TAMMY CARVER
... Who's Who

Tammy Carver Is Featured In Two National Publications

Tammy Carver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Carver of Benjamin, has recently received two outstanding honors.

The first honor was that of having her biography approved for publication in the 12th Annual Edition of Who's Who Among American High School Students, 1977-78.

A letter received by Tammy states, "Fewer than 5% of all upperclassmen from our nation's 24,000 public, private and parochial high schools are featured in Who's Who each year, you are heartily commended for your achievements."

The second honor was being selected to have her athletic accomplishments and activities highlighted in the Spring Volume of American High School Athlete for 1977-78. Tammy's selection was based on outstanding achievement in athletic performance, sportsmanship and extra curricular activities.

Tammy will be a senior at Benjamin High this fall where she was selected basketball all-district forward, plays tennis, runs track and is a cheerleader. She is a member of FHA and FFA.

Tammy is active in 4-H having received the highest award given, the Gold Star Award, this last year. She has received various other awards and her horse project book placed second in the 21 county district competition. In county livestock shows she has shown calves and sheep, won the Reserve and Grand Champion sheep trophies, and won the Showmanship Award belt buckle for sheep two years.

A member of the Knox County Riding Club, Tammy has served as the club's flag bearer and sweetheart. She has ridden in numerous playdays and Junior Rodeos where she has won several trophies, belt buckles and ribbons.

Tammy's future plans are to attend college where she will study animal science.

With many dryland sorghum fields being zeroed out due to drought, one alternative many producers may be considering is grazing of these fields. This can be extremely dangerous to cattle as the drought stressed sorghum could produce prussic acid which is highly toxic, according to Tommy Antilley, County Extension Agent.

According to the Texas Veterinary Medical Association, at least 300 cattle valued at $250,000 have died this summer from poisoning with prussic acid, a type of cyanide that develops in drought-stricken pastures.

The symptoms, bloating and staggering, can be seen within 15 minutes after cattle begin to graze and they can die shortly thereafter unless immediate treatment is begun.

Cattlemen are being warned about grazing herds on milo fields that did not "make-it" because of drought conditions or on drought-stricken pastures of Johnson grass, sudan grasses or common sorghums.

Showers that have occurred in a few areas have compounded the problem. The prussic acid content is extremely concentrated in the new growth on drought-stricken pastures.

Cattlemen should wait two to three weeks before allowing cattle to graze on the new growth and should allow hay to lie at least five days after cutting, so the volatile cyanide gas can dissipate before baling. Before producers turn their cattle into these fields, samples should be taken from several areas within the field and tested by a veterinarian.

Ranchers are also advised to feed cattle hay before turning them onto new pastures, since the hay provides a diluting effect should the pasture grass contain excessive amounts of prussic acid.

The loss of one or two cows can greatly outweigh the benefits of grazing this stressed sorghum.

Playnight At Benjamin

A playnight will be held at Benjamin Saturday, August 5, at 8 p.m. in the arena there.

Barrels, flags and poles will be run in three age divisions with trophies and ribbons being given in each event in each age division plus trophies for all-around and runner-up all-around in each age division.

Hardin Attends Firemen School

Ray Lynn Hardin, Fire Chief of the Munday Volunteer Fire Department, attended the 49th Annual Texas Firemen's Training School July 23-28 at College Station. The school, attended by nearly 1,750 students representing about 750 cities from more than 25 states, was held on the Texas A&M University campus.

Firemen chose their course at the school from a list including Fire Fighting, Fire Prevention, Fire Department Officer Training, Fire Department Pump Maintenance, Specialized Fire Protection, and Disaster Rescue Training.

Fireman Hardin was sponsored by Knox County Farm Bureau and Texas Farm Bureau Insurance Companies by contributing toward the cost of the school. Since volunteer firemen were interested in attending this school to help do a better job of fire fighting and fire prevention, 100 County Farm Bureaus and the Texas Farm Bureau Insurance Companies in the statewide program sponsored 100 firemen at the school.

