OWNERSHIP IN ACTION

It is probable that a great many people still have a rather hazy idea of what functions stock exchanges serve and how they operate.

Some, for instance, believe that these organizations own stocks—and that, much like a retail store, they sell them to buyers at a predetermined price.

Actually, however, the exchanges neither own stocks, nor buy nor sell them. They do not set the price. Their service is confined to providing a market place, where prices are arrived at openly by buyers and sellers under what amounts to an auction system.

Who, then, owns the stocks?

To answer that, you'd have to split the names of about 15,000,000 American people—male and female, old and young, living in the great cities and in crossroads hamlets. Every conceivable occupation would be represented many times—executive and mechanic, school teacher and house, doctor and farmer, and so on down an almost endless list. So would every income bracket, from the very moderate to the very large. But, in this connection, the great majority of those 15,000,000 representative Americans have average jobs and salaries and earnings.

There's a second class of stockholders, too, of which insurance companies are typical. Part of their resources go into the stocks of American industry—the concerns which keep this nation's economy going—and so each policyholder is, in effect, a stockholder by indirection.

Stock ownership amounts to as complete a cross section of this country as does home-ownership.

THINK IT OVER

Fire loss statistics for the nation, measured in dollars, stagger the imagination. In 1950 losses totaled upward of three quarters of a billion dollars. During this past January alone they ran over $68,000,000.

These figures are beyond the imagination of most of us. However, they do indicate one thing with terrible certainty as far as the individual is concerned. His likelihood of having an unfortunate or tragic experience with fire is all too probable. Hundreds of millions of dollars worth of property cannot go up in smoke year after year, even in a country the size of the United States, without many individuals being touched intimately by loss from fire at sometime in their lives.

When you come in contact with fire prevention activities in your community don't make the mistake of thinking they are for the other fellow. They are meant for you because it is through the carelessness of individuals that fire wreaks its havoc. And as sure as you are reading these words if you do not heed homely precautionary advice to check the hazards in your home or business—flues, wiring, rubbish, furnaces, closets and basements—it is a safe bet that one of these days you will add your bit to the annual bonfire of American property. It may be your own funeral pyre as well. Think it over.

GRASS ROOTS OPINION

LIBERAL, KANSAS, SOUTHWEST DAILY TIMES: "Overmanning or government agencies and the overlapping of many new-created bureaus are largely responsible for the poor man-power day-production records. Waste and inefficiency in nearly all government operations now is at an unheard-of peak."

OMAHA, NEB., DAILY JOURNAL-STOCK-MAN: "Subsidies, no matter what name they masquerade under, have no place in the American way. They are a resort to subterfuge, in which the real cost of living is camouflaged so as to fool the people."

ISLIP, N. Y., PRESS: "Mr. Hoover wants Congress to recover its authority over starting wars by having it exercise control over the nation's purse strings. He doesn't propose repudiation of treaties, or obligations, no retreat, no withdrawal from the position we have taken."

OIL CITY, PA., DERRICK: "The British are trying to narrow their dollar gap. Huh! Who isn't?"

RETAILERS HELP

A short time ago the United Press carried an item with a Chicago dateline telling housewives how they could do something tangible about beating high food prices. The idea was for the shopper to take advantage of seasonal changes in food supplies, and to select moderately priced foods which are tasty and nutritional as their higher-priced cousins.

What made this especially interesting is that the information didn't originate with a consumer organization. Instead, it came from a spokesman for the National Association of Retail Grocers and other industry experts.

Here is additional proof that retailers, like all the rest of us, are aggressively interested in helping with the price problem. That goes for retailers in all lines as well as food—and it goes for the chains and independents and all types of stores. The typical retailer, contrary to more or less common misconception, is not hell-bent on selling the most expensive commodities, or in making the greatest possible profit out of them. He knows perfectly well that this sort of policy would drive more and more people out of the market, reduce the buying of millions to a subsistence level—and so, in the long run, hurt the retailer along with everyone else.

Retailing in this country, like production, is based on the mass principle—bug turnover at a small profit. In retailing that principle has worked out to the great advantage of all concerned. And that's why retailing is vitally concerned with inflation—and why it is doing what it can to fight it.

Pig Losses Can Be Reduced By Better Care

Texas farmers can reduce their pig losses greatly by giving the sow and litter better care during and immediately after farrowing, says E. M. Regenbrecht, extension swine husbandman of Texas A. & M. College.

