

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE'S CHECK GIVES MAJORITY ONE VOTE TO MRS. P'POOL

The unofficial tabulation of county returns of the democratic primary of July 26th were upset Saturday in one race when the democratic executive committee met at Benjamin to canvass the returns. The up-set was in the race for county superintendent, in which Mrs. Ethel Lee P'Pool was declared the victor by a single vote over Mrs. E. F. Branton, who, on the face of unofficial returns gathered over the telephone had won the race by a margin of 23 votes. An investigation of the tabulations gathered from unofficial sources revealed that an error had been made in the Hefner box, which on the face of the unofficial figures gave Mrs. Branton 68 votes, whereas the official canvass gave her 48 votes. Other small discrepancies found increased Mrs. P'Pool's vote from 1201 in the unofficial vote to 1205 in the committee count, and reduced Mrs. Branton's vote in the unofficial count from 1224 to 1204, giving Mrs. P'Pool one vote the lead.

Other races in the county remained unchanged to any material extent. In the contest for second place in the tax assessor's race Lee Coffman of Gore was definitely declared the winner over John Rice by a single vote and Mr. Coffman will go into the runoff with Earl Sams. Coffman's vote was 659 while Rice received 658.

Mrs. Rebecca Floyd Died On Sunday After Long Illness

Following an illness of some ten years duration Mrs. Margaret Rebecca Floyd died at the home of her son, W. A. Floyd, Sunday afternoon, and the remains were laid to rest in Johnson cemetery on Monday afternoon, with Elder O. Strickland conducting the last rites.

Deceased was born in Alabama October 16, 1849, and came to Texas with her parents in 1874. She was married to A. J. Floyd in Washington county in 1875, and to this union five children were born, all of whom except one survive her. The children who survive are W. A. and G. T. Floyd of Munday, B. F. Floyd of Lorena, and Mrs. Alice Smith of Knox City.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd came to Knox county with their children in 1906, and were among the pioneer citizens who developed this section from a vast prairie country into one of the best farming sections of West Texas. The father passed on to his reward in 1913 and the remains of the good mother were laid to rest beside his grave Monday afternoon.

For thirty-five years she was a devoted member of the Primitive Baptist church. A large concourse of friends gathered at the cemetery to pay their last tribute of respect to this pioneer lady, which spoke mutely of the high esteem in which she was held by the neighbors and friends among whom she had lived for all these years, and we join the many friends in extending sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Burton Family Gather Here For Annual Meet

For a number of years it has been a custom of the members of the Burton family—to hold a family reunion during the summer, and this year the members of the family gathered at the home of B. V. They began arriving on Saturday and continued to come during Sunday and Monday morning, and all of the brothers except one were present, one brother being court reporter at Fort Worth, was unable to be present on account of his official duties.

All formalities are thrown aside by the members of the family as they get together, and they seem to have but one aim on these occasions, and the one aim is to enjoy themselves. Everything good to eat is assembled in advance of the gathering and when it's all over the brothers get together and each pays his proportionate part of the expense, and on Monday afternoon when this editor was through the courtesy of R. V., a guest at dinner, there were more than a hundred present, and the bountiful and delightful feast that was spread fulfilled every desire of the unfailing appetite of all present.

During the afternoon Cecil Burton and others slipped into Munday where a number of delicious watermelons had been placed on cold storage in preparation for the event, and iced watermelon served to all present providing a cooling and pleasant treat. In fact, the entire time is spent in enjoying the good things with which they have been blessed, and they fully realize that among their greatest blessings is the association, one with another and the ties of kinship and love which binds them together and makes possible these happy annual events.

The Burtons have no set programs for these events. For instance, the other afternoon while they were sitting around in groups, some in the house, others in the yard in the kindly shade of the spreading shade trees, and others under the vine-covered arbor in the yard, some of the ladies were reminded that the date happened to be the birthday of Clifford Burton, one of the brothers, and they began to plot against him. He was sitting alone in the shade of one of the numerous trees in the yard when they advanced upon him and threw him bodily into the concrete tank of water nearby. Resistance in water-melons, and folks, they're there—A, B and C.

THINKING OUT LOUD

BY J. A. K.

One of the minor offices which we failed to mention in our news column was that of Mayor of Roscoe City. We are told by Bob Gaines that Grover Jones, who has held the office for a number of years, was defeated by a fellow by the name of Strickland.

