Confederate Vets To Hold Reunion Here July 11-12

Wednesday and Thursday, July 11 and 12 are the dates that have been set for the annual reunion of the Confederate veterans and old settlers of Knox county, and plans are now under way toward making the affair one of the most enjoyable in the history of the organization. Munday was chosen at the last reunion at Knox City, and at a meeting by members of the executive committee of the association and officers of the Munday Chamber of Commerce on Wednesday afternoon plans were put on foot to make it a most enjoyable event. Those present at the meeting on Wednesday were Adj. Matt Guthrie and A. P. Oliver of Knox City, J. A. Fisher and Uncle Lem Earnest of Benjamin and J. J. Baskin of this city.

A meeting of the directors of the Munday Chamber of Commerce will be held at an early date at which time committees will be named to look after all details pertaining to the entertainment of the veterans, and as this is the first time that Munday has had the privilege of entertaining the veterans in a number of years nothing will be left undone that will contribute toward their enjoyment and comfort while guests within our gates.

Tony Kuehler Brings In First Load of New Wheat; $25.00 Premium

The first load of new crop wheat to come to Munday was brought in on Wednesday by Tony Kuehler of the Rheinland community, and was purchased by the Munday Mill & Elevator Company for $1.25 per bushel. The wheat tested 61 pounds to the bushel and was of good quality.

A premium of $25.00 was given Mr. Kuehler by the Munday Chamber of Commerce, which together with the price of the wheat brought the amount received for the load of wheat up to a little more than a hundred dollars.

PROPER REFRIGERATION ESSENTIAL TO HEALTH

In nine out of ten families in the United States, food is kept in such a way as to be a menace to health. This is the startling and sweeping assertion of Frederick Damrau, M. D. in a recent series of articles in Popular Science covering a year spent in investigation and the testing of thousands of household refrigerators.

In reporting on these investigations Dr. Damrau says that he found in the vast majority of homes either no ice-box at all or one that was not efficient enough to check the growth of microbes in milk and other foods.

"They show too," he says in one article, "that most people are ignorantly satisfied with refrigerators in which butter doesn't melt and milk doesn't sour in twenty-four hours, utterly oblivious of the possibilities of insidious treachery in the ice box."

The articles point out that violent or fatal illnesses are not the only ones that result from use of food that has been improperly preserved. Where the decomposition of food, while serious enough, is in less degree, only slight illnesses may result, the writer says.

Dr. Damrau declares that most American families use cheap, poorly constructed ice boxes that have little or no practical value as refrigerators. He says that a good refrigerator must be built properly to keep out heat and insulated with material able to resist the heat waves that are constantly trying to creep in.

Fifty degrees is the danger line and food kept above that temperature soon begins to spoil, Dr. Damrau declares at the same time asserting that few household refrigerators maintain in any such temperatures for any length of time, the failure being due either to faulty construction or to insufficient ice.

Vital Statistics To Be Reported To Justices of Peace In Counties

This county has now been organized in accordance with the new Vital Statistics Law, by the appointment of registrars for each justice precinct and each incorporated town or city. In some cases, two or more precincts have been combined into one district, where it seemed best so to do.

Every birth is required by law to be reported to the local registrar of the district in which it occurs, by the attending physician or midwife, or if there was neither, then by the father or mother, within five days after the birth.

The law prohibits the burial or removal of a dead body before a death certificate properly and completely filled out, has been filed with the local registrar, and a burial or removal permit has been secured.

The immense legal value of these records makes it important that the citizens of Texas be given this protection by having a complete, legal record properly filed in accordance with this law.

No births or deaths were reported from Knox County during the first three months of 1928. This condition cannot, of course, continue as the people will not permit these records, which are so vital in every condition of life, to be neglected, they will insist on protecting their own interests. Let us give the people of Knox county 100 per cent registration from now on.

Below is a list of local registrars of your county and it is urged that you make every effort to comply with the law and to aid in securing complete registration in your county. For further information, address State Department of Health, Bureau of Vital Statistics, Austin, Texas.

M. F. Harbert, Benjamin, Precincts 1, 2 and 3.

Mrs. J. W. Whitsett Succumbs To Illness In Wichita Hospital

Mrs. J. W. Whitsett passed away on Sunday afternoon at a Wichita Falls hospital, where she had gone some ten days previously for treatment, and after an illness extending over a period of more than two years.

Mrs. Whitsett was stricken ill shortly following the death of her husband more than three years ago, and despite the fact that she had undergone treatment here and at Wichita Falls her condition gradually became more critical.

Deceased was born in Arkansas on September 21, 1871 and when quite young came with her parents to Ecker county, where she was married to Nathan Judd, and to this union one son was born, H. N. Judd, residing at San Benito, Texas. Following the death of Mr. Judd she was married to J. W. Whitsett, whose death occurred in this city some four years ago, and to this union two children were born, Marshal Whitsett of O'Donnell, Texas, and Hattie Joe Whitsett of this city. In addition to the above children she is survived by J. E. Whitsett of Weatherford, Texas, and Mrs. A. B. Rice of Fort Worth, step-son and daughter, her mother, Mrs. J. C. Hardberger, of Knox City, three brothers, R. E. Hardberger of Lubbock, Geo. Hardberger of Knox City and John Hardberger of O'Donnell, and on her mother's side, Mrs. R. E. Speck, of Lamesa.

Funeral services were held at the hotel of which she had been proprietress since the death of Mr. Whitsett, on Tuesday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. J. O. Heath of Megargel, formerly pastor of the Baptist church here, assisted by the Rev. P. D. O'Brien, pastor of the Baptist church in this city. Active pallbearers were John Ed Jones, C. A. Filand, Leland Hannah, C. B. Jones, Bernard Stodghill and Fred Broach. Honorary pallbearers were A. J. Glasgow, J. S. McCutcheon, G. R. Elland, E. B. Tull, Geo. Isbell, W. C. Hill, J. J. Baskin and E. H. Bauman. Following the services at the home interment was made in Johnson cemetery.

Among the relatives and friends who attended the funeral from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Hardberger of Lubbock, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hardberger of Knox City, John Hardberger of O'Donnell; Mrs. R. E. Speck of Lamesa, Miss Jo Francis Davenport, a niece, Aledo, Texas; C. B. Neal, a brother-in-law, of Fort Worth; J. E. Whitsett, Weatherford; Mrs. A. B. Rice of Fort Worth; H. N. Judd of San Benito; Mr. and Mrs. Marshal Whitsett of O'Donnell.

The death of this good woman has brought universal sorrow to our community, for she has been a resident of Munday for many years and has made friends a fall with whom she has come in contact, especially among the traveling public, who have for years made the Munday Hotel their home in Munday, and we join the entire community in extending our sincere sympathy to the grievously afflicted ones in this hour of sorrow.