Regenbrecht advises increasing the ration gradually after the pigs are born until the sow is on full feed. A great deal of milk is required to feed a litter of growing pigs, and it is usually best to feed the sow all she

Bluebonnet Seed Sold Over Texas By Ex-Cowboy Who Overcomes Handicap

A former cowboy, who has only one leg but believes "the only place a man is handicapped is under his hat" visited Munday for the first time recently. He sells Texas Bluebonnet seed all over the state but has been passing up Munday because "I didn't know it was as big as it is."

He is Alfred H. Lang of San Angelo, whose nickname is "Texas Bob." He has hitch-hiked thousands of miles in Texas, and declares that mode of travel is faster than by bus.

He began selling Bluebonnet seed about three years ago and since that time has become a one-man Chamber of Commerce for Texas. He often visits the police and Chamber of Commerce immediately upon arriving in a town. He has learned which towns charge so high for a peddler's license that he cannot afford to sell Bluebonnets in them.

Once when he was stopping in a hotel, the desk clerk handed him an envelope with a return address of the chief of police at Alpine. The clerk asked jokingly why he was hearing from the chief of police. "We'll just see," said Lan, tearing open the envelope. It contained $1 and an order for two packets of Bluebonnet seed.

The seed he is selling now came from Llano county, near Buchanan dam, he said.

He recommends that in this area Bluebonnets be planted near a building—on any side but the north. The wind and sand hurt the flowers, he said. He likes to see Bluebonnets planted around public buildings.

During World War II, Lang said he was digging ditches during construction of an air base at Carlsbad, N. M. He wore an artificial leg and his leg became sore and he had to stop digging ditches for a while. He said he met a man who sat on the street with a cup who laughed at Lang for laboring for a living. Lang, according to his story, sat on the street to try the man's philosophy and he sold pencils. "I made a bunch of money that day, but I couldn't look those people in the face," he said. "A Mexican woman gave two or three kiddies a penny each to put in. I just couldn't look them in the face, because I had more money than they did."

He prefers his occupation of traveling over the state and across into bordering states to sell seed.

His right leg was amputated about 11 years ago after he had been injured the third time while working as a cowboy.

Bluebonnet seed may be ordered from him for 50 cents a package at the address, 609 East Harris, San Angelo, Texas. Much of his correspondence is addressed to "Texas Bob" at that address.

ceiling prices on my cows.

As you know, I ain't never won no prizes at a fat stock show, and my cattle ain't what you'd call registered stuff, and I am lookin' forward to the day when some bureaucrat comes out here and attempts to classify them. Would like to know what they are myself. I got one cow that was crossed with what I called a Jersey and a Hereford, but her mother was a cross between a Bramer and a Holstein, and her mother was a cross between a cross and a cross which is too complicated to enumerate. What the calf is nobody knows, but when it comes to classifyin' it in order to put a ceiling price on it, I believe it would be simpler if the government just asked me to put it in a deep freeze and say nothin' about it, and I'm willin' if the government will furnish the deep freeze.

Also, I'm wonderin' what will happen at a cattle auction when the auctioneer reaches the ceiling price. Who gets the cow when half a dozen bidders is noddin' their heads simultaneously at that level?

Just don't see how it'll work, which may not be no stumblin' block to the government.

Any thing to the report they are figurin' on puttin' ceiling prices on the various grades of live cat fish?

Yours faithfully,

Knox Prairie Philosopher Eager To See That Bureaucrats Put Ceiling Price On All His Indefinable Cows

Editor's note: The Knox Prairie Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Miller Creek is baffled over the prospects of ceiling prices on live cattle, his letter this week reveals.

Dear editor:
Found a copy of a paper which the March wind blew against my front door, of the two, March dust with March newspapers or no wind and no papers, believe I'd take the latter don't like to be ignorant of what's goin' on in the world but I put comfort ahead of learnin' any day in the week, aint seen a paper yet I hadn't rather be without than have dust in my eyes, and pulled it off the screen and brought it inside and shook the dust off and read where cattlemen throughout Texas are excited over the prospect of ceiling prices being put on live cattle.

Accordin' to the cattlemen, this will ruin the cattle business, but I look at it in another way. As I see it, it'll ruin the price controllers.