Grover has been holding office down there too long. He was constable there before he became mayor and now his only means of livelihood will be that of piloting a tractor over his several acres and selling cottonseed.

Bob Gaines attributes Grover's defeat to the active part he took in behalf of the candidacy of Thos. B. Love for governor.

And so far as we are concerned, R serves his right.

This is the time of year when folks go visiting and come visiting. Those who have gone visiting have come home enthused over our outlook, while those who have come visiting are even more enthusiastic in their praise of the great Munday county.

But TOI doesn't know much about this farming business. Some of the farmers contend that we are needing rain badly while others contend that if it should rain we would likely have boll-and-leaf-worms.

Perhaps both are right, but we can't help believing that we really do need rain.

Irregularities Are Charged in Contest Filed by Branton

Mrs. E. F. Branton of Knox City, who was thought to have been the winner in the county superintendent's race over Mrs. Ethel Lee P'Pool, and who was declared to have been one vote behind Mrs. P'Pool on the face of returns as checked by the county democratic executive committee last Saturday, has filed a contest, which will likely call for a review of some of the voting boxes in the county under the order of the District court.

Mrs. Branton, through her attorneys, J. S. Kendall of Munday, and D. J. Brookerson of Benjamin, filed notice of contest on Tuesday with the county clerk, and on Thursday filed the petition, which alleges irregularities at Benjamin, and challenges the legality of certain votes polled at Munday and Vera.

The case will probably not be gone into for a couple of weeks, as Judge I. O. Newton, before whom the hearing on the contest must be heard, is holding court at Paducah and will likely be engaged there for several days.

Steve Smith Sells Business After Ten Years In The Game

For the past ten years Steve Smith has been the undisputed hamburger king of Munday. In recent months he has added to his accomplishments in the addition of hot dogs to the menu, for which he is also becoming famous. But now Steve is to take a brief rest.

He has sold his sandwich emporium here to the Easy Brothers—Foy and Ray, who last week assumed charge of the business and who will conduct it hereafter, while Steve, after looking around, will likely engage in the business—some other business—in some town that promises him prosperity.

And the popularity of the little place is assured, as Ray Easy is no novice at the game, having had plenty of experience in the gentle art of the years that have intervened since he first made them make tracks to his little place at Burke during the big boom. He has cooked, hopped tables and done most every other kind of work all the way from Azgu Caliente to Timbuktoo, and he and "Sleepy" will be found on the job all the time ready to give their patrons what they need for that hungry feeling.

MISS STELLA V. HOVEY WILL A CONDUCT DAILY BIBLE SCHOOL IN CITY

Many of the Munday people, especially the children, have pleasant memories of the Bible school conducted in 1925 in the Presbyterian church by Miss Stella V. Hovey of Fort Worth, Texas. For these five years they have been wishing for another such school; therefore, this announcement of another Daily Vacation Bible school to be conducted by Miss Hovey will gladden many hearts.

The D. V. B. S. will open at 8:30 o'clock Monday morning, August 18th, and continue through August 29th. There will be five days of school each of the two weeks, two and a half hours per day, 8:30 to 11 each morning. The school is open to all children of the community who will have become four by the time the school opens and are under fifteen. It will be a real school with discipline, instruction, and training, but conducted in the spirit of vacation. No home study will be required.

The Presbyterian church hopes, through this school, to impart to the children Christian principle and ideals that will better fit them to live more successfully their lives, so much of which is before them. The program is calculated "to vitalize the everyday experience of the child by helping to enrich and control the everyday happenings and relations in the child's world. It guides the children into appreciation (a) of all who have or who have had a part in making their homes happy; (b) of the wonder of God's world; and (c) of Jesus Christ, the Son of God and the Friend of children." The children will be taught portions of the Bible suited to their ages. They will memorize scripture gems and songs, and will be told many interesting stories: Biblical, patriotic, habit-forming, and missionary. There will be periods of supervised play and handwork.

Munday Lions Club Will Be Host To Dist. 25 Aug. 15

The Munday Lions Club will be host to visiting Lions from Seymour, Haskell, Benjamin and other points on Friday evening, August 15th, at which time the quarterly meeting of District No. 25 will be held here, and plans are being made to entertain approximately 200 Lions and their wives.

