SHRINKING THE EARTH

The first siren whoosh of the commercial jetliner not only changed man's notion of time and travel by shrinking the earth some 40 per cent, but set off an earthbound revolution that is transforming the whole facade and function of the jet age's gateway: the airport.

Thus begins a feature article in a recent issue of Time. It deals, in a dramatic text and picture, with the incredible international airports of today. The imagination is staggered by the size, extent and cost of the facilities required to serve the planes and the passengers. And a far more lavish facilities still are coming in the near future. The jet age, in a sense, has created a new world of its own.

The significance of this goes deep. There has been an enormous increase in international air travel for pleasure and business—this year the New York International Airport alone will handle some 8,550,000 travelers. You can reach almost any point in the civilized world in well under a day, in amazingly comfortable planes that fly above the weather at speeds approaching 600 MPH. But pleasure and business do not tell the whole story by any means. The great potentiality of the jet age is found in what it can do for world understanding, and the cause of world peace. It makes possible a people-to-people movement on a grand scale: And when people representing various cultures and traditions meet and talk, problems have a way of resolving themselves. In the long run, after all, it is the masses of people, not just their governments and their leaders, who determine the course of history.

So the hope is plain: That the jet is the hard-working forerunner of a happier age for all the world.

THE MEDICAL FRATERNITY'S STAND

There seems to be a more or less widespread feeling that the medical fraternity of this country is adamantly opposed to doing much of anything about the medical problems of elderly people.

That isn't so. The American Medical Association has taken a definite position in favor of helping "those of the aged who need help in the financing of their health care."

The Association is opposed to "the creation of massive federal machinery to help those who neither need nor want help, and who are capably handling their own problems at the present time."

sent time." And it is difficult to see how anyone can argue against that stand. To give federal aid on an indiscriminate basis to people who have reached a certain age, no matter how well off they may be financially, makes no sense. It would amount to welfare statism to an almost fantastic degree.

The Association also urges that there should be heavy reliance on local administration of such a plan — on the sound grounds that local agencies are best able to determine their own needs.

Its ideas are summed up in these words: ". . . the Federal government should help only those who need help, as determined locally; that action should be responsive to the needs of the individual and the community through local administration and that such action should supplement, rather than supplant, state, local and private action." That is the way to get the necessary job done with maximum efficiency and at minimum cost to the taxpayers of all ages.

DON'T JUST BE A VOTER

Editor & Publisher says: "Now is the time for all newspapers to make plans for a get-out-the-vote drive prior to election day in November. The record of the American people at the polls in recent years has been atrocious. Millions of adults have not exercised their voting privilege in national elections (the record is worse in local and state elections) and have let their precious heritage go by default. Voting is not only a right but a responsibility of a free people and all Americans should be told that again and again.

"Another point can be profitably added to this. Ignorant voting is as bad as failure to vote. A responsible electorate will carefully analyze the candidates and their stand in issues, in order to support those whom it believes will best serve the true interests and needs of this nation. In other words, don't just be a voter — be an informed voter."

There's room to burn in one of our newest states, but the other is a bit on the crowded side. According to the Census Bureau, the population of Alaska averages out to less than half a person per square mile of land area—0.4 to be exact. Hawaii, on the other hand, has 96.8 persons per square mile. And it is exceeded by California, with a population density of 99.2.

Chips From The Carpenter's Workbench

By JAMES HALLMARK

"These (the Bereans) were more noble than those in Thessalonica in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so." (Acts 17:11) The Bereans were referred to as being "more noble" because of their desire to prove, by the scriptures, that those things which they heard were actually so.

The action of these Bereans is certainly out of harmony with the prevalent theory provided for those incapable of understanding the Bible. This idea has led many honest persons to accept, without question, what the preacher believes to be the truth. We preachers can be mistaken just like anyone can. Therefore, it is far better to base your religious convictions upon a much sounder foundation, the eternal Word of God. Any person who honestly cannot understand the Will of God, has nothing to worry about for that person is not the subject of the gospel message. God has graciously provided for those incapable of believing. But, those who are capable of believing MUST do the will of God to be saved. "Not EVERYONE that sayeth unto me Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; BUT HE THAT DOETH THE WILL OF MY FATHER which is in heaven." (Matt. 7:21). God's will for man is revealed in His precious Word.

This is why Paul admonished youthful Timothy to "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." (II Tim. 2:15).

I will be happy to try to answer any questions that you may have through this column. Address any questions to: James Hallmark, P. O. Box 211, Munday, Texas.