That is, it will when they come out here and start puttin'

1. Deeper Soil Penetration - Greater Pull
2. Balanced Straight Lug Tread Design - Longer Wear!

Goodyear's open center tread has straight deep-biting lugs. No curves to cut traction - no hooks, knobs or elbows to blunt their bite. They cut cleanly into the soil, penetrate full depth, full length. Straight bars closer together at the shoulders wedge the soil for firmer grip - don't "plow out" soil at the sides.

Goodyear open center lugs are all straight, all equal in size and spacing. That's why every lug works equally, pulls fully, wears more evenly. This means a smoother, steadier pull, less vibration and wobble - more riding stability - plus longer life. Get Goodyears for your tractor - they don't cost a penny more.

Mechanical Harvesting Of Cotton Success With The Proper Preparation

Cotton can be harvested efficiently with mechanical pickers and strippers—if proper methods of production and preparation are used.

The results of mechanical cotton harvesting experiments conducted by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station in 1948, 1949 and 1950 at Lubbock, Temple, Denton and College Station are given in the Progress Report 1337 and are the basis for the above statement.

Stripping machines are generally used on storm-proof or storm-resistant varieties of cotton with a stalk height of not more than 30 inches. Approximately 50 percent of the cotton grown on the High Plains in 1949 was harvested with mechanical strippers.

Picking machines will not successfully harvest storm-proof cotton. During the past few years, mechanical pickers have been used in South and Central Texas to pick cotton of open-boll varieties. Approximately 300 of these machines were used in Texas in 1949 and 1950.

Production methods should be used that will make the harvesting operation more efficient and these differ for the two types of harvesting machines.

General recommendations for producing cotton to be harvested with mechanical pickers and strippers are given by the research workers.

Plant in 40-inch rows. Plant resistant or stormproof cotton for harvesting with a stripper and open boll type for harvesting with a picker.

Space plants from two to six inches per foot, depending upon soil fertility and moisture conditions. Such spacing tend to keep the stalk size down for harvesting with a stripper and helps to keep branch limbs short for harvesting with a picker.

Plants should also be spaced evenly. Hill-drop planting is not advised if harvesting is to be done with a stripper. When the picker is to be used, cotton may be hill-dropped with short spacings.

For the late cultivations sweeps should be set so as to leave the middles lower than the ridge of dirt at the base of the plants.

Apply defoliant early enough so that few, if any green bolls will be left unopened when the cotton is ready to strip. After applying the defoliant, from 7 to 15 days should elapse before harvesting. On the High Plains, allow up to 21 days. If available, airplanes should be used for applying late insect control and defoliation materials.

Tractor wheel shields should be used, if needed, to prevent damage to plants and bolls during insect control, defoliation and stripping operations.

The ground speed of the harvesting machine should be determined by the volume of cotton the machine can handle. Cotton should not be mechanically harvested when damp and should be ginned in a plant equipped for doing the best possible job.

A copy of Progress Report 1337 can be obtained by writing to the Publications Office, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, College Station.

Let's Talk LIVESTOCK

(By Ted Gouldy)

FORT WORTH, March 26—Settlement of the threatened walkout of packinghouse workers by the six-week extension of their contract was the bright side of the news for the livestock industry in the past few days.

The fact that the industry spokesmen apparently made no headway in Washington trying to convince OPS authorities that livestock ceiling prices were unworkable was not so good.

It all stems from the general public's lack of understanding of livestock and the industry.

It is not at all uncommon for highly educated men who have been successful lawyers, doctors and businessmen to call up their livestock commission man and ask, "What are cows bringing today at Fort Worth?" Now a shelly canner cow weighing maybe 600 pounds at, say $17 per hundred, brings $102.00 and is one kind of cow.

Another kind of cow would be say, 14 head of big, rangy Holsteins like the Cates Dairy of Hale County sold at Fort Worth last week that averaged 1,297 pounds at $25 and brought $325.25 per head.

Still another variety of cow would be one like the 20 head of canners from L. E. Weeks & Co., Taylor County, that averaged 757 pounds and brought $20.75 per hundred, worth $157.17.

Or, a cow might be one like that I. S. Scott of Castro County sold at Fort Worth. They weighed 1,340 pounds at $28 per hundred. Worth $375.50.

