Activities of The Colored People

The attendance was poorly at Sunday School Sunday morning.

Rev. Earl Brewer preach at West Beulah Sunday evening. He preached out of his soul. Our hearts burn within as he spoke by the way.

Rev. Wick will preach Easter Sunday morning at sunrise at West Beulah.

West Beulah will begin a meeting Wednesday night running through Sunday evening. The pastor is asking the cooperation of the member in this meeting.

Our hearts was saddened last Wednesday evening on account of Mr. Dennis Williams receiving word that his mother, Mrs. Jessie Williams, of Weimer, Texas had passed away. She was 88 years old, had lived in Weimer, Colorado County, all her life. Mr. Dennis is thanking Mrs. F. M. Johnson, Mrs. M. H. Hendrick and mother Aline Johnson for their visits to his home in his hour of sorrow. He wasn't able to go to the funeral because he has been shut in for nearly two years. He is loud in his praise to Doctor Newsom for his many kind deeds to him and also his visit in his hour of sorrow.

Baptist W. M. U. Has Bible Study

There were thirty-one present at the Baptist W. M. U. Bible study Monday, April 1.

Rev. John Stree brought the study from Matthew 16:13-28. This study shows that Jesus Christ builds his churches upon the rock of faith. Salvation is more a matter of will. It is up to each person to want to become a Christian before there is salvation. To live for self is to die to Christ, but to live for Christ is to die to self and with Christ in eternity.

HOW THIMET GRANULAR GROWS COTTON PLANTS THAT KILL INSECTS

Applied at planting, THIMET 10% granular insecticide protects young cotton up to six weeks longer . . . through the first critical weeks of growth. One soil application can replace three or more foliage sprays.

THIMET gives outstanding control of thrips, aphids, mites, leaf-miners . . . protects the young plant against leafhoppers, white flies, black cutworms. And by killing insects such as leafhoppers, THIMET controls virus diseases carried by these insects.

Systemic action

THIMET is a systemic insecticide. As the young cotton plant emerges and starts to grow, the THIMET in the soil is taken up through the roots into the growing plant. Immediately it is carried in the sap stream to all growing stems and leaves (see diagram). The plant itself becomes toxic to insects that try to attack it.

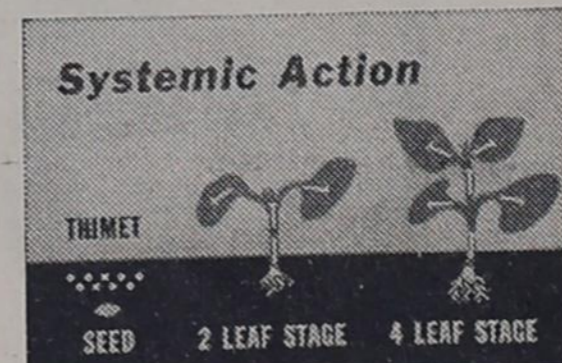

Diagram of how THIMET is picked up by roots and carried to all parts of the plant.

Because THIMET is in every growing part of the plant, insect control is steady and continuous. It eliminates those danger periods when an insect infestation may go unnoticed until the crop has already been damaged. And, since THIMET is inside the plant, it cannot be weathered away by wind and rain.

Easy to use

THIMET granules are distributed in the furrow at planting time from a granular applicator attached to the planter. Rates range from 5 to 15 lbs. per acre, depending on the length of control desired and soil type.

THIMET is available from your local pesticides supplier. For further information, contact him, or write: Pesticides Dept., address below.

THIMET 10% granular comes packed in handy 10 lb. bags for easy measuring.

Knox Prairie Philosopher Doubts If Medicine Is Ready To Perfect A Coin-Operated Diagnosis Machine

Editor's note: The Knox Prairie Philosopher on his johnson grass farm on Miller Creek takes a look at automation in his letter this week. It's hard to tell what he sees.

J. A.

Dear editor:

I figured it was bound to happen sooner or later. Any time you can wipe out whole cities just by pushing a firing button, explore outer space with a radio transmitter sending back messages from 10' million miles out, calculate vast and complicated mathematical problems in 2 seconds with an electronic brain, or have your coat dried-cleaned by an automatic machine you just drop it in, it's just a matter of time till automation hits the medical profession.

And sure enough, last night I read an article predicting that before very long medicine is going to have an electronic machine that'll produce an instant diagnosis. You just step inside, it'll X-ray you, take a blood sample, register your temperature, meditate a few seconds, and scientifically and electronically diagnose you.

I have been giving this machine some thought, and I suspect there'll have to be some improvements and added attachments before it'll come into popular use.

For example say it's coin-operated. All right, You drop $25 in the slot, the door opens, and you step in. After the gears get through grinding and the lights through flashing, and the diagnosis comes out on a printed slip, ordinarily the door would re-open and you could step out, and head for the drugstore with your prescription.

But what if you've got a complicated case, not just a handy virus? They'll have to have another coin slot inside to deposit more money in before the machine will let you out. No machine is going to treat you for a bad cold at the same rate it charges for a psycho-neurological breakdown.

This thing is going to take a lot more study and research before it's ready to be put on the market. It'll take years, and it's a good thing, because when it gets time to get around to it, science is bound to come out eventually with a coin-operated farm tractor, but we want to postpone it as long as we can.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.