"The Farm Bureau Insurance Companies believe volunteer fire departments have been very effective in reducing the amount of loss involved by fire in rural areas," said President Carroll G. Chaloupka of Dalhart. "It is our hope in sponsoring this program that the fireman will help the Munday Volunteer Department to better serve the residents of Knox County."

Pioneer Knox County Rancher And Banker Dies

Services for Bruce Burnett Campbell, 91, a pioneer Knox County rancher and banker who died Wednesday at his residence were held at 2 p.m. Friday in Knox City Church of Christ.

Jerome Savage and Travis Boyd, ministers, officiated. Burial was in Knox City Cemetery under direction of Smith Funeral Home.

Campbell was born July 27, 1887, in Denton County, Texas. He was graduated from Wichita Falls High School in 1905, and moved to Knox County in that year.

Campbell, nephew of Burk Burnett, early day cattleman for whom the town of Burkburnett was named, grew up in the ranching country of North Texas and as a child played with the children of Quannah Parker, last chief of the Comanches.

Campbell spent much of his youth on Burnett's ranch near Red River and worked as a cowboy in Texas and Indian Territory.

One of the few remaining cowboys who rode the range at the turn of the century, Campbell was featured in one of a series of stories on pioneers published during the Bicentennial year by the Wichita Falls Record News.

He recalled at that time in March, 1976 that he was 13 when he helped other wranglers of Burnett's 6666 Ranch on Red River drive a vast herd across Red River to old Burk Station between Iowa Park and Electra for shipment to the Chicago markets.

His mother, Elizabeth Burnett Campbell, was a sister of Burk Burnett. She died at the 6666 Ranch on Red River, where she had been housekeeper and where Campbell's father, R. A. Campbell, had been the ranch blacksmith.

In 1896, Campbell moved to Wichita Falls to live with his aunt, Mrs. Tom "Ruth Burnett" Roberts, in a house where the City National Bank is now located at Eighth and Scott.

Campbell brought the first registered Herefords to Knox County. At the time of his death, he still resided on the ranch, five miles northwest of Knox City, that was bought by his father in 1895.

One of several pioneers who was happy to be living during the American Bicentennial year, Campbell said one of the great achievements in the next 100 years would be to bring "all nations together in a peaceful agreement."

Campbell started the Citizens State Bank in Knox City in 1920, where he served as president and chairman of the board. He was a member of the Knox City Chamber of Commerce, Knox City Lions Club, director of West Texas Chamber of Commerce, chairman of Seven County Bankers Association and had served as director of the Brazos River Authority. He was a member of the Church of Christ.

Survivors include two sons, Bruce Jr. of Knox City and Tom of Odessa, Texas; three grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Pallbearers were Fuller Shannon, Carl Shelton, Ken Lawson, Lee Smith, L. V. Worley, and Carl Chafin.

OSHA To Place Costly Engineering Controls On Cotton Industry

The National Cotton Council is filing suit to challenge stringent new cotton dust standards recently issued by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

This was announced today by Ed Breihan, Council vice president and cotton cooperative executive from Lubbock. Breihan presided over a regional seminar at the South Park Inn in Lubbock. The local seminar is one of four being conducted by the Council to acquaint industry members with the standards' compliance provisions.

Under OSHA's sweeping new standards, costly engineering controls must be in place by 1982 to reduce cotton dust levels to 0.2 milligrams per cubic meter of air in textile yarn manufacturing; 0.5 in warehouses, classing rooms, cottonseed oil mills, and waste industries; and 0.75 in weaving rooms.

Breihan said the standards are "technologically and economically impossible" for some sectors and expressed grave concern about their effect on the cotton industry's future. He further stated that worker protection could be insured through more practical and less expensive methods.

"Unless some moderation is made by the courts—or unless some technological breakthroughs occur soon in dust control—the cost burden placed on cotton by the standards threatens our ability to compete in the domestic market."

While the standards will undergo judicial review as a result of suits brought by the Council and other industry segments, Breihan said compliance with some of the standards' administrative provisions is likely to be required as early as Sept. 4 of this year.

As outlined by seminar speakers, this year's timetable for compliance with these provisions is:

Sept. 4 - posting of warning signs in all businesses covered by the standards;

Oct. 4 - providing of respirators to workers;

Dec. 4 - initiation of work practices, education, and training programs to minimize exposure to dust.