A cow could even be a young one like two that J. F. Svetlik of Buckholts sold at Fort Worth last week weighing 723 pounds and bringing $35 per hundred and having a couple of calves at side that bring $60 per hundred, making the pair worth $333.87.

One could say Tom Holman of Hamlin had some cows, too. His load weighed 845 pounds at $30 per hundred and their calves weighed 328 pounds at $47 per hundred, the pairs bringing $407.60.

Now, in the face of a question as commonly asked and by people who probably own a few cows as, "What are cows bringing at Fort Worth today?" (And some of our business and professional men own a lot of cows.

Then, is it surprising that the people in Washington are hard to convince that a ceiling price on LIVE animals is impossible to apply?

We can readily understand why these Washington desk workers cannot understand why a cow ain't just a cow, like a

Activities Of The Colored People

The teachers and pupils of Dunbar school appreciate very much the many nice magazines that have been given our school. This week we would like to say, "thank you", to Mrs. J. C. Elliott and Mrs. Eiland.

Last Thursday night the following officers were elected for the P.T. A.: Mrs. Dollie Jones, president; Mrs. Fannie Johnson, sec'y. Ruby Durham treasurer and Mrs. Helen Shearod, chairman of program committee.

pair of spectacles are a pair of eyeglasses.

What we cannot understand is why the livestock industry has been unable to bring this matter up in such a way that the Washington control officials cannot understand it.

Is it that Washington officialdom distrusts the industry and the men in it, or, are they just bull-headed?

Whatever the reason for this lack of understanding and failure to agree, it is regrettable. Especially in view of the fact that more meat is being produced and much, much more is on the way.

The all-time record for cattle population in the United States was 85 million head on Jan. 1, 1945. Right now the population is within one and one-half million head of that record.

The percentages by which hog marketings will over-run last year is expected to rise, supplies of 1950 Spring hogs are dwindling but marketing of the 1950 Fall crop is increasing. For several weeks yet, a large movement of 1950 Fall pigs will be hitting the markets.

According to the USDA end of January survey, there was a 10-year record of 666 million pounds of pork in cold storage facilities. Frozen pork made up 426 million pounds of the total.

Current peace talk, which smacked down the Stock market at the close of last week, may take some of the heat off livestock in so far as controls are concerned.

Lambs continue to make record prices at Fort Worth. Wool ed lambs like the club lambs from Midland at $41.50; and those commercially fed lambs from Allen Kellum, Briscoe County, at 95 pounds and $40; some $40 lambs from C. E. Arrott & Son, of Bronte; clipped lambs, No. 2 pelts at $33.00, like those from Joe B. Smith Coleman County, Louise Pitt trad, Gouldbusk and R. E. Johnson, Rockwood, are all time highs.

Perhaps the reason is that reported in the current World Wool Digest: Says ceiling price regulations do not apply until April 1, 1951, on materials being used in defense contracts and lists much woolen material and most kinds of wool as exempted. The April deadline is explained by the fact that some very large Navy and other contracts need to be filled.

Letters From The People

The following letter was received recently from Bobby Howard, who is serving with the armed forces.

Brady Field, Japan
March 6, 1951

Dear Mother, Dad and all:

How does this find all? I am fine. I am in Japan now.

There was a shipment, but nobody knew where. But I had an idea, so that's why I wrote in my other letter. I probably would have been over here before now if our orders hadn't been changed. As it happened we landed up here. When we came over Tokyo was all lighted up. We landed pretty close there at an air base.

That's down on the north end of Japan. But where I am now is 600 miles south of there. We came over from the Philippines to Japan non-stop in nine hours. My first time in any kind of airplane. It was a C-54, one of the largest ships the air base has. I am a short distance from Korea. I may be over there within a few weeks.

The main reason we are over here is there are lots of cargo going out of here and most of the guys that came with me will help load them. There is not much difference here and the Philippines, only they can't speak as well. Japanese live in little better houses. However they don't look so nice on the outside, but they are really nice on the inside.

When you go in their homes, you have to pull off your shoes. To look at the floors you would think they are real hard, but they have rugs they have made by hand and so soft it feels like you are stepping in cotton.

They don't have many cars or vehicles. They travel by bicycles and motorcycles with a trailer type built to them. They have trains going, but the trouble is if you don't know where you are unless you have been there. They can't speak English enough so you will know. I'll close, love,

BOBBY.