New Screwworm Research

Renewed research on means to control and perhaps to eradicate the screwworm in the Southwest, one of the most serious pests with which stockraisers have to contend, is getting underway at the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Kerrville station.

The work will be carried on with a $200,000 supplemental appropriation approved by Congress at the insistence of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association and other groups. Late last year it had been announced that the program was to be dropped because of the lack of natural barriers against the screwworm fly in the vast infested areas of Southwestern states and their Mexican neighbors just across the Rio Grande.

The screwworm has been virtually eradicated in the Southeastern states of Florida, Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina by use of a sterile-fly technique. This method was based on the release of vast numbers of sexually sterile screwworm flies to mate with native females of the species to produce eggs which fail to hatch. The flies were reared in a laboratory and sterilized by exposure to radioactive cobalt.

Research up to now in the Southwest, however, has indicated little success could be expected by use of the same method because of the vast areas in which screwworms were able to live through the winter. From what has been learned thus far, it was indicated that sterile flies would have to be continually reared and released in an extensive buffer zone along with constant inspections and control of livestock movements.

The renewed research in Texas will be directed toward developing better methods of rearing screwworms, and also to find ways to produce strains of the insect better suited for sterilization by irradiation. The research will also explore the possibility of producing special strains of screwworms through irradiation.

One important aim of the Kerrville research is to learn more about the nutritional requirements of screwworm larvae, so that an improved, inexpensive rearing medium may be developed. It is recognized that sterile male flies will have to be released in vast numbers than was necessary in the Southeastern states if the same method is to achieve any success in the Southwest.

The screwworm fly, a little larger than the house fly, attacks only the flesh of living warm-

Notes From Knox Farms, Ranches

By Jack Moore, Knox County Agent

Early Stalk Destruction

Cotton producers throughout the state have found that through an early stalk destruction and farm clean up that the overwintering of the boll weevils and the pink bollworm is greatly reduced. Some people have made the statement that by an early stalk destruction by the use of a shredder and then turning the stalks under that they can have more nitrogen available for the following crop. This statement is made with the fact in mind that nitrogen is used by the soil organisms that speed up and help in the decaying process.

Grain sorghum producers will find that if they practice an early stalk destruction that the following crop will yield much higher than they would expect. Sorghum crops have been long known for their "soil draining" characteristics.

The ideal way to harvest a grain sorghum is to have a shredder following the combine and a plow of some type behind the shredder. In several demonstrations in the black lands it was shown that after 3 and 4 years of continuous sorghum that yields were only slightly affected where early stalk destruction was practiced.

Rat Control

There have been a few complaints of rats in stored grain in the Truscott area recently.

V. R. Smith reported that Warren Corder and Vernon Jones were among the ones that were having trouble. This is the time of the year that a farmer and rancher will begin to notice rats, especially if there is a tendency to be a building up in the population.

There are several commercial baits on the market that are especially good. The Extension Service bulletin L-148 gives a formula that can be made at home that will work very nicely. The formula is:

Anticoagulant, 1 cup; Salad Oil, 1 cup; Confectioners' Sugar, 1 cup; Rolled Oats, 8 cups; Yellow Cornmeal, 12 cups.

The anticoagulant that is used in the above formula can be purchased from most drug stores. The anticoagulants that are recommended are warfarin, pival, or fumarin. If there is a sufficient build up of rats in the county, it may be possible to have a man from the rodent control division of the Fish and Wildlife Division present a demonstration on rat baits and methods of bait placement.

The anticoagulant baits are recommended where animals and children are likely to frequent because of the safety feature. The safety feature is somewhat of a disadvantage; however, the safety feature far outweighs the disadvantage. When an anticoagulant type of bait is used a person must keep in mind that the bait must be eaten every day for 5 to 8 days before death will occur.

Dogs and cats are seldom killed by the bait and in most cases a dog and cat will eat too many rats and not too much bait. If

Division Of Estates Examined

The death of an intestate person (one who has made no will) may give rise to many problems regarding distribution of his separate estate. In the preceding column we investigated the manner of dividing the community estate upon the death of a husband or wife. Now we shall see that, where separate property is involved, a completely different set of rules applies in determining heirship and apportioning the estate among the rightful claimants.

It may be well to recall that the separate estate of a husband or wife includes property owned by either before marriage, and that which is acquired after marriage by gift or inheritance. Any other property acquired after marriage is presumed by law to be community property until the contrary is clearly proved.