THE TIGER TRAIL

by Edison Marshall Illustrations by PAUL FREHM

The old man sat down in a cushioned chair. He gave no heed to the water pouring from his clothes. He looked tired and listless.

"The levee is breaking," he answered simply.

Only his son seemed to understand. I looked up from the work of tying my shoes, procured in my room on the way to the library. We made a silent circle in the dim light.

"What does it mean?" Hayward cried. "Does it mean we'll be drowned?"

He spoke hoarsely, but the announcement steadied me. Floods were material, and could be faced. They couldn't run and hide behind the curtains.

"Nothing as bad as that," Southley answered. "Of course it means a flood; but by no conceivable circumstance can the waters reach the top of the hill where these house stands. But we'll be cut off from civilization for days. The water will sweep all around the hill, flood the railroad bed, and fill all the low places—eight feet deep. We won't be able to reach the heights across the valley."

Hayward seemed to leap toward him. He simply appeared to break before our eyes. His voice rose shrilly, and he shook his arm in Southley's face.

"Then get me out tonight!" he screamed. "Get me away from this house while there's a chance."

"I'm afraid it is too late now," Southley answered.

"Call a car for me at once—hear me? There's still time to make the road. I won't stay here another hour. Get on your feet, you fool—and call a car for me. You'll regret it if you don't."

"There's no one to drive—but Ahmad," Southley answered wearily. "And what about your son?"

"Damn my son! Damn this wicked house! Did you say Ahmad?" For an instant we saw the battle of two fears in his great face. "Get Ahmad, then. I'll be ready as soon as I find a coat. Vilas can tend to our business, and he'll communicate with me."

Southley sighed; then got to his feet. He touched a bell on the table. Only a moment we waited. Then through the door came Ahmad Das—calm, imperturbable, his Oriental face quiet as a seer's. Never was there a shadow as we glanced swiftly across the floor with that marvelous, feline grace.

"Yes, sahib."

"Get the touring car out at once," Southley ordered. "You have to take Sahib Hayward to the station. Don't lose an instant. The levee is breaking. It will be broken before you return, so you'll have to leave the car in the station and come in a boat. Arrange for supplies while you're there—we may be cut off for weeks."

"I'll cut down the walk to the base of the hill," Hayward instructed. "Pick me up there and we'll have at least a minute."

The Oriental bowed, then slipped away. He went just like a shadow. He found a raincoat in the hall, and in an instant he was out in the flood of rain.

Hayward put on his own overcoat, and started out after him. The rain and the darkness swallowed them both.

A window had been left just beside the fireplace, and through it we could ordinarily see the garage. Ernest and I gazed through that window. Ahmad was evidently having difficulty in beating his way through the storm. It was a long time before we saw an indication that he had reached the garage. Then we saw his auto lights flash on.

We were barely able to make them out, although it was plain that the garage door was open and they were shining directly toward us. Of course the distance was far; and the piercing rays could hardly penetrate the wall of rain. The lightning had entirely ceased. We couldn't hear the roar of the engine at all. Then we saw, quite plainly, the track of the lights as the car sped about the shoulder of the hill.

Perhaps, in all, the walk to the garage and the starting of the car had taken four minutes. The walk to the base of the hill, where the postern path met the driveway, took ordinarily two minutes. It was straight downhill, and if Hayward had walked swiftly at all, he would certainly have two minutes to wait. The car came slowly, and still we could see the faint luster in the rain that was its lights.

They curved on to the base of the hill. Then Ernest uttered a syllable of exclamation. "He's driven past the point," he said.

"Possibly Hayward has walked on a few feet," I suggested.

The car slowed up and stopped for a single instant, then started slowly on. It was hard to believe that it halted long enough to permit the portly form of Hayward to enter. It looked to us as if Ahmad were trying to throw the car-lights onto the side of the road. Then, to our vast amazement, we saw him turn around.

Southley sighed; then got to his feet. He touched a bell on the table. Only a moment we waited. Then through the door came Ahmad Das—calm, imperturbable, his Oriental face quiet as a seer's. Never was there a shadow as we

It looked to us as if Ahmad were trying to throw the car-lights onto the side of the road. Then, to our vast amazement, we saw him turn around.

The car headed back, just as slowly, and circled about to the garage.

The servant stopped the car in the rain; and we waited a long three minutes for him to drive on again. We only knew he was standing still from the faint blur of the lights in the downpour. I don't remember that we three men talked at all. Possibly there were one or two wondering remarks—as to what was the cause of their delay.

And just then the dark form of the Hindu came into the hall. The look of question on his face seemed very real indeed. I remembered it afterward, as did all the rest of us.

"Where," he asked, "is Hayward Sahib?"

"You mean Vilas?" Southley asked.

"The elder Hayward, whom I was to drive to the station."

"For God's sake, Ahmad! Did you miss him? He started out in the rain, and was going to meet you at the foot of the path. Didn't you understand?"

"I looked—but he wasn't there. Then I thought I had misunderstood, and drove back to the garage. He wasn't there either."

"Good Lord, he'll be drenched! Go down the path and find him."

"Yes, sahib."

My eyes were upon Ernest's face, and suddenly his gaze met mine. I think that we had the same thought.

"Wait a minute, Ahmad!" he said quietly. "Keep the door shut." Then he turned to his father, and stood for a long instant as if in thought. "Father, I think that we'd all better go—and look for Hayward."

We saw no sign of Hayward at first. We got down to the driveway, and flashed our lanterns all down it. We looked up and down the path. We tried to call in the best of our voices.

"Good Lord! Southley cried. "He couldn't have got down into the river and drowned!"

We scattered about, and began to climb over the hillside. The rain, the bobbling lantern, the echo of the catastrophe, the dark house behind us and the gathering lakes in front. The scene a singular dream-like quality. Then Ahmad, who walked close beside me, tripped and fell over something on the ground.

He uttered an oath in his own tongue; then whirled to look. He bent and felt about with his hand. The place he stood was a little neck of land that dipped down into the flood-waters, an isthmus that separated the height on which the house stood from the plateau opposite.

The lantern showed everything very plainly. We understood why Hayward had not met the servant at the house. His neck was broken, as if by a giant's blow.

We didn't stop to examine the body on that rain-swept hillside. I had known the neck was broken simply by the way the great head dropped back when he lifted the shoulders from the ground. The four of us carried him into the house, not an easy load at all. Vilas Hayward met us at the door.

The effect on the younger Hayward was hardly what I expected. It was true that I didn't look for prostration. He was the kind of man that grows away from his parents in late boyhood.

"My father!" he shrieked. The sound went high and wild in the storm. "Don't dare to tell me he's dead!"

"We don't dare to tell you anything else, because he is," Ernest answered.

Vilas leaped toward Southley; and for an instant I thought he would attack him. His face was drawn hideously in the half-light. He had evidently left his bed only when the levee gave way; he was only partly dressed.