It may not be generally known that the United States played an important and an active part in the Texans fight for their independence from Mexico. United States troops did not fight in the battle of San Jacinto but nevertheless they helped to make that victory possible. Here is how:

General Edmund P. Gaines was in command of the south-western military division of the United States. He was strongly sympathetic to the cause of Texas. His instructions were not to advance beyond American territory unless—and this is the important point—unless Indians were used in warfare on the border.

But if the Indians engaged in the war against Texas, then he could cross the Sabine river, which was the boundary between the United States and Texas.

It was part of the strategy of Mexico to enlist the aid of the Indians against the Texans. Thus while Sam Houston was facing the Mexican armies, which were greatly superior to his own in numbers and in equipment, the savages were to attack Texas from the rear. Such a plan might well have proved fatal to the hopes of the Texans for winning their fight for independence.

And this is where General Gaines stepped in. He received word of the warlike attitude of the Indians and a report came that they were planning to combine. He sent Lieutenant Bonnell to the villages of the Caddies and he found Manuel Flores a Mexican agent, had been among them, trying to induce them to declare war on Texas. Gaines advanced with 14 companies to the Sabine and made requisitions on the governors of Tennessee, Mississippi, and Louisiana for a brigade each of volunteers and on Alabama for a battalion.

From the Texas commander of the militia at Nacogdoches, General Gaines had received a message, which reached him in

Weekly Health LETTER

Issued by Dr. Geo. W. Cox
M. D., State Health Officer
of Texas

AUSTIN—"All citizens must cooperate with their neighbors and local authorities if Texas' towns and countryside are to be kept free of unsightly and health-menacing accumulations of garbage and rubbish," warns Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.

"Since garbage, rubbish and other types of refuse are of no value to the producer, by the same token they are of no value to a neighbor. Everyone is responsible for the waste materials which he produces and is under obligation to collect, store and dispose of these materials in a sanitary manner. The of-the night of April 13 (this was four days before the battle of San Jacinto) that at least 1,500 Indians and a thousand mounted Mexicans had massed about 60 miles from Nacogdoches. The General further was advised further that there were at least 300 families between the Trinity and the Neches who would fall into the hands of this force.

Then it was that he called for the large force of volunteers from the four Southern states and took his position on the western edge of the Neutral Ground, as the strip between Louisiana and Texas are known.

This impending intervention by the United States Army stayed the hands of the Indians—and when the news came of the Texans' victory at San Jacinto, the Indians were ready to side with Texas.

Even so, before dispersing, part of this redskin army did commit one act of butchery—an attack on Fort Parker. The few men at the fort were killed and some of the women and children were carried away. Among the prisoners was little Cynthia Ann Parer, who grew up, married a chief and was the mother of Quanah Parker, last chief of the Comanches.

But bask to the aid that the American army gave just by standing by:

Andrew Jackson was President then and Old Hickory himself told the ambassador of Mexico, "I have ordered General Gaines to a favorable position to a speedy execution of the boundary treaty"—which meant that Mexican forces were not to enter American territory—and (said Jackson) to prevent interference with the Indians."

Without having to worry about the possibility that the savages would strike, San Houston was able to turn his full attention to Santa Anna—and everybody knows how well Old Sam carried out the assignment.

Washday for the Army means a big job for the men who operate a field laundry for U. S. troops. The cotton uniforms pile into a small mountain waiting their turn in the mobile washing machine. Portable washers like these make it possible to supply clean, fresh cotton clothing to U. S. fighting men.

officials of every municipality or other political subdivision encounter the problem of collecting and disposal of waste materials discarded by their residents.

"Improper disposal of refuse presents definite hazards to public health for such material create breeding places for rats, flies and other vectors of disease transmission. Odors, smoke and disagreeable appearance are other important considerations.

"The State Health Department and County Health Units are vitally interested in proper storage, collection and disposal of refuse and stand ready to aid towns or individuals in solving their problem. Receptacles for storage should be of water-tight metal with lids that fit. Final disposal is a serious and difficult problem which individuals and communities must solve according to local conditions. Waste materials should never be dumped on property belonging to another person or organization."

Major Jack Williams of Oklahoma, and Mrs. Joe Bill Pierce of Midland and Miss Charlotte Williams of TSCW in Denton, visited in the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. V. Williams over the Easter holidays.

