

Kracker Krumbs

Odd Bits Salvaged
By The Editor

There was a lot of hand shaking at the Baker Hotel in Dallas last Thursday evening.

k-k

This was the opening event of the 82nd annual convention of Texas Press Association. Hand shakes were inspired mainly by old editor friends meeting each other and being introduced to new ones. But there was another inspiring fact . . .

k-k

"Mr. X" was there, and no one knew who he was. He was there to award $50 to the 50th person who shook hands with him—and of course, everyone wanted to shake hands with "Mr. X" if possible. The award—50 brand new $1 bills—all neatly bound in booklet form—was made at Saturday night's banquet, the closing event of the convention. We weren't the lucky person; and, naturally, we can't remember the name of the person who did win them. He was one of the over 400 present, and we have a poor memory for names, anyway.

k-k

The convention was a fully-packed three nights and two days. Scarcely did we have more than 30 minutes to rest or change clothes between one session and another—from the "early bird" breakfast at 7:30 Friday morning until they brought down the curtain after midnight Saturday.

k-k

T. P. A. is a state-wide organization, and we saw newspaper people from the valley to the panhandle, from the edge of New Mexico to deep East Texas. Most of them had come, like we did, to see how others ran their newspapers and to join in the fun.

k-k

We'd known the president, L. B. Smith of Brady, for well over 15 years of convention going and others in a like manner. It was enjoyable to "chew the fat" with them again.

k-k

An interesting sidelight of the convention was a trip by bus to the Great Southwest Industrial District mid-way between Dallas and Fort Worth. Here industries are going up by the jug-full and this development is almost beyond imagination. The trip ended with an evening meal of fish and hushpuppies at the fabulous Crossroads Restaurant.

k-k

We were taken on a guided tour (we toured on foot) of "Six Flags Over Texas." Somewhat the developers of this 10-million dollar 105-acre family entertainment center didn't like Texas under Six Flags, so they gave it the other name.

k-k

It's really the Disneyland of Texas. They claimed it is 90 per cent complete and is scheduled to open August 5, but to our observation they had a long way to go. With all the activity going on around there they can go a long way in a little while, so we imagine it will open on schedule. We were told it will take a good four hours to visit all the interesting places.

k-k

This tourist attraction is divided into sections, representing the six eras of the state's six flags. On our quickie trip our guide touched on each section and told of what was yet to be constructed.

k-k

In the Mexican section we saw the quaint merry-go-round with an old grey mule as its motive power, picturesque markets and bazaars, etc.

k-k

In the Indian village, we were told that Indians would be performing their tribal dances and would actually be camped on the site. The Spanish section will feature Coronado on pack mule in search for the Seven Cities of Cibola.

k-k

In wild West Texas, we saw desperadoes in gun battle with the law and actually being shot down before our very eyes. There was Judge Roy Bean's court, and narrow gauge railroad, etc.

k-k

Representing the Confederacy was a booming cannon at the enlistment rally, the Overland Stage, etc. The French section will feature an exotic river trip, perilous adventure with Indians, alligators, etc.

k-k

An astrolift will give one an opportunity to see the entire park from the air. The grand old U. S. A., or modern section, features futuristic cars on the turnpike of tomorrow. Many of our group drove those tiny cars which

Methodist Youth Hold Retreat At Lake Kemp Sunday

Annual Retreat of the Methodist Youth Fellowship of the First Methodist Church was held Sunday at the cabin of J. C. Harpham on Lake Kemp. The officers of the M. Y. F. met at 1 p.m., and spent the early part of the afternoon planning the programs for the new conference year. Other members of the M. Y. F. began arriving at 4 p.m. The afternoon was spent in boating, skiing and swimming. A supper of broiled hamburgers and the trimmings was served to some 55 youths and their parents. After supper a sing song was held in the cabin.

The worship activities began after dark as the group made their way to the lakeside by means of a lighted pathway. Candles had been thrust into sand in paper sacks to illuminate the path.

At the lakeside the group assembled for a meditation by Jan Pendleton. This was followed by the presentation of an original play written by Billy Frank Fitzgerald, Summer Youth Worker, for the occasion. Those participating in the Play in addition to Billy Frank were Jackie Booc, Claire Harpham, and Kenneth Smith. The group was dismissed with prayer.

WON'T WE EVER LEARN?

