didn't Clem ride over with us?" he asked. "I really had expected him to."

"He said he would be a little late getting to the tracks," Linda answered, and to change the subject asked, "Dad, do you think the other boy will be good enough to put Viking through?"

"It is so unfortunate about Lucky," Mrs. Fisher said.

"Sam is a pretty good rider," Colonel Fisher said, "but we have no hopes of winning the Derby anyway. But just wait until we transport Exaggeration for the entry in the Maryland Hunt cup."

The Colonel chuckled, and Linda breathed a prayer that Exaggeration would not fail them today.

There was the usual excitement and color about the grandstand which was surging with humanity. Colonel and Mrs. Fisher elbowed their way through the crowd toward their private box, Linda following a little behind, straining her eyes in search of Clem, who should be there by now.

When she saw him, he was making his way toward them, and her heart began pounding faster. She wasn't sure whether it was the sight of Clem or the fact that the announcer was saying that it was time for the horses to line up.

"I asked about you, young man," the Colonel said when Clem reached their side. "What's been keeping you? Can't afford to be late for this race?"

"I'll say I couldn't," Clem replied, not answering the question. He took Linda's hand, and the slight pressure assured her that everything was set. "This is going to be a swell race."

The announcer was calling out the names of the entries and their owners, as the horses lined up in their stalls. Colonel Fisher's entry, Viking, had been called. He named some others.

"That horse, Commander," the Colonel said. "He's going to be hard to beat."

Oh, God, prayed Linda, Exaggeration must be better.

The announcer was speaking again. Linda held her breath. "Number 4," he said. "Exaggeration. Mrs. Clem Greenwood."

It seemed to Linda that all the drums on earth were beating. She heard the gasps of surprise from people around them. She heard a little cry from her mother. She heard her father say, "I don't understand."

"It's a long story, Dad," she heard Clem say. "We don't have time to explain now. We were married last night." Colonel Fisher's face was red and his eyes were gleaming. "Surely, you're not surprised." "I don't give a continental when you got married," the Colonel stormed, "but what in the name of kingdom come ever possessed you to enter my horse Exaggeration in this race!"

"He's my horse, Dad," Linda said.

"Your horse!" Linda nodded. "You gave him to me for a wedding present. There's the gun! They're off!"

With leaden heart Linda saw that Exaggeration was getting off to a bad start. Commander was in the lead, even Viking was far ahead of Exaggeration.

"Oh, Exaggeration! Come on!" she pleaded as though he could hear her.

"I don't know what's wrong," Colonel Fisher exploded. "That horse is on a race track, and he's not a race horse."

"Oh, but, Dad, he is! He is!" Linda repeated, trying at the same time to convince herself. "Something has happened."

They had made one lap, and Exaggeration was far behind. Lucky was urging the horse on. They couldn't fail. They had to show them. As another horse started to nose past them, Exaggeration shied a little to the side. That is it, thought Lucky. Exaggeration was not used to the other horses, nor to the daylight.

It seemed that Colonel Fisher had forgotten Viking, and he was what Exaggeration was going to straining every nerve to watch do. They saw Lucky whip a dark scarf from his neck and with nimble fingers tie it around Exaggeration's eyes.

"What in tarnation . . ." the Colonel shouted, and Clem was almost as perplexed.

"The other horses!" Linda cried. "He isn't used to them!"

To their amazement they saw Exaggeration lengthen his stride. He passed the horse that was pressing close, and then another. Linda had begun to breathe a little easier when suddenly with warning, the horse ahead of Exaggeration

THAT "SOMETHING ABOUT A SOLDIER" STRONG APPEAL TO WIFE AND SONS

That "something about a soldier" which appeals to boys and girls is especially strong when the soldier is father and husband. That is shown in this family scene of Lieutenant Vernon Lemens, taken this week at Camp Hood, Temple, while his happy family were visiting him from their home in Waxahachie. Mrs. Lemens is completing her husband's campaign for Lieutenant Governor which he began before entering the army.

Vernon, Jr., age 8, shows a preference for the U. S. Army uniform of his father, while Bobby, age 3, wears the sailor suit selected by his mother. Senator Lemens served in World War I, was an active Legionnaire and reserve officer in the peace period, and is now on duty as assistant adjutant with the tank destroyer command at Camp Hood. As Senator of the Twelfth District he will be granted leave to serve in Austin during the session of the Legislature under War Department rules governing reserve officers holding public office at the time of army induction. He is asking a promotion to Lieutenant Governor so that he can preside over the Senate. He feels that his fourteen years of continuous legislative service and his military experience and standing especially fit him to direct the Senate in the wartime session ahead. The duties of Lieutenant Governor require no more time in Austin than those of Senator, which he now is.

There would be a photo-finish, but Exaggeration with his long powerful stride, passed Commander as though he could run far miles. Linda and Clem rushed to Lucky, who stood holding Exaggeration. The horse proudly tossed his head and stamped his foot when the wreath of flowers was placed around his neck. Colonel and Mrs. Fisher came up in time to see Clem take Linda into his arms unmindful of the crowd of people about them. "I never would have believed it if I hadn't seen it with my own eyes," the Colonel said, satisfaction and admiration beaming in his face. "Our new son-in-law?" Mrs. Fisher questioned with a smile. "Thunderation, no!" the Colonel retorted. "That beautiful thoroughbred."

"Please send me 10¢ worth of electricity—today"

"But, Lady, you don't have to order it—just turn the switch!"

SUPPOSE, though, that you did have to order your day's supply of electric service, say, in baskets like groceries. You'd realize even more how convenient it now is. And you'd appreciate even more how little it costs . . . and how much it does for you.

Actually, a majority of all West Texas families have good light and operate their many appliances for about a dime a day—or less!

What's more, that dime buys just about twice or three times as much electricity as it did 10 to 15 years ago! And (are you surprised?) it's one of the few household items that hasn't "gone up" as a result of the war.

This bargain doesn't just happen. It comes from our united effort to give you better service at lower cost. It is made possible by practical, efficient business management of an institution built by Americans who invested their savings in an industry dedicated to the public service and regulated by the government.

That's the American way—and it works!

It works so well that even though our country today is pouring record-breaking amounts of electric power into the world's greatest production of planes, tanks, ships and guns—you still get low-cost current in your home . . . and at the flick of a switch. You don't need to order it . . . or secure a ration card.

Probably the few pennies a day you spend for electric service bring you more for your money than anything else you buy. For this small amount, would you clean oil lamps, beat rugs, scrub clothes, give up your radio?

Hardly! Electric service is the world's biggest bargain