"Then you're the devil that killed him! You, I say, Southley! You killed him to get rid of him, and you'll be trying to kill me next!"

"Don't be silly," I cautioned swiftly. "I was with Mr. Southley up to the moment that we found him."

"Then it was you, Long, in Southley's pay. I won't believe anything else."

Ernest tried to quiet him, and after he had got him away, I took the covering from the dead man's face. Made a close examination of the body. My aged host knelt beside me. Nothing but a super-human blow could have so broken the neck. It could not have been from a fall; because only a severe fall could have done it, and out on the isthmus there were no heights to fall from.

Besides, there was plenty of other evidence that some sort of a blow had killed him. The worst of them all were two, deep parallel grooves on his face, from which the flesh had been simply raked. The flesh was discolored, too.

"It's plain the nose on your face that the man was murdered," Southley said. "Any coroner's jury in Florida would say so. And the sooner we get word into town the better."

"At least," I answered, "the murderer can't get away. Unless he got out before the levee broke, he's on the island with us."

And it doesn't seem likely that he could get out without super-human strength and agility. Of course it might have been possible for a speedy runner to reach the highlands across the valley before the flood waters swept over the isthmus, but it's certain he couldn't get back to civilization. The first thing to do is to post guards to watch over the lowlands, and see that he doesn't get out."

Southley's eyes met mine. I had never seen better self-control.

"The first thing to do is to quiet the negroes," I told him. "They are terrorized. The next is to send for aid."

The old man turned quickly. "Do you mean the coroner?"

"Yes. The State will send detectives. I will be glad, it is certain that one of us three will have to face a murder charge, and the sooner it is cleared up the better."

But we three were together.

"That won't matter. They will say we hired one of the negroes to commit the crime. We can improvise a raft, and send a man out tomorrow to bring the coroner."

"We can do better than that."

I've got a little sneak-boat—just a canoe—that I use for ducks. We'll have to have a bigger one to bring supplies; but it will carry a message to the mainland.

There was little else to do in the rain. We went into the den, and just as morning broke, we told Ernest and Vilas our plans. The rain was less violent now. The storm was at the ebb.

I'm sorry I said what I did," Vilas apologized. "It was the excitement of the moment. But I would like to know what you think, Southley. What killed my father—accident or murder, or what?"

The eyes of the two men met. "Your father was struck down—there is no question about it," Southley replied. "He was killed by a blow from some unknown source. There is every reason to think that his slayer is still about this house and plantation, and every possible effort will be made to chase him down. No one will be able to leave—first, because of a rule that necessitates pre-arranged; and second, because of the flood. Detectives will be sent out here to investigate."

"And what was the blow dealt with?" Vilas asked nervously. "Couldn't you—find the weapon?"

Southley looked at him sharply.

"That will be hunted for tomorrow," he replied. "All we could tell was that he was that he was struck with some blunt sort of a weapon, and with terrific power—enough power to snap his neck like a reed. The blunt weapon must have had two nails or spikes—because there are two deep parallel scratches in the bruised flesh."

My eyes were upon Vilas' face. He didn't look at us.

"I only know one thing—of a kind of a weapon that would leave a mark like that," he said in a strange, harsh tone. "And that isn't a weapon at all. It's an animal's paw."

"And that is the one thing that must be forgotten by all of us, if we are to learn the truth," Southley told him. "It only brings horror, not clear thought. Forget the legend at once, and begin with clear eyes. That's our only chance."

With this, our little group broke up. Ernest tried to snatch a few hours of sleep on the sofa. I had plans of my own that necessitated a consultation with the negro that was to carry word to the coroner when the sun rose. And just as I came back from my talk with him I met Josephine on the stairs.

"Where are you going?" I demanded.

She seemed surprised at my tone.

"And what right have you to ask?" she answered me.

She might have been the spirit of the dawn itself in her soft gray drape, and the light of stars in her eyes. I knew from her look that she had heard of the tragedy.

"It is just that I'm afraid for you," I told her humbly. "No one knows what might not happen—in this house."

"And you are still watchful for me—even since last night?"

Of course she referred to the scene in the den. No words can tell how appealing, from the shadows of the stairway, was her voice.

Carrying Power to West Texas

Beyond the pavement's end, beyond the sewers and sidewalks and water mains and other conveniences of the city, the lines of this company "carry on"—the unbroken string of "wooden soldiers" which carry electric power to 102 communities in the heart of West Texas.

Important items in the forward march of West Texas are these wooden poles and their connecting ties of copper. They carry light to more than 50,000 customers, operate countless tons of industrial machinery, and perform those many-fold duties which only electricity, the "Perfect Servant," can perform perfectly. Too, they give to the smaller communities in which this company operates the same high class electric service that is given metropolitan centers.

Today this company has in operation more than 1,550 miles of high lines similar to that shown above—tremendous investments it has made and upon which it is paying city, county, state and federal taxes. Month after month the mileage is being increased, carrying electric service into new towns, to new industries, and into less thickly populated localities that they, too, might have the benefits of electric service.

The West Texas Utilities Company is making these extensions, not because it is required to do so, but in order that it might do its part in the upbuilding of West Texas and in making these communities, however small, better places in which to live.

and ye're a standing right now in front of as safe a bank as kin be found and officered by as fine a set of business men as Munday has got and every one of 'em the leadin' citizens of Munday and fine fellers says he p'intin his finger at a big size-able lookin' buildin' with a sign on hit readin' First National Bank. Well hit looked like hit ort to be a unobustable bank and, sez, sez I, Jack are ye shore that aint no danger of that that First National Bank bustin and me losin my money same as that Coon Skin Crossin bank done?"

"Mrs. Rainwater," sez Jack Mayes. "That is a heap more danger of me a bustin from eatin' in them fine fried chickens out at Bill Smith's house than that that First National Bank a bustin which is as strong as that Rock of Gibraltar a settin over yander in Eurip (which might come toppin down some day) but I don't believe with such fine business men a managin of the First National Bank of Munday which has grown from $27,152.27 with deposits in 1904 to $449,203.10 in 1926 and gittin more business every day. I jist don't see how such a bank kin bust and I believe yer money will be plum safe," sez Jack. So he tuk me in and now who do ye reckon riz up from a fine desk a settin' thar in the front end of that sizeable bank buildin' and come forth to greet me and Bill Smith, jist as pleasin' like as if we wuz his own brother and sister come to see him? "Haint no idee Lucindy, fer so many of them fellers got their start right here in Coon Skin, thar haint no tellin' which un ye seed. Now who wuz it?" asked Mrs. Tweekins. "Do ye rickoleet little tow-headed Clarence Eiland, knowed as "Skinny", what usen to come out to Coon Skin Crossin's pertracted meetins longer his mammy and daddy and inginerly would git hooked up with Dock Fitzdoodle's little lly, whilst his paw and maw wuz at meetin' and them two would break up ever settin' hen on 'the place a chunkin of em often their nestes and almost run ole Muly's yearlin calf to deth a ridin' of him?" "Shore I recked et that little rap skalian. Has Clarence Eiland done growed up and living thar in Munday?" asked Saffronia Higgins. "Land of goodness, Saffronia, Clarence Eiland has done growed up to be one of the main pillars of Munday and is the president of that that First National Bank and has been a workin' thar fer 12 years hand running and aint never been fired outen that bank yet."