A spokesman for the National Live Stock Producers Association—a cooperative serving some 500,000 livestock producers and feeders—recently testified before the House Agricultural Committee on the proposed new farm bill. Some of the things he said deserve the widest possible understanding.

This bill, in his words, "... represents control legislation which would pass to the Secretary of Agriculture and the executive branch of government almost unlimited authority to undertake, subject to Congressional veto and farmer referendum, any type of production adjustment or control program and to apply any method or means of supporting farm income at any level of price parity he may determine up to 90 per cent of parity ..."

He then pointed out that the livestock industry has developed a production and distribution system which is unequalled elsewhere. He continued: "This production and distribution program has been the result of an agricultural plant developed for the most part in a free economy. Our livestock producers desire to maintain, insofar as possible, this freedom in the operation of their production and marketing program ... A controlled economy takes from the individual the desire and drive needed for advancement."

Certainly, after the incredibly costly failures of the postwar years, we should now be seeking a farm program that will gradually return all of agriculture to a free market economy. A program which would make the controls ever more rigid—and which would subject to government dictation producers who have so far been free—would be the worst possible step.

"SECRET" OF ABUNDANCE

The resiliency of the American economic system is one of the marvels of all time. Under the stress of great wars and depressions it has rolled with the punches. Each decade has ended with the indices of production and consumption at levels that brought greater well-being and higher standards of living to more people.

A by-product of the system has been the evolution of retail distribution. Many years ago there was an innovation called the chain store, which was nothing more than single ownership and management of a string of retail units operating on the principle of moving a high volume of goods at a minimum price—relying on the volume to insure a profit. Thus came mass distribution to meet the needs of a rising population and the needs of industries with expanding productive capacity.

But the demands of consumers in a free market never stand still. The exodus to the suburbs called for alterations in the mechanism of distribution. Developers and merchandisers moved in with further innovations—shopping centers and supermarkets. Chain Store Age recently calculated that a thousand new shopping centers would be opened in 1961. By the end of the year some fifty-five hundred of these centers will be in operation, and doing business at an annual rate of $50 billion.

This gives an idea of the stupendous sequence of production and distribution from the farm and factory, to the retailer and the home, that takes place every day and makes possible the luxuries and necessities we all enjoy. Only in a land where freedom of the market place is secure, can there be such abundance.

DOWN THE ROAD FOR COMMUNISM

Inflation is an unpleasant word in this country, as well it should be. In only 20 years it has cut the dollar's value by at least half.

Now, as the president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States warns, a critical new inflationary threat is arising.

It is found in increased federal spending. The prospect is that the deficit will run to more than $6 billion during the next two fiscal years. Additional spending proposals already submitted to Congress total more than $10 billion—and they can't be laid at the door of national defense. Some $8 billion would go for non-defense purposes.

Our Communist enemies will certainly welcome a new wave of inflation, if it comes. They have long argued that this and other capitalist countries will destroy themselves from within—and no weapon has a greater destructive potential than constant inflation. On the other hand, those who want to keep America strong will oppose inflation with every device we possess—none of which is more important than government economy and balanced budgets.

An Honest Look At The Omnibus Farm Bill

It's about time for taking a close, honest look at the Administration's proposed long-range Omnibus Farm Bill.

What will it do? Is it a "dictatorial" bill as has been charged? How does it affect existing farm laws? What would it change, and why?

To begin with, the farm bill is a far-reaching measure designed to update the carrying out of national agricultural programs by snipping away red tape and making the operation of such programs more democratic in nature.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman's bill is predicated on the principle of opportunity for the farmer equal to that of any other basic producer in the American economy, and he seeks to give the farmer himself a voice in insuring that opportunity.

The bill deals with all major program areas of American agriculture, but its major section relates to supply adjustment and price stabilization. This section provides the machinery whereby farmers can work together with the government to adjust their production to modern needs and conditions. Commodity advisory committees made up of farmers would work with the Secretary of Agriculture to set up referendum elections for the individual farmers themselves to decide on price supports and/or production controls, subject to approval by the President and the Congress.

Criticism of the bill has been most severe in publications where basic prejudice against any type of government assistance to farmers (the only producers in our economy who have no way to influence financial rewards of their enterprise) has overshadowed responsibility for reporting the facts.