While the entire program has not yet been completed one of the interesting features that has already been secured for the occasion is an address by the Rev. P. D. O'Brien, formerly pastor of the Baptist church here, and now pastor at Floydia.

The club recently had as a guest Evangelist C. E. Nichol, a member of the Lions club at his home town, Clifton, who told the local Lions about a plan they had adopted in bringing their membership up to standard, and the plan was immediately adopted. It simply is a contest between two equal numbers of the club and the side securing the least number of new members must feel the other side. The drive has brought the membership of the Munday club up to around 75 members, and the club is planning some real undertakings.

Another interesting feature of the district inter-city meeting to be held here on the 15th will be the first appearance of the Munday Lions Club orchestra, which is a brand new organization for Munday, and should be a valuable asset to the club.

CARD OF THANKS

To the People of Knox County: I take this means of thanking you for the splendid support you gave me in the first election, until I can see you in person. It is my desire and intention to see each of you in person and tell you how I appreciate the vote you gave me in the first election and further solicit your support in the runoff. But it is impossible to see every voter in the county, when one has plenty of time, and with only three weeks left it just can't be done. I deeply appreciate the confidence you have manifested in me by the vote I received and if election will try to merit that confidence. Respectfully, A. E. PROPPS.

VAMPIRE TELLS OF MANY CRIMES

Erutal Murder of Women Laid at Door of German Degenerate.

Berlin.—The police of Dusseldorf have in their custody the man who is believed to be the "vampire" they have been seeking for many months—the degenerate at whose door is laid the murder of no less than ten women, with attempts to kill twenty others charged against him. A letter written by a servant girl but which, owing to a faulty address, could not be delivered led to the capture of the man. He is Peter Kuerten, forty-seven, a laborer, and the police declare that not only has he confessed his guilt but has recommended in their presence several of his murders—enough to convince them that he is the man for whom they have been in search. Effort Made to Lynch Him. The servant girl's letter, describing an attack on her closely resembling one of the outrages of the "vampire," went to the dead letter office and was opened by an official, who immediately informed the police. Kuerten was arrested by detectives in a crowded street, where an angry mob attempted to lynch him, and he was later driven out to the scenes of some of the "vampire" crimes, of which he is alleged to have given a complete reproduction. At Pappendorf farm, where the body of Maria Holm was dug up last November, he solved the riddle which had so long been baffling the police of how a man could dig alone a pit six feet deep and six feet long and yet escape detection. He was next confronted with Fraulein Gertrude Schuler, a twenty-five-year-old servant. Often before she had been confronted with prisoners suspected of the crimes, but always she had failed to identify any of them. This time it was different. Hardly had she entered the room when she abruptly stopped and her face paled. "Oh, my God!" she gasped. "That is he."

It was all she managed to say, for the next moment she fainted. Picked Out by Voice. Frau Maurer, one of the surviving victims who still wears on her forehead the mark of the "vampire," was ushered into a room, confronted with twenty men, including Kuerten, and asked if she could pick out her assailant. The room had been darkened so as to resemble the dark night on which she had been attacked. "At first I could not recognize anyone," she said. "Then, when the men spoke, I heard a familiar voice. "Where is he? I cried. It was Kuerten. He recognized me, too. "You're Frau Maurer, aren't you?" he asked quietly, as though we were about to have tea together. "You were too clever for me," he said. "You kept on walking in front. If you hadn't done that I should have killed you."

The average rating for the school was 1.03. The best students are senior girls, according to the figures. Their rating was 2.12.

Loftin Launches Second Primary Drive Henrietta

Henrietta, Texas, Aug. 2—Judge Ruben Loftin candidate for state senator from the 23rd district, opened his campaign for the second primary before a crowd of nearly 1,000 persons on the lawn of the Clay county courthouse at Henrietta Saturday evening.

This was said to be the largest crowd that had turned out for a political speaking here in several years. Judge Loftin was introduced by Judge Vincent Stone, of the local district court, who stressed the importance of the candidate's proposals for judicial reform.

Judge Loftin opened his speech by expressing his gratitude to his many friends and supporters in the 23rd district for their votes in the first primary.

He laid stress on the need for a law that would permit the state to cooperate with and aid cities and communities in establishing and maintaining junior colleges.

"It costs the state $450 annually for each student in the university," the speaker explained, "whereas the cost would be only $100 per student in a junior college. Also the students would be enabled to remain at home for an additional two years during the period of life in which their characters are most easily molded."