For 1979, the standards call for a March 4 completion date of first dust exposure monitoring with repeat tests every six months. By Sept. 4, 1979, medical surveillance must be started and written plans for meeting dust exposure limits solely through engineering controls must be completed.

Cotton gins, while not subject to dust exposure limits, will be required to meet certain administrative provisions. These include warning signs and initiation of work practices, education, and training programs by Sept. 4, 1978. One year later, gins are required to provide respirators and begin medical surveillance of workers.

Compliance provisions were explained in detail by Ted Wentworth, Federal Compress & Warehouse Co., Memphis; A. C. Miller, field representative, Mine Safety Appliances Co., Pittsburgh; Richard C. Ennis of Ennis, Lumsden & Boylston Associates, Chapel Hill, N.C.; Phillip J. Wakelyn, Council technologist, Memphis; and Preston Sasser, Cotton Incorporated, Raleigh, N. C.

Phillip C. Burnett, Council program coordinator, and Gaylon Booker, assistant director of economics and market research, reviewed the extensive case made by the Council and other groups against the 0.2 dust exposure limit which OSHA proposed in late 1976 for all cotton processing operations except harvesting. The effort involved developing studies on the standard's economic impact and technological aspects, coordinating testimony for more than 300 witnesses during six weeks of hearings, and numerous meetings with top administration leaders concerning the regulations' inflationary effect on the nation's economy.

Booker said these efforts, made with the cooperation of all segments of the industry, did result in (1) different exposure limits being set for various segments; (2) exemption of gins from dust exposure limits; and (3) a nearly $2 billion reduction in the proposed standard's $3.2 billion price tag.

Despite these modifications, however, Burnett said a court challenge is necessary in view of the fact that the standards are still "far too stringent" and inflationary. He cited the standards as "a classic example of over-regulation and bureaucratic overkill."

The Council official said the standards are particularly excessive in view of the more cost-effective approaches available to achieve worker protection. These approaches, which could be accomplished at about one-sixth the cost of OSHA's standards, have been repeatedly pointed out by the cotton industry as well as by the Administration's economic advisors, Burnett added.

The Council has given the cotton dust problem top priority since 1973. Current research efforts to find solutions to the problem are being funded at more than $4 million annually.

The cotton insecticide with important new advantages.

AMBUSH® insecticide is highly recommended for bollworm and tobacco budworm control under the Emergency Exemption, Section 18, after local authorities declare an emergency.

Here's what to expect from AMBUSH:

Two applications at the higher rate per acre may be necessary to get worms under control. After that you should be able to use AMBUSH at the lower rate on an as-needed basis.

That's because AMBUSH has excellent residual properties. Fewer applications are needed than with standard insecticides. But careful scouting coupled with thorough spray coverage are the keys to cost-effective insect control. You can use up to 10 applications in 1978. Follow label directions carefully.

Insects stop feeding immediately on contact with AMBUSH even though some may not die for one to three days.

AMBUSH is easy on the environment, but is toxic to fish and must not be sprayed over ponds or streams. No bad effects on birds or small animals have been reported. Now you can rotate from cotton to any other crop 60 days after the last application of AMBUSH.

AMBUSH promotes earlier cotton maturity because it is easy on plants - lets them grow naturally. Growers report a better boll set and higher yields. It's a cost-effective insecticide.

Get full details on these and other advantages from your supplier.

TEXAS TALK

Every spring, grass tetany claims two or three cows in some herds, but these losses could be prevented, Dr. J. R. Pickard, University of Illinois extension veterinarian, says. "A magnesium shortage in early grass is the problem." To prevent grass tetany, he suggests the following: 1) Start feeding magnesium oxide pellets or cubes to pregnant and lactating cows 30 days before turning them into fresh grass, 2) Avoid turning cows into lush straight-grass pastures following a cool spell, 3) Avoid heavy applications of fertilizer on grass pastures at this time of year, 4) Consider soil testing and balancing out the pasture fertility as a long-term preventive practice. A 2:1 ratio of magnesium to potassium and 1:5 ration of magnesium to calcium is desirable, 5) Plant grasses which are magnesium accumulators.