They charge that the Secretary of Agriculture seeks "dictatorial powers" and "stiff controls" on farmers when, in fact, no powers or controls could be effected unless the farmers of individual commodities themselves asked for and overwhelmingly approved them. In addition, Congress would be required to approve such programs but would be spared the tedium of formulating them—having left that task to the Secretary and the farmers themselves.

An even bigger fact which critics have overlooked is that the Secretary of Agriculture now possesses most of the powers which he is charged with seeking, existing agricultural legislation authorizes him to prescribe conditions of eligibility (such as acreage allotments) before making producers eligible for price support. He can also establish nationwide marketing orders, after appropriate fact-finding, on any commodity. And he can do these things without consulting with any farmer and with referring such proposed orders to Congress.

The Secretary of Agriculture, however, has no desire to set effective programs for American farmers into effect by such arbitrary action—unless he is hamstrung on this current farm legislation, in which case he would have little or no alternative.

Of course, as Texas Congressman Bob Poage of Waco—a veteran in the field of farm legislation—has said, this farm bill, like all long and comprehensive measures, needs amendment to insure its fully democratic character. The Secretary has agreed to such changes, and argument on these points for the sake of controversy is nothing more than beating a dead horse.

The basic reasoning behind a change in the formulation of agricultural policy is obvious but not realized by most people: Agriculture directly influences but a small minority of American citizens—through a lot of Texans—today, and that influence is going to get smaller rather than larger. It becomes more and more difficult each year for Congressmen from big cities to vote for farm programs in which their constituents are not interested and which they may just flat resent without educated reason.

Many big city Congressmen have frankly served notice that they are not going to continue to vote year after year for programs for one crop after another. The most logical way to overcome this harsh reluctance is to present the programs with the added impetus of producer committee approval, approval by the Secretary of Agriculture and approval by the President.

The Administration's proposed farm legislation is the most workable and sound initial solution to the grave problems of inequitable farm income today. It is urgent that action be taken to correct these problems, and, in the total absence of any proposal more practical and more fair, it should be supported.

Mr. and Mrs. Scotty Ponder and Michael of Lubbock visited her mother, Mrs. Mary Hill, over the week end. Mrs. Ponder and Michael remained for a weeks visit.

Dr. and Mrs. Wayne Smith left last week for Little Rock, Ark., where he has accepted a two year residency in general practice.

Robert Garcia

A. L. Cole, president of the national youth-guidance organization, has announced. Young Garcia, 12, a member of the Santa Fe Boys' Club, was chosen for outstanding service to his home, church, school, community and Boys' Club. As one of eight sectional winners in the 580-Club, 600,000-member organization, he will receive a $100 scholarship from a fund established by the Reader's Digest foundation to stimulate interest in higher education among Boys' Club members. National "Boy of the Year" honors and a $500 scholarship were won by Richard Lopez, 17, of the El Paso, Tex., Boys' Club.

At his Boys' Club Robert has received the Outstanding Sportsmanship, Outstanding Citizenship and Outstanding Community Service awards, the first boy in the history of the Club to receive all three honors, and the youngest.

It's the Law in TEXAS

You Can't Enforce A Bet
Is a bet with a friend, with witnesses present a valid contract upon which you can collect in court? Can you force a person to pay off a bet that he made with you?

Jim was the town's most loyal supporter of the Marysville baseball team, even though the team was having a disappointing season. Tom, a supporter of Johnstown, a rival team, offered to bet Jim a sizable sum of money that Johnstown would beat Marysville.

That week end Marysville won, but Tom refused to pay. Jim claimed that the bet amounted to a valid and binding contract. He wanted to bring a lawsuit against Tom to collect the money that he felt Tom legally owed him. However, he was advised that he did not have a case.

The bet that they made was a gambling contract, and as such was illegal. Where both parties assert rights founded on a contract which is illegal and void, the courts will refuse to enforce it, leaving the parties just where they were before coming into court. The court has said that it is its duty to public justice and to their own integrity to refuse to enforce contracts essentially void as against public policy. It is a cardinal duty always to turn a claim upon such a contract out of court regardless of how the character of the contract is made to appear.

In this case, even though Jim could prove that he had made a contract with Tom, and regardless of the number of witnesses Jim could call into court to swear to the terms of the contract, the contract itself was an illegal one, made for an illegal purpose, gambling, and as such the courts will refuse to enforce it.