skereely git him to cut enough stove wood fer me to cook a meal of vittles—" "Now, aint that the truth? Ebernezer Tweekins is jist as lazy hisself," averred Mrs. Tweekins. "Well, Ben he jist up and lowd as how most men folks wuz awful lazy and if hit warnt fer the wimen folks a-gettin' behind 'em and pushin' 'em along he reckoned most of 'em would drap dead in their tracks with laziness; but, sez, he—" "Now Mrs. Rainwater, to be shore of keepin' yer self warm and comfortable in yer new home, why don't ye buy a fine Reznor gas stove fer every Reznor and one of our fine Detroit gas ranges fer yer kitchen, then ye wont give a darn whuther ye ole man cuts and wotes in any wood or not fer ye kin be supplied with fuel fer cooking and heating by the County Gas Company, and the stoves by the Guinn Hardware Co."

"And don't ye know right thar is whar my ole man bought us a new set of them Community knives and forks, his a sayin as how he warnt got to eat with them ole wooden hadled knives no more, because I wuz sharpened 'em so much he wuz a feared of cuttin his mouth an he perposed to git some of them silver knives and forks and spoons; and right thar whilst he wuz a gittin them knives and forks if ole Tyie didn't pick a fight with Ben Guinn's white bull dog, Joe Boy and almost got his yere chawed off afore me and Bill Smith and Ben Guinn could pull him off?" "Shorenough?" "Yes and then warnt satisfied with bein almost et up by Joe Boy, if he didn't foller my ole man over to Musser Lumber Co. and git into another fight with Henry Chapman's fine Police dog, Texas Queen." "Shorenough?" "Well did Mr. Rainwater git one of them new fangled Farm Tractors, Lucindy?" "Lawdy massy yes. He bought one of them Farm Tractors offen Ben Guinn afore he bought the farm, fer he lowd no matter whar he got a farm, them tractors wuz the handiest things fer up to date farmin in a farmer could have and he he wuz gittin blamed tired of drivin mules and hollerin at 'em and he perposed to git hisself some up to date farmin machinery right thar offen Ben Guinn Implement Co. afore he went a step further and beins as how Ben wuz so accomodatin and reliable he'd druther trade longin he warnt acquainted and likely as not git cheated." "So before I could stop him he had laid in a fine stock of plows, hoes, cultivators and all sich offen Ben, includin' one of them cream separators as he wuz lowd to sorter git a start in the dairy business afore long beings he wuz so nigh to the Munday Mill & Elevator Co. so he could git plenty of them Superior Cow chows and he wuz a tellin sich to Henry Chapman whilst a settin in thar in the Musser Lumber Co. office with his feet on Henry's desk a smokin a big seegar give to him by Henry when he set him to figerin on the new modern bungalow sich as Musser Lumber Company is a buildin fer folks all over Knox Co. and he wuz a tellin of Henry as how he wuz figgerin on lettin me do the milkin of them cows (whilst he looked out fer marketin the milk and all sich) when up steps me and Bill Smith to git the bucket of green SEWALLS Paint Mirandy had cautioned Bill to fetch out and also a sizeable batch of lumber to patch them barns and fences and the hole in the back porch.

"Shorenough? He wuz a figgerin on building a house fer ye to live in without consultin the lovin wife of his buzum?" "To be shore he wuz. "Well as I wuz a sayin, when my ole man spoke them sassy remarks to Henry Chapman about him lowdin fer me to do the milkin of them dairy cows he wuz lowd into by, I jist sez, "Pass them plans over to me and if the house suits me-ck kin perced with the buildin but I p'intedly aint goin to take no chances on no house ordered by Jeems Rainwater, who is jist as liable to have the kitchen on the front end of the house and the settin room on the back end and I don't reekin he's figgered on ary bath room—him a bein so dead agin takin baths hisself cepen once a week when he ginerly goes down to the creek and washes all over." "Oh, to be shore Mrs. Rainwater," sez Benton Dobbs, assistant manager. "We wouldn't think of building a house without yer passin on the plans, and as for the bath tub I have figgered on a fine bath room adjoining to yer bed room whar hit wont be so much trouble fer Mr. Rainwater and hit wont be necessary no more fer Mr. Rainwater to use a creek fer a bath tub."

"Leave it to Musser Lumber Co," sez he, "to build you a house as complete as it can be built, fer we have everything that goes into a house, and are prepared to give ye all sich built-in features as built in iron boards, breakfast nooks, medicine cabinets, telephone booths, and—" "Well now, sez I, "ye kin change that thar breakfast nook to a dining room fer I don't low to eat breakfast in no nook whar me and Jeems will be gougin one another in the jaw with our elbows when we're cuttin up our vittles and porin in our coffee out in our sasers to cool fer we want plenty of elbow room fer sich as that."

"Alright, sez the obleegin Mr. Dobbs, "then we'll cut out the breakfast nook and put the refrigerator in that space open in on the outside so's the ice man can deliver ice right into the ice box and not have to tromp up the clean kitchen floor unless ye are figgerin on one of them Frigidaires from West Texas Utilities Company. "Well now that shore is a fine idee and I low to git Musser Lumber Co. to build me jist a house with all sich kinveniences if I ever move to Munday."

"Yes and if ye haint got all cash to pay down, same as me and Jeems has they kin borry the money fer ye from one of them loan companies and they'll build yer house on most any terms ye kin mention, they're that obleegin."

"Shorenough?" "Yes, and whilst the obleegin Henry Chapman wuz a showin me that fine lumber yard of his'n with all that fine lumber kept under sheds and me a tellin him to be shore and put that Grade Marked Lumber in our new house so's we could see what kind we wuz gittin and me a chargin him pertickler not to fergit to have John Pace and Walter Scott from that Haskell Telephone Co. to be right thar with their poles and wires to hook up with the fur talkin telephone, so's I could set in at onst to talkin down to Coon Skin Crossin to sister Tweekins and sister Gillwuzzle and Saffronia Higgins."