Highway Commission
Judge Loftin also announced his plan for an elective highway commission to be composed of one man from each of four state districts and one commissioner-at-large. He said that there should be an elective highway commission and that the commission should be forced to maintain an office at Austin which would be open six days a week. He pointed out that at the present time the highway commission had no central office and did not meet often enough.

Judge Loftin discussed his record during three terms as state senator from Archer and Clay counties during the 38th, 39th and 40th legislatures.

He called attention to the fact that he helped pass the present tick eradication law, the statute making a felony of driving while intoxicated and other important laws.

The speaker said while in the legislature he served on many important committees including the following: Judiciary constitutional amendment, banks and banking, oil and gas, stock and stock raising and penitentiary.

Judicial Reforms
Judge Loftin discussed his proposed judicial reforms, one of which is the acceptance of a verdict agreed on by nine of the 12 men on a jury in all cases except death penalty cases.

"A nine jury verdict will save the state of Texas $1,000,000 annually in preventing so many new trials in cases where 9, 10 or 11 men agree on the verdict," he declared.

Judge Loftin pointed out that at the present time a man can be indicted by nine grand jurors when he is not present, his witnesses are not heard and he is not represented by counsel.

"Yet when he is tried before a jury with his lawyers and witnesses to help him we demand a unanimous verdict of the 12," Judge Loftin said.

The candidate reminded his listeners that both the American and Texas Bar association had endorsed the nine-man jury verdict plan.

MARION BRINN

Marion Brinn, of Radio Fame, Discusses Child Prodigies

New York City—Children with talent for entertaining should have the same chance for development of their talent as the child interested in the more common phase of every-day life. So says Marion Brinn, famous radio artist, aged seventeen, who for the past ten years has been a child prodigy.

"Why should not the singer get the same school training that the bookkeeper or stenographer does?" she asks. "I think every child has a latent desire to do something, and this should be developed right along with what is known as 'reading,' 'riting,' 'rithmetic.' I was very lucky, for in my case, my mother did just that, and my musical vocation got as much attention as my school work.

The low-priced automobile has brought greater opportunity and added hours of recreation to millions of men and women.

BECAUSE the automobile is such an important factor in the lives and prosperity of so many people, the purpose of the Ford Motor Company is something more than the mere manufacture of a motor car.

There is no service in simply setting up a machine or a plant and letting it turn out goods. The service extends into every detail of the business—design, production, the wages paid and the selling price. All are a part of the plan.

The Ford Motor Company looks upon itself as charged with making an automobile that will meet the needs of millions of people and to provide it at a low price. That is its mission. That is its duty and its obligation to the public.

The search for better ways of doing things is never-ending. There is ceaseless, untiring effort to find new methods and new machines that will save steps and time in manufacturing. The Ford plants are, in reality, a great mechanical university, dedicated to the advancement of industry. Many manufacturers come to see and share the progress made.

The greatest progress comes by never standing still. Today's methods, however successful, can never be taken as wholly right. They represent simply the best efforts of the moment. Tomorrow must bring an improvement in the methods of the day before. Hard work usually finds the way.

Once it was thought impossible to cast gray iron by the endless chain method. All precedent was against it and every previous experiment had failed. But fair prices to the public demanded that wasteful methods be eliminated. Finally the way was found.

A better way of making axle shafts saved thirty-six million dollars in four years. A new method of cutting crankshafts reduced the cost by $500,000 a year. The perfection of a new machine saved a similar amount on such a little thing as one bolt. Then electric welding was developed to make many bolts unnecessary and to increase structural strength.

Just a little while ago, an endless chain conveyor almost four miles long was installed at the Rouge plant. This conveyor has a daily capacity of 300,000 parts weighing more than 2,000,000 pounds. By substituting the tireless, unvarying machine for tasks formerly done by hand, it has made the day's work easier for thousands of workers and saved time and money in the manufacture of the car.

All of these things are done in the interest of the public—so that the benefits of reliable, economical transportation may be placed within the means of every one.

Owner of the Derby and Ulster

WHEN it first happened Laura thought that they ought to call off the club meeting. With little sister Pansy and herself so upset that they couldn't even cut the bread for the sandwiches straight, how were they going to be able to act as hosts for the book club that night? But after talking to the president of the club over the telephone Laura reluctantly changed her mind.