The courts will allow great freedom to people in the making of agreements between themselves, but they draw the line when the agreement made is illegal. The courts will not aid people in breaking the law.

(This newsfeature, prepared by the State Bar of Texas, is written to inform, not to advise. No person should ever apply or interpret any law without the aid of an attorney who is fully advised concerning the facts involved because a slight variance in facts may change the application of the law.)

Kick Out 1962 Root Rot Now

To reduce "dying-off" or root rot, a cotton farmer needs to know when dry weather is expected for 10 days to 2 weeks. When dry weather follows deep plowing, root rot will be reduced, says Harlan E. Smith, extension plant pathologist.

Soil should be plowed 6 to 18 inches with a disk or moldboard type. The drying of the soil follows help to kill the root rot fungus. Deep plowing and drying helps to kill old cotton roots and roots of susceptible weeds that harbor the root rot fungus.

Deep plowing plus the turning under of a large tonnage of old crop straw, stalks or leaves will give added insurance against root rot, Smith continues. The deep plowing and turning under of organic matter can often be done in one operation. Grain sorghum, small grains, clovers and winter peas, where adapted, are often turned under to supply organic matter. Cotton burs have also been used. The organic matter must be turned under deep in order to be effective against root rot the following season.

Following the deep plowing, rain may occur before the soil dries. When this happens the deep plowing should be repeated or a resistant crop should be planted, explains Smith. Crop rotation in itself will not reduce root rot. However, a rotation using deep plowing and burying of organic matter will reduce root rot.

Because of different amounts of rain each year, no single practice is likely to reduce root rot everytime. A combination of practices carried on for a number of years is necessary for best results, says Smith.

For further information, ask your county agricultural agent for a copy of the publication, MP-361, "Root Rot Losses of Cotton Can Be Reduced."

Weekly Health LETTER

Issued by the State Health Department

A pesky little insect, capable of going for months without food, is a sour note in the otherwise sweet symphony of a Texas Spring.

It's a soft-shelled tick, known scientifically as Ornithodoros turicata, transmitter of relapsing fever. This time of year they'll be out in force over most of Texas—at the very season when the natural human inclination is toward picnics and exploratory sojourns into the Great Outdoors.

State Health Department entomologists say the pernicious, fever-laden parasites can bite, feed, release their hold and drop to the ground without their human victims ever knowing they provided them with a blood meal.

Many cases of relapsing fever undoubtedly occur in Texas without ever coming to official attention. Ticks pick up the germ while feeding on infected wild rodents, become infected themselves and then pass it on to humans during a feeding process.

Soft-shelled ticks are close relatives of the hard-shelled ticks which spread spotted fever, tularemia, a type of encephalitis and other miseries.

Public health workers handle ticks with great caution to avoid being bitten and exposed to the fever they might be carrying. Specimens are kept in a specially constructed tictorium where, if one escapes, it will fall into an oil bath and be killed.

State Health Department laboratory technicians over the years have added many refinements to diagnostic techniques relating to relapsing fever. The strange disease occurs all over the world, despite its being classified "tropical" disease.

The onset of relapsing fever is characterized by chills and fever lasting for 24 to 36 hours. Then, just as the victim begins feeling better, he'll be stricken again. Recurring attacks might persist for weeks, each one leaving the patient weak and wrung out.

Once successfully diagnosed, relapsing fever readily responds to modern treatment by a private physician.

Soft-shelled ticks usually inhabit caves and old buildings, while their hard-shelled counterparts stick to woods and fields. Both types are acutely occupational hazards for ranchers and foresters and people in similar lines of work.

Soft-shelled ticks have been known to survive for seven months without food, so long vacancy of a vacation cottage is not insurance of freedom from ticks.

So go ahead, have fun outdoors this Spring. But use plenty of insect repellent on exposed skin and on clothing.

Babes of Wild Picked Up At Your Own Risk

Despite warnings to refrain from picking up young of the wild, the practice persists in many areas, according to J. B. Phillips, assistant director of law enforcement of the Game and Fish Commission.

"Wardens all over the state have been notified to make arrests where violations are reported," he says. "Too many people are inclined to pick up baby animals, especially fawn deer. These animals have a much better chance of survival in their native woods than they do in the city, even when bottle fed."

He also pointed to the danger of having these animals for pets when they grow up. There are many instances where the animals will revert to the wild and seriously injure the person who raised them.