Doctor Found Women and Children Sick More Often than Men

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated. In the course of Dr. Caldwell's 47 years' practice (he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1875), he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pspein. In 1902 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on the market. The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in Dr. Caldwell's private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. Millions of bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are being used a year. The great success is based on facts, as reported by one satisfied user telling another. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have gotten many hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us that it helped them when every-thing else failed. While women, children and elderly people are especially benefited by Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, it is promptly effective on the most obstinate cases. It is mild and gentle in its action and does not cause griping and strain. Containing neither opiates nor narcotics, it is safe for the tiniest baby. Children like it and take it willingly. Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Keep a bottle in your home—where many live someone is sure to need it quickly. We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write to us and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

Delegates Will Find Warm Welcome at Houston

Coliseum, Built for Event, Will Be Permanent; Growth of City Due to Plans of Its Pioneers

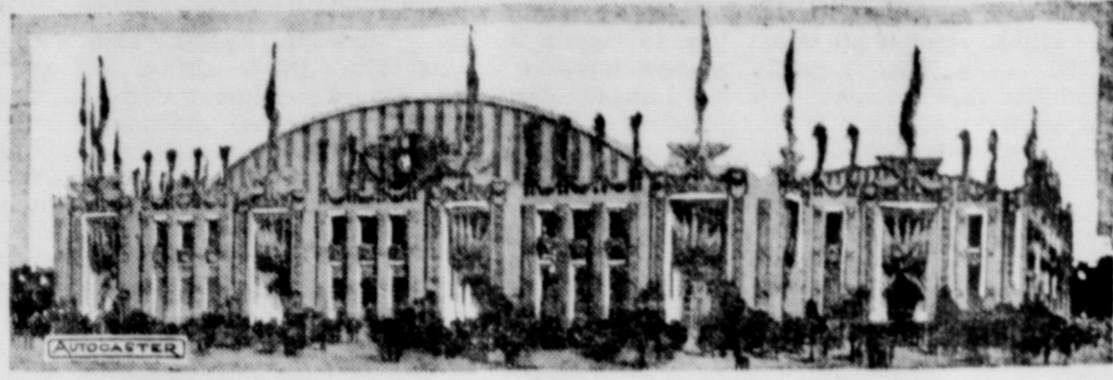

By Robert Fuller

Houston, Texas, June 11.—Houston is all set for the great Democratic National Convention, which will convene here on June 26. And while Houston has been bending every effort toward perfecting plans for the convention, civic leaders have not been overlooking the opportunity so to shape this work that it will fit into the solid foundation of a still greater Houston. Although the movement and actual construction of the convention coliseum has been somewhat of an overnight project, all workers seemingly have been impressed with the idea that they are not building a temporary structure.

The city of Houston was laid out according to a well-defined city plan by its pioneers. Leaders of civic life in villages, towns and cities throughout the nation are expected to absorb some concrete ideas on city-building when they are in Houston for the convention. These local leaders are pioneers and it is to them that future generations will point when their towns become cities.

The coliseum is placed in the center of what is destined to be a "civic center," and around which many future public buildings are planned. In this there is a good idea in city-building. No community is too small to start planning for the future, and a sound foundation provides for later phenomenal growth. In its early days Houston was a small, secluded town.

Where The Democrats Will Flock June 26

It has become large and powerful because of the wise planning of its pioneers.

An arrangement program for the convention has been perfected that is considered adequate to care for another 100,000 overnight addition to the population.

Special arrangements are being made by convention committee to care for all visitors to Houston at and about the time of the party gathering.

These are the words of Jesse H. Jones, Houston capitalist and chairman of the arrangements committee: "Come to Houston the city is ready to care for you."

Claude G. Bowers, New York editorial writer, historian and orator, will be the keynote speaker at the convention. Mr. Bowers attracted great attention by his address at the last Jackson Day Dinner, which is considered a masterpiece. It was beautifully written, and most effectively spoken.

It was Jesse H. Jones who led the fight for Houston when the Democratic convention city was being chosen. Mr. Jones is the publisher of the Houston Chronicle.

All the proceedings at the convention—as in the case of the Kansas City conclave of the G. O. P.—will be broadcast over the radio in a gigantic hook-up reaching into every nook and cranny of the country. The most thorough "radio picture" of a convention ever made will be presented to the listeners, as microphones will be placed all about the convention floor and balconies and everything going on will be "picked up" and transmitted.

History Will Be Made Here!

Frank O. Lowden

FRANK ORREN LOWDEN

Frank Orren Lowden has a distinguished public record. He is an advocate of the McNary-Haugen bill. He is himself a farmer's son, and he worked on the family farm until he was nearly of age. Today he is the owner of a 5,000-acre farm scientifically managed at Oregon, Illinois, and he owns and operates extensive cotton plantations in Arkansas and Texas. Few individuals have a greater personal stake in a wise solution of the agricultural problem.

He was born in Sunrise City, Minn., in 1861. After studying at the University of Iowa and a law college, he practiced law in Chicago from 1887 to 1906. He was a professor of law at Northwestern University in 1889. He served as a delegate to Republican conventions, later winning a seat in Congress.

In 1917 he was elected Governor of Illinois, serving until 1921, and his administration is considered brilliant.

In 1926 he was elected president of the International Press Foundation.

He is an easy and fluent speaker, and has a colorful personality. He is on record as vigorously opposing America's entry into the League of Nations.

A NEW PLAN SINGING AND HEALTH NO RAIN IN FOUR YEARS THE VICE-PRESIDENCY

H. G. Wells has a plan for man and government of the earth, with one board of directors running the whole thing.

Religions, says Wells, have run their course. Christianity, which began with "the completest communism," has become the completest capitalism.

"Take all thou hast and give to the poor," has been changed to "let all thou canst, and Devil take the hindmost."

Buddhism began in complete renunciation. Buddha let the hungry tigress eat his body. Now vices superstition replaces Buddha's teachings—and so it goes.

Mr. Wells' plan is interesting, like those of Plato, in his "Republic," Moore in his "Utopia," and Karl Marx, in his book that became the foundation of modern socialism.

Each one would work as well as the other, that is to say, not at all. Yet each is useful, for it makes men think, and that is important.

The human race is an individual on a bigger scale, and it is in its infancy. It is useless to contemplate a baby two years old and plan to make a man of it in six months.

You must observe how and at what rate your race or individual can grow, then do what you can to direct and promote good growth.

The most important work now is to encourage thought and distribute knowledge. And the greatest agency is the public school.

"Give light, and the people will find their own way." Give good public schools and you give light.

Madame Requin, opera singer, climbed the 1,338 steps of New York's Woolworth building in 13 minutes and 4 seconds, beating previous records.

Thirty-eight years old, weight 104 pounds, the lady earned $3,000 by the climb, and did a useful thing by impressing the health value of singing. Nothing develops the lungs as singing does. Sing at your work and avoid consumption.

Teach your children to sing. Imitate the British, who always sing, whether they CAN sing or not.