"Something really rather upsetting had happened," she said, with an air of mystery. "Especially upsetting poor little Pansy, though I'm nervous enough over it, goodness knows."

"Poor little Pansy" was a rather beautiful young woman of twenty-five who lived alone with her maiden sister, some ten years her senior.

"You'll just have to have the meeting," Kate Jones, the president of the club, insisted, unhesitatingly. "It is physically impossible. Everyone is expecting to be there, and we couldn't reach every one now. We're going to have theatrical charades—going to act out the names of great actors or plays—and your house is so nice for charades, with the wide double doors and the large drawing room."

Pansy appeared rather pale and listless that evening, while Laura, who was clearly excited, showed cheeks that flushed with color.

"The charade progressed smoothly enough, the members of the club dividing themselves into four groups, each under the leadership of some distinguished actor, living or dead. The group of which Kate Jones was leader had chosen Richard Mansfield. 'Rich' was easy enough, and for the first syllable they would just use a man's hat or coat."

"No use searching here," said Kate. "There never was a man in the family, or at least not for ever so long. But I'll just run to one of the neighbors. I guess Professor Lane next door, would be glad enough to let us have his hat."

So Kate hurried to the Lanes. But the house was closed. So she went to the next house. The first knock at the old-fashioned brass knocker brought a prepossessing man to the door.

"I have come on a strange errand," said the thoroughly substantial Kate. "We are having a club meeting and are doing charades. We need a man's hat or coat. Would you lend us one?"

"I'll lend you both," said the young man, somewhat amused. "The charade was entirely successful. True, Laura looked surprised when Kate appeared in a derby and sister, 'I wonder where she got the man's hat and coat?' she said, which gave her the clue she needed to guessing the charade."

It was some minutes after the last guest had departed, and Laura and Pansy were straightening up before going to bed. Pansy had just come upon the derby and sister when the telephone called Laura.

"I'm awfully sorry," came Kate's voice, "but I forgot to return the man's hat and coat I borrowed. I got them at the shop just beyond Professor Lane's. Would you mind seeing that they get back?" And she hung up.

The Psychological Moment

By ELIZABETH HARING

JUNE KENNEDY firmly believed that love should be the temperamental element of one's existence—with thrills, heartaches, moonlight nights and stolen kisses. She craved story book illusions and a fairy prince. But with Bill Bailey constantly in her background there seemed small prospect for glamorous enchantment in her love world.

Steady, prosaic Bill, who managed a service station and who was as unromantic as his name and occupation. But the Fairy Prince did come. In a gorgeous trapping nor with pomp and ceremony. He simply took a job at one of the linotype machines in the composing room of the same newspaper where Jane worked. She first glimpsed him while she waited for her street car. He sat with his back to the plate glass window and she noted with interest how the April sun deposited the shadows in his dark hair and brought into cameo relief the perfection of his features. One day he seemed to sense her interest in him, for he turned his head and she saw that he was looking at her through the window.

She discovered that the man of her dreams—for so she called him in her thoughts—was more prosperous than the usual run of newspaper workmen. From her vantage in the classified ad room she had seen his sport roadster of expensive make when he came to work, and the way he looked the car was a fine specimen of the indicated ownership. His clothes, too, had a careless elegance lacking in Bill Bailey's ratty-made.

June suddenly acquired the habit of going home for lunch—and this gave her two daily opportunities for wordless greeting with her knight of the window. One noon he came to the window and she saw him in a quiet expressive posture which she interpreted as a signal to wait for him.

A few excited moments passed for June. She wondered what they would talk about—for surely he meant that he was coming out. She watched him set a few more lines and pick up the hat type slugs from the galley. Then he disappeared into a back room. Presently a gangling youth with a smudge of ink on his chin came from the composing room and handed her a note.

"Ostrand told me to give you this," he said, and left without further remarks.

June saw at a glance that it had been set on the machine and the letters were slightly smudged.

"Dear Miss Kennedy," she read; "you see I have found out who you are. I have been dreaming dreams and seeing visions since your smiles came into my life—but, alas—I have little hopes of their materializing. I fear, Blue Eyes—we speak a different language. But you are very lovely—and lovable."

"I shall be sad until you smile at me, Blue Eyes. But if you never wait again outside my window—the skin a velvet-like appearance, Lovelace Drug Co., Exclusive Agents."