Phillips also warns against molesting nesting birds or tampering with other young wild game.

"Some heavy fines have been paid in recent weeks by persons who failed to heed this warning," he said. "We hope it stops."

Mrs. Jessie Woods, Mrs. D. C. Eiland and Allen returned home last Friday from a two weeks vacation and visit with their son and brother, Karl Harbin, and family in Breaux, N. C. They reported a wonderful visit and lots of beautiful scenery and cool weather.

Do you really want to live in the good old days — or is it just a dream?

THIS IS A GOOD DREAM
in homes served by WTU, the average cost of a KWH of service is 20% less than it was 10 years ago.

"What program did you watch when you were little, Mama?"

It's easy for us to forget the comforts we have today. If we don't watch ourselves, all we think of is the hurry and bustle of the day.

The "good old days" to the little girl pictured above are just a few years ago to some of us. We forget that TV's so new. Yet most of our wonderful electric servants have been developed in just a generation!

As still more new ones come along, it's good to know that there will be plenty of electricity—from companies like this one—to run them. And the more new appliances you use, the less your electricity will cost per average kilowatt-hour.

Now think about it for just a minute—do you really want to live in the "good old days" without your electric servants—or is it just a dream?

Here's a bargain for Mama!

For less than 3¢ the average family, served by WTU, can cook a complete meal the modern electric way... and enjoy the cleanliness and convenience of Flameless Electric Living.

Knox Prairie Philosopher Declines To Use A Shovel, But Speculates On De-Salted Ocean Water For Area Farms

Editor's note: The Knox Prairie Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Miller Creek looks toward the future of farming this week, but his vision may be clouded.

J. A.

Dear editor:
I was sitting under a tree some distance away from my house yesterday afternoon where it was quiet, on account of I had just declined to shovel some dirt for my wife on the grounds that I read the newspapers and am fully aware of the dangers of a shovel, although I wish to say I don't rely on Washington to do my thinking and I declined to use a shovel years before Mr. Kennedy tried his hand at it, and I pulled out a newspaper I had been saving for just such an emergency and read an article that interested me.

According to it, an experimental plant has been put into operation changing salt water out of the ocean to fresh, drinkable water, and several more plants are being built.

Eventually, the article said, sea water can be de-salted so efficiently and cheaply that it will be available for city use, industrial use, and maybe even finally for agricultural use.

It was this last use that interests me. According to one speculative article on this, one day pipes carrying ocean water will be run all over the country and all a farmer will have to do when he needs a rain is turn on a hydrant and irrigate his crops. This, it said, will whip the weather problem and make farming one of the easiest jobs on earth.

I am afraid the fellow who thought that up is a little over-enthusiastic.

In the first place, farming is farming, which is to say work, whether you get your moisture out of a pipe or out of the clouds.

In the second place, if somebody runs a pipe with de-salted sea water out to my Johnson grass farm, I have a notion that just on the far side of the hydrant he'll install a meter, and before he turns the water on, he'll come up to my house and want a substantial deposit. Then when water flows over my farm, the meter will start clicking and it won't be a free gift from the clouds but another bill to face on the first of the month. I'm not saying it shouldn't be this way, all I'm saying is that it won't make farming the easiest job on earth. The only way to make farming easy is to farm like I do, but I don't recommend the method if the world wants to keep eating.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

Check With Your Social Security On All Benefits

"Social security benefits can be increased in some cases by additional work after a person first applies for benefits," Ertion F. Tate, manager of the Wichita Falls social security office announced today, "but certain requirements must be met before the benefit amount can be refigured."

If a person continues working during the year he first files for social security, he may request that his benefit amount be refigured to include the total earnings for that year. There is no definite amount he must earn in the year, but it must increase the average earnings figured at the time of filing for his original benefit rate.

Another type of recomputation has a definite earnings requirement — earnings must exceed $1200 in a calendar year after the person first filed for benefits. Even though the earnings exceed $1200, the benefit cannot be increased unless the work since filing would raise the average earnings of his present benefit rate.

Tate emphasizes that it is better to check with your social security office and be sure, rather than to guess whether work after retirement will increase your benefit amount. Write your local office and include the amounts of your earnings in each year beginning with the year of filing up to the present, as accurately as possible and the effect on your present check can then be determined.