County Farmers Respond To Reporting Service

Farmers in Knox County have been doubling as statisticians in completing questionnaires which become essential links in the sophisticated economic structure of Texas agriculture, Commissioner Reagan V. Brown said today.

The county's producers were part of some 30,000 farmers across the state who recently responded to the mid-year survey on summer acreage and production conducted by the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. The results of the survey will be issued in an August 10 crop report which is available free of charge.

"Without the availability of unbiased, accurate figures through cooperation between Texas farmers and the Reporting Service, business and government agents from one end of the state to the other would suffer in their ability to predict coming trends and act

Charles Smith Passes Away

Graveside services for Charles E. Smith, 83, who passed away Thursday in the Seymour Hospital, were held Saturday, July 29 at 11:00 a.m. at the Old Goree Cemetery.

He was born February 1, 1895 in Missouri. He had been a farm laborer in the Munday area.

Survivors include: two daughters, Frances Mae Fininen and Gladys Smith, both of Ft. Worth and one son Marion Butler of Seattle, Washington. *****

accordingly," Commissioner Brown said.

He explained that farmers themselves use the estimates as working tools in determining upcoming production decisions. At the same time, the information is used by farm organizations and legislators in planning and administering programs, by extension economists and private farm management consultants in advising farmers, and by almost every link in the agriculture service industry in allocating resources.

Banks and investment corporations also round out their economic profiles of counties through the use of the crop and livestock statistics.

"From the individual who sells fertilizers or designates railroad car placements to the government agent who makes decisions on crop payment programs, everyone in the agricultural production chain needs and uses the information made available through this continuing cooperative effort," Brown said.

"And at the bottom line, of course, is the agricultural product consumer, who reaps the benefits of a more informed agricultural industry, better able to minimize the drastic ups and downs which can translate into unpredictable supplies and prices," Brown concluded. *****

SWEET PICKLED PEACHES

The aroma of vinegar, cinnamon and cloves used in these recipes sets a nostalgic mood with memories of Grandma's kitchen. Spiced or pickled peaches are used as an accompaniment to meat, as a salad or as a snack. They provide Vitamins A and C, and a pickled peach contains only about 52 calories.

- 7 pounds peaches, peeled
- 3 pounds sugar
- 2 cups vinegar
- 2 cups water
- 3 small sticks cinnamon

Boil sugar, vinegar, water and cinnamon to make syrup. Add peaches. Cook until tender, jar and seal.

SPICED PEACHES

- 7 pounds peaches
- 4 pounds brown sugar
- 1 quart vinegar (apple cider)
- 1 tsp. whole cloves
- 1 Tbsp. stick cinnamon
- 1 tsp. allspice

Tie spices in a cloth bag and add to the vinegar. Bring to a boil, stir in sugar. Scald and peel the fresh peaches, leaving them whole. Drop peaches, a few at a time, into spiced liquid and cook until soft.

Fill sterilized jars and seal.

For additional recipes, write: Commissioner Reagan V. Brown, Texas Department of Agriculture, P.O. Box 12847, Austin, Texas, 78711.

IT'S CANNING TIME-Eat all the fresh Texas peaches you can now, but put some away for those cold winter months, advises Texas Department of Agriculture home economist Fran Gerling. When canning these delicious beauties, a touch of spice can be very nice!

Simple Home Canning Tips Can Keep You Out of a Jam

AUSTIN-The 1978 Texas peach crop is expected to be a near-record, and this means many homemakers will be hard at work canning the delicious fruit, notes Texas Department of Agriculture home economist Fran Gerling.

With this in mind, the Department offers the following tips to make that home canning a whole lot easier:

1. To insure sterile condition of containers, pour boiling water into jars. Any jar that has a lid which is interchangeable with the canning rings can be used.
2. Also boil lids and rings to insure that everything that comes into contact with the fruit is sterile. Place a set of tongs in boiling water to sterilize them and to lift out lids after boiling.
3. Pare peaches as close as possible to avoid waste. Peaches may be placed in a wire basket and scalded in boiling water to remove the skins.
4. Before putting lids on the jars, make sure the rims are free of any foreign matter such as peach bits or sugar to ensure a proper seal. Fasten rings securely and place in canner containing clean water.
5. Bring the water to a full rolling boil for 10 to 15 minutes, depending on ripeness of peaches being processed.
6. Remove jars from canner, cool overnight. Remove rings before storing, if desired.