Now, here is a general idea as to how your separate property will be divided if you do not make a will with contrary provisions prior to your death.

If your husband or wife survives and if, in addition, there are surviving children or descendants of previously deceased children, the children and their descendants immediately obtain a full (fee) title in two-thirds of the real estate involved. The surviving spouse receives a life interest in the remaining one-third of the real property, which passes on to the children and their descendants upon the death of the spouse.

The rule for distributing personal property — cash, stocks, bonds, furniture or any other items not constituting real estate — is different. Here the surviving spouse gets full ownership of one-third, and the children and their descendants inherit the balance.

Now suppose your husband or wife survives, but there are no surviving children or their descendants. In this case the surviving spouse inherits all of the personal property involved.

With regard to real estate, the survivor obtains full title to one-half, and the other half is divided between your mother and father, if both survive you. If only one of them survives, he or she receives only half of this portion, and the other half (or one-fourth of the entire real estate) will be divided among your brothers and sisters (and their descendants) who survive. If there are no surviving brothers and sisters and their descendants, then the one surviving parent inherits the full one-half.

W.S.C.S. To Begin Fall Study Sept. 14

Announcement was made this week that the fall study of the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church will begin on Wednesday, September 14, at 6:45 p.m.

The study is called "Basic Christian Beliefs," and its purpose is to help each person attending to better understand the basic beliefs as they are taught in the Holy Scriptures.

The sessions will be held each Wednesday at 6:45 p. m. for a period of seven weeks. The study is not limited to the women's group, but is open to any who would like to better understand what the scriptures teach.

Rev. Rex Mauldin, pastor, will be the instructor. Mrs. Oates Golden will serve as literature secretary, and Mrs. J. S. Shannon and Mrs. W. R. Rodgers are on the publicity committee. Various members of the church will assume responsibility in the course of study.

20,000 Watch Kill Of Rough Fish From Lake At Sweetwater

West Texas fishermen saw 47,000 pounds of fish taken from Lake Sweetwater over last week end, but only about one per cent by weight represented edible fish.

Through a cooperative arrangement between the City of Sweetwater and the Game and Fish Commission, a complete kill was undertaken on the lake. It was treated with more than eight tons of chemicals.

Some 20,000 persons witnessed the treatment, and more than 1,000 boats belonging to fishermen of the area were on the lake Saturday and Sunday. Most of the kill was shad and carp, with quite a few bullheads according to Marion Toole, director in inland fisheries. The program was developed and handled by biologists Larry Campbell of San Angelo and Leo Lewis of Wichita Falls and their staffs.

The workers said they saw two fairly large catfish, one weighing about 17 pounds, and another 12 pounds, taken from the lake. Practically every bass taken out weighed more than 2 pounds, indicating that there was no yearling stock in the lake. Only two crappie weighing more than one pound were observed.

The treatment was applied by a barge, which spread the dry chemicals on the water surface. Work boats with spray tanks got into the coves where the barge could not work. Previously, some 18 miles of the watershed had been treated in hopes of stopping rough fish infiltration with the next flood waters.

The lake now is to be restocked with game fish produced from Game and Fish Commission hatcheries.

Travelers returning from foreign countries are advised by the U. S. Department of Agriculture not to attempt to bring into the United States plants, bulbs, fruits, meats, or any of a wide assortment of other prohibited agricultural products. Imports of agricultural products are regulated, to prevent possible introduction into this country of destructive disease-producing agents and insect pests.

Knox Prairie Philosopher Pleased That Washington, In Its Rush Into Space, Hasn't Forgotten Mother Earth

Editor's note: The Knox Prairie Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Miller Creek has found some welcome news, his letter this week reveals.

Dear editor: You can hardly pick up a newspaper these days without reading something about who's winning the race for space, and I guess it's important, we have to race in self defense, but nobody has convinced me that life in space after we conquer it is going to be any better than life here on this Johnson grass farm and consequently I was amazed to read an article last night that proves Washington hasn't abandoned the earth altogether.

According to it, the government has now set up an experimental plant to convert sea water into drinking water, and any water good enough to drink is good enough to irrigate with, and you can see what this could lead to.

You give me all the water my crops want, at the time they want it, and you can have the moon and all its canals, even if they're filled with running water. Plenty of moisture, and a good farm program which both candidates are promising, is all any farmer could ask.