Mrs. John Nobles and daughter, Cindy, of Big Spring, were guests in the home Mr. and Mrs. Lee Haymes over the week end.

Slim And His "Ali Species"

Slim Baker, who's always doing something crazy, had a lot of people smiling last week because his entry won a ribbon in the Women's Club Annual Pet Show.

Seems as though Slim saw a strange-colored alley cat with no tail over at Central City and brought it home. He washed, combed, and brushed it and put a collar on it with a card reading "Ali Species." Then he enters it in the show.

Hanged if the ladies didn't think it was some rare kind of cat and gave it a special award! When one of them asked Slim where she could get one like it, he said, "It's all yours, M'am—I can get an 'Alley Cat' anytime I want!"

From where I sit, some of us are pretty easily "taken in" just because someone else says it's so. Whether it's awarding prizes or passing judgment on a person's right to enjoy a temperate glass of beer—let's take a good look from stem to stern, and learn what it's all about before making up our minds.

Weekly Health LETTER

Issued by Dr. Geo. W. Cox
M. D., State Health Officer
of Texas

AUSTIN—Speaking of the precautions that should be taken in households during the close of an illness from any of the "catching" diseases, which are prevalent at all seasons, Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, said recently, "Any plan for the prevention or control of this sort, depends upon the intelligent cooperation of individuals and communities with the medical profession and the health authorities for its success.

"Those who are in charge of persons suffering from influenza, pneumonia, tuberculosis, scarlet fever, measles, infantile paralysis or any other of the diseases spread by discharges from the nose or throat, are warned that these discharges are sources of great danger, and are urged to have the patient use paper handkerchiefs or soft cheesecloth, that can be disinfected or burned or otherwise safely disposed of.

"The sterilization of dishes and utensils used in the sick room, by boiling after each use of them, and the patient's clothing, sheets, towels and pillow cases, are equally necessary. Then, at the close of the illness, a thorough cleaning of the room, bedding and personal belongings of the patient, scrubbing the floors and woodwork, and opening the place to the fresh air and sunlight, are urged as a final precautionary measure.

"Fortunately, the best disinfectants yet discovered are within reach of everybody. They are plenty of hot water and soap fresh air and sunshine."

Rural Telephones

You can get a rural telephone if enough of the farm homes desire a good rural telephone system.

The Board of Directors of B-K Cooperative, Inc., are trying to see if enough farm homes want and need a telephone so that a loan can be requested to build an adequate rural telephone system. Therefore, a mass meeting of the farmers living around Weinert has been called at the School Auditorium, Tuesday night, April 3, 1951, at 7:30 o'clock. Please come and bring some of your neighbors with you.

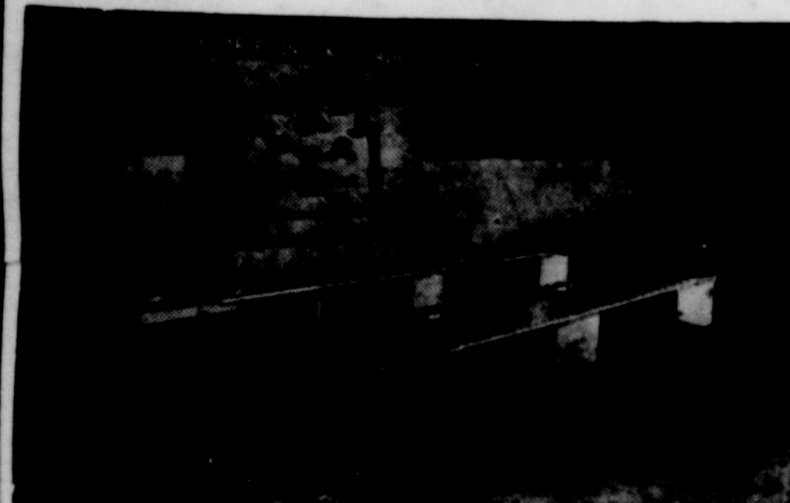

Also a mass meeting of the farmers living around Munday has been called at the High School Lunch Room, Thursday night, April 5, 1951, at 7:30 o'clock.

Requirements for obtaining this service with REA assistance will be outlined at this meeting. It is important that we have a large attendance. The general public is also invited and welcome to attend.