Farmers in the Little Karoo and other parts of Cape Province are disturbed by the worst drought in South Africa's recorded history. No rain has fallen in four years, fertile lands turn to deserts, farm houses are falling into ruins, the last green leaf has disappeared.

We have all cause for thankfulness. Lack of rainfall would make life impossible. A tilting of the earth, spilling the oceans, would sweep this continent with a tidal wave a mile high. A change in water from H<sub>2</sub>O to H<sub>2</sub>O<sub>2</sub> would change that water into peroxide of hydrogen. And if, like other substances, water contracted with the cold, instead of expanding, as it turns to ice, the ice would sink to the bottom of lakes and rivers, accumulate there and prevent navigation.

We have reason to be thankful. When would you suggest for Vice-President on the Republican ticket? How would you go about selecting him?

New York's Business Men's League suggests Colonel Theodore Roosevelt. His father accepted the Vice-Presidency against his will, complaining "I am being sidetracked." It turned out to be quite a conspicuous "side track."

Governor Lowden is said to have declined the Vice-Presidency when Harding was elected. Had he accepted, he would be President now.

One blast, one underground explosion, one cave-in kill miners in West Virginia, Kentucky and Nevada. And hope has been abandoned for more than one hundred miners in the Mather mine in Pennsylvania.

Those that, from comfortable offices, oppose increase in miners' wages above the bare necessity, would not care to do the miners' work.

Ten seniors of Princeton University announced their intention to take up aviation as a life work. Ocean flights have stimulated that interest.

MORE HORSEPOWER FOR FARM RELIEF

All proposed plans have thus far failed to provide the farmer with farm relief by increasing his selling prices. Industry, however, met a somewhat similar situation by lowering the cost of production. A similar solution can be successfully applied to agriculture.

The increasing of production per worker on the farm is being met to a certain extent by using larger units of power, whether horse or mechanical. Where one man was using a single horse or team he is now using from 3 to 8 horses, thus increasing the ground covered from two to five times. By the use of larger power units hired labor can be reduced or eliminated.

An analysis of raising corn divides costs according to the following:

Land ..... 50 percent
Labor ..... 20 percent
Miscellaneous ..... 10 percent
Of these items one can be considered stationary, namely, the land cost. Labor and power are variable and have been the main obstructions to lower production costs. Larger power units are doing much to decrease labor factors. Also, larger power units if used over larger farm areas can do much to lower the power percentage.

Professor J. B. Davidson, senior agricultural engineer, United States Department of Agriculture, summing up investigational work in 36 states, offers this equation for farming:

1.  $Q = \frac{I \times P}{C}$
Q is the quantity of production.
I is the selling price.
C is the cost of production.

Professor Davidson states: "Where quantity of production is held uppermost one finds prosperous farmers who plan to farm more acres without increasing the overhead."

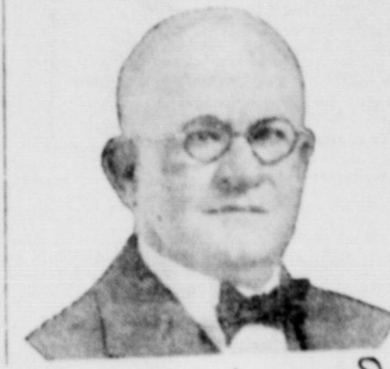

Coru controls central western agriculture. In that area the acreage one man can farm is dependent on the number he can cultivate. With the single row cultivator he was unable to cultivate more than four to seven acres per day. The two row cultivator doubled this amount. Three and four row cultivators are now on the market—even six row were used this season. It cultivates fifty acres per day!

W. R. Condon was in the city Wednesday, having just recovered from a ten days' illness.

Your Homes Depend On Hardware Stores

What if you couldn't buy a pound of nails here in Munday—or an ax handle—or a paring knife! What if you always had to wait to send to Dallas for things like that? In other words, what if Munday had no hardware stores?

Ever since it was a frontier town, Munday has been a good place to buy hardware. It had to be because our pioneers couldn't build their homes and buildings, and cultivate the ground without the supplies they got at a hardware store.

But because we can always get what we want in the hardware line, we've come to take our stores more or less for granted. We forget that it's our hardware stores which keep our lawns mowed, the fields and gardens cultivated and our farming going.

It's the things we buy at our hardware stores which build and maintain our homes. And Munday can't have too many good homes!

Munday has always had good hardware stores. The proprietors live here and know the country, and they carry the things the people of Munday country need. Give them your support!

ARE WE WORSE OR BETTER?

Recently a pastor began his sermon with a statement which sounds quite familiar. He said: "There is lawlessness everywhere. Children no longer obey their parents. It is evident that the end of things is at hand."

Then the preacher told his congregation that the words were not original with him, nor even an utterance of the present day, but that they had been translated from an inscription found among ruins in ancient Assyria, dating centuries before the time of the patriarch Abraham.

Throughout all recorded history are evidences that such pessimism has existed from time to time as to the future of the race. Now and then an era of comparative peace and quiet has been experienced, only to be followed by recurring outbreaks of violence and lawlessness.

While present day conditions are bad enough, it seems that on the whole they are better than those of the past. There is more thought given to the relief of suffering, to the betterment of industrial conditions, to the protection of the helpless and to other humanitarian enterprises than ever before.

Although the World War gave civilization a severe test, recovery has been rapid and the ground lost is being speedily regained. It must be remembered that war has marked the history of every generation of mankind, and the same is true of lawlessness, oppression and every other manifestation of human imperfection.

It is reasonable to believe that these will always exist in greater or less degree, so long as good and evil struggle for mastery in the minds and hearts of men.

SOME PURITAN CUT-UPS

Those who depend on the regular historical works of the school-book type no doubt have formed the idea that the Puritan forefathers (and foremothers) of New England were about as perfect as folks could be.

The iconoclasts have been at work again, however, and have dug up some old records which appear to show that human nature was about the same in the old days as it is at present. A recent writer quotes at length from a Massachusetts court docket of 1646, of which a few sample cases are given as follows:

Henry Walton fined for saying he would as leave hear a dog bark as to hear Reverend Cobbell preach.

John Studley fined for stealing his master's ox and selling it to him.

Thomas Gray of Marblehead whipped for being overseen in drink.

Philip Crumwell fined for not living with his wife.

William Claus whipped for spying into the chamber of his master and telling what he saw.

Charles Phillips fined for being in drink three times in two days.

Mrs. Griffith fined for swearing.

Sarah Parrig fined for wearing a silk hood.

Sarah Collins fined for railing at her husband and calling him "a potguttid devil."

DO WE APPRECIATE OUR FILLING STATION?

There is not another business anywhere that does so much "thank you" work for the public as the filling stations. They are always ready to help every fellow in distress whether a customer or a stranger. They will run out and meet their customers and do their bidding, and oftentimes many minutes are given the public for only "thank you."