Of course, us farmers don't want to get the notion that by next year there'll be a pipeline running by our farms with a hydrant ready to turn on, but the fact Washington has made a start is something to dream about. After all, you've got to remember that while billions of dollars are being spent on space exploration with thousands of men at work at it, this new water plant will cost only one and a quarter million dollars and will employ exactly 10 men. You can't go hog-wild over improving this earth while the backside of the moon is still un-touched.

However, I'm not complaining about this. Everything should be in the right proportions, and everybody knows outer space is more important than this earth, but at least they've made a start.

Who knows, if we've made a start toward using all that wasted salty sea water for the benefit of man, some day you may pick up a newspaper and find out we've started work too on eradicating mosquitoes, house flies, chiggers and dented fenders, and are working steadily toward salt shakers that don't clog up in damp weather and children's shoes that last longer than three months.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

3. That the commissioners court make certain that every provision of the law is complied with in the letting of contracts for the benefit of the County, and that no device be used to circumvent the true purpose of the law.

4. That all of the laws be complied with in regard to meetings of the Commissioners Court and that all officers so required are present for each meeting of the Commissioners Court and further that complete, accurate and true minutes be kept of any such meetings.

5. That all reports required by law are published as so required and that this be done regardless of cost or trouble.

6. That it become a policy of the Commissioners Court that no County official be allowed to purchase materials, supplies or equipment on behalf of the County after his defeat at the polls or after his decision to retire from public office except for those needed, in the opinion of the entire Commissioners Court, for the operation of his office for the remainder of his term.

7. That no equipment owned by this County be leased to any person, firm or corporation, but rather that all equipment of this County be used for the benefit of all the people of the County.

8. That all sales of County owned equipment, materials and supplies be handled in conformity with the law together with the advertisement for bids for the sale of such property when required.

9. That the Commissioners Court comply with the law relative to the obtaining of bids before purchasing any property for the benefit of this county.

10. That even though the actual operation of the Knox County hospital might be properly delegated to the hospital board the Commissioners Court bears the final responsibility for said Hospital and that because of this the Commissioner Court make it their business to see that said Hospital is operated in the most efficient manner possible and that procedures be instituted to make certain that all patients admitted as charity cases are in truth and in fact indigent.

11. That the Commissioners Court realize that the salaries of the County Officials are generally sufficient and that no further raises in salaries be granted unless based on all of the facts, and considering the economic conditions prevailing in this County, they are satisfied beyond doubt that such proposed salaries are justified.

12. That the next Grand Jury to serve this Court again inquire into the operation of the Commissioners Court and the County in General to insure a steadfast compliance with the law.

13. That this report and list of recommendations be published in each paper in this county and, if possible, in at least two newspapers having a daily circulation in this county.

Check Your Social Security Record In Each 3-Year Period

"Are you credited for the social securitys taxes you pay?" asked Erton F. Tate, Manager of the Wichita Falls Social Security Office. Make sure you are, because improper reporting of wages or self-employment income now may mean loss of benefits later.

Most people will need credit for several years work to qualify for payments when they retire. To make sure the record is right, a check every three years is recommended. It is much simpler to correct records if an error is caught within this three year period.

If you haven't checked your social security record in the last three years, contact the Social Security office and request a form 7004 which is a simple post-card form. After you fill it out and mail it, you will receive a statement of your earnings in a few weeks.

A representative of the Social Security Administration will be in Munday at the City Hall on Tuesday, September 13th, from 10:00 a. m. until 12:00. You are invited to meet with the representative to file claim, or to obtain information or assistance concerning Social Security.

Miss Marie McNeill of Dallas and Mr. and Mrs. Muri Feemster and Sharon of Wichita Falls spent the holidays with their parents Mr. and Mrs. Earl McNeill and Alice. Alice returned home with Marie and will attend Draughn's Business College in Dallas.

Mr. and Mrs. Scotty Ponder and Michael of Lubbock visited her mother, Mrs. L. J. Hill, over the holidays.

Gems Of Thought

"Dignity of man . . ." The dignity of man is vindicated as much by the thinker and poet as by the statesman and soldier.

—James B. Conant

Man is the expression of God's being.

—Mary Baker Eddy

Our dignity is not what we do, but what we understand. The whole world is doing things.

—Santayana

There is a healthful hardness about real dignity that never dreads contact and communion with others, however humble.

—Washington Irving

The sum of behavior is to retain a man's own dignity, without intruding upon the liberty of others.

—Francis Bacon

Human rights rest on human dignity. The dignity of man is an ideal worth fighting for and worth dying for.

—Robert M. Hutchins