Child Abuse Is Subject Of B&PW Guest Speaker

Sammie White of Knox City, a case worker with the Texas Department of Human Resources was guest speaker for the B&PW Club Tuesday night, July 25.

Child Abuse was the subject of the program. The two areas of abuse, physical and emotional, were explained and discussed. Physical abuse comes in many forms - beating, choking, burning, sex exploitation, starvation, exposure to elements are a few - an intentional infliction of physical pain. Emotional abuse is inflicted on children by neglect, too little or no affection shown, too high expectations of parents and incest.

Statistics show that smaller towns have as much abuse occurring, per capita, as any large town such as Houston, Dallas or Austin. All cultures are guilty of inflicting abuse, it cannot all be pinned on one race or one color.

Parents who are emotionally upset, tense, irresponsible, immature, high-tempered, worried, angry, are more often guilty of abuse. Such parents, step-parents, and other family members work off their own frustrations on the young ones.

In 1973 there were 103 deaths of children in Texas due to abuse - 1 out of 5 children hospitalized is an abuse case. More than 2000 cases were reported in 1977, with at least 2 deaths a week. Fifty percent of such cases occur with children under 6 years of age, under 4 receiving most physical abuse. Another age group is 13-14-15, as children tend to become more independent and physical restraint is used by the parents.

Legislative action was taken in 1974 to curb abuse and to make every citizen responsible in reporting such cases. There is a law that demands abuse be reported or become subject to a $500.00 fine, or 6 months in jail, or both. This law is listed as a misdemeanor. Every person is responsible to the law, to the children of society, and as good citizens.

A public crusade has begun to protect our young people - more foster parents and homes are needed - more counselors are needed - more preachers, doctors, lay people are needed. Volunteers can be trained in drug usage, waywardness and placement in foster homes. Speakers, films, panels, seminars can be scheduled to involve the community and county in the crimes committed against the young.

"Lift a Finger to Save a Life" could well become a motto for citizens. Child Abuse Centers are already set up to follow through on any report made - a Toll Free number on the Watts Hot Line will bring help 24 hours a day - 1-800-292-5400. You Must Report the Essential First Step! It's a matter of life or death to our young people!

LOOK WHO'S HERE!

Justin Dewitt Green made his arrival on Thursday, July 27, 1978, at 7 p.m. weighing 7 lbs. 7 1/2 ozs. at Harris Hospital in Fort Worth. His parents are Dickie and Peggy Green of Crowley.

He has one brother, Wademon Scott.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Dewitt Green of Goree and Mrs. Euvon Tripp of Killeen. Great-grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Green of Olney, Mrs. Roy Campbell of Graham, and Mrs. R. C. Meddle of Lubbock.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Amerson and children, Brett and Holly, of Houston spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Amerson. Brett and Holly remained for a weeks visit with their grandparents.

Aerating Farm Stored Grain

Stored grain should have air circulation to minimize molds, bacteria and insects - the things that cause grain quality to deteriorate during storage. Cooling the grain limits these factors, thus reducing deterioration. Uniform cooling of the grain is necessary. Significant differences of temperature in a bin of grain can cause moisture migration and condensation which greatly increases the risk of grain quality loss. The colder the outside air temperature, the greater the need for aeration to stabilize temperatures in the storage bin.

Adequate aeration may be obtained with a continuous, aeration system. The airflow rate may be as low as 1/10 cubic foot per minute per bushel of bin capacity. Start aeration when the bin is being filled. This will remove any excess heat and moisture not removed in drying and cooling prior to storage. In the fall when mean daily temperatures show a steady decline of 10 to 15 degrees, aerate whenever the mean daily temperature is 10 degrees cooler than the grain temperature. Continue until the average grain temperature in the bin is about equal to the outside air temperature.