The automobile owners therefore should patronize their home stations when they need tires or other accessories. The mail order man does not meet you and give you free air, and fill your hot radiator, neither does the mail order man pay to help work your roads and streets, but your local dealer does all that. He contributes to every cause for the betterment of your town and county, and throws in a good measure of FREE SERVICE every day of his life. Look at these boys, smeared with grease and grime—they do not hesitate to soil their hands or clothing to do your bidding, but do it all with a courteous smile. A man who buys tires and accessories from a mail order house, ought to be ashamed to drive up to his local station and ask for FREE AIR, he ought to be compelled to drive to Chicago or Dallas to get his'n. These are our sentiments.—Exchange.

Thinking Out Loud!

Cullen F. Thomas of Dallas has issued a statement declining to run for governor in opposition to Gov. Dan Moody. "I do not believe I could beat him if I would; I don't want to beat him if I could," the statement said. All of which goes to prove our contention that Cullen F. Thomas is one of the brainiest men in Texas.

We learn from the Baylor County Banner that Editor O. C. Harrison of that publication and Editor E. L. Covey of the Goree Advocate have up a wager "only a cold drink" over the senatorial race in Texas. O. C. is of the opinion that the run-off will be between Tom Connally and Earle B. Mayfield, with victory for Connally. E. L. Covey contends that the race will center between Tom Blanton and Mayfield, with victory for Blanton. We're wondering if Editor Covey could buy two drinks on this proposition.

With the addition of natural gas Munday will have all the modern conveniences that are enjoyed by our big city brothers. No town in West Texas can offer more to those seeking industrial location or ideal living conditions than Munday.

There's going to be a number of "Toms" on the ballot in the July primaries. In Knox county there are three candidates for the office of county clerk who answer to the name of Tom, while there are two Toms seeking promotion from congressman to senator—Tom Blanton and Tom Connally. Since all profess to be good democrats it may be assumed that all were named Thomas Jefferson. Anyway, you can pay your money and take your choice.

But speaking about names, Editor Covey of the Goree Advocate complains that there is too much preference shown to the Mayfields and Terrells in Texas politics. It is doubtless true that some of the Mayfields and Terrells who are now enjoying high political stations in Texas are there by virtue of records established by Mayfields and Terrells who have long since answered the final summons. Certainly it would be unjust to penalize an aspirant for office simply because of his name, but voters should nevertheless post themselves as to what each candidate stands for, regardless of name, and vote for the good of the country. For instance, we heard a strong Mayfield supporter say some days ago that the name Mayfield would attract 50,000 votes in Texas. Of course that is fine and dandy if this individual Mayfield is responsible for the good will attached to the name, but it is too often that such is not the case, especially in recent years, for it is a well known fact that this Mayfield has benefitted no small bit by the high esteem in which his kinsman, the late Allison Mayfield, was held by the people of Texas.

The Rev. P. D. O'Brien will leave early next week for Toronto, Canada, to attend a meeting of Baptists from all parts of the world. When asked why Canada had been chosen by the Baptist his only reply was that it wasn't safe in Mexico.

BOB TAYLOR'S DREAM OF HEAVEN

Of the many word painters who have lived and painted, not one has wielded the rhetorical brush with Bob Taylor. Perhaps the great Tennessean never gave to the world anything prettier than his dream of heaven, which we print below:

"What heaven is I know not, but I long have dreamed of its purple hills and its fields of light, blossoming with immortal beauty; of its brooks of laughter and its rivers of songs and palaces of eternal love. I long have dreamed that every bird which sings its life out here on earth may sing forever there in the tree of life, and every concentrated song which suffers the pains of this world may rest among the flowers of heaven and live and love forever. I have long dreamed of opal towers and burnished domes, but what care I for gates of pearl or streets of gold, if I can but meet the loved ones who have loved and blessed me here on earth; see the glorified faces of father and mother and the little baby brother who died among the bursting buds of hope, and take in my arms again my own darling baby who fell asleep ere her little tongue had learned to lip "Our Father who art in Heaven." What care I for crowns of stars and harp of gold if I can love and laugh and sing with my loved ones forever, in the smile of my Savior and my God?"

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1927-28 by Wynne Ferguson
Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright 1927, by Wynne Ferguson

The following question is one that usually puzzles the average player, therefore any light that can be thrown upon it should be useful and interesting. Suppose Z holds five diamonds, the ace jack and his partner, Y, holds four to the king, viz:

Diamonds—K, 7, 6, 2
Clubs—A, J, 8, 5, 4
Hearts—none
Spades—A, K, J, 9, 7

In this hand as played, there was no score, rubber game. The bidding was as follows: Z one spade, A pass, Y two hearts, and B pass. Z three diamonds, A pass, Y three no-trump and B pass. Z four diamonds, A pass, Y five clubs and all passed. There was some dispute as to the proper bidding, and the writer was asked for his opinion, which is as follows:

Z's hand is a freak hand so should be bid in the first instance to give his partner as good a picture of it as possible. For that reason I would bid one diamond so that when I bid spades later my partner would realize that diamonds was the better suit. If you bid spades first and then diamonds with Z's hand, your partner has to guess as to which is the better suit. The best way to eliminate guess-work is to tell him the facts at once, and this can be done by bidding the diamonds first.

Y should then bid one heart and Z one spade. Y could then bid one no-trump. Such a bid should indicate to Z that Y has less than normal help for diamonds and spades and also has tricks in the club suit. Z's hand, however, is of such a freak type that he is not justified in leaving his partner in with one no-trump. He should, therefore, bid two diamonds and it is now Y's duty to pass. He has a wonderful hand to help the diamond bid and game should certainly result. After Z has bid two suits and rebid the diamonds, Y should bid one spade. Y should then bid two hearts and Z should bid three diamonds. Y is then in the position that an original diamond bid would have avoided; that is, he is forced to guess as to the nature of Z's diamond bid. Personally, I would prefer to try for game in diamonds, but would not criticize his bid of three no-trump. Z, of course, must bid four diamonds over the three no-trump. His hand is of such a character that it should be played at one of his suits. At this point Y should have passed and allowed Z to play the hand at four diamonds.

The bidding indicated at least eleven diamonds and spades in Z's hand, so that he could not possibly hold more than one or two clubs. Y's five club bid, for that reason, was very bad; the only one, however, that can justly be criticized. After it, Z should have bid five diamonds. I would never allow my partner to play five clubs with that hand and that bidding. Z's failure to so bid five diamonds is also subject to criticism. It is an interesting hand.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES
W. O. Logan, Co. Agent
The recent rains over the county has added pep and vigor to all kinds of farming and live stock raising. Before the rains some of the fellows were about ready to go fishing and stay until it did rain. If they had owned Jerseys and hogs they would have had a living anyway. If they owned a hundred standard bred hens, bred-to-lay they would have had hen fruit that insured breakfasts.

Boyd Gillispie, Buck Spivey, Jim Hughes, J. O. Feemster, J. E. Becknell, Harper Cooksey, M. A. Verhalen, H. E. Black, J. Robt. Hamilton & Son ranch, are a few of the recent additions to the practice of terracing in the county. They range from Antelope Flat in the north-west part of the county to the south-east below Goree. Some of them were so late getting started this year they will be ready for an early start in the fall. These and the others that terraced early, and some years earlier, do not want to be confronted with the foregoing verse:

"Herds of gullies now remind us
We should build our land to stay,
And departing leave behind us
Fields that do not wash away.
When our children pay the mortgage
On the place where long we toiled, They'll not have to ask the question
'Here's the bond, but where's the soil?'"

Terraced land held the recent rains and it went down for underground season to be used by crops during hot dry July days. Like the low places and ditches that caught the water that came from the hills, some men say, "this flat place or swag always makes stuff if we get showers enough for water to cover it over."
Some fifty or sixty boys have signified their desire to feed two or three pigs 100 or 120 days and ship them to market together. They want to do this for three lessons: 1st: That well bred pigs are more profitable; 2nd: That a balanced ration gives greatest returns in pork at less cost; and 3rd: That by shipping their pigs together they get greater market returns.

When final feeding arrangements are made and sufficient pigs are located for the feeding period, it is planned to have the boys meet and mix their own ration supplement together, thereby learning the secret of their united efforts and how to combine rations.

There are likely to be boys that have not joined in this that want too, if so, notify the County Agent at Benjamin. If there are sufficient pigs and boys for each community to load out a car it will be a great lesson in pork production. It doesn't take registered pigs, nor pigs subject to register, good feeder pigs, at market prices fills the bill.

An Investment with an EXTRA DIVIDEND

THERE'S a big difference between an investment and a speculation. You can speculate in any old gasoline and hope it will deliver a satisfactory number of miles per gallon. You can invest in Summer Conoco and be sure of an extra dividend—a bonus of extra miles.

Your purchases of gasoline during the touring season represent a substantial investment. Make sure that the returns from that investment are the highest you can get.

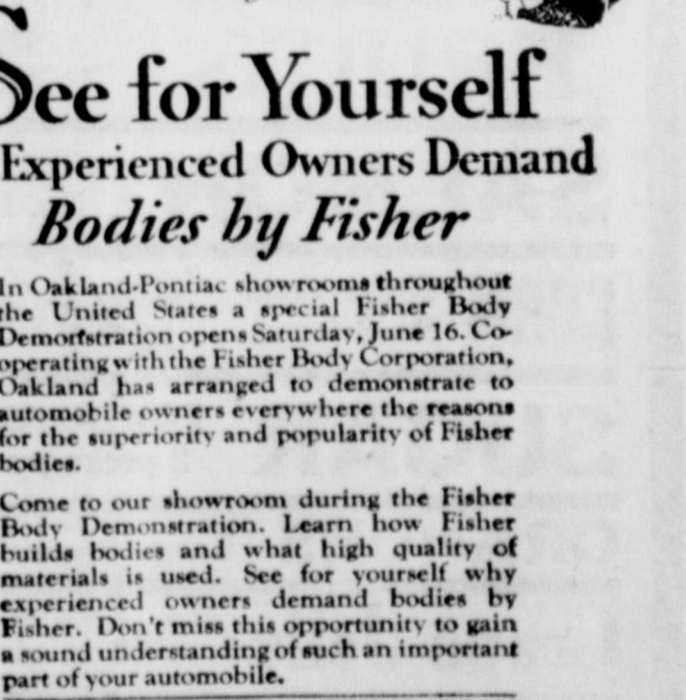

Fill at the Conoco pump.

HINTS FOR THE HOME

Soon the roads will be dotted with cars bearing friends and neighbors from north, south, east and west of you—all eager to renew acquaintance after winter's stay-at-home days.

And how gladly you'll welcome them—IF you know your pantry shelf is ready for emergencies. One needs so little to be prepared for unexpected guests—yet this little is so often neglected!

For a hurried luncheon or tea, what could be nicer than salmon or tuna fish served with thick golden mayonnaise, potatoes fried slowly in butter or margarine, so they are crisp and brown; assorted pickles and preserves arranged attractively in a condiment dish—and hot biscuits? These are homely foods, and inexpensive. But fish and dressing, pickles and preserves must be on the shelf—if they are to come to your rescue, pronto!

Since half the charm of hospitality lies in its seeming to be no trouble at all, let's remember these tricks of preparedness that help so much when friends "just drop in."

X Date and Nut Spread

For luncheon or tea, use this spread on slices of buttered white or graham bread. With these open sandwiches, serve others of simento cheese (this may be bought in jars) and cut your bread in fancy shapes, without crusts.

1-4 cup dates, chopped; 1-4 cup chopped nuts, 4 tablespoons sweetene; condensed milk, 2 teaspoons lemon juice. Beat milk and lemon juice together with a fork, add thick. Add dates and nuts and mix well.

Easy Way to Preserve Cherries

Fill glass jars with sound, clean cherries; cover with syrup made of one pound sugar (boet or cane) and one quart water. Close jars; immerse in boiling water, allowing one inch of water over tops. Simmer slowly 15 minutes. Remove, let stand 15 minutes, and set in cool place.

Do Your Omelets Fall?

One way to be certain of success with omelets is to add a tiny bit of baking powder to the eggs when whipping them.

Measuring Flour for Cakes

In baking cakes, it makes a difference whether flour is measured before or after sifting. So always examine recipes carefully, noting directions in this respect. Newer recipes invariably specify the use of prepared cake flour sifted once before measuring, then sifted as many additional times as the recipe directs. This makes lighter, fluffier cakes.

Tonic for Asparagus Beds

Salt strewn generously over asparagus beds will kill the weeds and serve as a fertilizer.

This is a monkey-faced trout that was caught by Postmaster Lewis Myers of Cairo, Green County, N. Y. It is a rainbow trout 12 inches long with a head disfigured, probably from an accident, so that it resembles a monkey.

Judge N. S. Kilgore was here Wednesday from Benjamin, having come over in company with Mr. J. A. Fisher and Uncle Lem Earnest to attend a meeting of the executive of Confederate veterans.

FIRST!
Detroit Jewel

The first gas range to be sold in Munday for immediate connection on the gas line was sold on Wednesday morning, and of course, it was a DETROIT JEWEL, sold by us to J. C. Stephens, who resides southwest of Munday on the gas line.

The range was connected by us on Wednesday afternoon and Mr. Stephens is likely the first to enjoy the convenience of natural gas in this section, and with the DETROIT JEWEL he is assured of the maximum of satisfaction from the use of natural gas.

The DETROIT JEWEL isn't the cheapest—it's the BEST.
